DEVAYAJÑA

Devayajña :—As stated in the Tai. Ār. quoted above (p. 696) the Devayajña was performed by offering fuel sticks into fire. According to the Āp. Dh. S. I. 4. 13. 1, Baud. ¹⁶⁸⁵ Dh. S. II. 6. 4 and Gaut. V. 8-9, the Devayajña consisted in offering into fire offerings (of food or at least a fuel stick) with 'svāhā' uttered after the name of the deities in the dative case. Manu also (III. 70) looks upon homa as devayajña. The devatās to whom homa or devayajña was offered are different according to different grhya or dharma sūtras. For example, Āśv. gr. (I. 2. 2) says that 'they are the deities of the Agnihotra (i. e. Sūrya or Agni, and Prajāpati), Soma Vanaspati, Agni and Soma, Indra and Agni, Heaven and earth, Dhanvantari, Indra, the Viśve Devas, Brahman'. According to Gaut. they are Agni, Dhanvantari, Viśve Devas, Prajāpati, Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. Vide Mānava-grhya II. 12. 2 where the deities are different from those in Āśv. gr. and Gaut. In later smṛtis a distinction is made between homa (or devayajña) and devapūjā. Yāj. in I. 100 speaks of the worship of gods immediately after tarpaṇa and then in I. 102 includes homa among the five yajñas. Manu II. 176 also makes this distinction. Medieval writers came to look upon Vaiśvadeva as the devayajña, while others held that homa to gods was different from Vaiśvadeva. Vide Haradatta ¹⁶⁸⁶ on Āp. Dh. S. I. 4. 13. 1. According to Marīci and Hārita quoted in the Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnika p. 383) devapūjā is performed after the morning homa or after brahmayajña and tarpaṇa ¹⁶⁸⁷ in the noon. In medieval and modern times the ancient idea of homa receded far into the back-ground and its place was taken by an elaborated procedure of devapūjā (worship of images kept in the house). Some space must be devoted to the origin and development of this phase of religious practice.

It is extremely doubtful whether images were generally worshipped in the ancient Vedic times. In the R̥gveda and the other Vedas, there is worship of Agni, the Sun, Varuṇa and various other deities; but they were worshipped in the abstract, as powers and manifestations of the one Divine Person or as separate deities or functions behind natural phenomena or cosmic processes. There are no doubt passages where the deities of the R̥gveda are spoken of as possessed of bodily attributes. A few verses may be cited in this connection. Indra is described in Rg. VIII. 17. 8 as 'tuvigrīva' (with a powerful or thick neck) and 'vapodara' (having big or capacious belly) and 'subāhu' (having well-shaped arms). Rg. VIII. 17. 5 speaks of the limbs and sides of Indra and prays Indra to taste honey with his tongue. In Rg. X. 96. 8 Indra is spoken as having dark green (hari) hair and beard and in X. 105.7 again it is said that the hair on his chin are dark-green and his chin is never injured (in battle).¹⁶⁸⁸ In Rg. II. 33. 5 Rudra is said to be 'ṛdūdara' (whose abdomen is soft), 'bahhru' (of brown colour) and 'susipra' (with a fine chin or nose). The Vāj. S. 16. 7 speaks of Rudra as having a dark-blue throat and red (complexion) and 16. 51 says he wears a skin (kṛtti). In Rg. I. 155. 6 Viṣṇu is said to approach a battle with his huge body and as a youth ('bṛhac-charīra' and 'yuvā'). In Rg. III. 53. 6 Indra is asked to go home at once after drinking Somas, as he has a charming wife and delightful house. In Rg. X. 26.7 god Pūṣan is said to shake his beard. In Rg. IV. 53.2 Savitr̥ is said to put on a yellowish drāpi (armour) and in Rg. I. 25. 13 Varuṇa is said to wear a golden drāpi. It is not necessary to multiply examples. It is possible to argue that all these descriptions are poetic and metaphoric. But there are two passages of the R̥gveda that cause much more difficulty than the above. Rg. IV. 24. 10 asks 'who will'¹⁶⁸⁹ purchase this my Indra for ten cows and might return it after he (Indra) has killed enemies ' ? Rg. VIII. 1. 5 says ' O Indra ! I shall not give thee for even a great price, not even for a hundred, a thousand or an ayuta (ten thousand) '. It may be argued that here there is a reference to an image of Indra. But this is not convincing. It is equally possible to hold that these are hyperbolic or boastful statements of the great devotion of the worshipper to Indra and that there is no reference to an image of Indra. If we look at the Vedic cult described in the Brāhmanas where sacrifices of butter, cakes and boiled rice or other grain are offered to several deities in the fire, or animal and soma sacrifices are described at great length, it is clear that the ancient sages hardly ever thought of the worship of idols, but of deities in the abstract to whom they ascribed different functions and poetically represented them as being endowed like human beings with hands and feet and other limbs. It cannot be denied that here and there occur a few passages that suggest images as objects of worship. For example, in the Tai. Br. II. 6. 17 occurs the passage ' may the hotṛ priest worship the three goddesses, that are golden, that are endowed with beauty (or ornaments) that are great ones ' &c. It looks as if golden images of the three goddesses are meant.¹⁶⁹⁰ One can say without much fear of contradiction that the religious practices among the higher strata of the Vedic Aryans did not include the worship of images in the house or in temples. But we have hardly any literary materials for judging what the religious practices of the lower or ignorant masses of Vedic India were. In Rg VII. 31. 5 Vasiṣṭha prays to Indra ' may the śisna-devas not overwhelm our ṛta ' (religious order or practices); similarly in Rg. X. 99. 3 the prayer is ' may he (Indra) striking (or killing) the śisnadevas overcome them by his form or power '. Scholars are sharply divided in opinion about the meaning of the word¹⁶⁹¹ ' śisnadeva '. Some hold that it denotes people who were worshippers of the phallus (vide Vedic Index, vol. II. p. 382). Others hold that the word is used in a secondary or metaphorical sense for those who are immersed in sexual gratification and do not recognize anything else (as worthy of pursuit). Yāska in his Nirukta (IV. 19) quotes 1690. होता यक्षत्येशस्वतीः । तिस्रो देवीः हिरण्ययीः । भारतीर्बृहतीर्महीः । तै. ब्रा. II. 6. 17. The three devīs are Bhāratī, Idā and Sarasvatī.

1691. मा शिश्रदेवा अपि युक्तं नः ॥ ऋ. VII. 21. 5 ; इन्द्रिश्रदेवो अभि वर्षसा भूत ॥ ऋ. X. 99. 3 ; ' मा शिश्रदेवाः अन्नह्नचर्याः शिश्रं इनयतेः अपि युक्तं नः सरयं वा यज्ञं वा ' निरुक्त IV. 19.

Rg. VII. 21. 5 and explains that the word means 'those who do not observe rules of brahmacarya (celibacy)'. The preponderance of authority and evidence is in favour of the second view. In Rg. VII. 104. 14 (= Atharva VIII. 4. 14), the poet pleads 'if I be addicted to falsehood, O fire, or if I call upon the gods in vain (then you may injure me), but (not being so) why are you angry with me? May those whose speech is false incur slaughter at your hands'. Here 'anṛta-devāḥ' is practically the same as 'drogha-vācaḥ' in the fourth pāda. In the Tai. Up. I. 11. 2 we have the words 'mātr̥devo bhava, pitṛdevo bhava', where all that is meant is that 'one should be devoted to the parents'. Therefore 'śisna-deva' could hardly mean 'those who worship phallus as god'. In Rg.¹⁶⁹² X. 87. 2 Agni is invoked as follows 'with thy tongue reach the mūradevas, in thy mouth envelope the eaters of raw flesh after cutting them into bits' and in Rg. VII. 104. 24 Indra is called upon to kill male and female yātudhānas (evil spirits or sorcerers) and it is added 'may the mūradevas perish bereft of their necks and may they not see the sun rising up from the horizon'. Yāska in commenting on Rg. X. 4. 4 explains 'mūra' as 'mūḍha' (stupid)¹⁶⁹³. It is possible to take 'mūra' as meaning 'mortal' or 'perishable' (since the root 'mr̥' assumes the form 'muriya' as in Rg. VII. 104. 15). From the above quotations it is clear that the Rgvedic poets knew of low people who practised witchcraft, who were mūradevas (i. e. either worshipped perishable objects or were stupid in their cult) and who were the enemies of the Aryans. There are also clear references to enemies who did not look upon Indra as God (Rg. X. 27. 6, X. 48. 7, X. 86. 1).

Phallic emblems have been found in the ancient ruins at Mohenjo-daro (vide Sir John Marshall's work, vol. I. pp. 58-63). Except these finds the earliest known lingas so far discovered do not go beyond the first century B. C. But centuries before Christ the worship of images had become widespread in India. According to Haradatta on Āp. gr. 20. 1-3, where the offerings to Īsāna, his consort and his son 'Jayanta' (the conqueror Skanda) are described, images of these three are worshipped. The Mānava-grhya¹⁶⁹⁴ II. 15. 6 prescribes that if an image (of wood, stone or metal) were to be burnt down or to become reduced to powder (of itself) or falls (from its pedestal) or breaks into pieces, or laughs, or moves to another place, the householder (in whose house it had been established) should offer ten oblations into fire with certain Vedic verses. In the Baud. gr. II. 2. 13 when describing the ceremony of Upaniṣkramaṇa (taking the infant child out of the house for the first time) it is said that the father after performing homa goes out of the house, worships the images outside (the house), feeds the brāhmaṇas, makes them pronounce benedictions and then brings back to the house the infant.¹⁶⁹⁵ The Laugākṣi grhya (18. 3) speaks of devatāyatana (a temple). Gaut. (IX. 13-14) forbids a man from answering calls of nature in front of images or from stretching one's feet towards them and (IX. 66) requires a man to circumambulate a temple (devatāyatana) that he may meet on his way. The Śān. gr. IV. 12. 15 does the same and uses the same word (S. B. E. vol. 29, p. 125) and in II. 6. 6 mentions a deva-kula (god's house). Āp. Dh. S. (I. 11. 30. 28) has a similar rule. Manu (II. 176) directs the brahmacārin to worship images, requires a person to circumambulate images that he may meet with when on a journey (IV. 39), not to cross the shadow of images (IV. 130) and ordains that witnesses be sworn in the presence of the images of gods and brāhmaṇas (VIII. 87). Vide also Manu III. 117 and IX. 285. The Viṣṇu Dh. S. (23. 34, 63. 27) mentions the images of gods (devatārcā) and speaks of the worship of Bhagavat Vāsudeva as an image. In Vasiṣṭha XI. 31, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 69. 7, 30. 15, 70. 13, 91. 10 the word 'devatāyatana' or 'devāyatana' occurs. Unfortunately the dates of all these works are far from being certain. But no scholar will assign the Mānava, Baudhāyana and Śāṅkhyāyana grhyasūtras and the dharmasūtras of Gautama and Āpastamba to a later date than the 5th or 4th century B. C. Pāṇini, whom no scholar will place later than 300 B. C. (though there are some who place him several centuries earlier), teaches¹⁶⁹⁶ that an image by attending on which a person maintains himself and which is not for sale has the same name as the god whose image it is e. g. an image is called Śiva or Skanda when the worshipper makes his livelihood by attending on the image of Śiva or Skanda (and appropriating the offerings placed before the image) which is not for sale. Pāṇini also teaches (IV. 3. 98) that 'Vāsudevaka' is a person who is a votary of Vāsudeva and Patañjali expressly says that Vāsudeva was not a mere kṣatriya, but that the word is the name of God. Patañjali comments on the former sūtra and vouchsafes the very interesting information that the Mauryas who were greedy of gold established or manufactured images, to which this rule would not apply, but it would apply to the images of gods that were in Patañjali's day used for pūjā (worship). According to Patañjali the images manufactured by the Mauryas would be called Śivaka &c. Patañjali, while commenting on Pāṇini IV. 1. 54, gives as examples an image with a long or high nose. The Ādiparva 70. 49, Anuśāsana 10. 20-21, Āśvamedhika 70. 16 speak of devatāyatana (temples) and Bhīṣma 112. 11 in speaking of terrible portents refers to images in temples trembling and shedding tears. Khāravela, king of Kalinga (latter half of 2nd century B. C.) is said to have re-established an image of Jina carried away by Nandarāja and he is described as 'sarva-devāyatana-saṅkhāra-kāraka' (one who looked after the preservation and repair of all temples). In Kauṭilya's Arthaśāstra II. 4 (variously assigned to different dates from 300 B. C. to 250 A. D.) it is stated that in the centre of the capital shrines of Aparājita, Apratihata, Jayanta, Vijayanta and temples of Śiva, Aśvins, Vaiśravaṇa, Lakṣmī and of Madirā (wine?) should be erected. It follows from the above discussion that long before Pāṇini there had arisen professional men who made their livelihood by attending on images and that temples of deities must have existed even in the 4th or 5th century B. C.

The question whether the worship of images and the erection of temples spontaneously arose among the Vedic Aryans or whether they derived the idea from some other race or sectarians has been very often discussed. There are three principal views, viz. (1) that the worship of images was derived from śūdras and Dravidian tribes and absorbed in the brahmanical cult; (2) that the making of images was copied from the Buddhists; (3) that this practice was a natural and spontaneous growth. The second view is not very plausible. Images of Buddha were not made for a long time after his nirvāṇa. He was only represented at first by symbols. If modern chronology about Buddha's ministry is to be followed¹⁶⁹⁷ (he was born about 563 B. C. and died about 483 B. C.), it is almost impossible to hold that images of gods originally came to be made in imitation of images or statues of Buddha, since, as we saw above, temples and images of gods had already become widespread throughout India in the 4th or 5th century B. C.¹⁶⁹⁸ The first view is supported with arguments of some weight by Dr. Farquhar in J. R. A. S. for 1928 pp. 15-23. Vide also Dr. Charpentier in Indian Antiquary for 1927 pp. 89 ff. and 130 ff. But I do not hold that the reasons for this view are convincing. There is no apparent reason why only about 400 B. C. image worship should have been copied from the śūdras by the brāhmaṇas. The śūdra though given an inferior status had become a part of Indian Society at least a thousand years before 400 B. C., as the Puruṣasūkta shows. He had been serving the brāhmaṇas for centuries before that date and brāhmaṇas could in the times of the sūtras partake of food cooked by him and could take śūdra women in marriage. So, if the worship of images was a practice borrowed from the śūdras, it should have prevailed at least a thousand years before 400 B. C. The fact that the devalaka brāhmaṇa (one who maintained himself by attending on images either for a salary or by appropriating what was placed before the image) was not to be invited at a śrāddha and had thus an inferior status (Manu III. 152) is to be explained in a different way. The institution of worshippers of images had not an hoary antiquity behind it in the time of

1698. Vide Mr. O. C. Ganguly's paper 'the antiquity of the Buddha Image' in Ostasiatische Zeitschrift Neue Folge XIV, Heft 2/3, where he adduces very weighty grounds for holding that the beginning of the cult of the worship of the image of Buddha lies somewhere between 150 B. C. to 50 B. C.

Manu, as that of priests officiating at the śrauta or grhya sacrifices had in his day; besides such men must have neglected the principal duty of a brāhmaṇa (viz. study of the Veda) and so they were looked down upon. Even in the times of the Brāhmaṇas the simple grhya sacrifices were being raised to the level of śrauta rites, which were gradually becoming less and less frequent. The Ait. Br. (11. 8) prescribes that when a man takes up an offering to a deity and is about to say 'vaṣaṭ' he should contemplate upon that deity for whom the offering is meant.¹⁶⁹⁹ This would naturally lead the worshipper to invest the deity with anthropomorphic attributes. The Nirukta devotes some space (VII. 6-7) to the consideration of the question of the form of the deities referred to in the Vedic mantras.¹⁷⁰⁰ Three views are propounded, viz. (1) they have an anthropomorphic form, (2) they have no anthropomorphic form, (3) they may partake of both characters, i. e. the deities though really non-anthropomorphic may assume various forms for carrying out some purpose or activity. This last view contains the doctrine of avatāras. When Vedic sacrifices became less and less prevalent owing to various causes (particularly because of the doctrine of ahimsā, the various upāsanaś and the philosophy of the Absolute set forth in the Upaniṣads), there arose the cult of the worship of images. Originally, it was not so universal or elaborate as it became in medieval and modern times.

The literature on the subject of image-worship is vast. The principal topics are: the substances from which images are made, the principal deities of which images were or are worshipped, the proportions of the various limbs in manufacturing images, the consecration of images and temples, the ritual of image worship. The subject of consecration of images and temples will be dealt with later on under the topic of Pratiṣṭhā.

They cannot be dealt with here. In modern times many works and papers, several of them illustrated with plates and photographs, have been published on this subject.¹⁷⁰¹

Medieval digests like the Sm. C., the Smṛtimuktāphala, the Pūjā-prakāśa devote considerable space to the subject of devapūjā (image-worship) in its various aspects, the last work containing 382 pages in print on this subject. A very concise statement of only a few topics is attempted below.

Ars Asiatica (in French), some volumes of which such as vol. III (on Śaiva sculpture), vol. X (on Ajanta), vol. The word 'devapūjā'¹⁷⁰² occurs in the Vārtika on Pāṇini I. 3. 25. The digests try to show that, just as yāga (sacrifice) consists in giving up materials accompanied by a mantra with reference to a deity that is then principally in view, so pūjā also is yāga, as therein also there is giving up (or dedication) of materials to a deity.¹⁷⁰³

The next question is ; who are entitled to perform devapūjā. Men and women of all varṇas and even the untouchables were to worship Viṣṇu who incarnated himself as man-lion, according to the Nṛsimhapurāṇa and Vṛddha-Hārta¹⁷⁰⁴ (VI. 6 and 256). All the male members of a joint undivided family are to perform separately samdhya, brahmayajña and agnihotra (if they have consecrated the śrauta and gṛhya fires) but devapūjā and vaiśvadeva will be only one for the whole family.¹⁷⁰⁵ The time for devapūjā is after tarpaṇa at noon and before vaiśvadeva ; but some place it after vaiśvadeva. According to Dakṣa II. 30-31 all devakūrya (duties and ceremonies in honour of gods) must be performed in the first half of the day.

One of the peculiar tenets of Hinduism is adhikāra-bheda (difference in rights, duties, ceremonies and worship dependent on difference in intellectual, emotional and spiritual equipment). Not every one was capable of the same discipline and regimen. Image worship was not absolutely necessary for everybody and the ancient writers never thought that when they worshipped an image they were simply paying homage to a material object. They believed that they contemplated the One Supreme Spirit in the form of the image or symbol before them, which helped ordinary people to concentrate their mind on the Godhead to the exclusion of other external and engrossing objects and pursuits.

According ¹⁷⁰⁶ to Nārada, the Bhāgavata-purāṇa XI. 27. 9 and Vṛddha-Hārīta (VI. 128-129) Hari is to be worshipped in water, in fire, in the heart, in the sun, on the altar, in brāhmaṇas and in images. Śātātapa ¹⁷⁰⁷ says 'the gods of ordinary men are in water, those of the knowing are in heaven, of the ignorant and of those of small intelligence are in wood and clay (i. e. images) and of the yogin in his own self (or heart)'. God is worshipped in fire by throwing oblations, in water by throwing flowers, in the heart by contemplation and in the orb of the sun by japa.

The materials out of which images are to be made are precious stones, gold, silver, copper, brass, iron, stone, wood or clay. One made of precious stones was the best and the most inferior was that made of clay. The Bhāgavata-purāṇa (XI. 27. 12) says that images are eight-fold viz. made of stone, wood, iron, sandal-wood or similar paste, drawn (as a picture), made of sand, of precious stones and lastly mental ¹⁷⁰⁸. The Matsya-purāṇa (258. 20-21) adds 'lead and bronze' to the above eight of the Skanda. Vide also Vṛddha-Hārīta VIII. 120. Among stones the Śālagrāma stone (a black stone containing fossil ammonite found in the Gaṇḍaki river near a village called Śālagrāma) and the stone from Dvārakā marked with a cakra (discus) are highly prized in the worship of Viṣṇu. Vṛddha-Hārīta (VIII. 183-189) highly extols Śālagrāma-pūjā. It is stated by Vṛddha-Hārīta that only devijas can worship Śālagrāma and not sūdras. According to several purāṇa passages quoted in the Pūjāprakāśa (pp. 20-21) even women and sūdras can perform the worship of Śālagrāma¹⁷⁰⁹, but they should not touch it. Similarly they are not to worship lingas established in the past by sages &c. This worship of Śālagrāma is comparatively ancient. Śaṅkarācārya in his commentary on the Vedāntasūtra speaks in several places of Śālagrāma¹⁷¹⁰ being worshipped as a symbol of Hari. Five kinds of stones were used in worship, viz. Bāṇa-lingas from Narmadā in Śiva worship, Śālagrāma in Viṣṇu worship, metallic stone in Durgā worship, crystal for sun-worship and red stone in Gaṇeśa worship. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī (II. 131 and VII. 185) refers to the establishment of Bāṇalingas¹⁷¹¹ of Śiva in Kashmir taken from the Narmadā. About the images to be worshipped in the house it is stated in the Matsyapurāṇa (258. 22) that they should be in size as big as a part of the thumb up to 12 aṅgulas and not more; but an image to be established in a temple should be up to sixteen aṅgulas and not more or its proper height should be arrived at as follows: divide the height of the door into eight parts; taking seven parts divide them into one-third and two-thirds; the pedestal of the image should be one-third and the image should be two-thirds of the seven parts (i. e. $\frac{2}{3}$ of seven-eighths of the height of the door). Vide Matsyapurāṇa 258. 23-25.

In medieval and modern times Viṣṇu has been deemed to have descended to earth ten times to preserve the world and its culture. A brief account of the development of this theory will not be out of place here. The ten well-known avatāras are Matsya (fish), Kūrma (tortoise), Varāha (boar), Narasimha (man-lion), Vāmana (dwarf), Paraśurāma, Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, Buddha and Kalkin. There are faint glimmerings of the theory of avatāras and of these forms even in the earliest Vedic Literature. In Rg. VIII. 17. 13¹⁷¹³ it is said that Indra was the grandson of the sage Śṛṅgaviṣa. This may be interpreted as meaning that Indra was supposed to have descended on the earth in a human form. In Rg. IV. 26. 1 the sage Vāmadeva exclaims¹⁷¹⁴ ' I was Manu and I was also the Sun '. This is referred to in the Br. Up. I. 4. 10 and is often relied upon in support of the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. It may be capable of that interpretation, but if that is not accepted it will at least tend to support the proposition that the Vedic sage thought that the Sun could be born on the earth as a human being (i. e. there was an avatāra of the Sun). There is another sense in which this passage of the Rg and that of the Br. Up. are understood in the Vedāntasūtra I. 1. 30 viz. that Vāmadeva had realized that his soul was non-different from the Supreme Soul, Brahma. The elements of the avatāra of Matsya are probably suggested by the story of Manu who was saved from a flood by a great horned fish to whose horn Manu tied the rope of his ship when the flood rose. Vide Śat. Br. I. 8. 1. 1-6 (S. B. E. vol. 12, pp. 216-218).¹⁷¹⁵

The tortoise avatāra was probably suggested by the legend that Prajāpati having assumed the form of a tortoise created living beings and that as the words kūrma (tortoise) and kaśyapa mean the same object all creatures are said to be descended from (or to belong to) Kaśyapa (Śat. Br. VII. 5. 1. 5, S. B. E. vol. 41, p. 390).¹⁷¹⁶ The peculiar exploit of the Boar incarnation, viz. raising up the earth from the bottom of the ocean, is alluded to in the Śat. Br. XIV. 1. 2. 11 (S. B. E. vol. 44, p. 451) 'a boar called Emūṣa raised the earth up and he was her lord Prajāpati.'¹⁷¹⁷ In the Rg. Viṣṇu is said to have pierced Varāha (I. 61. 7) and that he being incited by Indra brings to the worshipper a hundred buffaloes, rice cooked in milk, and the boar (called) Emūṣa (VIII. 77. 10). The Tai. Ār. X. 1 refers to this myth. In the Kāthaka S. VIII. 2 Prajāpati is said to have become a boar and plunged in water. Vide also Tai. S. VII. 1. 5. 1 and Tai. Br. I. 1. 3. Some elements of the story of the destruction of Hiranyakaśipu by Viṣṇu in the man-lion form are supplied by the story of the slaughter of the demon Namuci by Indra at dawn with the foam of waters, since Indra had agreed with Namuci that 'he would not slay him by day or by night, with the dry or moist or with the palm or with the fist, or with staff or bow &c.' (Śat. Br. XII. 7. 3. 1-4, S. B. E. vol. 44, pp. 222-223). Śat. Br. XII. 7. 3. 4 quotes Rg. VIII. 14. 13 which narrates that Indra cut off the head of Namuci with the foam of waters.¹⁷¹⁸ In the ancient Tamil work Silappadikāram (translated by Prof. V. R. Diksitar) there is a reference to the Narasimha avatāra. The special achievement of the dwarf incarnation, viz. the request of the dwarf for as much space as would be covered by his three steps, has its counter-part in the Rgveda, where the principal exploits of Viṣṇu are the taking of three steps and making the earth steady or fast.¹⁷¹⁹ Vide Śat. Br. I. 2. 5. 1 for the Dwarf incarnation. In the Chāndogya Up. III. 17. 6 it is stated that the sage Ghora Āngirasa imparted a certain instruction to Kṛṣṇa, the son of Devakī.¹⁷²⁰ This may have supplied some part of the legends about Kṛṣṇa in the Great Epic and the Purāṇas.

We saw above that according to Patañjali Vāsudeva was not a mere kṣatriya but an incarnation of God. Patañjali quotes a quarter of a verse which speaks of Kaṁsa being killed by Vāsudeva and refers to painted shows wherein the party of Vāsudeva were dressed in black and of Kaṁsa in red (vide Mahābhāṣya, vol. II. p. 36 and p. 119). Patañjali also speaks of Ugrasena as a member of the Andhaka clan and Viṣvakṣena as a Vṛṣṇi and of Baladeva also (Mahābhāṣya, vol. II. p. 257 on Pāṇini IV. 1. 114) and of Satyabhāmā (vol. I. p. 111) and Akrūra (vol. II. p. 295). So the main story of Kṛṣṇa and persons connected with his ministry on earth as gathered from the Mahābhārata, the Harivaṁśa &c. were known to Patañjali and to some extent also to Pāṇini. The Besnagara Inscription of Heliiodorus (E. I. vol. X. Appendix p. 63 No. 669) shows that even Greeks became devotees of Viṣṇu. The Eran Stone Inscription (vide Gupta Inscriptions p. 158 No. 36) refers to the Boar Incarnation. The Bhāgavatapurāṇa II. 4. 18 declares that even Kirātas, Hūṇas, Andhras, Pulindas, Pukkasas, Ābhīras, Suhmas, Yavanas, Khasas and others and even sinners, when they throw themselves on the mercy of Viṣṇu as devotees, are purified. It may therefore be assumed that the theory of the avatāras of Viṣṇu (whether ten or less or more) had been prevalent some centuries before the Christian era.

In the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa it is frequently stated that God comes down to earth often for punishing the wicked, for the protection of the good and the establishment of dharma.¹⁷²¹ In the Śāntiparva (339. 103-104) the avatāras are stated to be ten and they are the same as now accepted except that Hamsa is mentioned instead of Buddha and Kṛṣṇa is called Śatvata. Among the Purāṇas also several do not mention Buddha as an avatāra. The Mārkaṇḍeya (47. 7) speaks of Matsya, Kūrma and Varāha incarnations and in 4. 53-56 begins with Varāha and mentions Nṛsiṃha, Vāmana and Māthura (i. e. Kṛṣṇa). The Matsya (47. 39-45) speaks of 12 avatāras, some of which are different from the usual ones and verse 106 states that Bhṛgu cursed Viṣṇu to be born as a human being seven times, as he killed a woman, viz. his wife. The Matsya-purāṇa (chap. 285. 6-7) mentions the well-known ten avatāras including Buddha and this passage is quoted by Aparārka on p. 338. The Matsya-purāṇa 47. 247 speaks of Buddha as the 9th (avatāra). The Nṛsiṃha-purāṇa chap. 36. the Agni-purāṇa chap. 2 to 16 and the Vārāha-purāṇa 4. 2 enumerate the well-known ten avatāras. The Vṛddha-Hārīta *smṛti*¹⁷²² (X. 145-146) enumerates ten avatāras, includes Hayagrīva in them (in place of Buddha) and expressly says that Buddha should not be worshipped. In the Rāmāyaṇa (Ayodhyakāṇḍa 109. 34) Buddha is reviled as a thief and an atheist.¹⁷²³ This passage may be an interpolation. In the Bhāgavatapurāṇa there are three different lists of avatāras at I. 3 (where 22 avatāras occur in which Buddha, Kalkin, Vyāsa, Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa are separately enumerated), II. 7 (where besides the well-known avatāras, Kapila, Dattātreyā and others are mentioned), and at VI. 8 Buddha and Kalkin are both mentioned in verse 17.¹⁷²⁴ The Kṛtyaratnākara (pp. 159-160) quotes a passage from the Brahmapurāṇa about a vṛata on the 7th of the bright half of Vaiśākha where it is stated that Viṣṇu as Buddha started the Śākya-dharma and that on the 7th day of Vaiśākha when the moon is in conjunction with the Puṣya constellation, the image of Buddha should be bathed to the accompaniment of sayings of the Śākya and gifts of garments should be made to Śākya ascetics. The same work (pp. 247-248) quotes a passage of the Varāhapurāṇa on the observances of Buddha-dvādaśī, when a golden image of Buddha was to be worshipped and given to a brāhmaṇa. In memoir No. 26 of the Archaeological Survey of India, it is stated (p. 5) that in an inscription from South India of about the 7th century A. D. occurs a verse in a mutilated form in which Buddha is enumerated among the ten avatāras (...narasimhotha Vāmanaḥ Rāma Rāmaśca Kṛṣṇaśca Buddhaḥ Kalki ca te daśa).¹⁷²⁵ From the above discussion it follows that Buddha became in popular view an avatāra of Viṣṇu for the Hindus from about the 7th century A. D. Even about that time he was not universally so treated and orthodox writers like Kumārila (who flourished somewhere about 650 to 750 A. D.) did not admit that he was an avatāra. In his Tantravārtika (p. 195 on Jaimini I. 3. 4) Kumārila-bhaṭṭa says that the Śākya texts were promulgated by Buddha and others that had strayed from the path of the three Vedas and Ksemendra (about 1063 A. D.) in his Daśavatāra-carita and the Gitagovinda of Jayadeva (about 1180-1200 A. D.) speak of Buddha as an avatāra of Viṣṇu. Therefore at least before or about the 10th century A. D. Buddha had come to be looked upon as an avatāra of Viṣṇu throughout India.¹⁷²³ The total disappearance of Buddhism from India, the land of its birth, is a most striking phenomenon, which as stated by A. Schweitzer in 'Indian thought and its development' (tr. by Mrs. C. E. B. Russell, 1935) p. 137, cannot be satisfactorily explained. Though Buddha did not accept the authority of the Vedas and of brāhmaṇas, nor the existence of an individual soul nor the Supreme Soul, he believed in karma and punarjanma and in release from samsāra by renunciation and desirelessness. When his followers deified Buddha, when animal sacrifices had been almost stopped and his insistence on universal charity and kindness and on self-restraint were universally accepted by the followers of the Vedic religion, Buddha came to be deemed an avatāra of Viṣṇu, as the raison d'être for a separate cult ceased and the decadence of morals among monks and nuns hastened the downfall of Buddhism, the finishing touches being added by the Moslem invasions from about 1200 A. D. No one can affirm that persecution had anything to do with the disappearance of Buddhism from India. Though it cannot be said that there was no religious persecution whatever at any time in India, the evidence for persecution is very limited and such persecution if any as may have existed was as nothing compared to the persecution of Christians by other Christians and of Jews in all centuries and particularly in the 20th century by several so-called Christian powers. The few well-authenticated cases of large-scale persecutions are those of Śaśānka who persecuted the Buddhists (vide Beal's 'Records of the eastern world,' vol. I p. 212, vol. II. p. 42, 91, 118, 121), of Mihirakula, of a Pāṇḍya king (in the 11th century) who persecuted the Jains. From Aśoka downwards, kings and the civil power always extended a generous tolerance to all sects (vide Aśoka's Rock Edict No. 12). The father of the great emperor Harṣa was a worshipper of the Sun, while Harṣa's elder brother Rājyavardhana was a Buddhist and Harṣa, though himself a Śaiva, speaks of his brother with greater reverence than of his own father (vide the Madhuban copperplate inscription in E. I. vol. VII p. 155 and I p. 67). Vide Barth's 'Religions of India' pp. 133-134, Farquhar's 'Outlines of the Religious Literature of India' pp. 169, 175 for general religious tolerance in ancient India.

Rāma and Kṛṣṇa were worshipped as avatāras of Viṣṇu at least several centuries before Christ. Kālidāsa in the Raghuvamśa (XI. 22) and the Meghadūta indicates that he regarded Vāmana as an avatāra of Viṣṇu as much as Rāma was. Similarly the Varāha and Narasiṃha avatāras are frequently spoken of in the Kādambarī. The Trimūrti i. e. the conception of the triune combination of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva into one God-head is also an ancient one. The Mahābhārata (Vanaparva) gives expression to the idea that Prajāpati creates the world in the form of Brahmā, sustains it in the form of the great Puruṣa and annihilates it in the form of Rudra. Hopkins in his 'Epic Mythology' p. 231 holds that this is a solitary passage about Trimūrti and is a late one and that the Mahābhārata in general has no doctrine of Trimūrti, but rather of the equality of Viṣṇu and Śiva. Kālidāsa in his Raghuvamśa (X. 16) and Kumārasambhava (II. 4)¹⁷²⁹ breathes the same belief. The temples of Brahmā are now very few and far between, the most well-known being that at Puṣkara (Ajmer). There is a temple of Brahmā in the Idar State and another at Sādhi in the Padra Taluka of the Baroda State. The Padmapurāṇa (Srṣṭikhanda 17) shows that the worship of Brahmā had declined at that time owing, it is said, to the curse of Sāvitrī.

Śiva worship appears to be the most ancient worship that is still prevalent. Sir John Marshall's work on Mohenjo-daro (vol. I. pp. 52-53 and plate XII No. 17) shows a figure that is most probably of Śiva as a great yogin surrounded by the elephant, the tiger, the rhinoceros and the buffalo (as Śiva is called Paśupati). Vide also the Preface to vol. I. p. VII. At Mohenjo-daro the humped and short-horned bull is among the most prominent objects. Śiva as half male and half female was worshipped long before Kālidāsa (vide first verse of the Mālavikāgnimitra and Kumārasambhava VII. 28). Śiva is often spoken of as Pañcatuṇḍa (with five faces), the five aspects being respectively called Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva, Aghora, Tatpuruṣa and Īśāna (vide Tai. Ār. X. 43-47, Viṣṇudharmottara III. 48. 1). Though in later times the followers of Śiva and Viṣṇu abused each other, the Mahābhārata and some of the Purāṇas exhibit a most tolerant spirit and say there is no difference between the two.¹⁷³⁰ Vide Vanaparva 39. 76 and 189. 5-6, Śānti 343. 132, Matsyapurāṇa 52. 23. The 1000 names of Viṣṇu are enumerated in Anuśāsanaparva 149. 14-120 and the 1000 names of Śiva in Anuśāsana 17 and Śānti 287. 74 ff.

About the images of the sun the Matsyapurāṇa (11. 31 and 33) enjoins that in painting pictures of the sun or in temples of the sun the feet of the sun are not to be drawn¹⁷³¹ or shown.

About Gaṇeśa a few words have already been said (at pp. 213-216). Gaṇeśa came to be worshipped even by the Jainas. Vide Ācāra-dinakara (composed in śaṃvat 1468) published in the Kharataragaccha-granthamālā (part II, 1923), where on p. 210 there is the procedure of consecrating an image of Gaṇeśa even for Jainas and 'Journal of Indian History', vol. 18 for 1939 p. 158 for different types of Gaṇeśa figures one of which has 18 arms. For a figure of Gaṇeśa with sweetmeats (of about 500 A. D.) vide 'Ancient India' by Codrington (Plate XXXIX). The Ācāradinakara says that images of Gaṇeśa may have two, four, six, nine, 18 or 108 arms. The Agnipurāṇa chap. 71, the Mudgalapurāṇa and Gaṇeśapurāṇa deal with Gaṇeśa worship, but their dates are uncertain. The Vāraha-purāṇa chap. 23 narrates a fantastic story of the birth of Gaṇeśa. The Gaṇapatyatharvaśīrṣa (Anan. ed.) identifies Gaṇeśa with supreme Brahma.* The worship of the images of planets is comparatively ancient. Yāj. I. 296-298 prescribes that the images for the worship of the nine grahas (planets) viz. the Sun, the Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Rāhu and Ketu (the last two are the nodal points) should be made respectively of copper, crystal, red sandal-wood, gold (for both Mercury and Jupiter), silver, iron, lead and bronze. Yāj. then prescribes the details of the worship of the planets such as the clothes to be gifted, the flowers, incenses, offerings, and the mantras (from the Vāj. S.), the fuel-sticks, the food, and the fee. The Mit. on Yāj. I. 297 quotes nine verses from the Matsyapurāṇa, chap. 94, concerning the details of the images of the nine planets.

About Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, so early a writer as Daṇḍin (not later than 600 A. D.) says that she was 'sarvasuklā' (all white).

Another deity whose worship is very popular in the Deccan is Dattātreya. His worship cannot have originated later than the first centuries of the Christian era. In the Jābālopaniṣad, he is referred to as a paramahansa and there is an Upaniṣad named after him. Vanaparva 115, Anuśāsana 153, Śānti 49.36, say that he conferred boons on Kārtavīrya. Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa (chap. 16-19) gives the story of his birth, calls him a yogin and asserts that he was offered wine and meat by his devotees (19.10-12). The Bhāgavata IX. 23. 23, Matsya 47. 242-246 and other purāṇas also refer to him. In the Śiśupālavadha of Māgha he is spoken of as an avalūra.

The Viṣṇudharmasūtra¹⁷³² chap. 65 contains one of the earliest detailed description of devapūjā (of Vāsudeva or Viṣṇu). "After having well bathed and washed his hands and feet and performed ācamana (sipping of water) he should worship Lord Vāsudeva who is without beginning or end, before an idol or on the sacrificial ground. Having given animated form in his mind to Viṣṇu with the mantra 'may the Āsvins who possess life give thee life' (Maitrāyaṇī Sam.

After having thus worshipped Him, he must mutter the Puruṣasūkta. After that he who desires to obtain eternal bliss should make oblations of clarified butter, while reciting the verses of the same hymn (Rg. X. 90)." The Baud. gr. pariśeṣasūtra II. 14 describes¹⁷³³ the daily worship of Mahāpuruṣa (i. e. Viṣṇu). "A man after bathing should coudung a pure and even spot and draw the image of Viṣṇu, should offer whole grains of rice and flowers to it in worship and then should invoke Viṣṇu to come by offering water with flowers accompanied by the three vyāhrtis repeated separately and together: then he should utter the words 'this kūrca (bundle) of darbhas is made for the divine lord, its blades are twisted by threes, it is green and gold, accept this'. Then he should cleanse a vessel with water to the accompaniment of the Gāyatrī, should pass kuśa grass across

Then he satiates (the image of) the deity with water sprinkled round the deity keeping the right hand towards it and taking the twelve names (Keśava and others) with the vyāhṛtis; he offers a garment with the syllable 'om', yajñopavīta with the sacred Gāyatrī, ācamanīya with Rg. I. 22. 17, sandalwood paste with the verse 'gandhadvārām' (Tai. Ār. X. 1), whole grains of rice (akṣata) with the verse 'Irāvati' (Rg. VII. 99. 3), flowers with Rg. I. 22. 20 (tad Viṣṇoḥ), incense (dhūpa) with the Gāyatrī, a lamp with the mantra 'uddīpyasva' (Tai. Ār. Br. II. 4. 6). Then they laud him with verses derived from the Rgveda, Yajurveda, Sāmaveda or Atharvaveda in praise of Viṣṇu; then he should bid good bye to the Puruṣa (i. e. Viṣṇu) by uttering ¹⁷³⁴ the three vyāhṛtis (in such formula as 'om bhūḥ puruṣamudvās-ayāmi) and adding 'may the Lord, the Great Person, go away for (my) well-being, for conquest and for being seen again.' In case the image is immovably fixed on a pedestal &c. the invocation to come and the bidding of good-bye are omitted. The Baud. grhya-śeṣasūtra (II. 17) contains the procedure of the worship of Mahādeva (Śiva). It is almost on the same lines as the worship of Viṣṇu set out above with the difference that the names of Śiva such as Mahādeva, Bhava, Rudra, Tryambaka are substituted and some of the mantras are different. A few differences will be found in the text quoted below. It is stated therein that when the worship is of a liṅga immovably fixed then there is no invocation to come and no bidding of good-bye. ¹⁷³⁵

In the Pūjāprakāśa (pp. 97-149) and other digests the methods of devapūjā according to Śaunaka, Grhyapariśiṣṭa, R̥gvidhāna, Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa, Bhāgavatapurāṇa, the Narasimhapurāṇa are set out in detail. But for want of space they are all passed over. It will have been noticed from the passages of the Viṣṇu Dh. S. and of Baudhāyana cited above that devapūjā contains certain items and stages in the whole procedure. These are called upacāras (ways of service). They are usually stated to be sixteen. They are: āvāhana, āsana, pādya, arghya, ācamanīya, snāna, vastra, yajñopavīta, anulepana or gandha, puṣpa, dhūpa, dīpa, naivedya (or upahāra), namaskāra, pradakṣiṇā and visarjana or udvāsana. In different works, the items differ. Some add bhūṣaṇa (ornament) after yajñopavīta and tāmbūla (or mukhavāsa) after pradakṣiṇā or naivedya (Vṛddha-Hārīta VI. 31-32 and Pūjāprakāśa, p. 98). Therefore some speak of 18 upacāras. ¹⁷³⁶ Some omit āvāhana, add svāgata (welcome) after āsana, madhuparka after ācamanīya, and some have stotra (hymn of praise) and praṇāma (bow) as distinct upacāras, while others hold that these latter two are one and that pradakṣiṇā is part of visarjana (vide Pūjāprakāśa p. 98). If a person cannot afford to offer vastra (garment) and alaṅkāra (ornament), he could perform only ten out of these 16 upacāras viz. from pādya to naivedya; if he cannot afford to offer even ten he may offer only five (pañcopacāra-pūjā) viz. from gandha to naivedya; if he has nothing he may perform with flowers alone all the 16 upacāras. When the image is immovably fixed on a pedestal there is no āvāhana and visarjana and so the items become 14 or one may offer in their place only a handful of flowers with mantras.¹⁷³⁷ Those who can repeat the Puruṣasūkta (Rg. X. 90) should repeat one of its verses before offering each of the 16 upacāras (see Nṛsiṃhapurāṇa 62. 9-13). Those who cannot repeat that hymn and women and śūdras should simply say 'Sivāya namaḥ' or 'Viṣṇave namaḥ' (adoration to Śiva or Viṣṇu). Vṛddha-Hārīta (XL. 81) specially recommends the worship of the child Kṛṣṇa to women and of Hari to widows (XL. 208).¹⁷³⁸ After each of snāna, vastra, yajñopavīta and naivedya, ācamana is to be offered as part of that upacāra¹⁷³⁹ (vide Nṛsiṃhapurāṇa 62. 14). The names of some of these upacāras occur even in the Āśv. gr. (IV. 7. 10 and IV. 8. 1) in relation to the brāhmaṇas invited at śrāddha such as āsana, arghya, gandha, mālya (flowers), dhūpa, dīpa and ācchādana (i. e. vastra). Farquhar is not right when he says in his 'Outlines of the Religious literature of India' p. 51 that the sixteen upacāras 'are so distinct in character from the sacrificial cult as to betray alien origin.' When image-worship became general items offered to invited brāhmaṇas were also offered to the image of gods. It was a case of extension and not of borrowing from an alien cult.

A few words have to be said in connection with some of the 16 upacāras.

As regards the water to be employed in devapūjā and rites for the Manes, the Viṣṇu Dh. S. (66. 1) prescribes that it should not have been brought the night before (but it must be drawn that day). The worshipper should not sit on an āsana made of hamboo or stone, or of unsacrificial wood or on the bare ground, or on a seat made of grass or green leaves, but should sit on a woollen blanket or silken garment or deer-skin (Pūjāprakāśa, p. 95). When offering arghya, in the vessel containing the water to be used for that purpose all or as many as one can afford out of the following eight articles are to be mixed up, viz. curds, whole grains of rice, ends of kuśa grass, milk, dūrvā grass, honey, barley grains and white mustard seeds (Matsya-purāṇa 267. 2 quoted in the Pūjāprakāśa p. 34). It is further said that arghya is offered to the image of Viṣṇu by means of a conch in which water is mixed with sandalwood paste, flowers and whole grains of rice. In the water for ācamana are mixed cardamom, cloves, uśīra grass and kakkola or as many of them as possible. The snāna (bath) of images is effected with five materials called pañcāmṛta (five ambrosial things) viz. milk, curds, clarified butter, honey and sugar.¹⁷⁴⁰ The image is to be bathed with these five in the order stated, so that sugar coming last removes all effects of oiliness. After these a bath with pure water follows. In the pañcāmṛtasnāna the following Vedic verses are repeated in order; 'āpyāyasva' (Rg. I. 91. 16), 'dadhikrāvṇo' (Rg. IV. 39. 6), 'ghṛtam mimikṣe' (Rg. II. 3. 11), 'madhu vātā' (Rg. I. 90. 6), 'svāduḥ pavasva' (Rg. IX. 85. 6). It will be noticed that each of these mantras is suggestive of the material with regard to which it is uttered. No bath with water or these things is allowed when only a picture or a clay image is to be worshipped. If one cannot afford these, one may bathe the image with water in which the leaves of the basil plant (tulasī) are mixed up, as that plant is deemed to be the favourite of Viṣṇu. The water used in the bath of the image of a God is regarded as very sacred and it is used for ācamana by the worshipper and members of his family and friends and is called tirtha (it is also sprinkled over one's head).¹⁷⁴¹ As regards the unguents to be offered (anulepana or gandha) numerous rules are laid down

(vide Pūjāprakāśa pp. 39-41). The Viṣṇu¹⁷⁴² Dh. S. (66. 2) says that unguents should be one or more out of sandalwood, pine tree paste, musk, camphor, saffron, nutmeg. If ornaments are offered, then gold and precious stones should be real and not imitation ones (Viṣṇu Dh. S. 66. 4). Very detailed rules are laid down about flowers. The Pūjāprakāśa (pp. 42-49) waxes eloquent over the merit of offering basil leaves to Viṣṇu and using the same wood in worship generally and also when no flowers are available. The Viṣṇu Dh. S.¹⁷⁴³ (66. 5-9) prescribes that flowers emitting an overpowering smell or having no smell whatever are not to be used, nor flowers of thorny plants unless the flowers are white and sweetly fragrant ; that even red flowers such as saffron flowers and those that spring in ponds or lakes may be employed. There are grades in the merit derived from offering certain flowers, e. g. the Sm. C. I, pp. 201-202 and the Pūjāprakāśa p. 51 quote many verses of the Narasimhapurāṇa, some of which arrange vanamallikā, campaka, āśoka, vāsantī, mālatī, kunda &c. in an ascending order among flowers and the jāti flower is said to be the best of the flowers in the worship of Viṣṇu. The same work (p. 56) names dūrvā and twentyfive flowers as favourites with Viṣṇu. Vide Vṛddha-Hārta VII. 53-59 for the flowers that may be used in Viṣṇu-pūjā and Vṛddha Gautama p. 563. The flowers offered on a day are removed the next day by the worshipper when he is about to offer worship that day. Such flowers are called 'nirmālya' and great virtue is attached to placing such flowers on one's head by way of homage to the deity worshipped (vide Pūjāprakāśa, pp. 27 and 90). The Sm. C. (I. p. 204) quotes a purāṇa to the effect 'He, whose heart contemplates the form of Viṣṇu, on whose lips there is ever the name of Viṣṇu, who partakes of the naivedya offered to Viṣṇu and who places on his head the water in which the feet of an image of Viṣṇu are washed and the nirmālya of Viṣṇu, never falls off (from heaven).' The Madana-pārijāta (p. 303) quotes passages from the Viṣṇu-dharmottara about the flowers, that are not to be used in worship. In Śiva worship the following flowers and leaves are in an ascending grade of worth ; viz. arka flowers, karavīra flowers, bilva leaves, flower of droṇa, leaves of apāmārga, flower of kuśa, śami leaves, blue lotus leaves, dhattūra flower, śāmi flower, blue lotus, which is the best (vide Pūjāprakāśa, p. 210). The Madanapārijāta, p. 303 quotes from the Devīpurāṇa verses which enumerate the flowers that are to be avoided in Śiva worship. If no flowers are available, then a fruit may be offered or if no fruit is available then only leaves and lastly only white whole grains of rice or even water may be offered.¹⁷⁴⁴ Lamps are to be fed with ghee or in its absence with sesame oil.¹⁷⁴⁵ Camphor is to be burnt before the image. There is a ceremony called ārātrika (waving lights round the image) performed with several lights or pieces of camphor placed in a broad vessel which is held in both hands and waved round an image and over its head. Vide Pūjāprakāśa, pp. 75 and 87. For naivedya no food is to be offered which is declared unfit in the śāstras for eating, nor the milk of a she-goat or she-buffalo though they are allowed for food, nor the meat of the five-nailed animals nor the flesh of the wild boar nor fish. The general rule is stated by the Rāmāyaṇa as ' whatever food a man eats the same is the food to be offered to his deities '.¹⁷⁴⁶ The Sm. C. (I. p. 203) quotes the Padmapurāṇa to the effect that naivedya should be offered in a vessel of gold, silver, bronze, copper or of clay or in palāśa leaves or on lotus leaf. The naivedya is offered with the formula set out below.¹⁷⁴⁷ According to the Brahmapurāṇa quoted by Aparārka, pp. 153-154 and Pūjāprakāśa (p. 82) the naivedya offered to Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva, the Sun, Devī, the Mātṛs, to goblins and evil spirits respectively is to be given to brāhmanas, Sātvatas (Bhāgavatas), those whose bodies are smeared with ashes, to Magas, to the Śāktas, to women, to the poor.¹⁷⁴⁸

One may also partake of the naivedya offered by oneself and the Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnikā, p. 390) quotes Rg. I. 154. 5 in support. After naivedya, tāmbūla is to be offered to the God worshipped. In the ancient grhya and dharma sūtras no mention is made of tāmbūla or mukhavāsa (materials that will render the breath fragrant). Tāmbūla was probably introduced some time before or about the beginning of the Christian era in South India and then spread northwards. Among the smṛtis, Saṁvarta 55 quoted in the Kṛtyaratnākara p. 560, Laghu-Hārīta (Ānand. 39), Laghu-Āśvalāyana (Ānand.) 1. 160-61 and 23. 105, Aśvanasa (Jivānanda, part I. p. 509) refer to the chewing of tāmbūla after dinner. In the Raghuvamśa VI. 64 Kālidāsa describes betelnut plants surrounded by betel creepers. The Kāmasūtra I. 4. 16¹⁷⁴⁹ states that a person after performing the brushing of the teeth, consulting a looking glass and partaking of tāmbūla for rendering his breath fragrant should set about his daily business. Vide also Kāmasūtra III. 4. 40, IV. 1. 36, V. 2. 21 and 24, VI. 1. 29, VI. 2. 8 for other references. In the Bṛhat-saṁhitā of Varāhamihira (77. 35-37) the virtues of tāmbūla and its ingredients are described. In the Kādambarī (para 85) the royal palace is compared to the house of a dealer in betel leaves (tāmbūlika) in which lavalī, cloves, cardamom, kaṅkola are stored. The Par. M. I. part 1. p. 434 quotes four verses from Vasiṣṭha (not found in the printed Dharmaśāstra) about the cutting off of the two ends of tāmbūla leaves before eating them. In the Vratakhanda (of Caturvargacintāmaṇi, vol. II. part I, p. 242) Hemādri quotes Ratnakośa to the effect that tāmbūla means betel leaves, betel nut and chūnam; while 'mukhavāsa' means these together with cardamom, camphor, kakkola berries, pieces of copra and mātuluṅga. The *Nityācāra-paddhati*¹⁷⁵⁰ (p. 549) quotes verses showing that tāmbūla comprised nine ingredients viz. betel nut, betel leaves, chūnam, camphor, cardamom, clove, kaṅkola, copra, the mātuluṅga fruit. In modern times pieces of almond, nutmeg fruit and bark thereof, saffron, catechu are taken and mātuluṅga is omitted. Thus the thirteen ingredients of tāmbūla are made up. The Aṣṭāṅgasamgraha¹⁷⁵¹ of Vāgbhaṭa also mentions the several ingredients of tāmbūla including the essence of the bark of the Khadira tree (catechu). In modern times tāmbūla is said to be of 13 guṇas, either because it contains thirteen ingredients or because it effects thirteen good results, the last of which are set out in a subhāṣita quoted below.

Pradakṣiṇā (going round the image with the right hand always turned towards the image) and namaskāra constitute only one upacāra (item of worship) according to many. The namaskāra to the image is either aṣṭāṅga (with eight limbs) or pañcāṅga (with five limbs.) The first occurs when a person prostrates himself on the ground in front of the image in such a way that the palms of his hands, his feet, his knees, his chest and forehead touch the ground and his mind, speech and eye are fixed on the image and the latter occurs when he prostrates himself with his hands, feet and head.¹⁷⁵² There are other definitions of the aṣṭāṅga namaskāra. These several parts of the worship of images have been judicially noticed in Ram brahma Chatterji v. Kedar Nath 36 Calcutta Law Journal 478 at p. 483 (where the normal type of the continuous worship of an idol is described) and Pramatha Nath Mullick v. Pradyumna Kumar Mullick 52 Cal. 809 at p. 815 (P. C.).

In modern times it is the practice to perform in homage to the sun twelve namaskāras or any multiple of twelve and repeat the following twelve names of the sun in the dative preceded by 'om' and followed by 'namaḥ': Mitra, Ravi, Sūrya, Bhānu, Khaga, Pūṣan, Hiranyagarbha, Marici, Āditya, Savitr, Arka and Bhāskara. There is another method of these namaskāras called Tricākalpanamaskāras in which after 'om' certain mystic syllables and their combinations in twos and fours together with certain mantras are repeated with the twelve names (vide foot-note for illustrations).¹⁷⁵³

The Pūjāprakāśa (pp. 166-188) mentions 32 aparādhas (lapses) which should be avoided while engaged in worship or while one is about to perform Viṣṇupūjā and the atonements for these. These 32 aparādhas (offences) against proper etiquette for worship are referred to in the Varāhapurāṇa (130. 5).

A passage from Baudhāyana about Śiva worship has already been quoted and it has been stated that worship of the phallic emblem of Śiva appears to have been current in the very ancient civilization brought to light by the finds discovered at Mohenjo-daro. Sir R. G. Bhandarkar in his 'Vaiṣṇavism and Śaivism' has shown how Rudra is described as the supreme deity even in the Rg., how in the Tai. S. IV. 5. 1-11 there are eleven anuvākas (called Rudras) which contain a sublime eulogy of Rudra (and also in Vāj. S. 16) and how numerous Śaiva sects and doctrines arose in course of time (p. 119 ff). Pāṇini teaches the formation of Bhavāṇī, Śarvāṇī, Rudrāṇī and Mr̥dāṇī from the four names of Śiva (IV. 1. 59). In the sacrifice called Śūlagava in the gr̥hya sūtras Rudra is worshipped as the supreme deity. The Āśv. gr. IV. 9.17 mentions twelve names of Rudra and adds¹⁷⁵⁴ (IV. 9.27-29) that all names in the world, all armies, all exalted things belong to him. Patañjali in his Mahābhāṣya (vol. II. pp.387-388) on Pāṇini V. 2. 76 speaks of a 'Śiva-bhāgavata' (a devotee of Śiva). Vedāntasūtra II. 2. 37 is directed, according to Śaṅkara, to the refutation of the Pāsupata sect of Śaivas. In the Śāntiparva 284. 121-124 the Pāsupatas are said to be opposed to the dharmas of varṇa and āśrama. The Kūrmapurāṇa (pūrvārdha, chap. 16) speaks of the sāstras of the Śaiva sects, of Kāpālas, Nākulas¹⁷⁵⁵ (Lākulas?), Vāmas, Bhairavas, Pāśupatas as meant for deluding the world. The Varāhapurāṇa (chap. 70-71) is also directed against Pāśupatas. The Pāśupata brāhmaṇas are stated in the Kādambari to have surrounded the minister Śukanāsa (para 90). Śiva was worshipped in the form of the līṅga or as an image. It is believed that 14 crores of līṅgas were established by Bāṇa, an Asura devotee of Śiva, in various spots and these are called Bāṇa-līṅgas (Nityācārapaddhati, p. 556) and the Bāṇa-līṅgas (white stones) found in the Narmadā, the Ganges and other holy rivers are only like them. In the Kādambari (para 130) Bāṇa speaks of sand līṅgas on the Acchoda lake and in another place of a līṅga made of pure mother-o'-pearl. The Kūrmapurāṇa (pūrvārtha chap. 26) describes the origin of Līṅga and its worship and the Vāmanapurāṇa 46 lauds the several holy places where ancient līṅgas are established. The famous twelve Jyotir-līṅgas are; Omkāra at Māndhātā, Mahākāla at Ujjayini (modern Ujjain), Tryambaka (near Nasik), Dhṛṣṇeśvara at Elora, Nāganātha (towards the east of Ahmednagar), Bhīmā-Śaṅkara (at the source of the Bhīmā river in the Sahyādri), Kedāra-nātha in Garhwal, Viśveśvara at Benares, Somanātha in Kathiawar, Vaidyanātha near Parali, Mallikārjuna on the Śrīśaila, and Rāmeśvara in South India. Many of these are situated in central and western India near each other.

The Pūjāprakāśa (p. 194) quotes Hārīta prescribing that Maheśvara may be worshipped by means of the mantra of five syllables (namaḥ Śivāya) or by the Rudra¹⁷⁵⁶ Gāyatrī or by

A grant of Nāgavardhana, nephew of Pulakeśi (610-639 A. D.), was made providing for the worship of Kāpāleśvara and the maintenance of Mahāvratins. Yama 29 quoted in Par. M. II. part 1 p. 335 prescribes the penance of Kṛcchra for eating at a Kāpālika's house. The Karpūramāñjarī (about 900 A. D.) I. 22-24 contains a caricature of Kaula (i. e. Kāpālika) practices.

'om' or by the mantra 'īśanaḥ sarva-vidyānām' (Tai. Ār. X. 47), or by the Rudra mantras (viz. Tai. S. IV. 5. 1-11) or by the mantra 'tryambakem yajāmahe' (Rg. VII. 59. 12). For a devotee of Śiva, the wearing of a string of Rudrākṣa berries is necessary either on the hand, the arm, the neck or on the head.¹⁷⁵⁷ The Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnika p. 393) quotes verses from the Smṛtiratna and the Ratnāvali about the merit secured by bathing the liṅga with cow's milk, curds, clarified butter, honey, sugarcane juice, pañcagavya, water in which camphor and aguru are mixed up, and other substances. The 14th day of the dark half of a month has been sacred to Śiva from ancient times. Bāṇa in the Kādambarī (para 54) refers to the fact that queen Vilāsavati went to worship Mahākālā at Ujjayinī on the 14th.

The worship of Durgā has prevailed from ancient times.¹⁷⁵⁸ She is worshipped under various names and aspects. In the Tai. Ār. X. 18 Śiva is said to be the husband of Ambikā or Umā. In the Kena Upaniṣad (III. 25) Umā Haimavatī is mentioned as imparting to Indra the knowledge of the Great Being. The various names of Durgā are Umā, Pārvatī, Devī, Ambikā, Gaurī, Caṇḍī or Caṇḍikā, Kālī, Kumārī, Lalitā &c. The Mahābhārata (Virāṭaparva 6 and Bhīṣma 23) contains two hymns addressed to Durgā in which she is stated to be Vindhyavāsīnī and fond of blood and wine, and in Vanaparva 39. 4 it is stated that Umā became a kirātī when Śiva became a kirāta to test the prowess of Arjuna. In the Kumārasambhava Kālidāsa speaks of Pārvatī, Umā, Aparṇā and derives the latter two words (I. 26 and V. 28). Yāj. I. 290 speaks of Ambikā as the mother of Vināyaka. The Devīmāhātmya in the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa (chap. 81-93) is the principal sacred text of Durgā worshippers in Northern India. E. I. vol. 9 p. 189 shows that about 625 A. D. Durgā was invoked as a supreme goddess. Bāṇa in his Kādambarī gives a graphic description of the temple of Caṇḍikā and refers to offerings of blood made to her (para 28), to her trident (triśūla) and her slaughter of Mahiṣāsura. The Kṛtyaratnākara (p. 351) quotes verses from the Devipurāṇa that the 8th of the bright half of a month is sacred to Devī (and particularly of Āśvina), that a goat or a buffalo may be sacrificed for her.¹⁷⁵⁹ These bloody rites are still continued in the Kālī temple in Bengal and a few other shrines of Durgā. In Bengal the worship of Durgā in Āśvina has been most popular.¹⁷⁶⁰ Raghunandana in his Durgārcana-paddhati gives an elaborate description of the worship of Durgā in Āśvina. Durgā is also worshipped as Śakti. The influence of Śakta worship has been great throughout India and will be briefly surveyed later on.

In modern times devapūjā differs considerably from the ritual of the ancient works of Viṣṇu and Bauddhāyana; it also differs from province to province and caste to caste. A brief analysis of the devapūjā practised by brāhmaṇas in Western India is given below: Ācamana; prāṇāyāma; adoration to Mahāgaṇapati and certain other deities; twelve names of Gaṇeśa, hymn of praise to Gaṇeśa, Gaurī, Viṣṇu; mention of the place and the time with astronomical details about the day, the nakṣatra &c.; then the saṁkalpa of performing devapūjā with sixteen upacāras; contemplation on Gaṇapati with Rg. II. 23. 1 (gaṇānām tvā); āsanavidhi with an invocation to the earth; nyāsa (mystical sanctification of the body) of the sixteen verses of Rg. X. 90 on sixteen parts of the body; invocation of the deities and the sacred rivers in the water jar and offering sandalwood paste, flowers and whole grains of rice to the jar; then invocation of the conch and bell in a similar way; sprinkling of oneself and the materials of worship with water accompanied by the mantra ('apavitraḥ pavitro vā &c. '); dhyāna (contemplation) of Viṣṇu, Śiva, Gaṇeśa, the sun's disc, Durgā holding a bunch of flowers in one's folded hands; then offering the sixteen upacāras enumerated above to the accompaniment of the 16 verses of Rg. X. 90 to one's favourite deity; final benediction.¹⁷⁶¹ When several deities are worshipped, there are two methods in which the upacāras may be offered. One may offer the upacāras from āvāhana to namaskāra to one deity or the principal deity and then the same upacāras to the other deity or deities one after another. This method is called kūṇḍīnusamaya. The other method occurs when āvāhana is done for the several deities in order, then āsana for all, then pādya for all and so on up to namaskāra. This is called padārthānusamaya. This method is generally preferred. Vide the com. of Nārāyaṇa on Āśv. gr. I. 24. 7, the com. on Kātyāyana-śrauta I. 5. 9-11 for detailed explanations of these.

From the early centuries of the Christian era the works on Tantra exercised a profound influence on the ritual of devapūjā and several mystical postures of the hands and fingers such as the mudrās and the nyāsas began to occupy the minds of the worshippers.¹⁷⁶² The Bhāgavata-purāṇa XI. 27. 7 says that devapūjā is of three kinds viz. Vaidikī, Tāntrikī and mīśrā. The first and the third are for the three varṇas and Tāntrikī for śūdras.

CHAPTER XX

VAISVADEVA

Vaiśvadeva.—(offering of cooked food to all Gods).

Dakṣa (II. 56) says that in the 5th part of the day a householder has to allow distribution of food according to his ability to the gods, Manes, men and even insects. Vaiśvadeva is to be offered according to Sātātapa (quoted by Medhātithi on Manu V. 7 and by Aparārka p. 142) in the grhya fire if one has preserved it, or in the ordinary fire. If no fire is available one may offer it even in water or on the bare ground. Laghu-Vyāsa II. 52 says the same.

Some medieval works like the Smṛtyarthasāra and the Par. M. (I. part 1, p. 389) state that vaiśvadeva really comprises the three daily sacrifices viz. devayajña, bhūtayajña and pitṛyajña. The rite is so called because in it sacrifice is offered to all the gods or because food is cooked therein for all the gods.¹⁷⁶³ But in the ancient grhyasūtras the three yajñas are kept distinct. In the Āsv. gr. III. 1 the five daily sacrifices are enumerated, but only one, the brahmayajña, is thereafter described in detail and we have to understand that Vaiśvadeva has already been dealt with under homa in Āsv. gr. I. 2. 1-2 and that I. 2. 3-10 is concerned with bhūtayajña or baliharṇa, out of which the 7th sūtra contemplates an offering to Viśve-devas and sūtra 10 an offering of cooked food to pitṛs. The Śāṅh. gr. II. 14 speaks of Vaiśvadeva, while Gobhila gr. I. 4. 1-15, Khādira gr. I. 5. 22-35 speak of baliharṇa only. Pāṇini VI. 2. 39 teaches the accent of 'kṣullaka-vaiśvadeva' (as a compound). *Vaik.*¹⁷⁶⁴ VI. 17 expressly says that devayajña is the homa to the gods offered with cooked food meant for all the gods. According to Gautama (V. 9) the deities of vaiśvadeva are Agni, Dhanvantari, Viśve-devas, Prajāpati and Sviṣṭakṛt (Agni). According¹⁷⁶⁵ to Manu (III. 84-86) the deities are Agni, 1765. In offering food one will have to say अग्नये स्वाहा, सोमाय स्वाहा, अग्नीषोमाभ्यां स्वाहा, ... अग्नये स्विष्टकृते स्वाहा. In modern times the formula is अग्नये स्वाहा अग्नय इदं नमः and so on.

Soma, Agniṣoma, the Viśve-devas, Dhanvantari, Kuṇḍu, Anumati, Prajāpati, Dyāvapṛthivī, (Agni) Svīṣṭakṛt. The Śān. gr. II. 14. 4 gives the names of ten deities that are slightly different from the list of Manu. According to Pār. gr. II. 9 the deities are Brahmā, Prajāpati, Gr̥hyā, Kāśyapa and Anumati; while the Viṣṇu Dh. S. 67. 1-3 (quoted in the Gr. R. p. 278) states that Vaiśvadeva is to be offered to Vāsudeva, Saṁkarṣaṇa, Aniruddha, Puruṣa, Satya, Acyuta, Agni, Soma, Mitra, Varuṇa, Indra, Indrāgni, Viśve-devas, Prajāpati, Anumati, Dhanvantari, Vāstospati, (Agni) Svīṣṭakṛt. Vide Bhār. gr. III. 12, Mānava gr. II. 12. 1-2, Kāthaka gr. 54, Vaik. III. 7 for other lists of deities in Vaiśvadeva. It is on account of this divergence that digests like the Madanapārijāta (p. 317) say that Vaiśvadeva is of two kinds, viz. what is common to all smṛtis like that of Manu and secondly what is stated in one's own gr̥hyasūtra. The Sm. C. (I. p. 212)¹⁷⁶⁶ says the same.

All ancient smṛtis say that Vaiśvadeva is to be performed twice, once in the morning and then in the evening. Vide Āśv. gr. I. 2. 1, Vas. Dh. S. XI. 3, Manu III. 121, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 59. 13, Gobhila II. 34. But in later times it came to be performed only once in the morning and the saṁkalpa includes both in one statement.¹⁷⁶⁷ The verses 'juṣṭo damūnā' (Rg. V. 4. 5) and 'ehyagna' (Rg. I. 76. 2) are used in invoking Agni, then the verse 'catvāri śṛṅgā' (Rg. IV. 58. 3) and several ordinary verses describing the characteristics of Agni are employed for the dhyāna (contemplation) of Agni. From the food cooked for one's meal, a portion is taken out in another vessel, and covered with clarified butter; it is then divided into three parts. Then one places one's left hand on one's heart and with the right hand takes up from one portion of the food morsels equal to a ripe myrobalan fruit, presses it with one's right thumb and offers it with the right hand to Sūrya, Prajāpati, Soma Vanaspati, Agni-ṣoma, Indrāgni, Dyāvapṛthivī, Dhanvantari, Indra, Viśve Devas, Brahmā. Then holy ashes are taken from the fire with the mantra 'mā nastoke' (Rg. I. 114. 8) and ashes are applied to the forehead, the throat, the navel, the right and left shoulders and the head with certain mantras and a concluding prayer is

Medieval digests like the Mit. (on Yāj. I. 103) discuss the question whether vaiśvadeva is puruṣārtha only (i. e. recommended to men for effecting some beneficent consequence to them) or whether it is puruṣārtha as well as a rite for effecting a saṁskāra (unseen or spiritual result) of the food cooked. In the latter case food will be pradhāna (the principal matter) and vaiśvadeva will be secondary ; but in the former case (i. e. if it were only puruṣārtha) food will be secondary and Vaiśvadeva principal. Relying¹⁷⁶⁹ on Āśv. gr. I. 2. 1 some say that vaiśvadeva is meant as a saṁskāra of food and relying on Āśv. gr. III. 1. 1 and 4 others say that it is puruṣārtha. The Mit. declares that vaiśvadeva is puruṣārtha only, as Manu (II. 28) holds that the human body is rendered fit for spiritual knowledge by the daily yajñas and by other sacrifices and that if vaiśvadeva is not puruṣārtha alone, each time food is cooked in the day (on account of the sudden advent of many guests) vaiśvadeva would have to be performed several times in the day ; but Manu III. 108 forbids a fresh vaiśvadeva in such a case. Sm. C. (I. p. 213) and Par. M. (I. 1. p. 390) hold the same view. The Smṛtyarthasāra p. 46 and Laghu-Āśvalāyana I. 116 hold the view that vaiśvadeva is both for the saṁskāra of the householder and also of the food.¹⁷⁷⁰

There was divergence of view on other questions viz. whether vaiśvadeva was to be performed before śrāddha or after it and whether food for vaiśvadeva was to be separately cooked from that meant for śrāddha. Aparārka p. 463 sets out the conflicting views on the first question and says that for vaiśvadeva there are three options, viz. it may be performed immediately after food is ready, or it may be offered after baliharṇa or it may be performed after śrāddha is finished. The Madanapārijāta p. 320 and Bṛhat-Parāśara p. 156 hold that vaiśvadeva must be performed before śrāddha. Vide Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnikā pp. 406-407) also; on the other hand Anuśāsana-parva (97. 16-18) directs that on śrāddha day, piṭṛ-tarpana comes first, then offering of bali, and then vaiśvadeva. The Madanapārijāta p. 318 says that the food for the vaiśvadeva must be separately cooked from what is meant for śrāddha. In the case of a joint family of father and sons or of several brothers, the father alone performs vaiśvadeva or the eldest brother; but if the father or eldest brother is unable to do it himself, a son or younger brother may offer it at his bidding (Laghu-Āśvalāyana I. 117-119).

The food to be offered should be sprinkled over with ghee or with curds or milk but not with oil or salt. Āp. Dh. S.¹⁷⁷¹ II. 6. 15. 12-14 prescribes that there is to be no homa of kṣāra and lavaṇa (vide note 723 above) and also of food that is mixed up with inferior food (like kulattha &c.); but if one is compelled to offer inferior food in vaiśvadeva (owing to poverty &c.) he should take some hot ashes from the grhya or ordinary fire towards the north of the fire and offer the food in the ashes. The Smṛtyarthasāra¹⁷⁷² p. 47 states that cereals like gram and māṣa beans are not to be used in vaiśvadeva food. Even when a man was not going to eat on a particular day he had to offer vaiśvadeva (Aparārka p. 145). If he could afford no food, he was to offer fruits, roots or even water.¹⁷⁷³ He who has no grhya fire may offer vaiśvadeva food into the ordinary fire with only the vyāhṛtis and the rest may be left for crows.

Āp. Dh. S. (II. 2. 3. 1 and 4) says that vaiśvadeva food should be cooked by āryas (persons of the twice-born classes) that are purified (by bathing &c.), or sūdras supervised by āryas may cook the food.¹⁷⁷⁴ Medieval writers remarked, as usual, that the latter rule about sūdras being cooks applied only to another age.¹⁷⁷⁵ Āp. Dh. S. (II. 2. 3. 10-11) further says that when the food is ready i.e. cooked, the cook should announce while standing, to the owner of the house 'it is ready' and the owner should reply 'it (food) is auspiciously ready, it is food that gives supremacy; may it not be lost.' If no vaiśvadeva is performed on any day, the householder had to fast the day and night (Gobhila-smṛti III. 120). Dakṣa II. 62 and Yama condemn to hell him who takes his own meal without offering vaiśvadeva, when he is not himself in distress or difficulty.¹⁷⁷⁶

It has been stated above (p.158) that the śūdra was to offer all the five yajñas without Vedic or Paurāṇic mantras, but only with the word 'namah' and he was to use uncooked food for vaiśvadeva. Vide Yāj. I. 121 and the Mit. thereon and Āhnikaprakāśa, p. 401.

Baliharāṇa or Bhūtayajña:—Here also there is some divergence between the ancient grhya-sūtras and medieval and modern practice. The Āśv. gr. I. 2. 3-11 deals with this. The deities to whom bali (or part of the food taken out when performing vaiśvadeva) is offered are: to the same deities to whom the devayajña is offered as stated above, to the waters, to herbs and trees, to the house, to the domestic deities, to the deities of the ground (on which the house is built), to Indra and Indra's men, to Yama and Yama's men, to Varuṇa and Varuṇa's men, to Soma and Soma's men (these are offered in the several quarters¹⁷⁷⁷), to Brahman and Brahman's men in the middle, to the Viśve-devas, to all day-walking beings, to the Rakṣases-towards the north; svadhā to the pitṛs (Manes)—with these words he should pour out the remnant of the food to the south, while wearing the sacred thread suspended over the right shoulder. Āśv. adds that if baliharāṇa is performed by night then the words 'to all night-walking beings' are used instead of 'to all day-walking beings'.

Gobhila gr. I. 4. 5-15, Pār. gr. II. 9 and other grhya sūtras, Āp. Dh. S. II. 2. 3. 15-II. 2. 4. 9, Gautama V. 10-15, differ considerably from the above in several respects. But for want of space no reference can be made to these differences.

In bhūtayajña, bali is to be¹⁷⁷⁸ offered not into fire but on the ground, which is to be wiped with the hand and sprinkled with water, and then the bali is to be put down and water is poured on it thereafter. Vide Āp. Dh. S. II. 2. 3. 15. The Āp. Dh. S. (II. 4. 9. 5-6) prescribes that one should make all including dogs and cāṇḍālas participators in the food cooked for vaiśvadeva and adds the view of some (which he disapproves) that one should not give food to the undeserving.¹⁷⁷⁹ Manu III. 87-93 says that after performing vaiśvadeva one should offer balis in all directions to Indra, Yama, Varuṇa, Soma and their followers, a bali to Maruts on the door, to waters a bali in water, a bali to the trees in mortar and pestle, a bali to Śrī on the top of the house, to Bhadrakālī at the foot of the house, to Brahmā and Vāstospati in the midst of the house; a bali may be thrown up in the sky to Viśve Devas, to the day-walking beings (when baliharṇa is done by day) and to night-walking beings (by night); a bali should be offered to the prosperity of all on the first floor¹⁷⁸⁰ and all the remaining portion of the food for balis should be offered to the manes towards the south; the householder should lightly (so that no dust will get mixed with it) offer on the ground some food to dogs, to outcasts, to cāṇḍālas, to those suffering from loathsome diseases (such as leprosy), to crows and insects. Yāj. I. 103 calls upon the householder to throw food to dogs, cāṇḍālas and crows on the ground.¹⁷⁸¹

These directions to give food even to outcasts, dogs and birds were the outcome of the noble sentiment of universal kindness and charity, the idea that One Spirit pervades and illumines the meanest of creatures and binds all together. The Śān. gr. (II. 14)¹⁷⁸² winds up its vaiśvadeva section with this fine exhortation "let him throw food to dogs, to śvapacas (eaters of dog-flesh), to birds on the ground; let him eat nothing without having cut off a portion (to be offered as a bali); let him not eat alone, nor before others (relatives and guests), since the mantra says 'the fool gets food in vain' (Rg. X. 117. 6). The Mahābhārata (Vanaparva II. 59) says that offering food to dogs, śvapacas and birds on the ground is known as vaiśvadeva, which is performed in the morning and evening. The same verse occurs at Anuśāsanaparva 97. 22-23. Aparārka p. 145 says that vaiśvadeva comprises all actions from the offering into fire oblations of food up to the throwing of food to dogs and the like in the morning and the evening.

In modern times the way in which balis are offered and their number are set out in the diagram below. The one drawn is for the morning baliharāṇa. For the evening one the only change necessary would be to put 'agnaye svāhā' (No. 1) in place of 'sūryāya svāhā' and 'naktam-cāribhyaḥ' for 'divā-cāribhyaḥ' in No. 27. The word 'svāhā' is not repeated in the diagram after each name¹⁷⁸³ for the sake of space. Manu III. 121 prescribes that bali is offered in the evening by the wife but without mantras (i. e. she is not to repeat the mantras) 'Indrāya svāhā' &c., but only to contemplate on the several deities.

Pitṛyajña :—The word occurs in Rg. X. 16. 10, but its exact meaning is not certain. Pitṛyajña may be performed in either of three ways as stated above (on p. 700) viz. by tarpaṇa (Manu III. 70 and 283), or by performing baliharana in which remnants of bali food are to be offered to the pitṛs (Manu III. 91 and Āśv. gr. I. 2. 11) or by performing śrāddha daily with food on inviting at least one brāhmaṇa for dinner (Manu III. 82-83). Śrāddhas will be dealt with later and the other two (tarpaṇa and baliharana) have already been dealt with. In this daily *śrāddha*¹⁷⁸⁴ there is no offering of piṇḍas (balls of rice) and the several strict rules and procedure of the pārvana śrāddha do not apply.

CHAPTER XXI

NṚYAJÑA OR MANUṢYA-YAJÑA.

Nṛyajña or Manusya-yajña: (Honouring guests).—Manu (III. 70) states that this consists in honouring guests. In the oldest hymns of the Rgveda fire is described as a guest in the house of the sacrificer. In Rg. I. 73. 1 Agni is described as lying in a pleasant spot and pleased like a guest (syonaśir-atithir-na priṇāno). Vide Rg. V. 1. 8 ¹⁷⁸⁵ and 9, V. 4. 5, VII. 42. 4 for fire being called atithi. In Rg. IV. 4. 10 it is said of Agni 'you become the protector, the friend, of him who offers you hospitality in the usual (or proper) order.' Vide Rg. IV. 33. 7 and Tai. S. I. 2. 10. 1 for the word ātithya. Atharvaveda IX. 6 is an eulogy of hospitality in which the various stages in the reception and feeding of a guest are metaphorically represented as the various actions performed in a sacrifice. ¹⁷⁸⁶ The Tai. S. V. 2. 2. 4 refers to the fact that 'when a guest comes, hospitality in which ghee abounds, is offered to him' and it remarks that 'one who comes in a chariot and one who comes in a cart are the two most honoured among guests. ¹⁷⁸⁷' The Tai. S. (VI. 2. 1. 2) says 'hospitality is offered to all the followers accompanied by whom a king comes'. Vide Ait. Br. II. 9 for almost the same words. The Śaṅ. Br. II. 9 remarks ¹⁷⁸⁸ 'when a man offers oblations at sunrise, he indeed offers hospitality to a great god who has started on a journey.' The Tai. Br. (II. 1. 3) shows that a guest was honoured by having a lit lamp placed before him and then food was served to him. ¹⁷⁸⁹ The Ait. Br. (25. 5) says that a guest should not be refused in the evening.¹⁷⁹⁰ The Śat. Br. (II. 1.4. 2. S. B. E. vol. 12, p. 291) remarks that 'it would be unbecoming for a person to take food before men who are staying with him as guests have eaten'. The Śatapatha shows that an ox or a goat was cooked for a guest, either a king or a brāhmaṇa (III. 4. 1. 2). Vide also Ait. Br. 3. 4 for the offering of an ox or barren cow to a king or another deserving person coming as a guest. Yāj. I. 109 also says that a big ox or a goat was to be kept apart for a guest learned in the Veda. But the Mit. and other¹⁷⁹¹ medieval writers to whom flesh-eating was an anathema and an unspeakable sin for a brāhmaṇa remark that an ox or a goat was to be understood as set apart for the guest to flatter him (with the words 'this ox is yours') just as one says in humility 'all this house is yours' and that the ox or goat was not meant to be given in gift or to be killed since it would be impossible to find an ox each time a śrotriya guest came. The Ait. Ār. I. 1. 1 remarks 'whoever is good and has attained eminence is a (real) guest, people do not treat with hospitality one who is undeserving.'¹⁷⁹² In the Tai. Up. (I. 11. 2) one of the exhortations of the teacher to the pupil returning home is 'atithi-devo bhava' (honour guests). The same Upaniṣad says elsewhere (III. 10. 1) "let him never turn away a stranger from his house, that is the rule. Therefore a man should by all means acquire much food, for people say (to the guest) 'there is food ready for him.' If he gives food amply, food is given to him amply". In the Kathopaniṣad¹⁷⁹³ (I. 7-9) it is said 'a brāhmaṇa entering a house as a guest is (like) fire. People offer this (well-known) appeasement to him. Oh, son of Vivasvat, offer him water (to wash his feet). If a brāhmaṇa guest stays in a man's house without food, he cuts off (destroys) the hopes and expectations, (fruits of) the friendship (of the good), the rewards of sacrifices and charitable acts, sons and cattle.' Then Yama offered to bestow three boons on Naciketas as some penance for allowing Naciketas to remain without food in his house for three days. The Nirukta¹⁷⁹⁴ IV. 5 in explaining Rg. V. 4. 5 (justo damūnā atithirduroṇa) derives the word 'atithi' from the root 'at' to go and also from 'tithi' (day) and 'a' meaning 'comes' (from 'i' with 'abhi'). Vide Manu III. 102 for another derivation; also Parāśara I. 42 and Mārķ. 29. 2-9. Manu and others say that an atithi is so called because he does not stay for a whole tithi (i. e. day) and 'an atithi is a brāhmaṇa who stays for one night only as a guest.'

The honouring of guests comes after the offering of bali and Baud. gr. II. 9. 1-2, Vas. XI. 6, Viṣṇupurāṇa III. 11. 55 ordain that after baliharāṇa the householder should wait in front of the yard of his house for as much time as would be required for milking a cow or for a longer time at his desire for receiving guests. Others make it a definite time viz. one-eighth of a muhūrta (vide Mārķ. purāṇa 29. 24-25 quoted in Sm. C. I., p. 217).¹⁷⁹⁵ The Āp. Dh. S. contains a very elaborate treatment of honouring guests (II. 3. 6: 3 to II. 4. 9. 6). Gaut. V. 36, Manu III. 102-103 and Yaj. I. 107 and 111 state that he is called an atithi who belonging to a different village and intending to stay one night only arrives in the evening, that one who has already been invited for dinner is not an atithi properly so called, that a person who belongs to the same village or who is a friend or fellow-student is not an atithi, that one has to honour guests according to one's ability, that guests are to be preferred according to the order of varṇas and that among the brāhmaṇas, the śrotriya and one who has completely mastered (at least one) recension of the Veda is to be preferred. Vas. Dh. S. XI. 6 says that the worthiest are to be honoured first. Gaut. V. 39-42 and Manu III. 110-112 say that a kṣatriya is not really an atithi to a brāhmaṇa nor are vaiśyas nor sūdras; but they add that,¹⁷⁹⁶ if a kṣatriya comes to a brāhmaṇa's house as a guest (i. e. as a traveller who has no food with him and about the time of taking food) he should be treated to a meal after brāhmaṇa guests take their food and vaiśya and sūdra guests should be given food by a brāhmaṇa householder along with his servants and thereby he should show his kindness. Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 5 requires the householder to give food to all who come at the end of the Vaiśvadeva, even including cāṇḍālas, but it mentions the view of some that one need not give food to unworthy persons (vide note 1779 above). Commentators like Haradatta explain that, in the case of worthy guests, if the householder does not give food, though able, he incurs sin; but in the case of unworthy people he incurs no blemish by not giving, but if he gives to them also, he secures merit. Vṛddha-Gautama (pp. 535-536) calls upon a householder to treat even a cāṇḍāla with consideration. Parāśara (I. 40) and Śātātapa went so far¹⁷⁹⁷ as to say that even if a householder hates a visitor or the latter is a fool, the householder should give him food if he arrives at the time of meals. Śāntiparva 146. 5 says that even an enemy when he comes to one's house as a guest must be hospitably treated, as a tree does not remove its shade from one who approaches it to fell it. But Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 6. 19, Manu IV. 213, Yāj. I. 162 are opposed to this and state that a guest who is at enmity with the host shall not eat his food, nor shall he eat the food of a host who accuses him or suspects him of a crime. Vṛddha-Hārīta (8. 239-240) states the humane rule 'if a traveller is a śūdra or belongs to a pratiloma caste (such as a cāṇḍāla) and comes to one's house tired and hungry, the householder should give him food; but if a heretic or a patita (one outcast for grave sins) comes in that condition, one should not give him cooked food, but only grain. Compare Manu IV. 30. Vṛddha-Gautama (chap. 6, p. 535 and chap. 12, p. 590, Jivānanda part 2) says the same about a cāṇḍāla or śvapāka being given cooked food. Baud. gr. II. 9. 21 enjoins welcome to all travellers including cāṇḍālas.

The guest is to be shown honour by going out to meet him, by offering him water to wash his feet, by giving him a seat, by lighting a lamp before him, by giving food and lodging, by personal attendance on him, by offering him a bed and by accompanying him some distance when he departs. Vide Gaut. V. 29-34, 37, Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 6. 7-15, Manu III. 99, 107 and IV. 29, Dakṣa III. 5-8. Vanaparva 200. 22-25 and Anuśāsana 2 highly extol hospitality. Anuśāsana 7. 6 says 'the host should give his eye, mind and agreeable speech to the guest, he should personally attend on him and should accompany him when he (the guest) departs; this sacrifice demands these five fees'.¹⁷⁹⁸ Āp. Dh. S. (II. 2. 4. 16-21) says that if a brāhmaṇa that has not studied the Veda or a kṣatriya or a vaiśya comes as a guest to a brāhmaṇa, the latter should offer him a seat, water and food, but need not rise to receive him, that if a śūdra comes as a guest to a brāhmaṇa, the latter should ask him to do some work, then give him food, but if he has none, he should send his slaves to bring it from the royal palace (or store-house).¹⁷⁹⁹ Haradatta makes the interesting remark that for honouring śūdra visitors the king should set apart in each village some paddy or other corn. Gaut. V. 33, Manu III. 101 (= Vanaparva II. 54 and Udyoga 36. 34), Ap. Dh. S. II. 2. 4. 13-14, Yāj. I. 107, Baud. gr. II. 9. 21-23 say that¹⁸⁰⁰ if a man has not the means to give food to all visitors he should at least offer them water, room and grass to lie down upon, and agreeable speech. If the householder is absent, his wife is to look after honouring guests. Gaut. (V. 37-38) says that guests of the brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya and vaiśya castes should be respectively greeted with the words kuśala, anāmaya and ārogya and the śūdra also with ārogya. Vide Manu II. 127 also and note 831 above.

The motive of this injunction to honour guests was clear, viz. universal kindliness. Other motives were added by smṛtis in order to emphasize the observance of this duty. The Śān. gr. II. 17. 1 says "Even if a man constantly gathers grass (i. e. maintains himself by collecting the grains that fall in a field when the crop is taken away) and performs agnihotra, a brāhmaṇa guest who stays in his house without receiving the honour (due as a guest) takes away the (merit) of all his good works".¹⁸⁰¹ Manu III. 100 says the same. Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 6. 6 says that by honouring guests one secures heaven and freedom from misfortune.¹⁸⁰² Vide also Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 7. 16. One verse quoted in numerous works like the Viṣṇu Dh. S. 67. 33, Śāntiparva 191. 12, Viṣṇupurāṇa III. 9. 15, Mārkaṇḍeya 29. 31, Brahmapurāṇa 114. 36 is 'when a guest returns from the house of a person with his hope of getting food shattered, he (the guest) transfers his own sins to the householder and departs taking with him the householder's merit (puṇya)'. The Vāyupurāṇa (71. 74) and Br̥hat-Parāśara (Jivānanda, part 2, p. 99) say that yogins and siddhas (those who have attained transcendent powers) wander over this earth in various forms for the benefit of men; therefore one should with folded hands welcome a guest. If one is not able to feed many guests, then Baud. Dh. S. (II. 3. 15-18) declares that one should feed him who is endowed with superior qualities or who is the first to arrive or who is a śrotriya.

Parāśara (I. 46-47) says that the brahmacārin and the ascetic are the masters of food (i. e. their claim is the first); if one eats without giving to these one should perform the penance of cāndrāyaṇa. When a yati comes as a guest, one should give water in his hand, then food and then again water. The food becomes as big as Meru (mountain) and the water as the sea. Laghu-Viṣṇu (II. 12-14) highly eulogises a yogin as a guest and Dakṣa VII. 42-44 and Vṛddha-Hārta 8. 89 say that if a yati stays as a guest in a householder's house for a single night, the latter's accumulated sins are destroyed and when a yati takes food at a man's house it is Viṣṇu himself who is fed.¹⁸⁰³

If after some guests have been fed another guest or a batch of guests arrives, then the householder should have food cooked

again, but in such a case no fresh vaiśvadeva and baliharana are necessary. Vide Manu III. 105 and 108. It has been already shown from the Śatapatha that the householder is not to partake of meals before the guests, but rather after the guests. The Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 7. 3 states ¹⁸⁰⁴ 'he who eats before his guest eats (destroys) food, prosperity, progeny, cattle and merit of his own house'. Manu III. 114 (= Viṣṇu Dh. S. 67. 39) allows the householder to feed newly married girls (his daughters or sisters), unmarried girls, persons who are ill, and pregnant women even before guests; while Gautama V. 23 says that these should be fed at the same time as the guests. Manu III. 113, 116-118, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 67. 38-43, Yāj. I. 105, 108, Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 10, ¹⁸⁰⁵ Baud. Dh. S. II. 3. 19 say that one should feed one's friends, relatives and one's servants and then the householder and his wife should dine, that one should not stint one's servants and slaves (who are to be fed daily with food) in order to be able to feed guests, that he who eats before these (guests, relatives, young women of the house, servants) will have his soul harassed by vultures after death, that he who cooks food for himself only swallows merely sin and that when he eats what remains after offering yajña to gods, beings, pitṛs and guests, he really eats. Manu III. 285 (= Vanaparva II. 60) says that 'vighasa is what is left after brāhmaṇas and guests have partaken and amṛta is what is left after being offered in sacrifice and one should always eat these.' Baud. Dh. S. (II. 3. 68 and 21-22) says ¹⁸⁰⁶ "all beings subsist on food, the Veda declares 'food is life'; therefore food should be given, as food is the highest offering. One should not take food without giving it to others" and quotes two verses said to have been sung by food itself. It is on account of these sentiments that are ingrained even to-day in the minds of all Hindus that no Poor Law and no work-houses were required in India. This sentiment undoubtedly leads to abuses, but what system is not without abuses? The Poor Law and work-houses have their own abuses and the general tax-payer has probably to pay more for relief to the poor, the destitute and unemployed in England than under the Indian system of feeding the poor voluntarily.

Āp. Dh. S. (II. 4. 9. 2-4) says¹⁸⁰⁷ that when the guest departs, the host should accompany him to the place where his conveyance is drawn up and if he has no conveyance, then till the guest gives him leave to go or if the guest forgets to give leave, the host should turn back from the boundary. Vas. Dh. S. XI. 15 and Yāj. I. 113 speak also of accompanying the guest till the boundary, and Aparārka explains that the boundary may be that of the host's house site, or of his field or of the village according to the eminence of the guest. Śāṅkha-Likhita¹⁸⁰⁸ prescribe that the host should accompany the guest till he reaches a public garden or public hall, a prapā (place where water is distributed gratis), a tank, a temple, a sacred (or big) tree (like the fig tree) or a river and then should go round the guest and say the words 'farewell till we see each other again.' It is in accordance with this that in the fourth Act of the Śākuntala Kāṇva's pupil reminds his teacher that one should accompany one's dear relative up to some reservoir of water.

CHAPTER XXII

BHOJANA

Bhojana (taking one's meals) :—Dakṣa (II. 56 and 68) states that in the fifth¹⁸⁰⁹ part of the day the householder should make according to his capacity the gods, pitṛs, men and even lower animals (lit. insects) participators (in food) and after doing that, he should himself partake of the remainder of the food cooked. Thus he was to take his meals during one hour and a half after noon. Bhojana is one of the most important subjects treated of in Dharmaśāstra works and the greatest importance (next to rules about marriage) attaches to the numerous injunctions and taboos about food. The principal subjects to be dealt with under this head are: how many times food was to be taken; the kinds of foods and drinks allowed or forbidden; what causes food defilement; flesh-eating and drinking wine; whose food was to be eaten; etiquette and ceremonies before taking food, at the time of taking it and after taking it.

Great importance was attached to purity of food from very ancient times. In the Chāndogya Up. (VII. 26. 2) occurs this passage 'when there is purity of food, then the mind becomes pure, when the mind is pure then follows firm remembrance (of the real Self), when the last is secured all knots (that bind the soul to the world) are loosened.'¹⁸¹⁰

The several matters about bhojana found in the Vedic literature will be first briefly set out. From Rg. VI. 30. 3 it appears that food was taken, while sitting ('the mountains sank down just as men sit down to take food'). 'A person was to take food¹⁸¹¹ only twice a day' says the Tai. Br. I. 4. 9. and the Śat. Br. II. 4. 2. 6. There were certain taboos about articles of food even in the earliest texts. Tai. S. II. 5. 1. 1 states that all red exudations (resins) of trees or the juice that oozes out from trees when they are cut (with an axe &c.) should not be eaten, since that colour is due to the (sharing of) brāhmaṇa-murder. Similarly the milk of the cow was not to be drunk for ten days after delivery (Tai. Br. II. 1. 1, III. 1. 3). The Ait. Br. 6. 9 states that one should not eat the food of a dikṣita (one initiated for a Vedic sacrifice) till the performance of vapūhoma by him. Rg. I. 187 (vv. 1-7) is a hymn in praise of food. The story of Uṣasti Cākrāyaṇa in the Chāndogya Up. shows that in a dire calamity when no food can be had, one may eat anything, even the remnants of another's food and the Vedāntasūtra (III. 4. 28-31, sarvānnānumatis-ca prāṇātyaye tad-darśanāt) is based on this episode in the Chāndogya. In the Ait. Ār. V. 3. 3¹⁸¹² it is stated that 'one who knows this (i. e. the Mahāvratā) should not recite these texts before one who knows it not nor dine with him nor should he take delight in his company.' The sages are said in the Kauṣītaki Br. (12. 3) to have told Kavasa who sat in their midst that they would not eat with him as he was the son of a dāsi. The question about flesh-eating and drinking spirituous liquors will be dealt with in detail later.

It is remarkable that on Vedāntasūtra III. 4. 29 Śaṅkara connects this clause with allowed and forbidden foods 'एवं च सति-आहारशुद्धौ सत्त्वशुद्धिरित्येवमादि-भक्ष्याभक्ष्यविभागः शास्त्रमवाधितं भवति'. On या. I. 154 (p. 221) अपरार्क quotes a long passage from Hārīta in which we read ' तस्माच्छुचिर्यथार्थपरिमिताहारः स्यात् । आहारशुद्धौ सत्त्वशुद्धिरित्याचार्याः । '.

Manu V. 4 declared that death overtakes brāhmaṇas on account of four causes, viz. absence of Vedic study, giving up the performance of proper duties and actions, laziness and blemishes attaching to the food taken. The Gr. R. p. 347 quotes verses to the effect 'food is the filth of men, everything is centred in food, the evil deeds of men resort to their food. Whoever eats the food of another partakes of that man's sin.' Therefore elaborate regulations are laid down about everything relating to food. Āp. Dh. S. I. 11. 31. 1, Vas. Dh. S. XII. 18. Viṣṇu Dh. S. 68. 40, Manu II. 5 say that one should face the east when taking food and the Viṣṇu Dh. S. 68. 41 and Āp. Dh.

S. II. 8. 19. 1-2 allow a man to face the south, except when the diner's mother is alive. Manu II. 52 (= Anuśāsanaparva 104. 57) states 'one facing the east eats food which tends to long life, one facing the south eats food which leads to fame, one facing the west eats (so as to produce) wealth and one facing north partakes of truth.' This means that one who eats facing any one of these directions secures the benefit specified. The Vāmanapurāṇa and Viṣṇupurāṇa quoted in Gr. R. p. 312 disallow the south and west. One must take one's meals in private in a place screened from public view. The Sm. C. quotes¹⁸¹³ verses of Devala, Uśanas and the Padmapurāṇa to the effect 'one should take food in privacy, for one who does so is endowed with wealth and one who eats his meals in public becomes bereft of wealth; one should not eat in the sight of many (who are themselves not eating) and many men should not eat before a single person who is only looking at them'. One may¹⁸¹⁴ eat in the company of one's sons, younger brothers, dependents &c. Some writers went so far as¹⁸¹⁵ to recommend that 'one should take one's food alone and not in the company of even one's relatives or other brāhmanas, since who can know the secret sins a person in whose company one eats is guilty of'? The conception underlying this uncharitable view was stated by Brhaspati to be that 'when several persons sit down to dinner in a continuous row, the sins one of them is guilty of attach to the others in the same row'. Even in modern times many persons in Northern India follow this view and it is a well-known proverb that nine bhāgyas have ten hearths. The place where one takes one's food should be freshly cowdunged and pure. Āp. Dh. S. (I. 5. 17. 6-8) says that one should not take one's food in a boat nor on a wooden platform, but may do so on a pure floor. One was not to eat while seated on an elephant, or horse or camel be sprinkled on the ground below his plate. The reasons for drawing a maṇḍala are stated by these authorities to be that the Ādityas, Vasus, Rudras, Brahmā and other gods partake of only that food which is offered after a maṇḍala is made and that evil spirits and goblins carry away the flavour of the food when no maṇḍala is made. The person taking his food should sit on a low wooden stool having four feet or on a seat made of wool or of the skin of a goat (which latter is said to be the best by Āp. Dh. S. II. 8. 19. 1). One should not sit on a seat of cowdung cakes (dried), or of clay, or of the leaves of aśvattha or palāśa or arka plant or a seat made by joining two planks together or on a shattered one or partly burnt one or on one made fast with iron (nails). Vide Smṛtyarthasāra p. 69. The vessel or plate from which one is to eat is to be placed on the maṇḍala drawn on the ground. The vessel from which to eat may be of gold, silver, copper, lotus or palāśa leaves (vide Veda-Vyāsa III. 67-68, Paithīnāsī quoted in Āhnika-prakāśa p. 467). A copper vessel is forbidden to householders who should use bell-metal (kāṁśya) vessel. Āp. Dh. S. (II. 8. 19. 3) says that a copper plate with gold in the centre¹⁸¹⁹ is recommended. But a bronze plate for eating from, tāmbūla and a luxurious bath with oil &c., were not allowed to an ascetic, a brahmacārin and a widow.¹⁸²⁰ Hārīta (quoted by Sm. C. I. p. 222) stated that one was not to eat in an iron or earthen vessel, but Āp. Dh. S. (I. 5. 17. 9-12)¹⁸²¹ prescribes that an earthen vessel not used for cooking may be used as a plate for meals, but if it had been used for cooking food, then it may be used as a plate for food after being baked in fire, that an iron plate scoured with ashes is pure and even a wooden plate may be used provided it is thoroughly scraped from inside. Manu IV. 65 states that one should not eat from a broken vessel, but Paithīnāsī remarks that there is nothing wrong in eating from a broken plate made of copper, silver, gold, conch-shell, or stone.¹⁸²² Some smṛtis forbade lotus or palāśa leaves, but the

Āhnika-prakāśa p. 467 explains that this prohibition holds good only if the lotus plant grows on dry land (and not in a pond or the like) or when the palāśa is a young plant. Paithīnasi (in Sm. C. I. p. 222) prescribes that one who desires wealth should not eat on a plate made of the leaves of the vaṭa, arka, aśvattha, kumbhi, tinduka, kovidāra and karañja trees. Vṛddha-Hārīta 8. 250-256 prescribes that the plate may be of gold, silver or bronze or any leaf allowed by śāstras, that leaves of palāśa and lotus are not to be used by householders but may be used by ascetics, forest hermits and in śrāddhas and sets out leaves forbidden and allowed. Even now in modern times people prefer (particularly in caste dinners and marriages) plantain leaves for dining or silver vessels for honoured guests and brāhmaṇas at śrāddha or use plates prepared from stitched leaves of various trees. Before sitting down to take one's food, one has to perform ācamana (twice) outside the place where one is to eat and has to perform ācamana after taking his meals. This practice was most ancient, as it is attested by the Chāndogya Up. V. 2. 2¹⁸²³ and the Br. Up. VI. 1. 14. The rule is laid down by Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 16. 9,¹⁸²⁴ Manu II. 53, V. 138 and others also. Vide Devala (quoted in the Smṛtimuktāphala, āhnika, p. 418) for ācamana outside the room for meals. When sitting down to eat a person must wear his sacred thread in the upavita form (Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 15. 1) and must also have an upper garment,¹⁸²⁵ but should not cover his head (Manu IV. 45 III. 238, Āp. Dh. S. II. 2. 4. 22-23 and II. 8. 19. 12). A darvī (ladle or spoon) is to be employed in serving ghee, oil, cooked food, all condiments, salt (i. e. these should not be served by the bare hand) but not in giving water or uncooked food (vide Sm. C. I. p. 223 quoting several smṛtis). The householder may wear in his hand gold or jewel (ring &c.) at the time of meals. Gaut. IX. 59, Vas. Dh. S. III. 69, Manu II. 5'-55 say that when food is brought to be served, the person about to eat it should greet it, should pay honour to it, show his delight at it and should not find fault with it. Vas. says "he should honour food in the morning and evening by saying 'I like it', by saying 'it was good for eating' in the case of food served in śrāddhas and 'it was perfect' as to food offered in ābhyudayaika rites¹⁸²⁶ (i. e. in marriage &c.). Kullūka (on Manu II. 54) and the Gr. R. (p. 314) quote verses of the Ādipurāṇa (Brahmapurāṇa in Gr. R.) to the effect that on seeing food one should fold one's hands and should bow to it saying 'may this always be ours' and that God Viṣṇu himself said that whoever honours food honours him. After the food is served on the plate or dish, the eater should sprinkle water round it and say 'I sprinkle thee that art satya (truth) with ṛta (right order)' (in the morning) and 'I sprinkle thee that art ṛta with satya' (in the evening).¹⁸²⁷ According to some he then offers to the right of the plate or dish on the ground a little of the food in his plate from the west towards the east to Dharmarāja (i. e. Yama), Citragupta and pretas (vide Bhaviṣyapurāṇa quoted in Sm. C. I. p. 224 and Āhnikaprakāśa p. 465).¹⁸²⁸ Others say that these balis are offered to bhūpati, bhuvanapati and bhūtānām pati, while in modern times they are offered to Citra, Citragupta, Yama, Yamadūta (and some add a fifth 'sarvebhyo bhūtebhyah svāhā). He should then sip a little water with the words 'thou art the seat of ambrosia (amṛtopastaraṇam-asi) and at the end of the meal the words used are 'thou art the cover of ambrosia' (amṛtāpidhānam-asi). All this has been prescribed from very ancient times and has continued to this day. Yāj. I. 106 calls this sipping of water āpośaṇa (taking in of water) and its purpose is to make food beneficial like amṛta (nectar) and to cover it as if with a garment. He then offers five morsels on which ghee is sprinkled to the five modes of prāṇa preceded by the word 'om' and ¹⁸²⁹ followed by 'svāhā'. These five prāṇāhutis are mentioned in the Chāndogya Up. V. 19-23, where prāṇas are enumerated in the order prāṇa, vyāna, apāna, samāna and udāna. The Vedāntasūtra III. 3. 40-41 explains that the Chāndogya passage applies only when one sits down to dinner and not when one goes without it. Medieval digests quoting Brhat-Parāśara added a sixth offering to Brahman after the prāṇāhutis and this is done in modern times. While the āhutis to prāṇa are being offered complete silence (absence of all sound including even 'hum') is to be observed. Baud. Dh. S. (II. 7. 6) insists on complete silence throughout the meal and if one speaks, one has to mutter the words 'Om bhūr bhuvaḥ svar-om' and then eat further on. Others allow speech after prāṇāhutis for refusing food or condiments or for dharma. Vide Sm. M., āhnikā p. 423 which quotes Śaṇḍilya that 'silence is not necessary at meals for householders and one should show one's solicitude for those who dine with one by talking to them.' Śaunaka quoted by Sm. C. I., p. 223, Vṛddha-Hārta 8. 263-265 dilate upon the different fingers of the hand that are to be employed in taking the five āhutis to the life breaths while the Bhojana-sūtra says that according to Baudhāyana all āhutis were to be offered with all the fingers. Hārta quoted in the Sm. C. I. p. 226 states that mārjana, offering bali, worship and eating should be done with the tips of fingers. The plate or vessel is to be throughout kept on the ground at a śrāddha dinner and the thumb and the next two fingers of the left hand may be used for holding the plate or plantain leaf in position, but if the house is full of people and it is likely that dust may be raised by their feet or by their clothes, then a person taking his meal may raise up his plate from the ground with his left hand after he has taken five morsels.¹⁸³⁰ The diner is not to allow any sound of eating to escape, he is to put each morsel in his mouth with all the fingers including the thumb,¹⁸³¹ he is not to wave his hand. Various rules are laid down in the Visnupurāṇa (III. 11. 83-84) and Brahmapurāṇa (quoted in Gr. R. p. 224) as to the order in which various articles are to be eaten, viz. first sweet liquid food may be taken, then salted and sour, and then pungent and bitter, the last item should be milk and after that one should not take curds; a householder should always take food mixed with ghee. One is not to cut off portions of food or cakes, roots, bulbs, fruits or flesh with the teeth and then eat them (Baud. Dh. S. II. 7. 10). Some smṛtis prescribe that while taking each morsel one should say¹⁸³² 'Govinda'. At the time of eating, several postures are forbidden, viz. one should not stretch one's feet or place them on another seat (a footstool &c.) nor should one have one's haunches and knees tied by a garment (Visṇu Dh. S. 68. 40) nor should one place one's hand on one's left foot, nor should one wear one's shoes or wooden sandals, nor should one come in contact with leather (vide Smṛtimuktāphala, āhnika p. 425). Baud. Dh. S. (I. 1. 21) states that among usages peculiar to the south were those of eating in the company of one whose upanayana had not been performed or of one's wife or taking stale food. But Baud. disapproved of these. Manu IV. 43, Visṇu Dh. S. 68. 46 and Vas. Dh. S. XII. 31¹⁸³³ say that one should not eat together with one's wife and Vas. Dh. S. adds the reason that by so doing the child born has no strength as stated in the Sat. Br. X. 5. 2. 9. Kullūka and some other commentators on Manu IV. 43 hold that the prohibition relates to eating in the same dish with one's wife, while, as Medhātithi states, others hold that it applies also to eating with one's wife at the same time and place. The Sm. C. (I. p. 227) and other digests quote a smṛti verse which allows a brāhmaṇa to eat in the same dish with his brāhmaṇa wife and explain the verse as applying to a brāhmaṇa who is on a journey. Various rules are laid down as to how much one is to eat. Two famous verses quoted by Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 13, Vas. Dh. S. VI. 20-21 and Baud. Dh. S. II. 7. 31-32 are 'an ascetic should eat eight morsels,¹⁸³⁴ a forest hermit 16, a householder 32 and a Vedic student an unlimited number. One who has consecrated the Vedic fires, a draught ox and a brahmacārī are able to perform their work by eating, they cannot perform work when they do not eat'.¹⁸³⁵ Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 12 expressly directs that a householder should not stint himself as to food, so that he may be able to properly perform his work. Haradatta explains that the general rule laid down by Āp. Dh. S. itself (II. 1. 1. 2) that one should take only two meals a day does not apply to one who has consecrated the Vedic fires. Baud. Dh. S. II. 7. 33-34 goes further¹⁸³⁶ and says that if a householder (who is āhitāgni) and a Vedic student practise austerities by observing a fast they are guilty of sin, because they thereby cause cessation of agnihotra to the life-breaths. But there is no sin if a fast is observed by these as a penance for some lapse. Śābara on Jaimini V. 1. 20 (p. 1301) appears to favour the idea that an āhitāgni may eat several¹⁸³⁷ times a day.

One was to occupy the first seat in a row at a dinner only if specially requested to do so, but when thus seated on the first seat, one should not begin to eat food before others, but after them (Śāṅkha quoted by Aparārka p. 150). While several brāhmanas are taking their meal in a continuous row, if one of them takes *ācamana*¹⁸³⁸ before the others, or gives the remains of his food to the pupil or gets up, the others should leave eating the food in their dishes and also get up and the brāhmaṇa who thus prematurely gets up is called a brahmahā (a murderer of a brāhmaṇa or brahmakaṇṭaka). These rules are quoted in the Sm. C. (I. p. 227), Gr. R. p. 331, Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnika p. 427). In order to avoid this awkward position various devices were employed. A pañkti (row of diners) ceased to be a continuous line if two diners were separated from each other by fire, by ashes, by a pillar, a passage, or a door or by the ground being of a lower level. Aparārka (p. 476) quotes Bṛhaspati that even if persons are seated in one row, but they are separated from each other by (streaks of) ashes and they do not touch each other, then there is no intermingling (i. e. persons of different castes also may sit in a row being separated by a streak of ashes &c.). Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 2 says that one should not sit down to dinner in the same row with undeserving persons (by reason of birth, character or learning).

At p. 100 above it has been stated how brāhmaṇas following several occupations that were deemed low were not invited at śrāddhas. Gaut.^{1838a} XV. 28-29, Baud. Dh. S. II. 8. 2, Āp. Dh. S. XV. 29 ; पङ्क्तिर्येन पाव्यते स पङ्क्तिपावनः । हरदत्त on गौ. XV. 28. Some of the words are differently explained by the commentators. ज्येष्ठसामिक or-सामग is one who chants, according to Haradatta, 'udu tyam' (Rg. I. 50. 1.) and 'citram' (Rg. I. 115. 1), which constitute a sāman of the Talavakāras, while the Chandogas hold it to be a different sāman; Medhātithi on Manu III. 185 says they are the sāmans called Jyēsthadohas. The Nāciketa fire is described in Tai. Br. III. 11. 7 and 8, and Kathopaniṣad I. 1. 17-18. Rg. I. 91. 6-8 contain the word 'madhu' at the beginning of each. So one who studies these three madhu verses may be called 'tri-madhu'. Or possibly there is a reference to the Madhuvidyā referred to in Śat. Br. IV. 1. 5. 18 and Br. Up. II. 5. 16. According to Haradatta 'Trisuparṇa' are either the three verses Rg. X. 114. 4-6 (ekah suparṇah &c.) or the three anuvākas of the Tai. Ār. X. 48-50 (brahmametu mām madhumetu mām).

dūṣakas). A pañktipāvana is one who knows the six āṅgas of the Veda (vide note 775 above), who has studied the Jyesthasāman, who has kindled the Nāciketa fire, who knows the three madhu verses, who has studied the texts called Trisuparna, who maintains the five fires (vide p. 679 above), who has taken the ceremonial bath after finishing vedic studies, who knows the Mantras and the Brāhmaṇa of his Veda, who has studied dharmaśāstra and who is the son of a woman married in the brāhma form. Āp. Dh. S. adds 'one who has performed the four medhas' (Āśvamedha, Sarvamedha, Puruṣamedha and Pitṛmedha, according to Haradatta). Manu says that one who understands the meaning of the Veda, one who expounds the Veda, a brahmacārin, one who is a liberal donor (lit. one who gives a thousand cows), one who has reached the age of one hundred are all pañktipāvanas. Śaṅkha states that one who is devoted to Yoga, one who regards gold and a clod of earth as equal, an ascetic given to contemplation are all pañktipāvanas. Anuśāsana 90. 34 and Vāyu 83. 52-55 include those who study the bhāṣyas, those who are devoted to grammar, those who study the purāṇas among pañkti-pāvanas. Among those who defile company are one suffering from leprosy, a bald man, one who is guilty of adultery, who is the son of a brāhmaṇa following the profession of arms (Āp. Dh. S. II. 7. 17. 21); those who engage in acts not fit for brāhmaṇas, those who are cunning, those who have deficient or excessive limbs, those who have abandoned Veda, the sacred fires and their parents or gurus, those who subsist on food given by sūdras (Śaṅkha XIV. 2-4). Vide Aparārka pp. 453-455 for quotations on those who defile company.

When there was a row of diners, all were to be served the same food and no difference was to be made between one man and another and if a difference were made a penance was prescribed as if he had committed brāhmaṇa murder.¹⁸³⁹ If while dining one brāhmaṇa touches another, he should give up eating or after finishing his meal he should mutter the Gāyatri verse 108 times (as penance). In modern times generally the eyes are touched with water if this happens. If a diner touched a server who had a vessel containing food, the server should place the vessel containing food on the ground, should perform ācamana, the food in the vessel should have water sprinkled over it and then it may be served. One was not to eat or drink with the left hand. One should drink water at the time of meals with a drinking bowl or vessel, one should never drink water with the two hands joined together (Yāj. I. 138), but when not eating food one may drink water with the bare right hand. After finishing one's meal one is to repeat the āpośana 'amṛtāpidhānam-asi' and drink some water, wash one's hands, sip water twice and may lightly brush his teeth for removing particles of food, then sip water again and take tāmbūla.¹⁸⁴⁰ Āśvalāyana (in verse) recommends 16 mouthfuls of water (gaṇḍuṣa) for cleansing the mouth after dinner (Āhn. Pr. p. 483). An ascetic, a Vedic student and a widow were not to partake of tāmbūla.

A person was not to eat everything in his plate; he should leave some remnant¹⁸⁴¹ of food except of curds, honey, ghee, milk and saktu (barley or barley flour). What remains was to be given to one's wife, servant or slave (Par. M. I. part 1, p. 422). No one was to give the remnants of one's food to another nor to eat the remnants of another's food, except a child that might eat the remnants of the food of its parents and guru (vide Smṛtimuktāphala, āhnika p. 431). Remnants of food were not to be given to a śūdra unless he was one's dependent (Manu IV. 80, Āp. Dh. S. I. 11. 31. 25-26). Atri (quoted in Sm. C. I. p. 228) says that even on sipping water after dinner one remains impure till one's plate is removed, till the ground where the food was taken is cow-dunged, till after leaving his seat he moves on the ground elsewhere. Vide also Āp. Dh. S. II. 2 4. 24. The plate of a brāhmaṇa may be removed by a brāhmaṇa (but not by any one else) and the plates of the brāhmaṇas invited at a śrāddha repast were to be removed by the person who performed the śrāddha or by his son or pupil, but not by one whose upanayana is not performed nor by the wife nor by any one else (Laghu-Āśvalāyana I. 165-166).

Most of the above rules may more or less be exemplified from the descriptions of the procedure of eating set out in Baud. Dh. S. II. 7, from the Bhojanasūtra of Kātyāyana for the followers of the white Yajurveda, from Hārta quoted in the Gr. R. pp. 316-17 among the ancient writers and from the Smṛtyarthasāra pp. 68-69 among the authors of digests. It is impossible to set out any of them here for want of space, but an extract from the last work is given in the Appendix.¹⁸⁴²

There were certain rules about abstaining from food in the case of eclipses of the sun and the moon. They are set out in the Sm. C. I. pp. 228-229, the Smṛtyarthasāra (p. 69), Matsya-purāṇa chap. 67, Aparārka pp. 151, 427-430. During the period of eclipse one was not to eat anything. Not only so but for 4 praharas (i. e. 12 hours) and 3 praharas (i. e. 9 hours) before the actual eclipse of the sun and the moon respectively all are to avoid taking food, except children, very old men and persons who are ill. This rule was observed up till very recent times by most people. When the eclipse begins one was to bathe and give gifts, perform tarpaṇa or śrāddha. Then one was to bathe after¹⁸⁴³ the eclipse was over and take food. If the sun sets while still eclipsed, one should bathe the next day on seeing the sun and then take food. If the moon rose eclipsed, one was not to eat anything during the day next to that on which the moon rises eclipsed. That these rules are ancient follows from the fact that some of them occur even in the Viṣṇu Dh. S. An eclipse of the sun is described even in the Rg. V. 40. 5-9 and it was supposed to be brought about by an asura. The Asura Svarbhānu is said to have pierced the sun with darkness in the Kāthaka S. XI. 5 and the Tai. S. II. 1. 2. 2; the Śān. Br. 24. 3 and Tāṇḍya Br. (IV. 5. 2, IV. 6. 13) speak of an eclipse. In the Atharva-veda 19. 9. 10 the Sun and Rāhu are brought together. The Chāndogya Up. VIII. 13. 1 states that the knowing self shakes off his body when going to the world of Brahma like a horse shedding his hair or like the moon released from the mouth of Rāhu.

Viṣṇu Dh. S. (68. 4-5) prescribes that a man was not to eat when a cow or a brāhmaṇa met with an accident or when the king was in distress (or dead).

The most elaborate rules are laid down about what food should or should not be eaten and from whom food may or may not be taken. These rules occur in most of the smṛtis. It would be impossible to do justice to all of them. The following smṛtis deal with this matter at length. Gaut. 17, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 16. 17-I. 6. 19; Vas. Dh. S. 14, Manu VI. 207-223, Yāj. I. 167-181. The Śāntiparva chapters 36 and 78, the Kūrmapurāṇa (uttarārḍha chap. 17), Padma (ādikhaṇḍa chap. 56), and several other purāṇas deal with this topic. Among the digests the Sm. C. II. pp. 418-429, the Gr. R. pp. 334-395, the Madanapārijāta pp. 337-343, the Smṛtimuktīphala (āhnikā pp. 433-451), the Āhnikaprakāśa pp. 488-550 contain very exhaustive treatment. An attempt will be made to present the rules in an orderly manner.

Aparārka p. 241 quotes a passage from the Bhaviṣya-purāṇa¹⁸⁴⁴ which states the various reasons for food being forbidden viz. jātiduṣṭa or svabhāvaduṣṭa (i. e. forbidden on account of its very nature) such as garlic, leek, onion &c.; kriyāduṣṭa (forbidden on account of certain actions done with reference to it) such as cooked food served with the bare hand or seen by a patita (outcast), cāṇḍālas, dogs &c., or because one in a row takes ācamana or rises before others; kāladuṣṭa (forbidden because of the time that has elapsed or because of the inappropriateness of the time) such as stale food or food eaten in eclipses or the milk of a cow before ten days have elapsed from delivery; saṁsargaduṣṭa (spoilt by foul contact) such as what comes in contact with a dog or wine or garlic, or hair or insects &c.; sahṣṛlekha (what causes disgust to the mind) such as faeces &c. To these may be added rasaduṣṭa (what has lost its flavour) such as pāyasa or kṣīra on the same day; parigrahaduṣṭa (what is forbidden simply because it belongs to a particular individual such as patita). Aparārka (p. 1157) says that condemned food, partaking of which is an upapātaka (a minor sin), is of six kinds, viz. due to svabhāva, kāla, samparka (same as saṁsarga), kriyā, bhāva, and parigraha.¹⁸⁴⁵ An example of bhāvaduṣṭa given by Aparārka is sugarcane juice which a man may feel to be forbidden to him because he believes it to be wine. According to Gaut. 17. 12 bhāvaduṣṭa means food offered with disrespect or which the eater comes to hate or becomes disgusted with. Haradatta on Gaut. 23. 23 mentions five of these varieties (of Aparārka p. 1157) except bhāvaduṣṭa.¹⁸⁴⁶

Before proceeding further some remarks must be made about flesh-eating. In the Rg. frequent reference is made to the cooking of the flesh of the ox for offering to gods (particularly Indra). For example, in Rg. X. 86. 14 Indra is made to say 'They cook for me 15 plus twenty oxen'; vide Rg. X. 27. 2. In Rg. X. 91. 14 it is stated that for Agni were sacrificed horses, bulls, oxen, barren cows and rams. In Rg. VIII. 43. 11¹⁸⁴⁷ Agni is styled 'one whose food is the ox and the barren cow.' In Rg. X. 79. 6 it is suggested that the cow was cut up with a sword or axe. In the Rg. itself the cow is frequently called 'aghnyā' (vide Rg. I. 164. 27 and 40, IV. 1. 6, V. 83. 8, VIII. 69. 21, X. 87. 16 &c.). The word 'aghnyā' appears to mean 'one that does not deserve to be killed' and the Nirukta (XI. 43)¹⁸⁴⁸ explains it in that way. It should be noted that that word occurs sometimes in apposition to 'dhenu' (as in Rg. IV. 1. 6, VIII. 69. 2). So it may be argued that in the times of the Rg. only barren cows if at all were killed for sacrifice or meat and cows yielding milk were held to be not fit for being killed. It is only in this way that one can explain the high praise bestowed on the cow in Rg. VI. 28. 1-8 and in Rg. VIII. 101. 15 and 16 where the cow is described to be 'the mother of Rudras, the daughter of Vasus, the sister of Ādityas and the centre of nectar' and the sage winds up by praying to the knowing man 'do not kill the cow, that is innocent and is Aditi herself.'¹⁸⁴⁹ In Rg. VIII. 101. 16. the cow is called 'devi'

(goddess). It appears that the cow was being raised to the status of divinity and there was a great revulsion of feeling about the cow. The great usefulness of the cow and the ox for agricultural purposes, in the family economy and as means of exchange must have powerfully contributed to making the cow a divinity. In the gr̥hya sūtras (like Āśv. I. 24. 25), Rg. VIII. 101. 15 is prescribed as the mantra when in the Madhuparka ceremony the cow is let loose by the guest. The Artharva-veda (XII. 4) fully recognises the cult of the holiness of the cow. That the cow continued to be offered in sacrifices follows from several Brāhmaṇa passages e. g. Tai. Br. III. 9. 8. In the Śat. Br. III. 1. 2. 21 it is stated that the great sage Yājñavalkya was wont to eat the meat of cows and oxen provided it was 'amśala'¹⁸⁵⁰ (tender ?). The Ait. Br. (6. 8)¹⁸⁵¹ states that the horse, the ox, the goat and ram are sacrificial animals while the kimpuruṣa, gauramṛga, gavaya, the camel and śarabha (a mythical animal with eight feet) were not sacrificial and their flesh should not be eaten. The Śat. Br. I. 2. 3. 9 contains a similar prohibition. The Śat. Br. XI. 7. 1. 3 declares that 'meat is the best kind of food.' The work of Mr. L. L. Sundara Ram (Madras, 1927) on 'Cow Protection in India' contains an exhaustive treatment of the subject from Vedic times and cites the attitude of other nations and religions towards cow-killing. The veneration for the cow has been so great that pañcagavya prepared from the five substances due to the cow viz. her milk, curds and ghee of her milk, her urine and dung mixed with water in which kuśa blades had been placed was looked upon as¹⁸⁵² purification for many lapses. Yāj. III. 314 mentions the ingredients of pañcagavya. The Baud. gr̥śeṣa-sūtra (II. 20) contains an elaborate note on the preparation of pañcagavya, the quantities of the five ingredients, the Vedic verses to be recited when preparing it. The मत्स्य 267. 5-6 (सावित्र्या गृह्य &c.) are almost the same as पराशर XI. These and other verses of Parāśara (in all eleven) are quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. III. 314 and by Aparārka p. 1250.

Matsyapurāṇa 267. 5-6 and other works contain similar rules. Parāśara prescribes that the urine, dung, milk, curds and ghee should be of cows the colours of which are respectively dark, white, copper-red, dark-red and brown or that all ingredients may be of a brown (kapilā) cow. There is some difference of view about colours and also about the quantities. According to Parāśara urine, ghee, and water should be one part each, curds three parts, milk seven parts and cowdung as much as the thumb. According to Atri. 299 dung, urine, ghee and milk were to be respectively 1, 2, 4 and 8 parts and curds also 8 parts. When mixing the ingredients, urine is taken with the sacred Gāyatrī, cowdung with 'gandhadvārām' (Tai. Ār. X. 1), milk with 'āpyāyasva' (Rg. I. 91. 16), curds with 'dadhikrāvpo' (Rg. IV. 39. 6), ghee with 'tejosi śukram' (Vāj. S. 22. 1) and kuśa water with 'devasyatvā' (Ait. Br. 37. 3, Vāj. S. 22. 1). The pañcagavya thus prepared is to be placed near the fire, then it is to be stirred to the accompaniment of 'āpo hi ṣṭhā' (Rg. X. 9. 1-3) and then the mantra 'mā nastoke' (Rg. I. 114. 8) is to be repeated over it, it may be then offered into fire with green darbhas not less than seven to the accompaniment of 'Irāvati' (Rg. VII. 99. 3), 'idam Viṣṇu' (Rg. I. 22. 17), 'mā nastoke' (Rg. X. 114. 8), and the śaṁvati verse (Rg. X. 9. 4) and then the remainder is to be drunk by one who prepares it with the verse noted below.¹⁸⁵³ The vessel in which the pañcagavya is to be prepared must be of copper or gold or of palāśa or lotus leaves (Par. M. II. 1 p. 434 quoting Prajāpati). Viṣṇu Dh. S. 54. 7 and Atri 300 say that a śūdra drinking pañcagavya and a brāhmaṇa drinking surā (liquor distilled from flour) are equally sinful and fall in hell. But Devala 61 and Parāśara XI. 3 and 27 allow śūdras (and women) to take pañcagavya but without Vedic mantras. Therefore the digests like Śūdra-kamalākara (p. 42) say that a śūdra can take pañcagavya only as a prāyaś-citta (penance) for a sin and not otherwise. Pañcagavya is also called brahmakūrca. Atri 301 declares that the dung of a cow that eats unclean things is not to be employed for purification. A smṛti passage declares that he in whose house there is not even one cow with her calf becomes devoid of all maṅgalas (auspicious things) and darkness does not leave him. A cow was said to be holy in all limbs except her mouth (Medhātithi on Manu V. 128 quotes 'gāvo medhyā mukhād-ṛte') and so Manu V. 124 requires food smelt or licked by a cow to be purified. Manu XI. 79 says that if one sacrifices one's life in defence of brāhmaṇas and cows one becomes free from the sin of even brāhmaṇa murder. Viṣṇu Dh. S. 16. 18 declares that even an untouchable (bāhya) went to heaven by giving his life in defence of brāhmaṇas, cows, women and children. Vide Viṣṇu Dh. S. 3. 45 also. In Gaut. IX. 13-14 the cow is referred to as devatā. As early as the 2nd century A.D. we have the collocation of the words 'go-brāhmaṇahita' (the welfare of cows and brāhmaṇas) in an inscription of Rudradāman (E. I. vol. VIII. p. 44). Vide Gupta inscriptions p. 89 (for 'go-brāhmaṇa-purogābhyah sarvaprajābhyah'). These words also occur frequently in the Rāmāyaṇa (Bālakāṇḍa 26. 5, Araṇya 23. 28) and in the Matsyapurāṇa 104. 16. The Kapilā (brown) cow was said to be the most auspicious and meant for providing milk for agnihotra and brāhmaṇas, and the śūdra who used its milk was deemed to go to hell (vide Vṛddha-Gautama p. 568).

In spite of the prevalence of animal sacrifices, there are already in the times of the Rg. traces of the conception that a devout offering of praise or of a fuel-stick or of cooked food was as good as a more solemn sacrifice (Rg. VIII. 19. 5, VIII. 24. 20) and that oblations of food made to the accompaniment of heart-felt hymns become like bulls, oxen and cows in sacrifice.¹⁸⁵⁴ These verses are quoted by the Āśv. gr. S. (I. 1. 4) and explained (vide p. 677 above). The Śat. Br. XI. 6. 1. 3¹⁸⁵⁵ adumbrates the later doctrine that the eater of meat is eaten in the next birth by the animal killed. The Chāndogya Up. III. 17 regards that tapas, charity, straightforwardness, ahimsā and speaking the truth are the fee (of the symbolic sacrifice). The same Up. (VIII. 15. 1) emphasizes that the wise man who has attained correct knowledge does not cause any injury to bhūtas except in the case of sacred rites and reaches the world of brahma and does not return to saṁsāra.¹⁸⁵⁶ It appears that the causes that led on to the giving up of flesh at least by some people were many, the foremost being the metaphysical conception that one Supreme Entity pervades the whole universe, that all life was one, and that even the meanest insect was a manifestation of the divine Essence and that philosophical truths would not dawn upon the man who was not restrained, free from crude appetites and had not universal kindliness and sympathy. Another motive for the insistence on ahimsā was probably the idea of defilement caused by eating flesh (vide note 1810 above about 'āhāraśuddhi'). Śāṅkha asks people to give up flesh, wine, onions and garlic because the body is built up on the food eaten.¹⁸⁵⁷ The notion that the eater of flesh would be devoured by the eaten in the next birth had nothing to do with the early stages of the doctrine of ahimsā, though by Manu and others that notion was later on exploited to emphasize its importance. Further as the Aryans spread over middle, east and south India animal food became unnecessary owing to the climate and the abundance of corn and vegetables. Though opinions may differ as to the causes, it cannot be gainsaid that the phenomenon of the voluntary giving up of meat by vast populations in the continent of India, when their ancestors had been meat-eaters for ages, is unique in the history of the whole world.¹⁸⁵⁸ We shall find that even when the doctrines of karma and transmigration were in full swing, the taking of life for food and in sacrifice was allowed by all the ancient dharmaśāstras. Even the Vedāntasūtra (III. 1. 25) does not admit that the killing of animals in sacrifice is impure. The Br. Up. which contains a full statement of the doctrine of transmigration (VI. 2) recommends (VI. 4. 18) to the man who desires that a learned son be born to him the cooking of a mess of the flesh of a bull or ox or of other flesh with rice and ghee.¹⁸⁵⁹ Not only other animals, but even the cow, was on certain occasions killed according to the gr̥hya and dharma sūtras on several occasions e. g. (1) in śrāddhas (Āp. Dh. S. II. 7. 16. 25), (2) for a distinguished guest in Madhuparka (Āśv. gr̥. I. 24. 22-26, Vas. Dh. S. IV. 8), (3) in the Aṣṭakā śrāddha

In the Dharmasūtras numerous rules are given about the flesh of beasts and birds and about fishes. Gaut. 17. 27-31, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 35, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 39-40, Yāj. I. 177, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 6, Śaṅkha (quoted by Aparārka p. 1167), Rāmāyana (Kiṣkindhā 17. 39), Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa (35. 2-4) prescribe that one should avoid the flesh of all five-nailed animals except¹⁸⁶⁰ of porcupine, hare, śvāvidh (a boar or hedgehog), iguana, rhinoceros and tortoise (some of these works omit the rhinoceros). Gautama adds that one should also avoid the flesh of all animals with two rows of teeth in the two jaws, of hairy animals, of hairless animals (like snakes), of village cocks and hogs and of cows and bulls. Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 29-31 first forbids the flesh of animals with one hoof only, of camels, of gavaya (Gayal), of the village hog, of the śarabha and of cows, but adds the exception that the flesh of milch cows and of bulls may be eaten as the Vājasaneyaka declares the flesh of these to be pure. Āp. Dh. S. (II. 2. 5. 15) forbids the use of flesh to a teacher of the Veda in the months from upākarma to utsarjana. This shows that even brāhmaṇas who alone would ordinarily be teachers could take meat in the other months of the year. Āp. Dh. S. I. 3. 11. 4 declares that a student had not to observe anadhyūya if he ate stale food or uncooked flesh. Āp. Dh. S. II. 3. 7. 4 says that if flesh was offered to a guest, the merit was equal to the performance of the Dvādaśāha sacrifice. The Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali (vol. III. p. 320) states that the precept 'a village cock or hog is not fit to be eaten leads to the inference that a town hog also is unfit food as meat.' Vas. Dh. S. XI. 34¹⁸⁶¹ goes so far as to say that if an ascetic does not partake of flesh when requested to do so in a śrāddha or in a rite for the gods he falls into hell for numberless years. Gradually, however, a change came over the sentiments of the people. Megasthenes (p. 99) and Strabo (XVI. 1. 59) state that the first caste of philosophers which is divided into two sub-divisions, viz. Brachmanes and Sarmanes (śramaṇas) abstained from animal food and sexual intercourse (probably as brahmacārins) and that after living in this manner for 37 years they began to live with less restraint and began to eat the flesh of animals, particularly of those that did not assist man in his labour. The Great Emperor Aśoka declares in his first Rock Edict how originally thousands of animals were killed in the royal kitchens, how he then brought down the number to two peacocks and one deer daily and how he had resolved to discontinue the slaughter of even this limited number thereafter. Vide also the 2nd and 4th Rock Edicts. In the fifth pillar edict (Delhi-Topra) the Emperor Aśoka notes that when he had been twenty-six years on the throne he declared numerous animals (such as parrots, mainas, hamsas, cakravākas, tortoises, porcupines, fishes &c.) to be avadhya (not to be killed). The general rule as stated¹⁸⁶² by Āp. Dh. S. II. 2. 3. 12 and the Rāmāyaṇa (quoted above on p. 733) was that from that food that was either cooked or got ready for the daily meals of a householder, homa and bali were to be made. Ancient works spoke of meat offerings to gods and in madhuparka and śrāddha. Therefore some of the smṛtis like those of Manu and Vasiṣṭha are in two minds about the use of flesh. Manu (V. 27-44) at first contains a permission to kill animals only in madhuparka, in sacrifices¹⁸⁶³ and in rites for gods and manes and on no other occasion. Manu (V. 27 and 32) further says that no sin is incurred in flesh-eating when one's life is in danger (owing to famine or disease) and when a person partakes of the remnants of the flesh of an animal purchased by him or reared by him or flesh given by another out of what is prepared for offering to gods and manes. Yāj. I. 179 is to the same effect. Manu further clinches his exhortation not to eat animal food by ordaining that he who kills an animal except for the limited purposes stated above is himself killed for as many births as there are hair on the body of the slaughtered animal (Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 60 is also the same). Manu then goes on to declare (V. 40 and 44 = Viṣṇu Dh. S. II. 63, 67) that herbs or plants, animals, trees (of which sacrificial posts are made), lower animals, birds, that meet destruction for the sake of performing sacrifices are born again in better forms (of existence) and that himsā (killing of or injury to sentient beings) done according to the dictates of the Veda should be understood as no *himsā*¹⁸⁶⁴ since dharma shines forth from Veda alone. Though Vasiṣṭha Dh. S. (in 14. 39-40) allows the flesh of five five-nailed animals and of animals with one row of teeth (except camels) and also of certain birds and kinds of fish, yet in VI. 5-6 it takes up the same position as that of Manu viz. that himsā was allowed only in sacrifices &c. From V. 46-55 Manu takes up the position of total abstention from killing animals even in sacrifices (they are the same as Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 69-78). In one verse (V. 48 which is the same as Vas. Dh. S. IV. 7) Manu says that no flesh can be had without killing living beings and killing such beings cannot lead to heaven; therefore one should give up flesh. Verses 53 and 56 are very important as they convey that the merit of him who performs a horse-sacrifice every year for a hundred years and of him who does not partake of flesh (throughout life) is equal and that the word māṁsa (flesh) is derived by the wise (from 'mām' and 'saḥ') as meaning ' he whose flesh I eat to day will devour me in the next world or birth. ' Yāj. I. 181 is just like Manu V. 53. Manu winds up the whole discussion (in V. 56) by stating that natural appetites lead men on to eat flesh or to drink wine or to indulge in sexual gratification and there is no sin in indulging in these when they are allowed by the śāstra in the case of certain persons and on certain occasions; but abstention in these matters (even on occasions when they are permitted by the śāstras) leads to great rewards.¹⁸⁶⁵ From these passages in 1864. This position that injury done to animals or plants according to Vedic precepts is no himsā is an ancient idea. The Mait. S. III. 9. 3 has the words (when a tree is to be cut off for making a sacrificial post the adhvaryu priest places a blade of darbha on the tree at the spot where it is to be cut and then addresses the axe) ' Oh, axe do not injure this tree; the axe is indeed (like) a thunderbolt; he screens the tree from the thunderbolt by placing the darbha in order to effect ahimsā ' ' स्वधिते मेनं हिंसिरिति वज्रो वै स्वधितिर्वज्राद्वावास्मा एतदन्तर्द्धात्यहिंसायै ' मै. सं. III. 9. 3. The Nir. I. 16 states that one must understand that there is no himsā, as the express words of the Veda convey that idea.

Manu, Viṣṇu and Vas. it is clear that when the extant works attributed to these authors were composed, they themselves were staunch upholders of ahimsā, but that there were two classes of people in their days who were not opposed to flesh-eating, one class holding that killing animals only for purposes for which the Veda expressly sanctioned himsā was not improper and another class that indulged in flesh-eating without restrictions. That in spite of the individual predilections of the author of the Manusmṛti, general usage was different even in Manu's day is indicated by the fact that in III. 227 Manu says that in śrāddha the performer should get ready various kinds of food including flesh of tempting varieties. Yāj. I. 258-260 states how flesh of various animals when served in śrāddha to the brāhmaṇas invited tends to cause satisfaction to the Manes for long periods. Brhaspati quoted by Sarvajña-Nārāyaṇa explained Manu V. 27 as a pari-saṁkhyā i. e. Manu does not enjoin flesh-eating on the four occasions stated, but only permits it and forbids it on other occasions.¹⁸⁶⁶ Centuries were required before the views propounded by Manu became predominant. Gradually large sections of the population of India gave up flesh-eating and even those who did not regard it as forbidden to them rarely partook of it or did so in an apologetic way. The spread of Vaiṣṇavism tended to wean people from flesh as required by the *Bhāgavata-purāṇa*¹⁸⁶⁷ (VII. 15. 7-8) which is to the Vaiṣṇavas what the Bible is to the Christians. In medieval and modern times all brāhmaṇas avoid flesh (except some brāhmaṇas in northern and eastern India that hold that fish may be eaten); so also do many vaiśyas, particularly those who are Vaiṣṇavas and even among śūdras there are many who do not touch flesh and regard abstention from flesh as meritorious. From ancient times the kṣatriyas have been meat-eaters. The Mahābhārata has in several places to say a great deal on flesh-eating. In the Vanaparvā 50. 4 it is stated that the Pāṇḍava heroes killed with unpoisoned arrows deer and first offered venison to brāhmaṇas and partook of it themselves. In Sabhā 4. 1-2 king Yudhiṣṭhira on the opening of Mayasabhā feasted ten thousand brāhmaṇas with various delicacies including the flesh of wild boars and deer. Vanaparva 208. 11-12¹⁸⁶⁸ offers the consoling thought (that is conveyed by the Rgveda itself) that animals killed in sacrifices to the accompaniment of Vedic mantras went to heaven and it narrates the story of king Rantideva in whose sacrifices two thousand animals and cows were killed every day. Anuśāsana 116. 8 contains the view that there is nothing so nourishing as meat for those who are wounded or weak or worried or who are given up to too much sexual gratification and those exhausted by long travel. Anuśāsana 116. 16-19 allows flesh of animals killed by hunting to ksatriyas. There are some passages where the Mahābhārata contains the same sentiments as those of Manu e. g. Anuśāsana 115 highly praises abstention from meat and a few verses of this chapter (e. g. 115. 44-45; 48) are very similar to Manu's (V. 27, 51). Śaṅkha quoted by Aparārka p. 1167 allows the flesh of buffaloes, goats, rams, ruru deer, ordinary deer and spotted deer. Hārta quoted in the Gr. R. p. 375 mentions the flesh of goats, rams, buffaloes, deer of various kinds (ruru, prṣata, nyāṅku, rkṣa), rhinoceros, and large forest bears as permissible, while Devala quoted by the same forbids the flesh of cows, asses, camels, horses, elephants, lions, tigers, bears, śarabhas, snakes, boa constrictor, rats and mice, cats, mongoose, village hog, dog, jackal, animals of unknown species, cheetas, dark-faced apes, monkeys and human beings. Manu V. 51 (= Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 74) says that he who gives consent to the killing of an animal (for food), who cuts off the limbs, who kills the animal, who sells or purchases meat, who cooks it, who serves meat and the eater of meat—these are all guilty of killing. Yama (quoted in Āhn. Pr. p. 533) says that the eater is the greatest sinner out of these, as, if there were no eaters of meat, no one would kill animals for food:

Gaut. 17. 29 and 34-35, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 32-34, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 48, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 29-31, Manu V. 11-14, Yāj. I. 172-175 contain long lists of birds the flesh of which was forbidden and of those the flesh of which was allowed. A few of these may be noted. All birds that subsist on raw flesh (vultures &c.), the cātaka, parrot, hamsa, all birds that dwell in a village (such as pigeons), baka, birds that scratch dunghills for food are forbidden; while wild cocks and peacocks were permitted. On Jaimini V. 3. 26-28 Śābara quotes a Vedic text that one who has constructed the fire altar (agnicūṭ) should not eat the flesh of birds till the sacrifice he has embarked on is finished.

About fish there is no unanimity. Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 36-37 says 'among fish the ceṭa (long-nosed crocodile?) is forbidden, so also are fish with snake-like heads, the makara, fish that subsist on dead flesh, fish that have strange forms (such as those that have heads like men, or that look like elephants).' Manu on the other hand regards fish-eating as the worst form of flesh-eating and forbids all fish (V. 14-15), but then makes an exception (V. 16) in favour of fish called Pāṭhina and Rohita if used in rites for gods and Manes and fish called rājīva, lion-faced fish and fish having scales. Vide Vas. Dh. S. 14. 41-42, Gaut. 17. 36, Yāj. I. 177-178 also.

About milk several rules are stated in the smṛtis. Gaut. 17. 22-26, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 22-24, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 34-35, Baud. Dh. S. I. 5. 156-158, Manu V. 8-9, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 38-41, Yāj. I. 170 lay down that the milk of a cow that is sandhinī,¹⁸⁶⁹ the calf of which is dead, that gives birth to twins and that has not passed ten days after delivery, from whose udders milk oozes of itself, is forbidden. The milk of sheep and she-buffaloes also is not to be used until the lapse of ten days after delivery. The milk of ewes, of camels and of all animals with one hoof is altogether forbidden. The Mit. (on Yāj. I. 170) notes that even the curds and other products of such milk as is forbidden are also forbidden, but Viśvarūpa thought that only the milk of a cow whose calf is dead, or who is sandhinī, or who has not passed ten days after delivery is forbidden and not curds and other products thereof. The milk of even a cow that feeds on impure food should not be used¹⁸⁷⁰ (Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 41 and Atri verse 301). In the Vāyupurāṇa even the milk of she buffaloes is forbidden.¹⁸⁷¹ Baud. Dh. S. (I. 5. 159-160) prescribes the penance called Prājāpatya for drinking forbidden milk of all animals except the cow and a fast for three days for drinking the milk of a cow when forbidden. Āpastamba-smṛti (in verse) forbids the milk of a kapilā cow to all except to brāhmaṇas and the Bhaviṣyapurāṇa says that even a brāhmaṇa is to use only such portion of the milk of such a cow that remains after employing it in rites for gods.¹⁸⁷² The Brahmapurāṇa says 'one should not partake of curds at night even if one is starting on a journey, but in madhuparka it may be used at night. Ill-luck dwells in fried grain by day and in curds and barley by night and in Kovidāra and Kapittha (trees or fruits) at all times ' (quoted in Gr. R. p. 370). Manu IV. 75 forbids the eating after sunset of all food in which sesame are mixed.

1869. The word 'sandhinī' is explained in three ways as 'a cow in heat', 'that gives milk once a day', 'a cow that yields milk on account of another calf being brought to it, its own being dead'. Vide Mit. on Yāj. I. 170.

Several herbs and vegetables have been forbidden from very ancient times. According to Āp. Dh. S. (I. 5. 17. 25-27) all herbs from which liquors are distilled, kalañja (red garlic), palāṇḍu (onions), parārīka (dark garlic) and whatever similar vegetables are not used by respectable people, should not be eaten; and a brāhmaṇa text prescribes that ' kyāku ' (mushrooms) are forbidden. Gaut. 17. 32-33 forbids tender leaves (of trees), kyāku, laśuna and the resins of trees and the red sap flowing from incisions made in the barks of trees. Vas. Dh. S. 14. 33 forbids the eating of laśuna, palāṇḍu, kyāku, gr̥njana (turnip), śleṣmātaka, the resins of trees and red sap (as in Gautama). Manu V. 5-6 forbids laśuna, palāṇḍu, gr̥njana, mushrooms (kavaka) and all herbs that spring from impure soil and manure, red resins and red sap (as in Gautama) and śelu (śleṣmātaka) fruit. Yāj. I. 171 and 176 adds śigru and prescribes the penance of cāndrāyaṇa for eating forbidden herbs and vegetables. The great difficulty is to find out the modern equivalents of some of the herbs and vegetables. According to a verse quoted in Gr. R. p. 356 from the Smṛtīmañjarī there are ten varieties of palāṇḍu of which gr̥njana¹⁸⁷³ is one. Aparārka p. 249 quotes passages from the Brahmapurāṇa forbidding various kinds of herbs and vegetables. Vide also Gr. R. pp. 354-356 for quotations from Devala and others about herbs and vegetables that are forbidden. The Mit. on Yāj. III. 290 quotes a sūtra of Sumantu that laṣuna and other vegetables are not forbidden to those who are ill, if they are prescribed by way of medicine.¹⁸⁷⁴ About asafoetida (hingu) Haradatta on Gaut. 17. 32 says 'it is doubtful whether it is a resin or is a sap flowing from incisions, but even respectable people partake of it and that camphor not being red nor a resin nor a sap may be eaten.' The Sm. C. (on śrāddha p. 413) says that some smṛtis forbid the use of hingu in śrāddha, while the Ādipurāṇa allows it and therefore there is an option. The Gr. R. p. 354 shows that the round alāḍu (gourd) was forbidden. Vṛddha-Hārīta VII. 113-119 mentions herbs, vegetables and fruits that are forbidden. Vide also the Smṛtimuktāphala (āhnika pp. 434-435) for quotations as to the names of several roots, fruits and vegetables that were forbidden together with their South Indian names.

Āp. Dh. S. II. 8. 18. 2 forbids the use of dark grains (like māṣa beans) in śrāddha. The Mahābhāṣya says 'when it is declared that māṣa beans should not be eaten, they are not to be eaten even when other grains of corn are mixed up with them' (vol. I. p. 127).¹⁸⁷⁵ The Gr. R. p. 359 quotes the Brahmapurāṇa¹⁸⁷⁶ forbidding the use of certain cereals generally such as rājamāṣa, sthūlamudga (called 'methi' in Marathi), masūra &c. Sāṅkha-Likhita¹⁸⁷⁷ quoted in Āhn. Pr. p. 394 allows the employment in offering to gods of all cereals, except kodrava, caṇaka (gram), māṣa, masūra, kulattha and uddālaka. Vṛddha-Hārīta VII. 110-111 also mentions the corns that are forbidden.

Gaut. 17. 14-16, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 17-19, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 28-29 and 37-38, Manu V. 10, 24-25, Yāj. I. 167 prescribe that cooked food which has become sour by being kept for some time or by being mixed with something else should not be eaten nor should stale (over which the day or night has passed) food be eaten, nor food cooked twice (with interval) except curds and butter-milk and except stale articles like vegetables, cakes, fried grain, porridge, pulse cakes, those boiled in oil and rice boiled in milk or when mixed with honey ; and that even stale food flavoured with ghee or curds or the remnant of food offered to the gods may be eaten. Manu V. 25, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 37-38, Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 19 and Yāj. I. 169 say that articles of wheat and yava flour and products of milk though stale and unmixed with ghee may be eaten by all dvijātis, provided they have not turned sour.

The above long lists of forbidden vegetables, meat, milk furnish examples of food that is jātiduṣṭa or svabhāvaduṣṭa. The rules about not eating stale and sour food illustrate food that is kāladuṣṭa. Any article of food which is mixed up with forbidden things like palāṇḍu or is in contact with unclean substances or food in which hair or an insect is found or in which excreta or the limb or tail of a mouse is found, food touched by a woman in her monthly course or in which a bird (like the crow) has thrust its beak or food touched by a dog or smelt by a cow or food from a house in mourning or from a family in impurity due to birth should be avoided (vide Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 16. 19-20 and 24-29, Manu IV. 207-209, 212, 217, Yāj. I. 167-168). If a dog or an apapātra sees food which a man is eating or if a person when engaged in taking his meal sees a cāṇḍāla, a dog, a crow or a cock or a woman in her course, he should leave the food and get up. Manu (III. 239-240) says that a cāṇḍāla, a village hog or a village cock or a dog, a menstruating woman and an impotent person should not be allowed to see brāhmaṇas eating, whether in rites for gods or Manes, or at times of gifts. Kātyāyana says that if a brāhmaṇa hears the voice of a cāṇḍāla, a patita, or a woman in her course he should at once leave eating and if he eats even one morsel after hearing their voice he has to observe a fast for one day.¹⁸⁷⁸ The rules about not eating food from a house in mourning illustrate food that is nimittaduṣṭa (forbidden by reason of an occasion or chance reason), the other rules about food forbidden because of contact with unclean things or with garlic &c. exemplify saṁsarga-duṣṭa (forbidden because of contact) and the rules about avoiding food seen by a dog &c. are examples of kriyā-duṣṭa (forbidden on account of certain actions). The smṛti writers were not devoid of practical common sense. Baud. Dh. S. II. 7. 7 says that if in a heap of cooked food, hair, bits of nails or skin or insects or dung of rats is seen, then a lump from that part where these are seen should be taken out and the rest should have water sprinkled over it and holy ashes should be scattered over it and water should be again sprinkled over it and brāhmaṇas should then loudly declare the food to be all right and it may be then used for serving. Vaik.¹⁸⁷⁹ IX. 15 contains a similar direction. Parāśara VI. 71-74 says that cooked food (rice) amounting in quantity to one droṇa or one ādhaka,¹⁸⁸⁰ if licked by a dog or by a crow or smelt by a cow or an ass, should not be thrown away, but should be purified and then used, and that the portion spoilt by touch &c. should be taken away from the whole mass, the rest should be sprinkled over with water in which a golden piece has been dipped and fire should be brought in contact with it (by ignited darbha) and brāhmaṇas should recite Vedic texts over it and then it may be served. Vas. Dh. S. 14. 23 and 25-26, Yāj. I. 189 and 191 contain similar rules.¹⁸⁹¹

Food cooked only for oneself and not for offering to gods or guests should not be eaten (Gaut. 17. 19, Manu IV. 213). This is called saṁskāra-duṣṭa (forbidden on account of the absence of purificatory rites) by the Smṛtyarthasāra p. 68. The largest number of injunctions are concerned with parigrahaduṣṭa (food which may be good in itself but is forbidden because of its coming from the hands of or being owned by certain persons). The following is a fairly comprehensive list of such persons compiled from Āp. Dh. S. I. 6. 18. 16-33 and I. 6. 19. 1, Gaut. 15. 18 and 17. 17-18, Vas. Dh. S. 14. 2-11, Manu IV. 205-220, Yāj.

son of a punarbhū, a worker in hides, a potter, a spy, one who becomes an ascetic without following the rules laid down for that āśrama, a lunatic, one who has sat down at his debtor's house in dharmā. Manu IV. 222 prescribes a fast for three days if a brāhmaṇa partakes of the food of these unknowingly, but the kṛcchra (Prājāpatya) for knowingly doing so. Baud. Dh. S. II. 3. 10 prescribes the japa of Rg. IX. 58 (tarat sa mandī) for eating the food of one from whom it should not have been taken. Manu XI. 253 and Viṣṇu Dh. S. 56. 6 do the same.

The next question is whose food may be taken. Great fluctuations have occurred in the usages during the last two thousand years or more in this matter. Gaut. 17. 1 says 'a brāhmaṇa may eat at the houses of all dvijātis (the three higher varṇas) who are well-known to be performing the peculiar duties of their varṇa or āśrama.' Gaut. 2. 41, Baud. Dh. S. I. 2. 18-19, Āp. Dh. S. I. 1. 3. 25 allow a brahmacārin to beg for food at the houses of men of all varṇas, except those who are apapūtra and abhiśasta (suspected of mahāpātakas). Āp. Dh. S. I. 6. 18. 9 first prescribes for a brāhmaṇa who has returned from his teacher's house that he should not eat in the houses of the kṣatriya and other varṇas (as a general rule), then he gives the opinion of some that he may take food from members of all varṇas except śūdras, provided they abide by the rules for their varṇa. He also notices that even śūdra's food may be eaten if he serves a dvijāti in virtue of his duty to do so. Even Veda-Vyāsa III. 56 expressly declares that all dvijātis who know each other's families may partake of food at each other's houses.¹⁸⁸⁴ Āp. Dh. S. I. 6. 19. 2-12 raises the question as to whose food may be eaten and names several sages who differed in their views. Kāṇva said that one may eat the food of only him who wishes to give (and so requests), Kautsa thought that one may eat the food of him only who is holy (puṇya); Vārṣyāyaṇi said that one may accept from whoever is liberal enough to give; Eka, Kuṇika, Kāṇva, Kutsa and Puṣkarasādi held that alms (food) offered by a pure man may be eaten; Vārṣyāyaṇi said what is offered by any body without asking may be accepted; according to Hārita one should not accept food which is offered after an express previous announcement 'I shall give you such and such a kind of food.' Āpastamba's own view appears to have been (I. 6. 19. 9-11) that one should accept the food of him whose conduct is religious and who desires to offer food, that one should not accept the food even of a righteous man if he shows even the slightest unwillingness to give and that whatever is offered unasked may be accepted. These directions are rather vague. ✓

In modern times a person is more lax in taking food prepared with oil or ghee or milk. He may take such food from members of certain castes other than his own. But ordinarily he would not take food cooked in water from any person belonging to another caste or even sub-division of the same caste. In towns and cities there is a strong tendency to considerably relax these restrictions. We saw above that in the times of Gautama and Āpastamba and others a brāhmaṇa was allowed to take food prepared in the houses of kṣatriyas, vaiśyas, and even śūdras. Gradually this latitude came to be restricted and most of the sūtras and early smṛtis restrict the liberty to take food from śūdras by saying that only from the following among śūdras a brāhmaṇa can take cooked food, viz. one who cultivates the brāhmaṇa's field on the system of paying half of the crops to the latter, a family friend, one's cowherd, one's barber, one doing personal service i. e. a dāsa (vide Gaut. 17. 6, Manu IV. 253, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 57. 16, Yāj. I. 166, Āṅgiras 120-121, Veda-Vyāsa III. 55 and Parāśara XI. 21). Manu and Yāj. add that any śūdra who declares to a brāhmaṇa that the former is going to be dependent on the latter and who declares what his actions have been and how he will serve the brāhmaṇa is also bhojyāṇna (one whose food may be eaten). The Mit. quotes a sūtra which includes the potter among these (on Yāj. I. 166) and Devala also does so.¹⁸⁸⁵ It may be stated that Parāśara (XI. 22-24) gives peculiar meanings to the words dāsa, nāpita, gopāla and ārdhika. The general rule forbidding the food of śūdras is stated by Vas. Dh. S. 14. 4, Manu IV. 211 and 223, Yāj. I. 160. Āṅgiras 121 says that he who takes cooked food from śūdras other than the five excepted above has to undergo cāndrāyaṇa penance. Atri (172-173) prescribes the same penance for a dvija eating the food of a washerman, an actor and a worker in bamboos and the penance of parūka for taking the food of or residing amongst antyajas. VI. 26-29, Āngiras 69-70, Āp. (verse) 8. 9-11 severely condemn a brāhmaṇa partaking of food from śūdras. Āngiras 75, Āp. (verse) VIII. 8-9 declare that a brāhmaṇa who is an agnihotrin and yet does not desist from śūdra food loses five viz. his self, his vedic lore and his three (sacred fires). Medhātithi on Manu V. 84 expressly states that the barber is touchable and bhojyāṇna (whose food may be taken). This shows that up to the 9th century A. D. the rules about taking food from even certain śūdras had not become rigid in all provinces of India. Āngiras 77-78. Āp. (verse) 8. 11-13 and Yama (quoted in Gr. R. p. 334) declare that a brāhmaṇa may eat at a brāhmaṇa's at all times, at a kṣatriya's only on parvans (on full moon &c.), at a vaiśya's when the latter is initiated for a sacrifice, at a śūdra's never and the food of the four varṇas is respectively like nectar, milk, food and blood.¹⁸⁸⁶ According to Manu IV. 223 a brāhmaṇa could take from a śūdra uncooked food for a night, if he had no other means of subsistence. When exactly brāhmaṇas were forbidden to take food from kṣatriyas or vaiśyas it is difficult to say. In the Kalivarjya section all that is forbidden is taking food from the five śūdras enumerated in Manu IV. 253. Gaut. 17.1 prescribes that fuel, water, fodder, roots, fruits, honey, protection, what is offered unasked, a bed, seat, shelter, conveyance, milk, curds, roasted grain, śafari (small fish), priyaṅgu (millet), a garland, meat of deer, vegetables must not be refused when offered by any one spontaneously. Vas. Dh. S. 14. 12, Manu IV. 50 are to the same effect. Āngiras¹⁸⁸⁷ quoted in Gr. R. p. 337 states that cow's milk, barley flour, oil, oil-cakes, cakes (of flour) may be taken from a śūdra and eaten and whatever else is cooked in milk. Bṛhat-Parāśara VI. says 'uncooked meat, ghee, honey and oils extracted from fruits, even if they are kept in a mleccha's vessel, become pure the moment they are taken out of such vessel; similarly milk, curds, and ghee contained in vessels of ābhīras are blameless and the vessels are pure as long as these articles are contained in them.¹⁸⁸⁸ Laghu-Sātātapa 128 says that corn lying in the field or on the threshing floor, water drawn from wells and milk while still in the cow enclosures may be taken even from one whose food is forbidden. Even such later writers as Haradatta stated that a brāhmaṇa may eat the food of the five sūdras named by Manu IV. 253 in extreme distress only.

Certain articles were not to be eaten at certain stages only. For example, a brahmacārin was not to partake of honey, meat, and kṣāra-lavaṇa (vide Āp. Dh. S. I. 1. 4. 6, Mānava gr. I. 1. 12). But in danger of life he could eat even these (vide Medhātithi on Manu V. 27). Similarly a forest hermit and an ascetic were forbidden many things (which will be discussed later on). A śātriya was not to drink soma juice (vide p. 140 above).

There were rules about the persons who might be engaged to cook and serve food. As brāhmaṇas could in very ancient times eat the food of all varṇas including at least some sūdras, no difficulty must have been felt. The Āp. Dh. S. (II. 2. 3. 1-6) prescribes that āryas (i. e. the three varṇas) purified (by a bath) may prepare the food for vaiśvadeva; they should stop speaking, coughing or spitting with their faces turned towards the food that is being prepared and should touch water on touching their hair, limbs or garment; or sūdras supervised by āryas may be the cooks. Āp. Dh. S. further requires that when sūdras are cooks they should shave their hair and beard and pare their nails every day or on the 8th day or parva days and they must always bathe with their clothes on. Laghu-Āśv. I. 176 says that food should be cooked by one's wife, daughter-in-law, son, pupil, elderly relative, or one's ācārya or by oneself. Aparārka (p. 500) quotes a verse of Nārāyaṇa that food must be served to a dvijāti by a wife of the same caste (if he has wives of different castes).

Although numerous rules are laid down about the persons at whose house food may or may not be taken, the ideal placed before householders was that they should not as far as possible eat at the houses of others and should only do so if they are invited by a blameless person (vide Gaut. 17. 8, Manu III. 104, Yāj. I. 112). Manu III. 104 holds out the threat that those who constantly seek to subsist on the food given by others become after death the cattle of those who give them food.

It is necessary to say a few words on drinking liquor (madyapāna).

In the R̥gveda a distinction is made between soma and surā (liquor), the former being an intoxicating drink, but reserved for being offered (as a sacred beverage) to gods and to be drunk by the priests, while the latter seems to have been meant as a beverage for common men and not usually offered to gods. In R̥g. VII. 86. 6 the sage ¹⁸⁸⁹ Vasiṣṭha implores Varuṇa to recognize that a man does not commit sin by his own urge or power, but that it is due to destiny or surā, anger, dice (gambling) or heedlessness. In R̥g. VIII. 2. 12 the sage exclaims that draughts of soma when quaffed by Indra create in his heart such tumult as those who are heavily intoxicated engage in when surā is drunk. R̥g. I. 116. 7 mentions among the deeds of Āśvins this that they filled a hundred jars of surā from the hoof of their powerful horse which (hoof) was like kārotara (a strainer or leather-bag?). R̥g. I. 191. 10 refers to the leather-bag (of wine) in the house of a vintner. In belauding bhojas (liberal men) R̥g. X. 107. 9 says that they won the inner draught of surā (from their foes). In R̥g. X. 131. ¹⁸⁹⁰ 4 and 5 the Āśvins are praised for having drunk surāma (surā mixed with soma) and helped Indra in his fight with the Asura Namuci. In the Atharvaveda IV. 34. 6 the reward for the performer of sacrifices is said to be heaven in which there are lakes full of ghee and honey, and wherein liquor flows like water. In Atharvaveda 14. 1. 35-36 and 15. 9. 2-3 surā is referred to. The Vāj. S. 19. 7 distinguished between surā and soma 'thou art the powerful! surā and this is soma; don't destroy me when thou enterest thy place'. In the Tai. ¹⁸⁹¹ S. II. 5. 1 ff, the Śat. Br. I. 6. 3 and V. 5. 4 there is a legend of Viśvarūpa, the son of Tvaṣṭṛ, which narrates how he had three heads, one of which was soma-drinking, one wine-drinking and a third for eating food, how Indra cut off the heads of Viśvarūpa, how Tvastṛ being furious at the slaughter of his son performed a soma sacrifice from which he excluded Indra, how Indra, though not invited, consumed all the soma that was in the tub, how the drinking of too much soma injured Indra and how the gods healed him by the iṣṭi called Sautrāmaṇi (for Sutrāman, 'the good protector', Indra). This Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice was performed for a priest who drank too much soma and therefore either began to vomit or had severe purging. Vide Kātyāyana śr. 19. 1. 4. It was also performed by him who had an enemy (Śat. Br. XII. 7. 3. 4). In this sacrifice a brāhmaṇa had to be hired for drinking the dregs of surā offered in it and if one was not found willing to do it the dregs were to be poured on an ant-hill.¹⁸⁹² How surā (liquor) was prepared is described in the Śat. Br. XII. 7. 3. 5 and in Kātyāyana śr. 19. 1. 20-27 (vide S. B. E. vol. 44, p. 223 n. 2 which summarises the com. on Kātyāyana). In Jaimini III. 5. 14-15 there is a discussion about the Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice and Śabara quotes the passage of the Tai. Br. I. 8. 6 about hiring a brāhmaṇa for drinking the dregs of the surā offered in the sacrifice. The Śat. Br. contrasts soma and of surā by saying 'soma is truth, prosperity, light and surā is untruth, misery, darkness' (V. 1. 5. 28). The Śat. Br. V. 5. 4. 21 expresses dread¹⁸⁹³ of mixing up the libations of soma and of surā together. The Kāthaka Samhitā XII. 12 contains the following interesting remark. "Therefore an elderly person or a youngster, the daughter-in-law and father-in-law drink liquor and remain babbling together; foolishness (or thoughtlessness) is indeed sin; therefore a brāhmaṇa does not drink surā with the thought 'otherwise (if I drink it) I may be affected by sin'; therefore this is for kṣatriya; one should say to a brāhmaṇa that surā, if drunk by a kṣatriya, does not harm the latter."¹⁸⁹⁴ This passage makes it clear that at the time of the Kāthaka Samhitā public opinion had come to this stage that brāhmaṇas had generally given up drinking surā. This passage read with the

Tai. Br. quoted above establishes that it had become difficult to find a brāhmaṇa willing to drink even the remnants of surā left after being offered in a sacred Vedic rite like the Sautrāmaṇi. The above passage from the Kāthaka is quoted by the Tantra-vārtika on Jaimini I. 3. 7 (p. 210) and explained by it as referring to sīdhu (rum) and liquor prepared from honey. Śaṅkarācārya in his bhāṣya on the Vedāntasūtra III. 4. 31 quotes¹⁸⁹⁵ this passage expressly from the Kāthaka Samhitā. In the Ait. Br. (37. 4) it is stated that when a king has undergone a solemn coronation ceremony the purohita places in his hand a vessel of surā. Āśvapati, king of Kekaya, proudly declares in the Chāndogya Up. V. 11. 5 to the learned brāhmaṇas that came to him for the lore about Vaiśvānara 'in my country there is no thief, no miser, no madhyapa (drinker of intoxicants), none who has not kept the sacred fires, none who is not learned, no man of loose character; whence can there be a woman of loose character in my country?' In Chāndogya V. 10. 9 one who drinks surā is enumerated among the five grave sinners.

It is somewhat strange that in some of the grhya sūtras it is stated that in the rites on Anvaṣṭakā day when piṇḍas are offered to the male ancestors, piṇḍas are offered to the mother, paternal grandmother and paternal great-grandmother and also liquor is offered. For example, the Āśv. gr. II. 5. 5 says that 'to the wives (of the ancestors) are offered surā and the scum of boiled rice in addition' (to the piṇḍas).¹⁸⁹⁶ The Pār. gr. (III. 3) states 'also to the female ancestors he makes piṇḍa offerings and pours for them liquor and water oblations into pits.' The Kāthaka gr. (65. 7-8) also prescribes that in the Anvaṣṭakā surā was to be sprinkled with a spoon about the piṇḍas for women ancestors and the piṇḍas were to be eaten by servants or by nisādas or may be thrown in fire or water or brāhmaṇas may eat them. It is difficult to account for this. If a conjecture may be hazarded, it is possible that women drank (perhaps secretly) liquor even when their husbands had given up the practice owing to the force of public opinion or that in those days (before the grhya sūtras) intercaste marriages being allowed, the women ancestors might have been ksatriya or vaiśya women and so were not unfamiliar with drinking. Manu XI. 95 forbids drinking to brāhmaṇas and Kullūka notes that there were commentators who held that the prohibition did not apply to brāhmaṇa women. Whatever the reasons for the above directions in the gr̥hya sūtras may be, they run counter to the prevailing sentiments, not only of the Kāthaka Saṁ. and the Brāhmaṇa texts, but also to the unanimous prescriptions of the dharmasūtras and smṛtis.

Gaut. II. 25,¹⁸⁹⁷ Āp. Dh. S. I. 5. 17. 21, Manu XI. 94 forbid all kinds of intoxicants to brāhmaṇas at all stages of life. Āp. Dh. S. I. 7. 21. 8, Vas. Dh. S. I. 20, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 35. 1., Manu XI. 54, Yāj. III. 227 hold that drinking surā or madya is one of the grave sins (mahāpātakas). In spite of this, the Baud. Dh. S. I. 2. 4 notes that among the five peculiar practices of the brāhmaṇas in the north was that of drinking rum and it condemns all the five practices. The verses of Manu (XI. 93-94)¹⁸⁹⁸ are frequently quoted in digests and commentaries 'surā is the filthy refuse of food and sin indeed is called mala (filth); therefore, a brāhmaṇa, a rājanya, and a vaiśya should not drink surā, which is of three kinds, viz. prepared from molasses, from flour (or ground grains) and from flowers of the Madhūka tree; brāhmaṇas should not drink any one of these three.' The interpretations put on these verses by Viśvarūpa on Yāj. (III. 222), the Mit. on Yāj. III. 253, Aparārka p. 1069 and others establish that the word 'surā' primarily applies to paiṣṭi (liquor prepared from flour) as Vedic usage in the Sautrāmaṇi sacrifice and elsewhere shows, that paiṣṭi is forbidden to all brāhmaṇas, kṣatriyas and vaiśyas, that it is the drinking of paiṣṭi alone that constitutes a mahāpāta, that all intoxicants are forbidden to brāhmaṇas but liquors other than paiṣṭi such as those prepared from molasses or madhūka flowers are not forbidden to ksatriyas and vaiśyas. In the Mahābhārata (Udyogaparva 59. 5) both Vāsudeva and Arjuna are described as intoxicated by drinking the liquor prepared from honey and the Tantravārtika tries¹⁸⁹⁹ to establish that there was nothing wrong in this as they were kṣatriyas and as Manu XI. 93-94 and Gaut. II. 25 are to be construed as stated above viz. all intoxicants are forbidden to brāhmaṇas and only paṣṭi to kṣatriyas and vaiśyas. Intoxicants are not forbidden to śūdras, though Vṛddha-Hārīta (IX. 277-278) declares that some desire that good śūdras should abstain from surā also and that Manu says that even a śūdra becomes patila by falsehood, by partaking of meat and intoxicants and by stealing another's wealth or wife. Another rule was that brahmacārins, of whatever varṇa, had to abstain entirely from every kind of intoxicant (Āp. Dh. S. I. 1. 2. 23, Manu II. 177, Yāj. I. 33). Viśvarūpa on Yāj. I. 33 refers to a passage from the Caraka-śākhā which states that when Śvetaketu suffered from a skin disease (kilāsa), the Aśvins told him to take madhu (honey or wine) and meat as medicine, and when he asked how being a brahmacārīn he could do so, they replied that a person must first save himself (from disease and death) in all ways¹⁹⁰⁰ as a man can say 'I shall perform meritorious acts' only if he lives. Aparārka quotes the Brahmapurāṇa and says that in the Kali age human sacrifice, Aśvamedha sacrifice and intoxicating drinks were forbidden to the three varṇas and to brāhmaṇas in all yugas (ages). But this is opposed to history and tradition.¹⁹⁰¹ The Mahābhārata narrates (Ādiparva 76-77) the story of Śukra, his daughter Devayānī and pupil Kaca and states that Śukra forbade for the first time brāhmaṇas from drinking intoxicants and declared that, if any brāhmaṇa drank surā thenceforward, he would be guilty of the grave sin of brāhmaṇa-murder.¹⁹⁰² The Mausalaparva (1. 29-30) states that Balarāma prohibited the drinking of surā from the day the musala (iron pestle) for the destruction of the Yādavas was produced and directed that any breach of his order would be punished with impalement. The Śāntiparva (110. 22) declares that those men who always avoid honey and meat and intoxicants from their birth surmount all difficulties. Śāntiparva (34. 20) prescribes that, if a man drank liquor when in danger of life or through ignorance, he was to undergo upanayana again. Acc. to Viṣṇu Dh. S. 22. 83-85¹⁹⁰³ intoxicants (madya) forbidden to brāhmaṇas are of ten kinds viz. those prepared from madhūka flowers, from sugarcane juice, from ṭanka fruit (i. e. kapittha), from koli (i. e. badara or jujube fruit), from dates, from jack-fruit, from grape juice, from honey, from maireya (extracted from the blossoms of a plant) and from cocoa-nut sap. Viṣṇu adds that these ten kinds are not forbidden to kṣatriyas and vaiśyas. Pulastya quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. III. 253 and by Aparārka p. 1075 states that surā (distilled from rice flour) is different from the eleven kinds of madyas that he enumerates (practically the same as in Viṣṇu). It may be stated that this sentiment against drinking is still very strong among brāhmaṇas and drinking is still looked down upon by all castes, though, owing to contact with the West, some people (even including a few brāhmaṇas) have come to regard it as a fashionable indulgence.

Manu IX. 80 and Yāj. I. 73 say that a wife who drinks liquor is to be abandoned (even if she be a śūdra woman married to a brāhmaṇa). The Mit. on Yāj. I. 73 quotes a text (of Parāśara X. 26 and Vas. Dh. S. 21. 15) that half of the body of him whose wife drinks surā is guilty of grave sin¹⁹⁰⁴ (on Yāj. III. 256 it is ascribed to Manu). Vas. Dh. S. (21. 11) says that a brāhmaṇa wife who drinks surā is not allowed by the gods to reach the world of her husband (after death) and that she wanders in this world as a leech in water or as an oyster.¹⁹⁰⁵ Yāj. III. 256 says the same and adds that such a wife becomes in her subsequent lives a bitch, a vulture or a pig in this world itself.

Viśvarūpa (on Yāj. I. 140) quotes a text that a vendor of liquors is to have a flagstaff at his shop to indicate that it is a liquor shop, that his shop was to be in the midst of the village and that he was not to sell surā to the antiyajas except in times of distress (i. e. in diseases &c.).¹⁹⁰⁶

Megasthenes (p. 69) and Strabo (XV. 1. 53) note that Indians did not drink wine except at sacrifices (in the 4th century B. C.). Gautama 23. 1, Manu XI. 90-91, Yāj. III. 253 prescribe that if a person knowingly and frequently drinks surā i. e. paṣṭi, he can be purified only by death due to the pouring in his mouth of boiling surā or water or ghee or cow's urine or milk. Yāj. III. 254 prescribes another prāyaścitta (expiation) also. Vas. Dh. S. 20. 19, Manu XI. 146 and Yāj. III. 255 prescribe that if any one of the three varṇas drinks surā through ignorance he becomes pure by undergoing the penance of Kṛcchra and by having his upanayana performed again. Aparārka (p. 1070) quotes a smṛti of Kumāra that a child up to five years has to perform no penance for drinking any intoxicant, that after five but before upanayana the child's parents or other relative or friend has to undergo it viz. three kṛcchras.¹⁹⁰⁷

Manu (VII. 47-52) enumerates in the case of kings ten vices springing from love of pleasure and eight vices produced by wrath and then states that among vices due to love of pleasure drinking, dice, women and hunting are the worst and that drinking is the most pernicious of all the vices of kings. Kautilya VIII. 3 agrees with this. Gaut. XII. 38 and Yāj. II. 47 declare that though sons and grandsons are bound to repay their ancestors' debt as a pious duty, they are not bound to pay debts incurred for liquors, gambling &c. Among the articles that a brāhmaṇa is forbidden to sell even when he is forced to take to trade as a means of livelihood is liquor (Manu X. 89 and Yāj. III. 37).

To return to the subject of bhojana. After finishing one's midday meal, a person was to chew tāmbūla or mukharāsa (described above p. 734) and it appears that in ancient times persons smoked also certain preparations made with fragrant herbs and medicaments (and not tobacco which was then unknown). For example, Bāṇa describes in the Kādambarī (para 15) that king Śūdraka after his mid-day meal took in the smoke of fragrant drugs and then chewed tāmbūla.¹⁹⁰⁸ In the Caraka-saṁhitā, sūtra-sthāna chap. 5, there is a description how a reed was to be smeared with pastes of sandalwood, nutmeg, cardamom and several other drugs and spices, how it was to be eight aṅgulas long and as thick as one's thumb, how it was to be dried and the reed removed and then the dried portion was to be smoked. Vide Indian Antiquary vol. 40 pp. 37-40 for detailed information.

The Viṣṇupurāṇa III. 11. 94 remarks that after taking the mid-day meal one may do acts that would not cause exertion to the body. Dakṣa (II. 68-69) says that after¹⁹⁰⁹ taking dinner one should sit at ease and allow the food to be digested and should read and listen to itihāsa and purāṇas in the 6th and 7th parts of the day, and in the 8th part of the day the householder should look into his private worldly affairs and then perform the evening adoration (sandhyā) outside the house. That the higher and middle classes of society attended in the afternoon the recitation of the Mahābhārata (the itihāsa par excellence) and the purāṇas in the 7th century follows from Bāṇa's statement in the Kādambarī (para 54) that even queen Vilāsavati on hearing from the Mahābhārata that the sonless do not reach heaven (which was recited in the temple of Mahākālā at Ujjayini) became¹⁹¹⁰ extremely dejected and the fact that Bāṇa is said in the Harsacarita (III) to have listened after the midday meal to the recitation of the Vāyupurāṇa by the reader Sudṛṣṭi-Yāj. (I 113-114) directs that the rest of the day (till evening) should be spent in the company of śiṣṭas (learned and respectable people) and of dear relatives and then having performed the evening prayer and offered oblations into the three sacred fires (if he has kept the three Vedic fires) or into gṛhya fire, the householder should feed guests if they come at night, then he should take his evening meal surrounded by (his children) and servants, should not eat too much in the evening and then go to sleep. Dakṣa (II. 70-71) says that after evening he should perform homa, then take his meal, do other household work, then repeat some part of his Veda and sleep for two watches (six hours) and he should devote some time in the first and last watches of the night to reciting the Veda already learnt.

Numerous rules are laid down in the smṛtis and digests about sleeping, viz. as to the position of the head, what kind of bed to use, where to sleep and what texts to recite and so on. Vide Gaut. II. 13 and IX. 60, Manu IV. 57, 175-176, Yāj. I. 136, Viṣṇupurāṇa III. 11. 107-109 for some of these rules. Among the earliest works to give elaborate rules is the Viṣṇu Dh. S. chap. 70, which is set out here. 'One should not sleep when one's feet are wet with water, nor should one have his head towards the north and west or lower (than the other parts of the body), nor should one sleep naked nor below a beam along its length nor in an uncovered place nor on a bed-stead of a palāśa tree nor on one made of five kinds¹⁹¹¹ of wood nor on one made of trees split by an elephant nor on one made of wood burnt by lightning, nor on a broken bed-stead nor on one which is scorched, nor on a bed of trees watered with jars, nor in cemeteries nor in an unoccupied house, nor in a temple, nor in the midst of rash (or mischievous) persons, nor in the midst of women, nor above grain, nor in a stable of cows nor on the bed-stead of elderly persons nor over a fire or over an idol, nor before washing his hands or lips after meals, nor should one sleep by day nor in the twilight nor on ashes, nor on an unclean spot, nor on a wet spot nor on the top of a mountain.' One should bow to one's favourite deity and keep a bamboo staff near one's bed—says the Smṛtyarthasāra. The Smṛtiratna says that one should not sleep on the same bed with a person suffering from an eye disease or with one who is an epileptic or with one suffering from fever, leprosy, tuberculosis, asthma and hiccough. The Ratnāvali (quoted in Sm. M. āhnika p. 457) requires that one should place a jar full of water at the head of the bed-stead, recite Vedic mantras for one's protection and mantras against poison and also the hymn to Night (Rg. X. 127), remember the five ancient personages well-known as sound sleepers,¹⁹¹² viz. Agastī, Mādhava, Mucakunda, Kapila and Āstika, salute Viṣṇu and then go to sleep. Hārīta (prose) quoted in Āhnikaprakāśa p. 557 contains similar rules. Vṛddha-Hārīta (VIII. 309-310) says that an ascetic, a brahmacārī, a forest hermit and a widow should not sleep on a cot but on the ground covered over with a deer-skin or a blanket or with kuśas.

In connection with the subject of going to bed at night, a good deal is stated in the smṛtis and digests about sexual intercourse between husband and wife. Some of these rules (viz. about the proper days for intercourse) have already been stated above (pp. 204-205). Gaut. V. 1-2 and IX. 28-29, Āp. Dh. S. II. 1. 1. 16-23 lay down that a householder is to approach his wife on the proper days or he may do so at any time except on forbidden days or when the wife desires it; he is not to have intercourse during day-time or when the wife is ill, nor when she is in her courses nor should he embrace her during that period. Āp. Dh. S. II. 1. 1. 19, *Vas.*¹⁹¹³ Dh. S. XII. 24 and Yāj. I. 81 refer to the boon conferred on women by Indra according to a legend narrated in the Tai. S. II. 5. 1. When Indra killed Viśvarūpa, son of Tvastṛ, he incurred the sin of brāhmaṇa murder; all beings loudly condemned him as 'brahmahan', and he went about the universe in search of sharers in his sin, of which one third was taken by the earth (which secured the boon that when a pit is dug it becomes filled up in a year), one-third by trees (that got the boon that even when pruned they would grow again and the exudation from trees is the part of brahmahatyā that comes out of trees and the red resins exuded are therefore not to be eaten) and one third by women, who got the boon that they would conceive only during their period (of sixteen days) after the recurring occurrence of menses and that they might indulge in intercourse till the time of delivery and in the case of whom the murder is manifested every month.¹⁹¹⁴ Viṣṇu Dh. S. chap. 69 puts all rules together, some of which are : A householder must avoid sexual intercourse after having been invited at a śrāddha or having partaken of dinner at it or after having given a śrāddha dinner or after performing the initiatory ceremony of soma sacrifice; he must not have intercourse in a temple, in a cemetery, in an empty house or at the root of a tree, in the day time¹⁹¹⁵ or at twilight, or with a woman older than himself or with a pregnant woman or with one who has a limb too much or is deficient in a limb. Vide Viṣṇupurāṇa III. 11. 110-123 for similar rules on the same topic. Most of the rules are eugenic or based on hygiene, though a few may be held to be only religious or superstitious. Gaut. IX. 26, Āp. Dh. S. II. 1. 1. 21-23 and II. 1. 2. 1, Manu IV. 4 and V. 144 say that after intercourse the husband and wife should take a bath or at least wash, sip water and sprinkle water over the body and should sleep on separate beds. Other writers stated different views.¹⁹¹⁶

Rajasvalā-dharmāḥ.

From the times of the Tai. S. rules have been laid down about the duties of a rajasvalā (a woman in her monthly illness) and about how her husband and other people are to act towards her. In the Tai. S. II. 5. 1. it is stated¹⁹¹⁷ 'One should not address a woman who has unclean clothes (i. e. who is in her course) nor should one sit with her, one should not eat her food for she keeps emitting the colour of brāhmaṇa murder; they say woman's food is unguent, therefore one should not accept unguent from her; but anything else at will may be accepted'. The Tai. Br. III. 7. 1 states 'Indeed half of this sacrifice is destroyed in the case of him whose wife becomes untouchable on the day on which the observances for a sacrifice commence (i. e. on the day previous to the performance); but the sacrificer should segregate her (in a different place or house) and offer the sacrifice; by so doing he worships with a sacrifice that is entire (though the wife is absent).'¹⁹¹⁸ The adhikaraṇa in Jaimini (III. 4. 18-19) is based on these texts; Śābara's bhāṣya quotes the passage of the Tai. S. and of the Tai. Br. and the conclusion established is that these rules, though occurring in the context of the new moon and full moon sacrifices, are not restricted to those sacrifices, but are to be observed by persons generally (i. e. they are puruṣārtha and not kratvartha). The Tai. S. II. 5. 1 contains thirteen directions about a rajasvalā and declares what evil results follow from breaches of them. They are: there is to be no intercourse with her, nor in a forest (after she bathes), nor when she is unwilling (after bath), she should not bathe during the three days, should not bathe with oil in those days, should not arrange her hair with a comb, should not apply collyrium to her eyes, should not brush her teeth, should not pare her nails, should not spin yarn, should not make ropes, should not drink water with a vessel made of palāśa leaves or a vessel that is baked in fire (or is broken). The results of the breaches are respectively that the son (born of her) becomes suspected or charged with grave sins, a thief, shy and not bold, destined to die in water, has a skin disease, Śābara on Jaimini III. 4. 19 says that the words नास्या अन्नमद्यात् अम्यञ्जनं वाव स्त्रिया अन्नं really enjoin the prohibition of approaching her for intercourse and the Tantravārtika (p. 952) offers the interesting information that among the Lūtas 'abhyañjana' is a synonym for 'sexual intercourse' तथा हि लादानामप्यम्य-ञ्जनपर्यायान्तरवाच्यलक्षणमुपगमनं प्रसिद्धम्.

has a bald head and is feeble, is squint-eyed, has dark teeth, has bad nails, is impotent, is unrestrained (or commits suicide by hanging), becomes a lunatic, or a dwarf. The Tai. S. further directs that she should observe these rules for three nights, should drink water with her hands joined together or with a plate that is not baked in fire. The Br. Up. VI. 4. 13 notes that a married woman in her courses should drink water from a vessel of bronze and should not wash her clothes, a śūdra male or female should not touch her; on the lapse of three nights she should bathe and she should be made to unhusk rice. Many of the sūtras refer to the rules contained in the Tai. S. about the rajasvalā (vide Āp. gr. 8. 12,¹⁹¹⁹ Hir. gr. I. 24. 7, Bhār. gr. I. 20, Baud. gr. I. 7. 22-36, Baud. Dh. S. I. 5. 139). Vas. Dh. S. V. 7-9 contains the story of Indra and the boon given to women and also the rules about rajasvalā (adding that she should sleep on the ground, should not sleep by day, should not eat flesh, should not look at the planets, should not laugh). When Vas. Dh. S. V. 8. and Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 16 forbid the eating of the food of a rajasvalā, what is meant is (according to the Gr. R. and other digests) that the food cooked for her or owned by her should not be eaten. Laghu-Hārīta 38 prescribes that a rajasvalā may eat food from her own hand used as a plate; Vṛddha-Hārīta (XI. 210-11) says the same and adds that if she be a widow, then she should not take food for three days and that one whose husband is living should have only one meal a day. Rajasvalā women were also not to touch one another. Viṣṇu Dh. S. (22. 73-74) prescribes that if a rajasvalā touches another rajasvalā of lower varṇa she should observe a fast from that time till the fourth day when she takes the purificatory bath; while if she touches another rajasvalā woman of the same varṇa or higher varṇa, she has to bathe and then take her food. More elaborate rules are laid down by Āṅgīras 48 (who prescribes pañcagavya), Atri 279-283, Āp. (verse) VII. 20-22, Bṛhad-Yama III. 64-68, Parāśara VII. 11-15. If a rajasvalā is touched by a cāṇḍāla or by any of the antyajas, or by a dog or crow, she has to be without food till she bathes on the 4th day (Āṅgīras 47, Atri 277-279, Āpastamba VII. 5-8). If a woman is suffering from fever and becomes a rajasvalā she is not to be bathed on the 4th day to purify her; her purification is to be effected by another healthy woman, who touches her and then herself bathes with her clothes on and this is done ten or twelve times and each time there is sipping of water; then the woman who is ill has her clothes removed and new ones put on and then gifts are made according to ability and she becomes pure (Uśanas quoted in Mit. on Yāj. III. 20). Similar verses occur in Āṅgīras 22-23. The same procedure is followed where a male who is ill is touched by a rajasvalā or for some other cause he has to undergo the purification of a bath, viz. a healthy male touches him seven or ten times and bathes after each touch, at the end of which the sickly person is to be declared to be free from the impurity (Āṅgīras 21, Parāśara VII. 19-20 quoted in Mit. on Yāj. III. 20). If a rajasvalā dies, then the corpse should be bathed with the five products of the cow (pañcagavya), she should be covered with another garment and then should be cremated (a verse quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. III. 20), while Āṅgīras (42) said that the corpse should be bathed after three days and then it should be cremated. The Mit. on Yāj. III. 20 notes that, if a woman who usually has monthly periods, menstruates within seventeen days, then she has no impurity; if on the 18th, she becomes clean in one day, if on the 19th in two days and thereafter in three days. Vide Āṅgīras 43, Āpastamba (verse) VII. 2, Parāśara VII. 16-17.

So far we have described the daily duties of common men, particularly of brāhmaṇas. Manu VII. 145-147, 151-154, 216-226, Yāj. I. 327-333 and Kaut. I. 19 dilate upon the daily duties of the king. Kaut. divides day and night into eight parts each and states that in the first part of the day the king should take measures for his protection and attend to income and expenditure, in the second he should look into the causes (or disputes) of the people of the cities and villages, in the third he should bathe, study or recite the Veda and take his meals, in the fourth he should receive revenue in gold and appoint (or examine) superintendents; in the fifth he should correspond with the council of ministers, and receive the secret news brought by his spies; in the sixth he may engage in whatever amusements or sports he likes or in deliberation (on state matters); in the seventh he should review elephants, horses, chariots and soldiers; in the eighth he should consider with the help of his commander-in-chief plans of campaigns. When the day ends he should observe the evening prayer; in the first part of the night he should see secret emissaries, in the second part of the night he may bathe, revise his studies and take supper; in the third he should lie down after the burst of trumpets and sleep in the fourth and fifth; in the 6th he should be awakened by the sound of trumpets, he should bring to his mind the dictates of śāstra and the mode of carrying them out; in the seventh he should deliberate and send out secret emissaries; in the eighth he should receive, being accompanied by his sacrificial priests, ācārya and purohita, benedictions and should see his physician, chief cook and astrologer and having circumambulated a cow with her calf and a bull he should go to court. Or the king may divide the parts of day time and night time according to his capacity. Other smṛtikāras differed here and there. Kātyāyana prescribed¹⁹²⁰ that the king should devote the three parts of the day time (divided into eight) after the first part to judicial work and if he cannot personally do it, he should appoint a judge. Yāj. (I. 327-333) mostly follows (though concisely) the routine sketched by Kauṭ. The Manusmṛti also hardly adds anything of importance to what we find in Kauṭ. It is remarkable that in the Daśakumāra-carita (ucchvāsa VIII) the author closely following the words of Kauṭilya as to the engagements of the king during the eight parts of daytime and of night also puts in the mouth of the voluptuous jester Vihārabhadra a parody of Kauṭilya's solemn dicta,¹⁹²¹

As to the āhnika of vaiśyas and śūdras no special rules are laid down in the smṛtis. They had to adjust the duties set out for brāhmaṇas to their own case according to their circumstances. A vaiśya belonged to the twice-born classes and he could do if he chose almost every thing that a brāhmaṇa could (except officiating as a priest or teaching as a profession or receiving gifts). Vide pp. 154-164 for the disabilities and the few privileges of the śūdra.

CHAPTER XXIII

UPĀKARMA OR UPĀKARAṆA AND UTSARJANA OR UTSARGA.

Upākarma or Upākaraṇa means 'opening, starting or beginning' (upakrama as the Mit. on Yāj. I, 142 says) and Utsarjana or Utsarga (in Āśv. gr. III. 5. 13) means 'the cessation of Vedic studies for a certain period in the year.' Āp. gr. VIII. 1 and Āp. Dh. S. I. 3. 11. 2 employ the word 'samāpana' for utsarjana. In former times these two rites were performed on different dates and in different months, but with the decline of vedic studies in medieval times they came to be performed one after another on the same day. In several sūtras the first of these two is spoken of as adhyāyopākaraṇa (as in Āśv. gr. III. 5. 1.) or adhyāyopākarma (in Pār. gr. II. 10, Vas. Dh. S. 13. 1). In this case adhyāya means 'study of the Veda' or it may mean Veda itself because it is studied (pre-eminently). Therefore the rite which signalises the opening of the session for Vedic study in the year is itself called upākarma.¹⁹²² In Gaut. 16. 1 the rite of upākarma is called vārṣika either because it took place in varṣā (the rainy season) or because it took place once a year (from varṣa, a year). The Āśv. gr. III. 5. 19 also states that this rite is called vārṣika.

The time for upākarma is variously stated in the sūtras. The Āśv. gr. III. 5. 2-3 states 'when the herbs appear, when the moon is in conjunction with the constellation of Śrāvaṇa, in the month of Śrāvaṇa or on the 5th (tithi) of Śrāvaṇa when the moon is in the Hasta nakṣatra.'¹⁹²³ The

Pār. gr. II. 10 says 'when the herbs appear, when the moon is in conjunction with Śrāvaṇa on the full moon day in the month of Śrāvaṇa or on the fifth of the month of Śrāvaṇa when the moon is in Hasta.' Gaut. 16. 1 and Vas. Dh. S. 13. 1 require that it should be performed on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa or Bhādrapada. The Khādīra gr. (III. 2. 14-15) and Gobhila III. 3. 1 and 13 ordain that Upākarma should be performed on the full moon day of Bhādrapada or under the constellation of Hasta in that month or according to some on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa. The Baud. gr. III. 1. 2 prescribes that Upākarma may be done on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa or Āśāḍha. The Hir. gr. (II. 18. 2, S. B. E. vol. 30 p. 241) says 'during the fortnight (at the end of which) the full moon of Śrāvaṇa occurs, when the herbs have sprouted forth, the ceremony for the opening of the annual Veda study (should be performed) under the Hasta constellation or on the full moon day'. The Āp. Dh. S. I. 3. 9. 1 speaks only of the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa as the time for the performance of the Upākarma rite. Manu. IV. 95 prescribes the full moon of Śrāvaṇa or Bhādrapada as the time for upākarma. Yāj. I. 142 provides three times viz. on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa or on a day (in Śrāvaṇa) when the moon is in conjunction with the Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra or on the 5th tithi of Śrāvaṇa if the moon is in conjunction with Hasta. The Kūrmapurāṇa (Uttarārdha 14. 60-61) holds that Upākarma should be performed on the full moon day of either Śrāvaṇa, Āśāḍha or Brādrapada. In this rather bewildering variety of opinions commentators like the Mit. prescribed that one should follow one's gr̥hyasūtra.¹⁹²⁴ This means (as stated by Medhātithi on Manu IV. 95) that the full moon of Bhādrapada being mentioned by Gobhila gr. and Khādīra gr. Chandogas (students of the Sāmaveda) should perform upākarma on that day; but as Āp. Dh. S. speaks only of the full moon of Śrāvaṇa, the followers of the Kṛṣṇa Yajurveda should perform upākarma only that day. When there is no rain and so no herbs appear in Śrāvaṇa or when that day is inauspicious owing to an eclipse or the like, Upākarma may be performed on the full moon day of Bhādrapada by those whose gr̥hya sūtra allows the option of two months or on the fifth of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa. But if both days of the full moon in the two months are inauspicious, then Upākarma should be performed on the full moon of Śrāvaṇa. As the Baud. gr. refers to the full moon of Āśāḍha, the followers of the Black Yājurveda may perform upākarma on Āśāḍha full moon, if the full moon of Śrāvaṇa is not available. But the students of the Rgveda cannot do so, since no sūtra of the Rgveda speaks of Āśāḍha as an optional month. Rgvedins have to prefer Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra (so that they may perform upākarma on the 14th or 15th of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa); the followers of the Yajurveda (Śukla) must perform it on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa when the moon is in Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra, but if the moon is not so, then they have to prefer the full moon day. The students of the Taittirīya śākhā also have to follow this last course. The followers of the Sāmaveda should prefer Hasta. Vide Sam. Pr. pp. 497-498, Sm. M. pp. 32-33, Nirṇ. pp. 114-120. Some interpreted Yāj. I. 142 in such a way as to yield four times for upākarma, viz. the full moon of Śrāvaṇa, the day in Śrāvaṇa on which the moon is in conjunction with Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra (this may sometimes be the 14th tithi of the bright half), or on the 15th of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa or on that day in Śrāvaṇa when the moon is in Hasta. Why so much importance was attached to the month of Śrāvaṇa and to the constellation of Śrāvaṇa as the season for starting Veda study is obscure. It is possible that that month was originally chosen as owing to showers of rain it is pleasantly cool, there is more leisure and staying inside the house in that month for brāhmaṇas than in other months of the year and then Nature is at its best. The month of Śrāvaṇa being fixed upon, the best day therein would be the full moon (Soma in another sense being the king of brāhmaṇas). If any other day in Śrāvaṇa was to be chosen then the day on which the moon was in Hasta would be the best, which would ordinarily be the 5th of the bright half (of Śrāvaṇa). As the Paurṇamāsī of that month was called Śrāvāṇī owing to the moon's conjunction with the Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra (which conjunction usually takes place on that day) the Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra came to be associated with the starting of the annual session of Vedic studies. But that the Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra by itself had no direct connection with upākarma is clear from the fact that several sūtras do not mention it at all. The Gobhila and Khādīra gr. do not accept the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa (but of Bhādrapada and the Hasta nakṣatra) as the proper time for upākarma.

Oldenberg in his note on Śān. gr. IV. 5. 2 'when the herbs appear, under the nakṣatra Hasta or Śravaṇa' (S. B. E. vol. 29, p. 112) remarks 'the nakṣatra Śravaṇa is evidently considered as particularly fit for this occasion because of its name containing an allusion to śruti'. But this conjecture has no plausibility. Hardly any ancient writer makes the suggestion that Śravaṇa and Śruti are brought together on account of the root 'śru'. The presiding deity of Hasta is Savitṛ. Owing to the supreme importance given to the Gāyatrī verse (of which Savitṛ is the deity) and to the fact that Veda study begins with the recitation of the Gāyatrī, the nakṣatra Hasta would be closely connected with the starting of Veda study. As a matter of fact the Śān. gr. IV. 5. 2 mentions Hasta first and then Śravaṇa; the Hir. gr. does not name the Śravaṇa nakṣatra at all, but names Hasta in this connection; while the Āśv. gr., Pār. gr. and several others mention both Śravaṇa and Hasta.

Upākarma is to be done in the morning. If for part of the day, the moon is in conjunction with Uttaraśādhā and then with Śravaṇa that day is not to be chosen for upākarma, but the next day is to be chosen on which the moon is in conjunction with Śravaṇa and Dhaniṣṭhā. Later writers introduced further complications about the zodiacal sign (rāśi) in which the Sun would be at the time. Garga required that upākarma must be performed during the days when the Sun was in the sign of Leo by the followers of the Sāmaveda and by those who are to the north of the Narmadā river. There is no upākarma in the intercalary month of Śrāvaṇa and Bhādrapada except for the followers of the Sāmaveda who must perform it in the intercalary month. When upākarma is to be done for the first time after a boy's upanayana, the planets Jupiter and Venus must not be in the position of asta (i. e. invisibility owing to their being too near the sun).

Upākarma is to be done by brahmacārins, by householders and also by vānaprasthas (forest hermits). The teacher does it in the company of his pupils whether they be brahmacārins or not and performs the homa in his own grhya fire, as the Pār. gr. II. 10 says. Karka the com. of Pār. gr. states that if the ācārya has no pupils then he has no adhikāra (right or eligibility) to perform the upākarma in the grhya fire, while Harihara says that the practice of performing upākarma in the ordinary domestic fire in the company of a Veda student is based on no authority, but is a mere usage.¹⁹²⁵

The procedure of upākarma is set out as follows¹⁹²⁶ in the Āśv. gr. (III. 5. 4-12): 'having sacrificed the two *ājyabhāgas*¹⁹²⁷ (portions of clarified butter), he should offer oblations of ājya to the following deities, viz. Sāvitrī, Brahmā, Śraddhā, Medhā, Prajñā, Dhāraṇā (memory), Sadasaspati, Anumati, Chandases (metres) and Ṛsis (sages). Then he sacrifices saktu (barley flour) mixed with curds to the accompaniment of the following mantras; the one verse 'I praise Agni, the purohita' (Rg. I. 1. 1),¹⁹²⁸ and 'the Kuṣumbhaka has said it' (Rg. I. 191. 16), 'O bird, when crying announce welfare to us' (Rg. II. 43. 3), 'Sung by Jamadagni' (Rg. III. 62. 18), 'In thy abode the whole world rests' (Rg. IV. 58. 11), 'you (Maruts) that deserve sacrifice, come to our sacrifice' (Rg. V. 87. 9), 'whosoever whether ours or a stranger (Rg. VI. 75. 19), 'look towards us, look in various directions' (Rg. VII. 104. 25), 'Come here, O Agni, the friend of the Maruts' (Rg. VIII. 103. 14), 'O king, the oblation that is cooked for thee' (Rg. IX. 114. 4),—each time two verses; the one verse 'one is our intention' (Rg. X. 191. 4); the one verse 'we choose that blessing and boon.' When he is about to study the Veda he should, while the pupils (i. e. those who are to be taught the Veda) join him (lit. take hold of him), sacrifice

1927. The ājyabhāgas have been explained at Āśv. gr. I. 10. 13-15. Vide f. n. 483 above.

1928. It will be noticed that the first and the last verses of each of the ten maṇḍalas of the R̥gveda are repeated in making these oblations of barley mixed with curds. The verse 'tacchamīyor-āvr̥ṇīmahe' is the last verse of the Bāṣkala recension of the R̥gveda. Those who studied the Bāṣkala śākhā were to recite this last verse instead of Rg. I. 191. 4. Both Nārāyaṇa and Haradatta point this out and the former remarks 'शाकलसमाम्नायस्य शाकलसमाम्नायस्य चेद्मेव सूत्रं गृह्यं चेत्यध्वेतृप्रसिद्धम् ।'. The Bāṣkalaśākhā contained 8 hymns more than the Śākalaśākhā.

to those deities,¹⁹²⁹ then offer an oblation to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt and partake of the barley mixed with curds and then follows cleaning.¹⁹³⁰ Sitting down to the west of the fire on darbha grass, the ends of which are turned towards the east, he should dip darbha blades into a water pot, he (the ācārya) should join his hands in the brahmāñjali¹⁹³¹ form and then recite (together with his pupils, if any) the following : the three vyāhrtis preceded by om, these and the Sāvitrī verse (Rg. III. 62. 10) he should repeat thrice and then the beginning of the Rgveda (either one hymn or an anuvāka).

In the other grhya sūtras there is a good deal of divergence as to the mantras, the deities and the materials offered as oblations. Pār. gr. II. 10 says that the two ājya portions are offered and then oblations of ājya are to be made to the earth and fire if the Rgveda is to be studied, to the Airy region and to Vāyu if the Yajurveda, to the Heaven and the Sun if the Sāmaveda, to the quarters and the moon if the Atharvaveda and oblations are also offered to Brahmā, to the Chandases (metres) in all cases, and to Prajāpati, to the gods, to the Rṣis, to Śraddhā, to Medhā, to Sadasaspati, to Anumati. Then Pār. gr. (II. 10) proceeds "with the verse 'Sadaspatim' (Vāj. S. 32. 13=Rg. I. 18. 6) the teacher three times sacrifices fried grains. All (pupils) should repeat the verse after him. After each oblation they should each time put on the fire three pieces of udumbara wood that are fresh branches with leaves, anointed with ghee, reciting the Sāvitrī. And the pupils should put on samidhs in the manner stated above (Pār. gr. II. 4). With the verse 'Sam no bhavantu' (Vāj. S. 9. 16) they should gulp down the fried grains without chewing them under the teeth. With the verse 'dadhikrāvno' (Vāj. S. 23. 32) they should eat curds. Whatever number of pupils he wishes to obtain so many sesame grains should the ācārya sacrifice by means of a dice board ¹⁹²² with the Sāvitrī or with the anuvāka (Vāj. S. 17. 80-86). After they (the pupils) have eaten (the remainder) the teacher should pronounce the word om and then repeat the Sāvitrī three times and the beginnings of the adhyāyas to the students who are seated facing the east. All repeat "may it be ours in common; may it bless us in common; may this Brahman be powerful with us together. Indra knows that through which and in which no hatred may spring up among us."

1929. ' Those deities '—Nārāyaṇa explains that these words refer to the deities (Sāvitrī and others) enumerated above and the 20 deities of the 20 verses (at the beginning and end of the ten maṇḍalas of the Rgveda).

1930. ' Cleaning ' (mārjana) is explained in Āśv. Sr. I. 8. 2. नारायण quotes 'परिस्तरयैरञ्जलिमन्तर्यायण आसेचयते तन्मार्जनम्' (आश्व. श्रौ. I. 8. 2)—when he holds between his joined hands the kuśa grass spread round the fire altar and has water sprinkled over himself, that is mārjana.

1931. ' Brahmāñjali '—is defined by Manu II. 71 as संहत्य हस्तावधेयं स हि ब्रह्माञ्जलिः स्मृतः—(i. e. joining the hands together, so that they look like a bud.)

The Āp. gr. (VIII. 1-2) is very brief and states that at the opening and concluding rites of Vedic study that Ṛṣi who is indicated as the Ṛṣi of the Kāṇḍa (section of the Tai. S.) to be studied is the deity to whom the rite belongs and in the second place Sadasaspati is the deity. Sudarśanācārya explains ¹⁹³³ these two sūtras at great length. Briefly what he means is : the commencement (upākarma) of the study of the whole Veda (Black Yajurveda) is to be done on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa, tarpaṇa is to be done for nine Ṛṣis and nine oblations of ājya are to be offered to these nine, the ninth being offered with the verse 'sadasaspatiḥ' (Rg. I. 18. 6 = Āp. M. P. I. 9. 8). But when a Kāṇḍa is to be begun that is another upākarma and a homa is to be performed in respect of it also.

Gradually many accretions were made to the simple upākarma rite given in the Āśv. gr. and other gṛhya sūtras. In modern times upākarma is a most elaborate matter. That of Rgvedins may be briefly described here : After ācamana, prāṇāyāma and reference to time and place, a svikalpa is made

1933. The तर्पण of nine Ṛṣis according to सुदर्शनाचार्य in the अध्यायोपाकरण would be प्रजापतिं काण्डकृषिं तर्पयामि । सोमं काण्डकृषिं तर्पयामि । अग्निं... तर्पयामि । विश्वान्देवांस्काण्डकृषिं तर्पयामि । सांहितीर्देवता उपनिषदस्तर्पयामि । याज्ञिकीर्देवता उपनिषदस्तर्पयामि । वारुणीर्देवता उपनिषदस्तर्पयामि । ब्रह्माणं स्वयंभुवं तर्पयामि । सदसस्पतिं तर्पयामि । and the nine āhūtis will be offered to these as प्रजापतये काण्डकृषये स्वाहा । सोमाय...स्वाहा । अग्नये...स्वाहा । विश्वेभ्यो देवेभ्यः काण्डकृषिभ्यः स्वाहा । सांहितीभ्यो देवताभ्य उपनिषदभ्यः स्वाहा । याज्ञिकीभ्यो...स्वाहा । वारुणीभ्यो...स्वाहा । ब्रह्माणे स्वयंभुवे स्वाहा । सदसस्पतये स्वाहा । प्रजापति, सोम, अग्नि and विश्वेदेवाः are the principal देवताः and the other four are subordinate ; so in काण्डोपाकरण oblations are offered to the first four, then to the devatā of the particular kāṇḍa begun (either सांहिती or याज्ञिकी or वारुणी or ब्रह्मा) and lastly to Sadasaspati. In उपाकरण, सदसस्पति takes the place of स्विकल्युक्त according to Sudarśana.

as stated ¹⁹³⁴ below, then follow worship of Gaṇapati, the preparation of the altar and fire (as described before for homa in general); then nine āhutis of clarified butter are made to the nine deities Sāvitrī (as in Āśv. gr. above), then offerings of barley flour mixed with curds are made to twenty deities with the first ¹⁹³⁵ and last verses of each of the ten maṇḍalas of the Rgveda viz. to Agni, Aptṛṇasūrya (plural), Agni, Śakunta, Agni, Mitrāvaruṇa (dual), Agni, Āpaḥ (waters), Agni, Maruts, Agni, Viśve Devas, Agni, Indrāsoma (dual), Indra, Agnāmarutaḥ, Pavamānasoma, Pavamānasoma, Agni, Samjñāna. Then the remains of barley and curds are offered to Agni Svistakṛt. Then the persons engaged in upākarma should partake of the remains of barley mixed with curds after repeating the verse 'dadhikrāvṇo' (Rg. IV. 39. 6). Then ācamana and mārjana are performed, then homa of a yajñopavīta in fire, then giving of yajñopavīta and dakṣiṇās to brāhmaṇas and wearing new yajñopavīta oneself (which consists in its abhimantrana with the three verses 'āpo hi sthā' Rg. X. 9. 1-3 and several mantras beginning with 'hiraṇyavarnāḥ', Tai. S. V. 6. 1. 1-2 and Tai. Br. I. 4. 8). after symbolical nyāsa (deposit) of omkāra, Agni, Nāgas, Soma, Pitṛs, Prajāpati, Vāyu, Sūrya and Viśve Devas on the nine tantus (strands) of the yajñopavīta, then japa of ten Gāyatrī verses for each of the yajñopavītas intended to be worn, then presenting the yajñopavīta to the Sun with the three verses 'udyan-nadya' (Rg. I. 50. 11-13), clapping the hands thrice, then repeating the mantra 'yajñopavītam paramam &c.' (vide f. n. 662 above) and then putting on the yajñopavīta, then ācamana, casting away the old yajñopavīta in water, prāṇāyāma, then repeating three verses 'pṛthvī tvayā &c.', then repeating the words 'Vidyudasi vidya me pāpmānam-ṛtāt-satyam-upaimi' (Tai. Br. III. 10. 9), then placing one's folded hands with darbha blades between on one's right knee, to repeat 1934. ममाध्याप्यानां चाधीतानामध्येष्यमाणानां च छन्दसां यातयामतानिरासेनाप्यायनद्वारा श्रीपरमेश्वरप्रतिपत्त्यर्थमेभिर्ब्राह्मणैः सहोपाकर्माख्यं कर्म करिष्ये । In modern उत्सर्जन there is a similar सङ्कल्प (omitting अध्येष्यमाणानां) 'नमा ... तानां छन्द-आदीनां ... ब्राह्मणैः सहान्तरितमुत्सर्जनख्यं कर्म करिष्ये'.

1935. The method of offering these oblations is first to mention the sage, the deity and metre of the verse and then to state the purpose of its employment in the rite, then to repeat the whole verse preceded by om and followed by svāhā and then to put the oblation on to fire, e.g. अग्निमीळे वैश्वामित्रो मधुच्छन्दा अग्निर्गायत्री । उपाकर्मप्रधानद्वयसक्तुहोमे विनियोगः । ओं अग्निमीळे पुरोहितं यज्ञस्य देवमृत्विजम् । होतारं रत्नधातमम् । स्वाहा । अग्नय इदं न मम ।

and make others repeat 'om', vyāhrtis and Gāyatrī thrice, then brahmayañña and then saying 'upākṛtā vai vedāḥ' (the study of the Vedas has been begun), then the ācārya finishes the rest of the rite such as prāyaścitta, then all resolve to feed brāhmaṇas and give dakṣiṇā according to ability. The ācārya takes leave of the fire, bows to Viṣṇu and sips water twice.

The gṛhyasūtras prescribe a holiday (anadhyaḥ) after the performance of upākarma, though the duration varies. Pār. gr. II. 10 prescribes that he should not study the Veda for three days and nights and should not clip his nails or shave for that period and points out that some said that he should not clip nails or hair till the date of utsarjana (i. e. for 5 months and a half). Śān. gr. IV. 5. 17 (=Manu IV. 119) prescribes an anadhyaḥ (holiday) for three nights on upākarma and utsarga. Gobhila gr. (III. 3. 9 and 11) says that there is no study on the upākarma day performed on Hasta nakṣatra and that according to some teachers for three days before it and after it. The Bhār. gr. III. 8 enjoins that after upākarma there should be a holiday of three days or one day and for one month thereafter one should not study the Veda in the evening (i. e. the first watch after sunset).

Utsarjana:—About the time of utsarjana also there was divergence of view. The Baud. gr. (I. 5. 153) prescribes that it may be performed on the full moon day of Pauṣa or Māgha. Āśv. gr. (III. 5. 14) requires Veda study after upākarma for six months and so if the upākarma was performed on the new moon of Śrāvaṇa the utsarjana according to it would be on the full moon of Māgha (vide III. 5. 20 also). The Pār. gr. II. 11 states that after having studied the Veda for five months and a half or for six months and a half they (teacher and pupils) should perform utsarga (i. e. the rite of closing the course of Vedic study). These periods are only approximate, since Pār. gr. II. 12 further on says that utsarjana should be performed in the month of Pauṣa when the moon is in the Rohiṇī nakṣatra (i. e. about the eleventh of the bright half) or in middle Aṣṭakā (i. e. 8th of the dark half of Pauṣa). The Gobhila gr. III. 3. 14 says that utsarga is performed on the full moon of Taiṣa (i. e. Pauṣa), while the Khādira gr. III. 2. 24 says that having studied the Veda for four months and a half they close the session on the full moon day of Pauṣa. The Śān. gr. IV. 6. 1 holds that utsarjana should be performed on the first day of the bright half of Māgha; Yāj. I. 143 follows Pār. gr. II. 12 by saying that utsarga takes place in Pauṣa on the Rohinī nakṣatra or on the 8th of the dark half, while Manu (IV. 95-96) says that after studying Veda for four months and a half from upākarma, utsarga should take place when the moon is in the Puṣya nakṣatra thereafter or on the first day of the bright half of Māgha. The Mānava gr. I. 4. 7 says that Veda study is stopped $4\frac{1}{2}$ or 5 or $5\frac{1}{2}$ months after upākarma. These several periods ($4\frac{1}{2}$ months, or $5\frac{1}{2}$ months or $6\frac{1}{2}$ months) and the various dates of utsarga in Pauṣa or Māgha were due to the fact that upākarma may take place on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa or Bhādrapada (or even Āṣāḍha) or on the 5th of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa or on Hasta in Bhādrapada or Śrāvaṇa.

The Āśv. gr. III. 5. 13 extends the procedure of upākarma to utsarga and adds (III. 5. 20-22) that offerings of boiled rice are made to the same deities instead of clarified butter, then they take a bath and perform tarpaṇa of those very deities and of ācāryas, ṛsis and pitṛs (as in brahmayajña). Nārāyaṇa states that in utsarjana there is no eating (of barley¹⁹³⁶ with curds) as there is in upākarma nor mārjana. Pār. gr. II. 12 gives the procedure of utsarjana as follows : " They (teacher and pupils) should go to the brink of water (a river &c.) and offer oblations of water (i. e. tarpaṇa) to the gods, to the metras, to the Vedas, ṛsis, the ancient teachers, the Gandharvas, the other teachers, the year with its divisions, the Pitṛs, ācāryas, their (deceased) relatives. After having rapidly recited the Sāvitrī four times, they should utter loudly ' we have stopped (Vedic study). ' There is anadhyāya in utsarjana for the same period as on upākarma and they should then continue the repetition (of the Veda) as before ". The Gobhila gr. III. 3. 15 says about utsarjana ' they go out of the village turning their faces to the east or north, they should approach water that is deeper than their waist, should bathe therein and should offer tarpaṇa to the vedas, ṛsis and ācāryas. ' A holiday was observed on the day of utsarjana for a day and half (pakṣiṇī) or three days after it (Manu IV. 97, Yāj. I. 144).

II. 12.

To give up Veda study for several months altogether was probably found undesirable. Therefore Manu IV. 98, Vas. Dh. S. 13. 6-7, Auśanasa (p. 515) and others prescribe that after utsarjana the Vedas should be studied till the next upākarma during the bright fortnights of the remaining months and the Vedāṅgas at one's will or in the dark fortnights. The Gobhila smṛti III. 134 says that after Dakṣiṇāyana (sun's passage in the southern celestial hemisphere) for six months one should not study the Upanisads and Rāhasya texts. It appears that gradually the rite of utsarga in Pausa or Māgha came to be discontinued. Aṣṭāvakra¹⁹³⁷ on Mānavagṛhya I. 5. 1 deplures that in his day hardly any one was found to celebrate utsarga on the day specified by the sūtrakāra, that he was powerless to do anything or to upbraid any one but that he would only describe what the śāstra prescribed. Similarly the Smṛtyarthasāra, after describing the procedure of utsarjana, remarks (p. 11) 'after studying the Veda for a year utsarjana may be performed on the day of upākarma or may not be so performed'. Gobhila-Smṛti (III. 128-129, quoted in Sm. C. I p. 55) says 'when dvijas perform every year upākarma together with utsarjana according to the prescribed procedure, that results in the growth of the Vedas (Vedic study). Whatever act is performed even in sport by brāhmaṇas whose vedas have not grown stale, that act becomes successful.' Vide Śān. gr. IV. 5. 16 to the same effect. It is on account of this idea that in the saṅkalpa the expression 'yāta-yāmatānirāseṇa' (by removing staleness) occurs. In modern times utsarjana is performed on the same day as upākarma, but precedes the latter. These two together being generally performed in Śrāvaṇa either on the full moon or on Śrāvaṇa nakṣatra or on the 5th of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa are designated by the word Śrāvaṇi.

The modern utsarjana of Rgvedins may be briefly described here : after ācamana, putting on a pavitra (a loop or ring) of darbhas (on the finger called anāmikā), prāṇāyāma, mentioning the time and place, a saṅkalpa (as set out above) is made; then pañcagavya is taken in by all; then the worship of Gaṇapati, then preparation of an altar for utsarjana homa is made, fire is invited with the verses 'juṣṭo damūnā' (Rg. V. 4. 5) and 'ehyagna' (Rg. I.

(vide p. 814 above), then the rest is offered to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt, then ācamana, prāṇāyāma, then brahmayajña is performed, then he should say 'vr̥ṣṭir-asī vr̥ṣca me pāpmānam-ṛtāt-satyam-upāgām' (Tai. Br. III. 10. 9); then all should say 'utsṛṣṭā vai vedāḥ' (the study of veda has been stopped); then clarified butter is offered into fire by way of prāyaścitta with the verses 'ayāścāgne' (Ap. M. P. I. 5. 18), 'ato devā' (Rg. I. 22. 16), 'idam viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17); then offering to Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya, Prajāpati respectively with the vyāhrtis separately and together, then offering with the verses 'anājñātam' (Tai. Br. I. 23. 22), 'sumitrā na āpa' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 2-3); then he should think of the Ganges and other holy rivers; then he should honour Agni with the four verses 'Agne tvam no' (Rg. V. 24. 1-4) and offer the upacūras of sandal-wood paste, flowers &c.; then he should take holy ashes from the homa fire with the mantra 'mānastoke' (Rg. I. 114. 8) and apply the ashes to his forehead, throat, navel, right and left arms and head; then pray Agni to bestow śraddhā (faith), medhā (intelligence) &c. and then wind up the utsarjana with the words quoted below.¹⁹³⁹

MINOR GRHYA AND OTHER RITES

The gṛhyasūtras speak of certain other rites performed on certain fixed days in the year. Most of them have ceased to be performed in modern times, though vestiges of some of them appear even now. Gautama (VIII. 19) enumerates the seven pākayajñasamsthās among his forty saṁskāras. Out of these seven pākayajñas, aṣṭakā, pārvāṇa and śrāddha will be dealt with under śrāddha later on. The seven haviryajñas and the seven somasamsthās will be treated of in the note on Śrauta. A few of the other rites are briefly described below.

Pārvāṇa sthālīpāka:—Among the seven pākayajñasamsthās mentioned by Gaut. (VIII. 19) is the pārvāṇa sthālīpāka. When a person is married and returns to his house after marriage he causes the newly married bride to sacrifice a mess of cooked food. The wife husks the rice grains of which that sthālīpāka is prepared. She cooks the mess, sprinkles ājya on it, takes it from the fire. Then he sacrifices to the deities of the Vedic Darśa-Pūrṇamāsa and then to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. With the remnants of the cooked food he feeds a learned brāhmaṇa and makes the present of a bull to that brāhmaṇa. From that time the householder constantly sacrifices on the days of the full moon and of the new moon a similar mess of cooked food sacred to Agni. In the case of one who has not kindled the three Vedic fires, the sthālīpāka is meant for Agni (it is Āgneya). In the case of an householder who keeps the three Vedic fires the sthālīpāka at Full moon is Agniṣomīya and Aindra or Māhendra or Aindrāgna on the New moon day (Khādira gr. II. 2. 1-3, Āśv. Śr. I. 3. 8-12). Both the householder and his wife fast on the days of the full and new moon or they eat only once in the morning on those days (Āp. Dh. S. II. 1. 1. 4-5, Āśv. gr. I. 10. 2). This is briefly the pārvāṇa sthālīpāka. It is begun on the first full moon day after marriage and is continued throughout the lives of the husband and wife. In the sthālīpākas performed throughout life on the full moon and new moon there is no dakṣiṇā (of a bull).¹⁹³⁹ Vide for details

Āsv. gr. I. 10 and Āp. gr. 7. 1-19 (among the sūtras) and Saṃskāra-kaustubha pp. 823 ff and Saṃskāraprakāśa pp. 904-906 among later digests.

Caitrī:—According to Haradatta on Gaut. VIII. 19 the caitrī rite is the same as śūlagava, known as Īśānabali to the students of the Āpastamba sūtra (Āp. gr. 19, 13 ff.) and this rite called Caitrī was performed on the full moon day of the month of Caitra. In the Śāñ. gr. IV. 19 it is said that this rite takes place on the full moon day of Caitra and there is a brief description of it which is rather obscure (vide S. B. E. vol. 29, p. 132). The Vaik. IV. 8 describes it as follows: On the full moon day of Caitra the house is cleaned and decorated; the husband and wife deck themselves in new garments (lower and upper) and with flowers etc.; after two *āghāras*¹⁹⁴⁰ are made in fire and rice is cooked in a vessel for the deities, offerings are made of clarified butter, with the mantras 'grīṣmo hemanta' (Tai. S. V. 7. 2. 4) 'ūrnam me pūryatām,' 'śriye jātaḥ' (Rg. IX. 94. 4), 'Vaiṣṇavam' (Tai. S. I. 2, 13. 3) and having offered oblations of boiled rice mixed with ghee to Madhu,¹⁹⁴¹ Mādhava, Śukra, Śuci, Nabhas, Nabhasya, Īsa, Ūrja, Sahas, Sahasya, Tapas, Tapasya, to the deities of Rtus, to herbs, to the lords of herbs, to Śrī (goddess of wealth), to the lord of Śrī, to Viṣṇu; having worshipped to the west of the fire the goddess Śrī and the god Śripati whose face is turned eastwards, he announces the havis (sacrificial food) and having served to the recitation of the hymn to anna (food) the brāhmanas with cooked caitrya food he should himself eat in the company of his sapiṇḍas.

Sītāyajña (sacrifice to ploughed land):—In the Gobhila gr. IV. 4. 27 there¹⁹⁴² is a brief description of the sacrifice performed at the time of ploughing by one who kept the smārta or aupāsana fire: 'on an auspicious constellation he should cook a mess of sacrificial food and should offer oblations to the following deities, viz. Indra, Maruts, Parjanya (rains), Aśani (thunder-bolt), Bhaga. And he should also offer (clarified butter) to Sītā, Āsā, Araḍā, Anaghā.' In Pār. gr. II. 17 this rite is described in greater detail. But for want of space it is not set out here. The Pār. gr. in II. 13 speaks of a different rite to be performed at the time of taking out the plough and using it for ploughing.

Śrāvaṇī or Śrāvaṇūkarma and Sarpabali:—Āśv. gr. II. 1.1-15, Pār. gr. II. 14, Gobhila gr. III. 7. 1-23, Śān. gr. IV. 15, Bhār. gr. II. 1, Āp. gr. 18. 5-12 and others describe these two rites which are performed on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa, whether the moon be in conjunction with the constellation of Śrāvaṇa or not. Āśv. gr. describes it as follows: ¹⁹⁴³ "Having filled a new jar with the flour of unbroken grains of barley he places it on a new śikya (an arrangement of strings for holding pots etc.) along with a spoon for making offerings (bali). Having got ready fried barley grains he smears ¹⁹⁴⁴ half of them with clarified butter. At sunset he prepares a mess of cooked food and a cake on one potsherd and offers oblations (of cooked food) with the four verses 'O Agni! lead us to wealth by a good path &c.' (Rg. I. 189. 1-4) verse by verse and offers with one hand the cake prepared on one potsherd with the mantra 'to the constant one, the Earth demon, svāhā.' The cake should have been completely submerged in clarified butter or its top may be visible; with the verse 'Agni, do not hand us over to evil' (Rg. I. 189.5) he sacrifices over the entire cake the clarified butter in which the cake had been submerged. Reciting the verse 'may the steeds bring bliss to us in our invocations' (Rg. VII. 38. 7) he sacrifices into the fire the fried grains with his joined hands. ¹⁹⁴⁵ He should give the other (not smeared with clarified butter) fried grains to his people (sons &c.). Out of the jar he fills the spoon with barley flour, goes out of the house with his face towards the east, pours down water on a pure spot and offers sacrifice with the mantra 'to the divine ¹⁹⁴⁶ hosts of snakes, 1944. 'smears'—Nārāyaṇa explains that this should be done in the day and what follows is to be done after sunset.

1945. 'joined hands'—When the sacrificer joins his hands the applying of butter (upastaraṇa) and the putting of butter over the havis are done by another person.

1946. The words सर्पदेवजनेभ्यः स्वाहा may mean 'the serpents and the divine hosts.' In the Śat. Br. (S. B. E. vol. 44, pp. 367-368) 'Sarpavidyā and Devajanavidyā' are separate subjects of study. But as the rite is for propitiating the serpents, it is better to take the words to mean 'serpents that are a divine host.'

svāhā' and makes an obeisance to them with joined hands in the words 'the serpents that are terrestrial,¹⁹⁴⁷ that are aerial, that are celestial, that dwell in the several directions—to them I have brought this bali; to them I make ready this bali. Having gone round the bali with the right hand turned towards it, he sits down to the west of the bali (and recites the mantra) 'thou art a serpent; thou art the lord of serpents that creep; by food thou protectest men and by a cake the serpents, by sacrifice the gods, me who am in thee (i. e. who seek thy favour and protection) may not the serpents who also are in thee do any harm; I give over the Dhruvā (spoon) to thee.' Then with the words 'O firm one, I give over this one, this one to thee' he gives his people (son, unmarried daughter, wife) one by one. With the words 'O firm one, I give myself over to thee' he gives himself over at the end. Let no one pass between the sacrificer (and the bali) up till the rite of giving in charge (paridāna).¹⁹⁴⁸ 'To the divine hosts of serpents svāhā'—with these words let him offer a bali in the evening and in the morning till Pratyavarohana. Some count the days till *Pratyavarohana*¹⁹⁴⁹ (from Śrāvaṇa full moon) and offer the same number of balis on that very day (on which the śravaṇā rite takes place)." The Śān. gr. IV. 15 has a similar ceremony called Śravaṇākarma; however it practically contains nothing beyond rules about the bali to serpents and it is worthy of note that some of the 16 upacāras associated with honouring a guest and with devapūjā are employed (in it and in Āp. gr. &c.) for honouring the serpents viz. offering a comb, unguents, flowers, thread (vastra), collyrium, mirror. The Pār. gr. II. 14 is more elaborate as to sarpabali and the deities to whom the oblations of cooked food are offered are 'Vignu, Śravaṇa (nakṣatra), the Full moon day of Śrāvaṇa and the rainy season.' In Pār. gr. also, a comb, ointment, collyrium, garlands are offered to the serpents. Āp. gr. 18. 5-12, Hir. gr. II. 16 (S. B. E. vol. 30, pp. 237-239), Gobhila gr. III. 7. 1-23,

Bhār. gr. II. 1, Baud. gr. III. 10, Mānava gr. II. 16 and others contain similar elaborate rules about sarpabali, the Hir. gr. and Āp. gr. requiring that the flowers used should be of the kiṁśuka tree. It appears that when the husband was absent the wife was to offer the bali during the four months. The Mānava gr. II. 16. 6 adds that even the śūdra wife of a brāhmaṇa should silently offer the bali after washing her hands. Vide Śāṇ. gr. IV. 15. 20 also for the wife doing it silently.

Serpent worship arose from the fears entertained about the deadly effects of snake-bites. The serpent cult is very ancient as the quotation from the Tai. S. cited above shows. Vide also Atharvaveda VIII. 7. 23 and XI. 9. 16 and 24. In the Atharvaveda (VIII. 14. 14-16) the well known names of some mythical serpents viz. Takṣaka, Dhṛtarāṣṭra and Airāvata occur. The dangers from snakes must have intensified in the rainy season when serpents sought shelter in human habitations owing to vast areas being flooded and in search of their prey, viz. mice and frogs &c. Therefore the rite of offering a bali to serpents was performed on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa and a bali was offered every day to serpents for four months till the full moon of Mārgaśīrṣa on which day took place the Pratyavarohaṇa (re-descent) i. e. discarding the use of cots for sleeping on and using the ground for that purpose. Fergusson in his famous work 'Tree and Serpent worship' (1868) traces serpent worship in the nations of antiquity, such as in Egypt, Judea, Greece &c. In the Mahābhārata nāgas figure very frequently. Vide Ādi. 35 and 123. 71, Udyoga 103, 9-16; Anuśāsana 150. 41 (where the names of seven nāgas that support the earth such as Vāsuki, Ananta &c. are specified). In Anuśāsana 14. 55 Śiva is said to have snakes on his body like yajñopavīta. The purāṇas are full of the stories of nāgas. Serpent worship continues to this day particularly in South India, but now serpents are worshipped on the 5th of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa instead of on the full moon day of Śrāvaṇa as in the times of the sūtras. This day is now called Nāgapañcamī and some account of it will be given later on under vratas. India possesses more varieties of serpents than any single country in the world and the toll of life taken by snake bites is very heavy as compared with any other country.

In certain medieval digests like the Saṁskāra-kaustubha (p. 122) a rite called Nāgabali is described. It is performed on Sinvālī (a day on which the moon is seen, but there is amāvāsyā thereafter) or full moon day or on the 5th or on the 9th when the moon is in Āśleṣā (of which serpents are the presiding deity). Its object is two-fold viz. to expiate the sin of having killed a snake or snakes and to remove the obstacle to progeny (supposed to arise from the wrath of serpents killed by a person). In this a figure of a serpent is made of the flour of rice or wheat or sesame which is then placed in a śūrpa (winnowing basket), then it is worshipped with the 16 upacāras (described above) and a bali of pāyasa (rice-milk) is offered to it; then after washing the hands and feet and sipping water a homa is performed with ordinary fire (but there is no sviṣṭakṛt offering); an oblation of clarified butter is offered with om and all the three vyāhṛtis into the mouth of the serpent figure and the rest of the ājya is sprinkled on its body, the serpent is praised with the mantras quoted above from Tai. S. IV. 2. 8. 3 and certain Purāṇa verses are repeated and the figure is thrown into the fire; then impurity (āsaucā) is observed by the sacrificer and his wife for three days or one day; then eight brāhmaṇas are invited, they are supposed to stand in the place of the burnt effigy and upacāras are offered to them, they are fed and gifts are given to them; then a golden image of a serpent is put into the kalāśa (water-pot) and prayer is offered to it, and the golden image or its value or a cow is gifted to a brāhmaṇa.

The Pār. gr. (II. 15) describes a rite called Indrayajña on the full moon day of Proṣṭhapada (i. e. Bhādrapada). It is briefly as follows: Having cooked pāyasa (rice cooked in milk) for Indra¹⁹⁵⁰ and cakes and having placed (four) cakes round the fire, and having offered the two ājyabhāgas he offers the milk rice to Indra; he offers the ājya oblations to Indra, Indrāṇī (Indra's wife), Aja Ekapād, Ahirbudhnya and to the Proṣṭhapadās; he offers milk-rice to Indra; after he has eaten (a portion of the sacrificial food) he offers a bali to the Maruts; for Śruti says (Sat. Br. IV. 5. 2. 16) 'the maruts are the eaters of ahuta';¹⁹⁵¹ the bali (to Maruts) is offered on leaves of the 1950. कर्क says 'ऐन्द्रग्रहणादिन्द्राय स्वाहेति होमो लभ्यते।' आज्याहुत्यन्ते इन्द्राय स्वाहेति पायसेन होमः। ततः स्विष्टकृदादि'. The स्विष्टकृत् is to be performed with the remains of पायस

1951. The शांख्यायनग्रन्थ I. 10 has the verse हुतोऽग्निहोत्रहोमेनाहुतो बलिकर्मणा, यद्हुतः पितृकर्मणा प्राशितो ब्रह्मणे हुतः॥'; vide Manu III. 74 quoted above. बलि is अहुत and so Maruts are called अहुतादः. The शतपथ passages are 'अहुतादो वै देवानां मरुतः' (IV. 5. 2. 16); 'मरुतो वा इत्यश्वत्थेऽपक्रम्य तस्थुः क्षत्रं वा इन्द्रो विशो मरुतः' (IV. 3. 3. 6).

Āśvattha tree, because there is a Vedic passage (Śat. Br. IV. 3. 3. 6) 'the Maruts stayed in the Āśvattha tree.' He offers the bali with the passage 'Śukra-jyotir' (Vāj. S. 17. 80-85) mantra by mantra and with the mantra called vimukha which latter is to be revolved in the mind only (and not to be uttered loudly), for the śruti says 'these are their names'¹⁹⁵² (Śat. Br. IX. 3. 1. 26). He repeats the mantra 'Indram daivīr' (Vāj. S. 17. 86); then follows the feeding of a brāhmaṇa.

The Kausika sūtra (140) describes the procedure of a festival in honour of Indra for kings. It is begun on the eighth day in the bright half of Bhādrapada or Āśvina in which a banner is raised on Śravaṇa nakṣatra. Yāj. I. 147 declares a holiday for one day on the day on which the banner in honour of Indra is raised and when it is taken down. Aparārka (p. 190) quotes Garga to the effect that the banner is raised by the king on the 12th of the bright half of Bhādrapada, when the moon is in conjunction either with Uttarāśādhā, Śravaṇa or Dhaniṣṭhā and adds that it is taken down on the Bharanī nakṣatra after the full moon day of Bhādrapada. The Kṛtya-ratnākara (pp. 292-93) adds that during the days of the festival worship is offered to figures of Indra and his wife Śacī and son Jayanta made from pieces of sugarcane stalks and that it is not raised on Saturday or Tuesday or in periods of impurity due to birth or mourning or in portents like an earth-quake. From Adiparva 63. 1-29 it appears¹⁹⁵³ that the festival (called 1952. In Vāj. S. 17. 80-85 there are names of Maruts. They are said (in 17. 86) to be the divine hosts that follow Indra. The शतपथ (IX. 3. 1. 26) says छुक्रज्योतिश्च चित्रज्योतिश्च सत्यज्योतिश्च ज्योतिष्मांश्चेति नामान्येषामेतानि. All the commentators of Pār. gr̥. say that विमुक्ख is the mantra 'उग्रश्च भीमश्च ध्वान्तश्च धुनिश्च सासद्वांश्चाभियुग्वा च विक्षिपः स्वाहा ॥' which is Vāj. S. 39. 7. But Oldenberg (in SBE vol. 29. p. 332) says in a note that the first part of Vāj. S. XVII. 86 is called 'Vimukha'.

Indramaha) was started by Uparicara Vasu. It is stated therein that when that king was prevailed upon by Indra to desist from being a hermit in a forest and to rule over the country called Cedi, Indra gave him a bamboo staff as an affectionate gift and in honour of Indra the king planted it in the earth and since that time when the year ended a bamboo staff was raised by kings (and also other humbler persons) and next day it was decked with baskets full of fragrant substances and ornaments, and garlands were suspended from it. It is possible that the raising of a bamboo staff on the first day of Caitra every year in the Deccan and other places is reminiscent of this ancient festival in honour of Indra. The Bṛhatsamhitā (chap. 43) describes the origin of the Indramaha festival and devotes over sixty verses to the elucidation of the method of celebrating it. Viṣṇu gave to Indra a flag-staff to frighten asuras ; in verse 8 it refers to Uparicara Vasu as the originator of the Indra festival, states on what auspicious conjunctions a carpenter and an astrologer should go to a forest and gives directions as to the tree to be selected (Arjuna tree being the best); then the tree is to be felled the next day and brought to the capital by the king on the eighth of the bright half of Bhrādrapada with a retinue of citizens, ministers and brāhmaṇas ; the city should be decorated with fine palākas (flags) and toranas (festival arches); on the 11th there was to be a vigil, the trunk of the tree should be pared and chiselled and it should be placed on a yantra (a mechanical contrivance to raise it up), homa is to be offered ; then it is to be raised up erect on the 12th of the bright half of Bhādrapada when the moon is in Śravaṇa nakṣatra or even without that being so ; five or seven wooden figures (called śakrakumāris) are also to be placed near it (to enhance the charm of the staff) and two smaller staffs (one $\frac{2}{3}$ and the other $\frac{1}{3}$ of the length of the principal staff) are also to be raised called Nanda and Upananda ; another staff also is to be raised as Indra's mother ; the staff was to be decked with several ornaments, baskets were to be hung round the staff, each one above the other and smaller in size, on the 4th day (from 12th tithi) verses in praise are to be recited and on the 5th day (from the 12th i. e. on 1st of the dark half) the staff is to be bidden farewell to.

Āsvayujī :—Gaut. VIII. 19 mentions Āsvayujī among the seven Pākayajñas as included in his 40 saṃskāras.

The Āśv. gr. II. 2. 1-3 describes¹⁹⁵⁴ the rite as follows : 'on the full moon day of Āsvayuja (i. e. Āśvina) the Āsvayujī rite (is performed). Having adorned the house, having bathed and put on clean (white) garments, they should take out a mess of cooked food for Paśupati and should offer it with the formula 'to Paśupati, to Śiva, to Śamkara, to Prṣātaka, svāhā.' He should sacrifice with his joined hands a mixture of milk and clarified butter with the formula 'may what is deficient in me be made complete (or full); may what is complete not deteriorate in me. To Prṣātaka, svāhā.'

The Śāñ. gr. (IV. 16) requires that in this rite oblations of clarified butter should be offered to Āśvins, to the two stars of Āsvayuj nakṣatra, to the full moon of Āśvina; to Śarad (autumn) and to Paśupati and the mixture of milk and ājya is offered with the hymn Rg. VI. 28 (ā gavo agman) and that on that night the calves are allowed to join their mothers. Pār. gr. II. 16 calls this rite Prṣatakāḥ, but it prescribes the cooking of pāyasa (milk-rice) for Indra and offerings of that mixture with curds, honey and ghee are made to Indra, Indrāṇī, the Āśvins, to the full moon of Āśvina and Śarad (autumn). The Gobhila gr. III. 8. 1 also calls this rite Prṣātaka and it adds the tying to the arms &c. of amulets made of lac together with all sorts of herbs for the sake of prosperity. Vide also Khādira gr. III. 3. 1-5, Vaiś. IV. 9 for this rite.

In most of the gṛhyasūtras another rite called Āgrayaṇa is described immediately after Āsvayujī. Haradatta on Gaut. VIII. 19 explains that in the Āsvayujī rite mentioned by Gaut. both the Āsvayujī described above from Āśv. gr. and Āgrayaṇa are included. Āgrayaṇa is also called ' Navayajña ' in Gobhila-smṛti (in verse III. 103) and Navasasyeṣṭi in Manu IV. 27.

1954. आश्वयुज्यामाश्वयुजीकर्म । निवेशनमलंकृत्य स्नाता शुचिवाससः पशुपतये स्वालीपाकं निरूप्य जुहुयुः पशुपतये शिवाय शङ्कराय प्रसातकाय स्वाहेति । प्रसातकमञ्जलिना जुहुयात्, ऊनं मे पुर्यतां पूर्णं मे मोषसद् पृषातकाय स्वाहेति । आश्व. गृ. II. 2. 1-3. Nārāyaṇa explains that 'they' mean the sacrificer and his sons and other male descendants (who touch him). The word 'ni-rūpya' means that on the mess of cooked food, the two operations of nirvāpa (taking out a portion from the whole with the mantra पशुपतये स्वा जुष्टं निर्वपामि) and prokṣaṇa are to be performed and that the rest of the mess is to be eaten by the sacrificer and his family. प्रसातक means 'milk mixed with clarified butter'. This is taken out with the śruva ladle. There is an offering to Svīṣṭakṛt Agni of the mess and of prṣātaka. सादिरयुज III. 3. 3 says वयस्यवनेदाज्यं तत्प्रसातकम्; vide also मोषिलस्सुति (in verse) III. 106.

Āgrayaṇa iṣṭi is prescribed in the Āśv. śrauta sūtra II. 9 and other śrauta sūtras for those who have consecrated the three vedic fires (i. e. āhitāgnis). According to Nārāyaṇa an āhitāgni is to perform this āgrayaṇa sacrifice of fresh corn according to the śrauta sūtra, but in case of difficulties he may do so in accordance with Āśv. gr. II. 2. 4 in the Tretā fires and that one who has not consecrated the three fires may offer the sacrifice in the śālā (i. e. aupāsana) fire. This āgrayaṇa rite is required even by the śrauta sūtra as to crops of rice, barley and śyāmāka¹⁹⁵⁵ only and no one was to make use of fresh corn of these three kinds without offering this sacrifice, but there was no restriction as to the use of other kinds of corn or as to vegetables &c. The word Āgrayaṇa is explained as¹⁹⁵⁶ 'that rite in which fresh fruits are first offered to gods' or 'that rite in which fresh corn is first offered or eaten'. The deities of the śrauta Āgrayaṇa are three, viz. Indrāgni (or AgniIndrau), Viśvedevas, Dyāvāpṛthivī (heaven and earth), but in the grhya Āgrayaṇa, Agni Sviṣṭakṛt is added as the fourth (Śaṅ. gr. III. 8. 1, Āp. gr. 19. 7). Āśv. gr. (II. 2. 4-5) gives a very brief description 'united¹⁹⁵⁷ with the seasons, united with the manners, united with Indra and Agni, svāhā; united...with Viśvedevas, svāhā; united...with Heaven and earth, svāhā'-with these formulas a mess of cooked food is offered at the Āgrayaṇa by one who has set up the śrauta fires; also by one who has not set up the śrauta fires, (the same offerings are made) in the domestic (grhya) fire. Āp. gr. 19. (6-7) also is

1955. आश्व. श्रौ. II. 9. 1 expressly says 'आग्रयणं ब्रीहियामाकयवानाम्' and जयराम on पारस्करगृह्य quotes गृह्यसंग्रहकार 'नवयज्ञाधिकारस्थाः श्यामाका ब्रीहयो यवाः । नाश्नीयात्तानहुत्वैवमन्येष्वनियमः स्मृतः ॥'. The मानवगृह्य II. 3. 9 has नानिष्टाग्रयणेन नवसस्यस्याश्नीयात् ।

1956. सुदर्शन on आप. गृ. 19. 6 says 'येन कर्मणा अग्रं नवद्रव्यं देवान्प्रापयतीति यत्कर्म कृत्वैव वाग्रयणं प्रथमायनं नवाङ्गप्राशनप्राप्तिर्भवतीति ।'; हरदत्त on the same says एतिरत्र प्राशनार्थः.

The मन्त्र is परमेष्ठ्यसि परमां मा अग्र्यं गमय (आप. म. पा. II. 18. 1). Sudarsana notes that some held that uncooked grains of fresh rice were to be swallowed while others held that one was to partake of a portion of the boiled rice cooked for sacrificing.

concise '(Now follows the description of) Āgrayaṇa for one who has not set up the śrauta fires. Having prepared a mess of cooked food with fresh corn, he offers oblations to the deities of the (Śrauta) Āgrayaṇa with Sviṣṭakṛt (Agni) as the fourth, he fills his mouth with grains of rice, swallows them, takes ācamana and having rolled up a lump of rice (from the mess of cooked rice) he throws it up on to the top of the dwelling with the next yajus (Ap. M. P. II. 18. 1).'

This rite is also described in Śān. gr. III. 8, Pār. gr. III. 1, Gobhila gr. III. 8. 9-24, Khādira gr. III. 3. 6-15, Vaik. IV. 2, Mānava gr. II. 3. 9-14 &c.

There is one peculiarity in Vaik. viz. that it connects the Pitr̥s also with this rite. According to Mānava gr. the Āgrayaṇa is performed on a parva day in Vasanta (spring) with fresh barley that is (then) harvested and with rice in śarad (autumn).

Vaik. VI. 19 prescribes the prāyaścitta of pādakrocchra or a fast for using first fruits without performing Āgrayaṇa rite.

In modern times some vestige of this Navayajña (sacrifice of first fruits) still remains. The full moon day of Āśvina is still called in the Deccan 'navyāci paurṇimā' and a few ears of growing crops are picked up, are woven with flowers and tastefully arranged and the whole is suspended from the entrance door or its lintel.

Āgrahāyaṇī:—This is one of the seven pākayajñas mentioned by Gautama (VIII. 19) among his forty saṁskāras.

The full moon day of Mārgaśīrṣa is called Āgrahāyaṇī; the rite¹⁹⁵⁸ performed on that day is also called by the same name on account of association with it. Pratyavarohana is a rite performed to signalise the giving up of the use of cots and high couches, recommended from the full moon of Śrāvaṇa for fear of snakes (as in Śān. gr. IV. 15. 22). Some describe two rites separately, one on the full moon day of Mārgaśīrṣa and another called Pratyavarohana on the first night of Hemanta (vide Āp. gr. 19. 3-5 and 8-12). There is some divergence as to the time and the exact procedure of this rite. Some (like Āśv. gr. II. 3. 1-2) hold that it may be performed on the 14th day of the bright half or the full moon day of Mārgaśīrṣa. Others restrict it to the full moon day. Very elaborate descriptions are given in Pār. gr. III. 2, Gobhila gr. III. 9. 1-23. As this rite has entirely gone out of vogue a brief description from the Āśv. gr. alone is appended¹⁹⁵⁹ here. "Having again (after Āśvayujī) renovated the house with plaster (of paint or cow-dung) and by levelling (the floor), they should offer after sunset oblations of pāyasa (milk-rice) with the mantras 'strike aside,¹⁹⁶⁰ O white one, with thy foot, with the front and back portions of the foot these seven women (daughters) of Varuṇa and all (females) that belong to the tribes of the king (of serpents). Inside the house of the white one the serpent did not kill any thing, adoration to the white one, the son of Vidārva, svāhā.' Here no oblation is offered to (Agni) Sviṣṭakṛt. While gazing fixedly at the fire he repeats in a low voice 'may there be no harm to us from the progeny¹⁹⁶¹ of Prajāpati.' He should think in his mind of Hemanta (winter) saying 'be auspicious and well-disposed towards us.' To the west of the fire a well-spread layer of grass should be prepared; he should sit down on it and having recited in a low voice 'Be blissful, O Earth' (Rg. I. 22. 15) he should lie down on that layer with his people (sons &c.) with the head towards the east and face turned towards the north. The others may lie down according as space permits or each should lie down one after another, the elder one before the one next to him in years. Those (of the sacrificer's sons &c.) who know the mantras should murmur them (Rg. I. 22. 15 and the mantras referred to in sūtra 12 below). Getting up from the layer they should three times recite the mantra 'from that place may the gods protect us' (Rg. I. 22. 16); the same verse (they should repeat) a fourth time turning their faces to the south, to the west and the north.¹⁹⁶² Having gathered together they should 1960. The two mantras अप श्वेतपद्मं जहि and न वै श्वेतस्याः occur in आप. म. पा. II. 17. 26-27, Pār. gr. II. 14 (in Śravaṇa-karma), Śāh. gr. IV. 18. 1, Mānavagr. II. 7. 1 (in all with variations).

1961. Serpents are said to be the progeny of Kaśyapa, a Prajāpati; vide सप्तपर्व 11. 18-19 where Kaśyapa is stated to be one of the Prajāpatis and Ādiparva 16, where it is said that from Kadrū one of the wives of Kaśyapa the snakes were born.

1962. Rg. I. 22. 16 is to be repeated thrice while facing the east and then each pāda of that verse is to be repeated while the face is turned to the south, the west and the north (the verse has only three pādas, being in the Gāyatrī metre).

repeat in a low tone the mantras sacred to the sun and the Svastyayana¹⁹⁶³ mantras, cook food and feed the brāhmaṇas and make the latter pronounce auspicious words." In the Pāli work called Aṅguttara-nikāya there is a section called Paccorohani-vagga in which the Pratyavarohana observed by brāhmaṇas is described. Vide Aṅguttara vol. V. (ed. by Hardy) p. 233 CXIX. and Z. D. M. G. vol. 52 pp. 149-151.

Āgrahāyaṇi has been described also in Khādīra gr. III. 3. 1-26, Gobhila gr. III. 9, Mānava gr. II. 7. 1-5, Bhār. gr. II. 2, Āp. gr. 19. 3-5, Kāṭhaka gr. 60. 1 ff., Kauśika sūtra 24. 24-36 Hir. gr. II. 17. 1 (where Mātrdatta says that Āgrahāyaṇi is also styled Pratyavarohana). Baud. gr. II. 10 speaks of a rite called Pratyavarohana to be performed at the beginning of each of the six ṛtus (seasons) and the intercalary month (if any). This is a different rite.

Sūlagava or Īśānabali:—This was originally an offering of the flesh of an ox to Śiva. There was some difference of opinion as to the time. Āśv. gr. IV. 9. 2 states that it was to be performed in Śarad (autumn) or in Vasanta (spring) under the constellation of Ārdrā. The Baud. gr. II. 7. 1-3 says that every year it was to be performed on the full moon day of Mārgaśīrṣa or on the Ārdrā nakṣatra¹⁹⁶⁴ in that month or whenever cattle suffer from some pest or disease. The Kāṭhaka gr. (52. 2-3) declares that the Sūlagava may be performed from various desires in śarad or vasanta and that according to some ācāryas there is no restriction as to season. The Bhār. gr. II. 8 and Hir. gr. II. 8. 2 say that it may be performed in the bright half of a month and on an auspicious nakṣatra.

Various explanations are given why this rite was called Sūlagava. Nārāyaṇa¹⁹⁶⁵ says Sūla here means one who has a 1963. According to Nārāyaṇa Rg. X. 158., Rg. I. 50. 1-9, I. 115. 1, and X. 37. 1 are called Saurya verses; while स्वस्त्ययनानि are the verses that contain the word svasti or a benediction, viz. Rg. I. 89. 1, V. 51. 11, X. 63. 1. Nārāyaṇa follows Āśv. Śr. Sūtra VI. 5. 18 as to Saurya hymns; but it is doubtful whether he is right as to the svastyayana verses. According to the Bṛhad-devatā VIII. 77, Rg. X. 178 is a svastyayana hymn.

1964. Rudra is the presiding deity of Ārdrā. Vide note 563 above.

spit (or pointed rod) i. e. Śiva who is called Śūlin and that this sacrifice is offered to Rudra Śūlin with the ox as a sacrificial animal. Haradatta explains that here the ox is marked with the rod (of Śiva).

This rite is most elaborately described in Āśv. gr. IV. 9, Baud. gr. II. 7, Hir. gr. II. 8-9, Bhār. gr. II. 8-10, Pār. gr. III. 8. It appears that even in the times of the gr̥hya sūtras there were many who did not like the rite of ox-flesh. The Baud. gr. (II. 7. 26-27) says¹⁹⁶⁶ that if a person cannot secure an ox he may sacrifice with a goat or ram or he may cook a mess of cooked food for Īśāna and with that he does everything that is to be done by means of an ox. The commentator Devapāla on Kāṭhaka¹⁹⁶⁷ gr. 52. 1 says that only a goat is offered and the bull is let off as the people are opposed to the idea of the sacrifice of an ox.

As this rite has totally gone out of practice only a brief description of it from the Mānava gr̥hya¹⁹⁶⁸ (which is the briefest of all on this rite) is given here. 'Śūlagava is to be performed in Śarad for (propitiating) Rudra. In the north-east of the village and not near it (it is to be performed) at night and there is to be a sacrificial post, not chiselled (into an octagonal shape as in other sacrifices), in the midst of oxen. Before the (final offering) to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt (i. e. after performing the usual homa with boiled rice up to this point) he should fill eight vessels made of leaves with blood and offer them in the principal quarters and the intermediate quarters with the eight anuvākas (Tai. S. IV. 5. 1 ff. and Vāj. S. 16th adhyāya) beginning with 'adoration to thee, O Rudra, who are Manyu (wrath).' He should not bring the uncooked offerings into the village. He should bury into the ground the rest (of the animal offered) and its skin also. Some ācāryas say that in the pākayajñas in which animals are sacrificed there is no sacrificial post.'

Vāstu-pratiṣṭhā :—(construction and occupation of a new house).

The Āśv. gr. II. 7-9, ān. gr. III. 2-4, Pār. gr. III. 4, Āp. gr. 17. 1-13, Khādīra gr. IV. 2. 6-22 and other gr̥hya works deal with the matter of building a new house. Āśv. gr. (II. 7) says that one who intends to build a house should first examine the ground, which must be non-salinous, which should have herbs and trees, much kuśa and vīraṇa grass growing on it; that one should dig out thorny plants and plants having milky juice with their roots and remove them and also certain other plants like apāmārga, tilvaka, etc. He should select a spot where the waters coming together from all sides to the centre of it flow round the resting place having the latter on their right side and then are discharged off to the east without noise. Such a spot possesses all auspicious qualities. He should (Āśv. gr. II. 8) also dig a pit knee-deep in the ground to be examined and then fill the pit again with the earth taken out. If the earth taken out fills the entire pit and some earth remains, then the plot is excellent for building a house on; if all the earth dug out just fills the pit, it is of middle quality; if the earth is not enough to fill the pit the plot is to be rejected. Another method is to fill the pit with water and leave it there through the night. If in the morning there is water in the pit the ground is excellent; if it is moist only, the ground is of middle quality; if it is found dry in the morning the plot is to be rejected. The three divjātis should respectively select white, red and yellow ground as a site for their house. The plot should be square or rectangular and the owner should draw a thousand furrows on it. ' With a śamī or udumbara branch he sprinkles the ground with water, going thrice round it with his right hand towards it and recites the Śāntātiya hymn.¹⁹⁶⁹ He does this thrice pouring out water without interruption with the three verses ' āpo hi sṭhā ' (Rg. X. 9. 1-3). Under the divisions of the bambhoo which rests on the chief posts he should have the single rooms constructed. Into the pits in which the posts are to stand he should have an avakū and the water plant called śīpalā put down. Having put the plant into the pit in which the middle post is to stand he should spread on it east-ward pointed and north-ward pointed kuśa grass and should sprinkle on the kuśas water into which rice and barley have been thrown with the words 'to the steady one, the earth demon, svāhā.' He should when the middle post is being erected repeat over it the two verses 'stand here &c.' and 'to thee the young child may come &c.' Over the bamboo staff when it is placed on the middle post he recites the hemistich 'rightly ascend the post &c.' On four stones on which dūrvā grass has been spread he should establish the water barrel with the words 'arise on the earth' or with the verse 'the arangara sounds &c.' He then should pour water into it with the verse 'hither may king Varuṇa come &c.' He then appeases it as follows: he puts gold into water in which rice and barley have been put and with that water he sprinkles it three times, going round it with his right turned towards it with the Śāntātiya hymn. This he does three times pouring water without interruption with the three verses 'āpo hi ṣṭhā' (Rg. X. 9.1-3). In the middle of the house he should cook a mess of food, sacrifice from it with the four verses 'Vāstospate prati' (Rg. VII. 54. 1-3 and VII. 55. 1) verse by verse,¹⁹⁷⁰ should cook food which should be given to the brāhmaṇas to eat, whom he should cause to say 'lucky is the ground.'

The Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 252-257) deals at length with Vāstusāstra, the construction of a house of various dimensions, its posts, the timber to be employed, the rites to be performed when laying the foundation and at later stages, the rite for Vāstusānti (propitiatory rite for averting evil).

The Matsyapurāṇa¹⁹⁷¹ (256. 10-11) states that a vāstuyajña has to be performed five times in relation to a house, viz. when laying down the foundation (lit. using the measuring line), when fixing the first post, when raising the first door frame, when entering the house (grhapraveśa) and when vāstusānti is to be performed (for averting evil or on seeing portents). It briefly describes Vāstuyajña as follows (chap. 256. 5-9): On an auspicious day and moment, the stone should be laid over jewels and all seeds; similarly the post is to be worshipped at the hands of four brāhmaṇas; the priest who should wear white garments should be master of the Veda and should be accompanied by the artizans, should fix the post that is washed with water mixed with all herbs (or herbs called sarvaṣadhi) and covered with many whole rice and decked with clothes and ornaments to the accompaniment of Vedic mantras and the tunes of auspicious music; he should perform a homa with honey and clarified butter and should repeat the mantra 'vāsto-spate prati' (Rg. VII. 54. 1); then the owner should feed brāhmanas with a dish of rice-milk. The Matsyapurāṇa notes that the foundation should be laid in the north-east corner and the first post fixed in the south-east. The Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 268) describes the procedure of Vāstusānti and remarks (verses 33-35) that it should be performed when beginning the construction of a temple or a house or a public park or when entering a town or one's house for the first time for averting all evil and it should also be performed every year in one's house. In that rite he should make the brāhmanas repeat the Rāksoghna hymn and a hymn to Pavamāna Soma (one from Rg. IX. or IX. 1).

1970. The hymn Rg. VII. 54 has only three verses but four oblations are directed. Therefore the 4th oblation is to be offered with Rg. VII. 55. 1 which also is addressed to Vāstospati.

In modern times the ceremony of entering a newly built house is an important one, is an extensive affair and marked by great éclat. A very auspicious day is required for this ceremony and numerous astrological considerations enter into the choosing of a proper day. The ceremony of an entrance is preceded on the same day or on the previous day by a vāstusānti (propitiatory rite) of which grahamakha (a rite for propitiating the planets) forms a part and the usual rites of worship of Gaṇeśa and the like (mentioned at pp. 213-218) have also to be performed. A few salient features are mentioned here. A maṇḍala is drawn divided into 81 squares, 62 devatās are invoked to be present in the maṇḍala, then a homa is offered to the nine planets with 28 oblations of fuel sticks, sesame and ājya to each planet and oblations are offered to other deities, the performer and his wife have holy water sprinkled over their heads from auspicious jars, the house is surrounded thrice with thread beginning from the east to the accompaniment of Rāksoghna (Rg. IV. 4. 1-15 or X. 87. 1-25) and Pavamāna (Rg. IX. 1. 1-10) mantras and round the house water is continuously poured in a stream from a jar with the same two hymns. A pit is dug in the south-east corner of the house which is cowdunged, worshipped with flowers and sandalwood paste and a baked brick box containing seven kinds of corn, moss, flowers &c. is lowered into it and the pit is filled up. Then the house is entered to the accompaniment of music by the owner who is accompanied by his wife, sons and brāhmaṇas and who holds in his folded hands an auspicious jar filled with water and having fresh sprouts, dūrvā grass thereon and marked with sandalwood paste and flowers and covered with cloth. The svasti hymn (vide note 1963 above) and the hymn beginning with 'kranikradat' (Rg. II. 42. 1-3) are recited and the auspicious jar is put down on a heap of corn. Then the brāhmaṇas perform puṇyāhavācana (vide note 503 above), they are honoured and utter 'may the house be lucky', dinner is given to the brāhmaṇas who pronounce benedictions, and the owner then takes his meal with his friends. ¹⁹⁷²

CHAPTER XXV

DANA (Gifts)

Manu (I. 86) and others state that in the four yugas (ages) viz. Kṛta, Tretā, Dvāpara and Kali, the principal aspects of religious life were respectively tapas, metaphysical knowledge, sacrifices,¹⁹⁷³ and gifts. Manu (III. 78) eulogises the stage of householder as the most worthy because all men in the other āśramas are cherished and fed with (Vedic) knowledge (as a teacher of Vedic students) and with food by him. Yama specifies the characteristic features of the four āśramas as follows : ' quiescence is the dharma of ascetics, cessation from taking ordinary food that of forest hermits, dāna (making gifts) that of householders and obedience (or service) that of brahmacārins.' Vide Dakṣa I. 12-13 also for the peculiar outward characteristics of the four āśramas. Therefore the subject of dāna (gifts or charity) will now engage our attention.

Gifts of various kinds and donors have been highly eulogised in the Rgveda. There are dānastutis (eulogies of gifts) in Rg. I. 125 (where the gifts made by king Svanaya son of Bhāvayavya to Kakṣivat are praised and dāna in general is eulogised in verses 5-7), I. 126. 1-5 (where the same praise is continued), V. 61 (where Śyāvāśva praises the donors Taranta, Purumīlha and Rathaviti), VI. 47. 22-25 (praise of the donor Prastoka Sārñjaya), VII. 18. 22-25 (praise of the gifts made by Sudās Pajavana), VIII. 5. 37-39 (praise of Kaśu Caidya), VIII. 6. 46-48 (praise of Tirindira Pāraśavya), VIII. 46. 21-24 (praise of Kāṇṭha), VIII. 68. 14-19, X. 62. 8-11 (praise of Sāvarni). Among the objects gifted the most prominent are cows. In Rg. I. 126. 3 Kakṣivat represents¹⁹⁷⁴ that he received sixty thousand cows from Svanaya, along with ten chariots to each of which four bay horses were yoked and in which young girls were seated. In Rg. VIII. 5. 37 reference is made¹⁹⁷⁵ to the gifts of ten thousand cows and of 100 camels by Kaśu Caidya. In Rg. V. 30. 12 a gift of 4000 cows to Babhru by the men of king Rṇaṅcaya is mentioned. Horses are also often described as objects of gift. e. g. Rg. V. 18. 5 (gift of 50 horses), VII. 16. 10, VIII. 46. 22 (gifts of 60000 horses, 2000 camels, 1000 bay mares and 10000 cows); VIII. 68. 17. For gifts of camels vide Rg. VIII. 5. 37, VIII. 46. 22. For gifts of young damsels vide Rg. I. 126. 3, VI. 27. 8, VII. 18. 22, VIII. 19. 36, VIII. 68. 17. The word 'vadhū' used in all these passages cannot mean that the young girls were meant to be the wives of the donees, since in some of them the 'vadhūs' gifted are as many as 10, 20 or even 50.¹⁹⁷⁶ So they were maid servants or female slaves. Rg. X. 117 contains an eulogy of the gift of food, the 6th verse of which is the basis of the later teaching of Manu III. 118, Viṣṇu Dh. 8. 67. 43, Bhagavad-gītā 3. 13 and is as follows: 'the foolish man'¹⁹⁷⁷ (who does not share with others) obtains food to no purpose; I say the truth that it is really his destruction; he does not offer food to Aryaman (i. e. to the gods) nor to his friend (or guest); one who takes food alone (without giving to others) partakes simply of sin.' This injunction was most assiduously followed at all times in India. In the Chān. Up. IV. 1-2 it is stated that Jānaśruti Pautrāyaṇa, a man of faith and very charitable, had erected everywhere shelters in order to feed at all times all people that came from all quarters. Rg. X. 107 (of 11 verses) is an apotheosis of dakṣiṇā (gift or sacrificial fee which generally consisted of a cow or cows), which word is repeated several times in almost every verse. Verses 2, 7 and 8 are very interesting 'Those who make gifts of dakṣiṇā (cows or fee) stand high in heaven, those who make gifts of horses stand in the world of the Sun, donors of gold secure immortality (become gods), those who give garments increase the duration of their life. Gifts endow (the donor) with horses, cows, the moon (silver?), gold, food which is the life of us and the knowing (donor) makes gifts of his armour. Donors do not die (they reach immortality in heaven), they do not go down to a low goal, they are not harmed, nor do they suffer pain; dakṣiṇā renders unto these donors this whole world and also heaven'. Rg. VI. 47. 23 mentions that from Divodāsa gifts of ten horses, ten boxes (i. e. chariots or boxes of gold), ten garments, in addition to dinners and ten lumps of gold were received.¹⁹⁷⁸

It appears that although in the Rg. gifts of horses are spoken of as next in importance to gifts of cows, popular sentiment changed very early. In the Paundarika sacrifice the fee was a thousand horses and in the Jyotiṣṭoma one cow and one horse (Śabara on Jaimini III. 4. 28). The Tai. S. II. 3. 12. 1 says ¹⁹⁷⁹ 'Varuṇa indeed seizes him (i. e. he suffers from dropsy) who accepts the gift of a horse and that one should offer to Varuṇa as many offerings prepared on four potsherds as the horses accepted.' Jaimini (III. 4. 28-31) establishes two propositions in connection with this that the iṣṭi to Varuṇa is to be performed when the gift of a horse or horses is accepted in a Vedic sacrifice and that the iṣṭi is to be performed by the donor (and not by the acceptor). The Kāthaka Sam. XII. 6 also recommends that the horse should not be accepted as a gift, as it has two rows of teeth. In the Tai. Br. II. 2. 5 reference is made to the gift of gold, clothes, a cow, a horse, a human being, a bedstead and several other objects and their presiding deities are said to be Agni, Soma, Indra, Varuṇa, Prajāpati &c. The Tai. S. II. 2. 6. 3 says 'he who accepts an animal with two rows of teeth, such as a horse or a human being, (thereby) secures (to himself) a portion of ātman (self); he should offer a mess cooked on twelve potsherds to Vaiśvānara.' Manu X. 89 forbids the sale of the horse and other animals with uncloven hoofs; but the Pehoa inscription from Garibnath temple shows that brāhmaṇas engaged in the sale of horses and that a tax agreed to be levied from vendors and purchasers was made into a permanent fund for temples and priests (vide E. I. vol. I. p 186). Gaut. 19. 16 mentions the horse among objects that are gifted by way of penance for sins. The Śān. Br. (25. 14) says¹⁹⁸⁰ that he who after promising to gift all, does not give all, is reduced to falling into a deep pit or is killed. The Ait. Br. (30. 9) enjoins¹⁹⁸¹ that one should not accept a gift rejected by the priests and if one accepts it it should be given over to one's enemy.

The Śat. Br. (II. 2. 10. 6) says 'there are two kinds of devas, the gods (heavenly) and the human gods viz. brāhmaṇas who have studied the Veda and mastered it; sacrifice is divided between these two, i. e. oblations go to the gods and the fee to the learned brāhmaṇas who are the human gods. These two kinds of gods when gratified place him (the sacrificer) in nectar (or in the celestial world).'¹⁹⁸² The Tai. S. VI. 1. 6. 3 states that 'it is indeed tapas when¹⁹⁸³ a man makes a gift of what he owns.' We saw above (note 11) how the Br. Up. V. 2. 3 inculcates the three virtues of self-restraint, charity (dāna) and compassion. In the Ait. Br. 39. 6¹⁹⁸⁴ it is stated that the king when anointed should make gifts of gold, fields and cattle. But it appears from the story of Viśvakarman Bhauvana narrated in the Ait. Br. (39. 7) and also in the Śat. Br. (XIII. 7. 1. 13-15) that when he desired to make a gift of the earth to his priest Kaśyapa as sacrificial fee the earth appeared and sang a verse 'no mortal must give me away as a gift; O Viśvakarman Bhauvana, you desired to give me away; I shall plunge into the midst of water, so that this your promise to Kaśyapa is fruitless.' It seems however that gifts of villages had come to be made very early. The Chān. Up. IV. 2. 4-5 narrates how Jānaśruti desirous of learning the saṁvarga lore

The literature on dāna is of enormous extent. Apart from casual references in the other parvans of the Mahābhārata, the major portion of the Anuśāsana parva is devoted to the various aspects of dāna. The Purāṇas, particularly Agni (chap. 208-215 & 217), Matsya (chap. 82-91 and 274-289) and Varāha (chap. 99-111), contain numerous verses on dāna. There are digests specially devoted to the topic of dāna, the most extensive and important being Hemādri's Dānakhaṇḍa (of the Caturvarga-cintāmaṇi), Dānakriyākaumudī of Govindānanda, the Dānamayūkha of Nilakaṇṭha, the Dānavākyaṇṭha of Vidyāpati, the Dānasāgara of Ballālasena and the Dānaprakāśa of Mitrāmīra. Only a brief summary of the topics dealt with in all these is attempted below.

What constitutes gift (dāna) according to the śāstra has been discussed from very ancient times. There is a distinction between yāga, homa and dāna. The first is constituted by abandoning something that belongs to one, intending it for a deity and accompanying it with Vedic mantras; homa is throwing into fire something belonging to oneself over which one abandons one's ownership and which (thing) is intended for a deity; dāna consists in the cessation of one's ownership over a thing and creating the ownership of another over that thing and this last occurs when the other accepts the thing, which acceptance may be mental or vocal or physical; vide Śābara on Jaimini IV. 2. 28 (quoted above in note 1703), VII. 1. 5, IX. 4. 32 and the Mit. on Yāj. II. 27.¹⁹⁸⁵ The Mit. explains that physical acceptance may be effected in various ways such as by actually receiving the thing in one's hand, by simply touching it and quotes a smṛti which illustrates this 'one should give (and the donee may accept) a deer skin (by touching it) on the hairy side, a cow by its tail, an elephant by its trunk, a horse by its mane, a female slave by (touching) her head'. The Mit. adds that as it is impossible to accept a field physically (except by enjoying its fruits) its acceptance is effected by some enjoyment, however small, of its produce. The Viṣṇudharmottara quoted in Dānakriyākāumudī p. 7 gives more examples of the method of acceptance. Vide Brhat-Parāśara (chap. VIII. p. 242) for copious illustrations of the way in which a gift is to be accepted according to the nature of the thing given. The word 'pratigraha' has a technical meaning in Dharmaśāstra. Medhātithi on Manu IV. 5 says¹⁹⁸⁶ 'merely taking a thing (from another) does not constitute pratigraha (as understood in Dharmaśāstra). The latter word is applicable only to a particular kind of acceptance viz. when a person accepts what is given by the donor with the idea that he (the donor) will derive from that act some unseen spiritual result (adṛṣṭa or puṇya) and when in making the gift a vedic mantra is repeated. When one gives alms, no mantra (such as 'devasya tvā') is repeated and hence that is not the dāna spoken of by śāstra, nor does any one apply the word pratigraha to the acceptance of an article given through affection to a friend or a servant.' When such a word as vidyādāna (gift of learning to a pupil) is used, the word dāna is employed there in a figurative sense only; otherwise the teacher will have to give a dakṣiṇā to the pupil, whereas it is the pupil who may give a dakṣiṇā to the teacher. When some gift is made to an image, the word dāna in that case is also used in a secondary sense, as the image cannot accept the gift. Therefore Devala defines dāna (of the śāstric kind)¹⁹⁸⁷ as 'that is described as dāna when wealth is given according to śāstric rites so as to reach a receiver who is a fit recipient as defined in the śāstra. What is given to a worthy person without an eye to any particular object (to be achieved by such gift) but solely with the idea of doing one's duty, that is called dharmadāna'. The Dānamayūkha p. 3 explains that the definition of dāna given by Devala applies to the best kind of dāna (called sāttvika) and not to dāna in general. If a gift is sent to a person, but it is lost while on its way or it is stolen and never reaches the donee, then there is no acceptance and so no complete dāna and the donor cannot reap the reward of dāna in such a case.

There are six āngas (constituent elements) of dāna, as stated by Devala,¹⁹⁸⁸ viz. the donor, the donee, śraddhā (charitable attitude), the subject of gift which must have been acquired by the donor in a proper way, a proper time and a proper place. The first four are clearly indicated in Manu IV. 226-227. These six will have to be dealt with one after another.

One important word that deserves consideration in the subject of dāna is istāpūrta. That word has a high antiquity. It occurs in the R̥gveda and the sense seems to be 'the cumulative spiritual result or merit due to a man's performance of sacrifices and charitable acts'. R̥g. X. 14. 8 is addressed to one recently¹⁹⁸⁹ dead 'may you join the pitṛs, may you be united with Yama, and with your istāpūrta in the highest heaven'. The word, though employed in the singular (probably as a samāhāra-dvandva compound), consists of two parts, ista (what is sacrificed) and pūrta (what is filled). In the Atharvaveda also the word occurs, 'may the istāpūrta of our ancestors save us (from our enemy); I seize yonder (man or enemy) with divine wrath' (II. 12. 4). Vide also Atharvaveda III. 29. 1. Sometimes the two components are employed separately or in the dual when compounded. The Tai. S. V. 7. 7. 1-3 has the interesting observation¹⁹⁹⁰ 'when he comes by the Devayāna paths, then make ye his istāpūrta manifest to him; whatever sacrifice was offered, whatever was handed over, whatever was given and the dakṣiṇā offered, may Agni present in all actions place all that in heaven among the gods for us.' The Tai. Br. II. 5. 5 says¹⁹⁹¹ 'may Iṣṭa and pūrta last for endless years; having sacrificed with an offering that is ever-lasting, a man ascended to the highest and ever-lasting world' and Tai. Br. III. 9. 14 remarks "the brāhmaṇa should sing 'you made gifts, you performed sacrifices, you cooked food (for serving to others).' Indeed iṣṭāpūrta belongs to a brāhmaṇa; he makes him (the king) prosper by iṣṭāpūrta." The Vāj. S. XV. 54 says 'O fire, may you be awake (or kindled), may you be watchful for us; join with iṣṭāpūrta (the sacrificer) and him with his iṣṭāpūrta.' The Kathopaniṣad I. 1. 8 states that when a brāhmaṇa guest is allowed to stay in a house without being served with food he destroys the iṣṭāpūrta, the issue and the cattle of the householder. The Muṇḍaka Up. I. 2. 10 condemns those who regard iṣṭāpūrta as the highest and do not hold that there is anything higher than that and states that they have to come down to this world or to a lower world again after enjoying the blessings of Heaven.

Aparārka (p. 290) quotes the Mahābhārata for defining iṣṭa and pūrta ¹⁹⁹² 'whatever is offered in the single fire (i. e. gr̥hya fire) and what is offered in the three śrauta fires and the gifts made inside the vedi (in śrauta sacrifices) are called iṣṭa; while dedication of deep wells, oblong large wells and tanks, temples, distribution of food, and maintaining public gardens—these are called pūrta.' Aparārka quotes Nārada also 'Honouring a guest and performance of vaiśvadeva constitute iṣṭa while the dedication of tanks, wells, temples, places for public distribution of food and gardens is called pūrta and also gifts made at the time of eclipses, or on the sun's passage in a zodiacal sign or on the 12th day of a month.' Hemadri (Dāna p. 20) quotes Śaṅkha that nursing of those who are ill constitutes pūrta. Manu (IV. 226-227) ordains 'one should always assiduously perform iṣṭa and pūrta, which when done with śraddhā and with wealth justly acquired become inexhaustible. One should ever resort to dānadharma (that mode of dharma which consists in gifts) which is either iṣṭa or pūrta, according to one's means, after meeting a worthy person (as recipient) and with a pleased attitude of mind.'

Any one including women and sūdras could make gifts. So much emphasis was laid on the duty to make gifts that Aparārka quotes a verse¹⁹⁹³ 'two persons should be drowned in water after tying round their neck a large stone, viz. a rich man not making gifts and a poor man who is not a tapasvīn (who undergoes austerities or who is restrained).' It is stated in Atri 46, Likhita 6 and other smṛtis that¹⁹⁹⁴ 'Iṣṭa and pūrta are dharma common to all twice-born classes; the sūdra has authority to perform pūrta dharma, but not the Vaidika dharma (sacrifices etc.).' According to Devala the donor should be free from incurable or disgusting diseases, be religious, charitably inclined, free from vices, pure and following a blameless profession for livelihood. Several smṛtis note that it is a rare sight to see a man giving away in charity wealth earned by him. Veda-vyāsa¹⁹⁹⁵ (IV. 60) says 'amongst a hundred men, one may be found to be brave, among thousands a learned man, among hundreds of thousands an orator, but a donor may or may not be found.'

A good deal has already been said above (pp. 113-114) about the persons fit to be donees (pūtra) and an unfit one. A few more words may be added here. Dakṣa III. 17-18 states 'a gift made to one's parents, guru, friend, to a well conducted man, to one who has laid the donor under obligation, to the poor, the helpless, those endowed with special excellence, leads to rewards, while gifts made to rogues, to bards, to wrestlers, to those who devote time to bad lores, to gamblers and deceitful persons, to cāṭas, to cāraṇas and thieves brings no fruit (or merit).¹⁹⁹⁶ Manu 4. 193-200 (= Viṣṇu Dh. S. 93. 7-13) contains a list of persons to whom gifts should not be made, such as a brāhmaṇa who is like a cat or hypocrite or who does not know the veda. Bṛhad-Yama III. 34-38 enumerates those brāhmaṇas who are unfit to be invited at a śrāddha or to be donees such as lepers, those who suffer from incurable diseases, those who officiate at sacrifices for śūdras, a devalaka and seller of Veda (teaching it with a prior stipulation for money) and in IV. 55-56 says that gifts made to brāhmaṇas that are addicted to bad actions, that are covetous, devoid of Veda study and sandhyā performance, who have swerved from the vows proper (for brāhmaṇas), who are wicked and who are immersed in pleasures of sense become fruitless. Vanaparva (200. 5-9) enumerates 16 futile gifts such as to one who left off the order of śaṁnyāsa or of wealth acquired by unjust means &c. Almost the same verses occur in Bṛhat-Parāśara (VIII. pp. 241-242), which are quoted in Par. M. I, part 1, p. 188. Vide also Vṛddha-Gautama (III. chap. pp. 508-509) for numerous futile gifts. It is one's duty to give food at the end of Vaiśvadeva to all (vide note 1779 above) and the Viṣṇudharmottara directs that as to gifts of food and clothing the only consideration is whether the donor is hungry or in need of clothes and not caste nor qualities.^{1996a} When on seeing a needy person the donor feels pleasure and indicates it by a smiling face, when he shows honour and is free from a feeling of ill-will or irritation (towards the suppliant), that is said to be śrāddhā, according to Devala.¹⁹⁹⁷ Manu IV. 235 says that he who gives a gift with honour and he who accepts it with honour both go to heaven, but if the reverse is the case they go to hell.

Numerous rules are laid down about the things that can be the subject of gifts (i. e. about deya). Whatever is in this world a most desirable thing and what one prizes most in one's house may be given to a man endowed with good qualities by a donor who desires inexhaustible (merit) from it—Anusāsana parva 59. 7.¹⁹⁹⁸ According to Devala, that is a proper subject for a gift, which has been acquired by the donor himself without causing pain or loss to another or without worry or trouble to himself, whether it be small or valuable (or much).¹⁹⁹⁹ It is not the extent of the gift that causes greater or lesser merit. Merit (punya) of gifts depends upon the mental attitude, the capacity of the giver and the way in which the donor acquired his wealth. If a man²⁰⁰⁰ were to give even the whole earth acquired by unjust means, or if he makes a gift without śraddhā (as defined) or to an unworthy person he would secure no prosperity (religious merit) thereby. On the other hand by making a gift of even a handful of vegetables with a heart full of śraddhā and to a very worthy person, he may secure all prosperity. If one possessing a thousand makes a gift of 100 or one having ten makes a gift of one and another gives only water according to his ability, they all reap an equal reward.

Among deya things, some are the best, some middling, some inferior. Food,²⁰⁰¹ curds, honey, protection, cow, land, gold, horse and elephant—gifts of these nine are said to be the best; learning, house for shelter, domestic paraphernalia (like cots), medicine—these four are said to be middling; shoes, swings, carts, umbrellas, vessels, seats, lamps, wood, fruits and whatever is old and worn out and all other unspecified objects are inferior. Yāj. (I. 210–211) appears to have this difference in view when he says that a man, making a gift of land (capable of yielding a crop or fruits), lamp, wood, garment, water (water-reservoir), sesame, ghee, house for travellers, money for settling a person as a married man (or bringing about his marriage by finding a girl for him), gold, draught ox, is honoured in the heavenly world, while one who makes a gift of a house, corn (of various kinds), protection from danger, shoes, umbrella, flowers, unguents, conveyance (chariot &c.), tree, a desired thing, a cot secures endless happiness. Gifts of three things are said to be superior to the gift of anything else and are styled ²⁰⁰² atidāna, viz. of cows, land and Sarasvatī (vidyā) according to Vas. Dh. S. 29. 19 and Brhaspati 18. Vas. Dh. S. 29. 19, Manu 4. 233, Atri, 340, Yāj. I. 212 say that the gift of vidyā is the best of all gifts such as those of water, food, cows, land, garments, sesame, gold and clarified butter. On the other hand Anuśāsana-parva (62. 2) and the Viṣṇudharmottara (quoted by Aparārka p. 369) say that the gift of land surpasses all other gifts. The Viṣṇu Dh. S. 92. 1 says that the gift of protection from danger (abhaya-dāna) is the highest. The gifts of certain objects were called mahādānas. These and a few other dānas will be dealt with in some detail later on.

Dānas are divided into nitya ²⁰⁰³ (called ājasrika by Devala), naimittika and kāmya. Whatever is given everyday (such as food after Vaiśvadeva &c.) is nitya, what is given at certain specified times (such as on eclipses) or on account of doing certain acts (such as penance for lapses) is called naimittika; what is given through the desire of securing progeny, victory, prosperity, heaven or a wife is called kāmya (as it springs from a desire). Dedication of a garden or of a well &c. is called dhruvadāna (permanent gift) by Devala; while the Kūrma-purāṇa adds to the well-known three a fourth division called vimala (pure) defined by it as 'what is given to those who know brahma for securing the grace of God with a mind full of devotion.' Vas. Dh. S. 29. 1-15, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 92 and Manu IV. 229-232 (which are repeated in Vṛddha-Gautama, chap. XI. p. 586) and many of the purāṇas are eloquent over what rewards a man reaps by making gifts of water, food, sesame &c. The Bhagavad-gītā (17. 20-22) divides dānas into sātṭvika, rājasa and tāmasa and defines them as follows: When a gift is made because one feels it one's duty to make it and at a proper time and place and to a worthy person who will not return it, it is called sātṭvika; when it is made with an expectation of the donee doing a good turn in return or with a view to securing some reward therefrom and is given grudgingly, it is rājasa; when a gift is made at an improper time or place and to an unworthy person and without showing honour to the recipient and with disrespect (or contempt), it is declared to be tāmasa.

Many texts emphasize a rule similar to that in the Bible 'But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth, that thine alms may be in secret'-Matthew VI. 3-4. Yogi-Yājñavalkya says²⁰⁰⁴ that the reward of making gifts secretly, possessing knowledge without being puffed up and engaging in japa without others seeing it is infinite. Devala says 'sacrifice, gift and study lose their power and perish by being declared to others, by boasting about them or by repenting of having done them. Therefore one should not without good reason (such as protecting a gift &c.) proclaim one's meritorious act.'

Certain things when offered voluntarily by a person with his own hand must be accepted and not spurned even by one who does not ordinarily accept gifts. Manu IV. 247-250, Yāj. I. 214-215, Āp. Dh. S. I. 6. 19. 13-14, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 57. 11 declare that kuśas, vegetables (raw), milk, fish, fragrant substances, flowers, curds, clay, flesh, a bedstead, a seat, fried barley, water, precious stones, fuel-sticks, fruits and roots, honey, food offered without being asked (except of the impotent, of prostitutes and of patita) must not be spurned, but must be accepted.

Certain objects could not be donated either because one had no ownership over them or because the sages forbade such gifts. Jaimini (VI. 7. 1-7) establishes several propositions, viz. that one can make a gift only of what one owns, that one cannot make a gift of one's relatives (parents, sons and others) in the Viśvajit, that a sovereign cannot make a gift of the whole of his kingdom, that horses cannot be gifted in that sacrifice as śruti forbids such a gift in that sacrifice, that a śūdra who serves the sacrificer merely as a duty cannot be given away and that whatever is of the full ownership of a person at the time of giving the dakṣiṇā can alone be gifted in the Viśvajit sacrifice. Nārada²⁰⁰⁵ (dattāpradānika 4-5) forbids eight kinds of gifts viz. of what is handed over to a creditor by a debtor for delivery to a third person, what is borrowed for use (such as an ornament on a festive occasion), a pledge, property jointly owned with others, a deposit, son and wife, one's entire property when one has children, what has been already promised to another man. Dakṣa III. 19-20 enumerates nine things as not proper subjects of gifts (adding to Nārada's list 'a friend's wealth and gift through fear' and omitting 'what is already promised to another'). Yāj. II. 175 is of similar import. Aparārka p. 779 quotes verses of Bṛhaspati and Kātyāyana to the same effect. Vide above (pp. 507-508) as to a man's power over his children.

The texts took care to set limits to a man's generosity. After emphasizing in very eloquent language the obligation to share one's possessions, however meagre, with others, Veda-Vyāsa²⁰⁰⁶ (IV. 30-31) inculcates the doctrine that charity begins at home. Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 10-12, Baud. Dh. S. II. 3. 19 ordain that one should not stint one's dependents (whom one is bound to maintain), one's servants and slaves for distributing food to guests and others. Yāj. II. 175 prescribes that one should make gifts in such a way as not to cause detriment to one's family. Bṛhaspati²⁰⁰⁷ explains this by saying that one may give away wealth that is over and above what is required for maintaining one's family and for clothing and that the charity of one who disregards this rule is something that is sweet like honey at first but like poison in its effect. In this Bṛhaspati only echoes what Manu says (XI. 9-10) 'the charity of him who has wealth enough to make gifts to strangers, when his own people live a life of misery, is only a false imitation of dharma (and not the true dharma), it is at first like honey but will taste like poison (later). Whatever a man does for his welfare in the next world by stinting those whom he is bound to maintain results in unhappiness to him while living and also after death'. The Anuśāsana parva (37. 2-3) declares that if one makes a gift stinting one's servants, he makes himself a sinner, even though one may say that one would give whatever any one begs for (compare Luke VI. 30 'give to every man that asketh of thee'). Hemādri quotes²⁰⁰⁸ Śivadharmā to the effect that a man should set apart three parts out of five from his acquisitions for himself and his family and two parts for dharma, as life is evanescent.

Certain things were forbidden to be accepted as gifts. The gift of animals with two rows of teeth was forbidden by śruti (vide Śābara on Jaimini VI. 7. 4 quoted above). Vas. Dh. S. 13. 55 declares that a brāhmaṇa should not accept the gift of weapons, poisonous substances and spirituous liquor. Manu IV. 188 states that a brāhmaṇa who is not learned should not accept the gift of gold, land, horses, cow, food, garment, sesame, clarified butter; but if he accepts he is reduced to ashes (i. e. perishes) like wood. Hemādri (Dāna p. 57) quotes the Brahmapurāṇa that a brāhmaṇa should not accept the gifts of ewes, horses, precious stones, an elephant, sesame and iron, and that one who accepts a gift of antelope skin or sesame would not be born again as a male and that if a person accepts the bedstead, ornaments and the clothes of one who is dead he would go to hell.

As to the proper times for gifts, several rules are laid down. Apart from the daily duty to make gifts (Yāj. I. 203) gifts had to be made on special occasions and if so made were more meritorious than the gifts made daily. Laghu-Śātātapa (145-153) says ²⁰⁰⁹ that a gift must be made on the first day of each ayana (the sun's passage to the north or south), at the beginning of Śadasīti and while an eclipse of the sun or moon is in progress and that the rewards of the gifts made on these occasions are inexhaustible. Vanaparva 200. 125 is to the same effect. A gift made on Amāvāsyā imparts rewards a hundred times (of the reward of making it on any ordinary day), a thousand times when made on the suppression of a tithi, a hundred thousand times when made on the equinoctial day and a gift brings endless rewards when made on Vyatīpāta. Samvarta (208-209) says that gifts made on the ayana day, equinoctial day, vyatīpāta, the suppression of a tithi and on the eclipses of the sun and moon, on new moon day, 12th day, saṁkrānti (sun's passage into a zodiacal sign) becomes inexhaustible and these tithis are highly commended and so also Sunday for a bath, japa, homa, dinner to brāhmaṇas, fast and gifts.²⁰¹⁰ Śātātapa (146) states that 16 ghaṭikās before and also after the moment when the sun enters a new zodiacal sign is the holy time for gifts, while others give 30 ghaṭikās (before and after) for Karkāṭaka (Cancer saṁkrānti), 20 for Makara (Capricorn) and 105 for Tūlā (Balance) and Meṣa (Aries). Viśvarūpa on Yāj. I. 214-217 states that the times specified as the proper occasions for śrāddha are all of them the most appropriate times for making gifts. Vide Prajāpati 25 and 28 and Atri 327 for similar rules. Saṅkha says that if amāvāsyā falls on Monday, the 7th tithi on Sunday, 4th on Tuesday, 8th on Wednesday—these four are like eclipses and so gifts made on these days yield infinite rewards (quoted by Hemādri, dānakhaṇḍa p. 66). The Viṣṇu Dh. S. chap. 89 deals with the rewards of the gifts of various articles made on the full moon days of the twelve months of the year. Anuśāsana chap. 64 speaks of dānas on the 27 nakṣatras from kṛttikā.

When three tithis occur on the same day it is called दिनक्षय as the middle one is suppressed in the calendars (vide अपरार्क p. 292); शतमिन्दु is quoted as याज्ञ. by हेमाद्रि (दान p. 69). व्यतीपात is one of the 27 योगs beginning with विष्कम्भ and is defined as अवगन्धिवधनिष्ठार्द्रानामदैवतमस्तके । यद्यमा रविवारेण व्यतीपातः स उच्यते ॥ (बृहन्मनु according to अपरार्क p. 426)—when the moon is in the constellations of Śravaṇa, Āśvinī, Dhaniṣṭhā, Ārdrā, Āśleṣā (first quarter) and amāvāsyā falls on Sunday it is Vyatīpāta. Even Bṛha in the Harṣacarita IV states that Harṣa was born on a day that was free from all inauspicious conjunctions such as Vyatīpāta.

The general rule was that gifts were not to be made at night. But there are several exceptions. Atri 327 states that a gift even at night is commended on the occasions of eclipses, marriages, saṁkrāntis and the birth of a child. Devala²⁰¹¹ quoted in Par. M. I. part I, p. 194 has a similar verse and the Par. M. adds that only on the Cancer and Capricorn saṁkrāntis are gifts allowed to be made at night.

The above rules about the special occasions for gifts are amply borne out by epigraphic evidence. A few examples may be cited. A very large number of grants on copper and stone relate to gifts of lands and villages at the time of solar eclipses. For example, vide Tiwarkhed plate of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Nannarāja dated śake 553 (653 ?) in E. I. vol. XI. p. 279, I. A. vol. VI, p. 73 (in śake 534 i. e. 613 A. D.), the grant of 30 nivartanas of land purchased for 30 gadyānakas of gold on a total eclipse of the sun in 754 A. D. in the time of Cālukya Kirtivarman II (E. I. vol. III. p. 6), E. I. vol. III. p. 193 (of śake 716), E. I. vol. IX, p. 100 (in 660 A. D.). Grants on the occasion of a lunar eclipse are found in J. B. B. R. A. S. vol. 20, p. 135 (Navsari plates of Rāṣṭrakūṭa Mahāsāmanatādhipati Karkarāja issued in śake 738, i. e. 817 A. D.), in E. I. vol. Grants on ayana days may be seen in I. A. vol. 12, p. 193 (Haddāla plates of the Cāpa Mahāsāmantādhipati Dharanī-varāha issued in śake 836), the Sañjan grant of Amoghavarṣa dated śake 793 (Uttarāyana-Mahāparvaṇi). Grants on Saṁkrāntis are found in E. I. vol. VIII. p. 182 (Dhulia plate of Karkarāja dated śake 701), E. I. vol. XII. p. 142 (in 1087 A. D.), E. I. vol. VIII. p. 159 (in saṁvat 1207). It may be noted that not only on the sun's passage in a rāśi, but even on Jupiter's passage in a rāśi (Taurus in this case) a grant was made as seen in Lucknow Museum plate of Kirtipāla (E. I. vol. VII, p. 93 in saṁvat 1167 i. e. 1111 A. D.). A village was

I. vol. 14, p. 198 (when 32 villages were granted to 500 brāhmaṇas in saṁvat 1156) and E. I. vol. VII. p. 98 (Lar plates of Govindacandra of Kanoj in saṁvat 1202). For a grant made on Mahākārtikī (the full moon day of Kārtika) vide E. I. vol. X, p. 75 (which is a grant to several brāhmaṇas for enabling them to offer bali, caru, vaiśvadeva, agnihotra and the five mahāyajñas, in Kalacuri saṁvat 292 i. e. about 540 A. D.).

The places (deśa) where gifts are to be made are also specified in the smṛtis, purāṇas and digests. Gifts²⁰¹² made in the house yield ten times as much merit (as when made elsewhere), a hundred times when made in a cowpen, a thousand times when made in sacred places (tīrthas) and an infinite number of times when made near an image (or liṅga) of Śiva. The Skandapurāṇa²⁰¹³ quoted by Hemādri (dāna p. 83) states that Benares, Kurukṣetra, Prayāga, Puṣkara (Ajmer), the banks of the Ganges and of the ocean, Naimiṣa forest, Amara-kaṇṭaka, Śrīparvata, Mahākālā (at Ujjayini), Gokarna, Veda-parvata—these and the like are declared to be holy places resorted to by gods and siddhas; all mountains, all rivers and the ocean are holy; the habitations of cows, siddhas and sages are also holy; whatever is donated in these sacred places confers infinite reward.

When making a gift of anything one has to pour water on the hand of the donee. Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 9-10²⁰¹⁴ states that all gifts are to be made with water except in the case of vedic sacrifices where they are to be made as directed by the vedic texts. Gautama V. 16 says the same. In the case of all gifts they are to be accompanied by a separate dakṣiṇā. The Agnipurāṇa²⁰¹⁵ 211. 31 makes an exception in the case of gifts of gold, silver, copper, husked rice, corn, daily śrāddha and daily devapūjā (which may be without dakṣiṇā). That dakṣiṇā should consist pre-eminently of gold, but if gold itself is the article donated then the dakṣiṇā may be of silver. In the case of very costly gifts like tulāpuruṣa, the dakṣiṇā may be one hundred or fifty or 25 or ten niṣkas or one-tenth of the price of the thing gifted or according to ability.

Hemādri (Dāna pp. 96-97) and Dānamayūkha (pp. 11-12) quote verses from the Viṣṇudharmottara stating the presiding deities of the several articles that are donated (such as Agni of gold, Prajāpati of dāsas, Rudra of cows &c.) and adds that wherever no presiding deity is specifically named Viṣṇu is the presiding deity. Those very verses are quoted as from the Kapilapañcārātra in the Dānakriyākaumudī (p. 5). The Agnipurāṇa (209. 40-48) has similar verses. This notion is derived from the Brāhmaṇas and Śrautasūtras which speak of Rudra as the presiding deity of the gifts of cows, Soma of garments, Prajāpati of human beings and so on (vide Tai. Br. II. 2. 5, Āp. Śr. 14. 11. 3).

The general procedure of making gifts may be stated here once for all. The donor and the donee should have taken their bath and should wear two white garments each, the donor should wear a pavitra, perform ācamana, should face the east, should wear the sacred thread in the upavita form, be seated on a pure seat (of kuśa &c.) and seat the donee on a seat and make him face the north, then the donor should utter the name of the subject of gift, its presiding deity and the purpose for which he makes the gift, and say 'I make a gift to you of such and such an article,' pour water on the donee's hand, and when the donee says 'give' the donor should sprinkle water on the subject of gift and place it into the hand of the donee, who utters the syllable 'om' and says 'svasti'. Then dakṣiṇā is given to the donee. The detailed formula is set out below.²⁰¹⁶ Necessary changes have to be made as to the statement of the occasion, the receipt of the subject of gift &c. (if it is land or a house, it cannot be received in the hand; the donee simply walks round it or on it or enters it).

The formula may be described as follows: अद्य अमुके मासि अमुके पक्षे अमुकतिथौ अमुकराशिर्ये भास्करे भारतवर्षाख्यभूपदेशे सूर्यग्रहणादौ अमुकगोत्रः अमुकशर्मा अमुककामः अमुकगोत्राय अमुकप्रवराय अमुकशर्मणे ब्राह्मणाय इदममुकद्रव्यं अमुकदैवतं तुभ्यमहं संपददे इति द्विजकरमध्ये सकुशं जलं दद्यात् । ग्रहीता करमध्येन गृहीत्वा स्वस्तीति वदेत् । अथेत्यादि० अमुककामनया कृतस्य अमुकदानकर्मणः प्रतिष्ठार्थं दक्षिणां अमुकगोत्राय अमुकशर्मणे ब्राह्मणाय तुभ्यमहं संपददे न मम इति दक्षिणां दद्यात् । Vide अग्निपुराण 209, हेमाद्रि (दानखण्ड) pp. 506-7 and दानक्रियाकौस्तुभे pp. 14 ff. for the procedure. The अग्निपुराण 209. 59-61 mentions the following purposes for which gifts are usually made 'पुत्रपौत्रगृहेश्वर्यपत्नीधर्मार्थसद्गुणाः । कीर्तिविद्यामहाकाम-सौभाग्यारोग्यवृद्धये । सर्वपापोपशान्त्यर्थं स्वर्गार्थं भुक्तिमुक्तये । एतत्तुभ्य संपददे प्रीयतां मे हरिः शिवः ॥

Yāj. I. 133 prescribes that the king should daily make gifts to brāhmanas learned in the Veda, of milch cows, gold, land, houses and the requisites of marriage (i. e. maidens, expenses of marriage &c.). This was nothing new that was prescribed by Yāj. It has been followed for ages by the kings. The Vanaparva²⁰¹⁷ 186. 15 states that he who makes a gift of a maiden in the brāhma form or of land enjoys bliss in the world of Indra. We find from the inscriptions of Uṣavadāta²⁰¹⁸ (probably in the 1st century A. D.), son-in-law of Nahapāna, at Karle and Nasik that he gave 3 lakhs of cows, 16 villages to gods and brāhmanas, fed one lakh of brāhmanas every year, got eight brāhmanas married at his own expense at Prabhāsa (in Kathiawar), built flights of steps on the river Bārnāsā, constructed quadrangles, houses and halting places (pratiśraya) at Bharukaccha (modern Broach), Daśapura (in Malwa), Govardhana (Nasik) and Śorpāraga (modern Sopara), constructed wells and tanks; kept free ferry boats over the rivers Ibā, Pārādā, Damaṇā, Tāpī, Karabeṇā, Dāhanukā (all between Thana and Surat); established meeting halls and shelters for gratuitous distribution of water; conferred 32000 cocoanut trees in Nanangola (modern Nargol) on the assembly of brāhmanas of the Caraka Śākhā at Rāmatīrtha in Śorpāraga and three other places. He adds that he purchased from a brāhmaṇa for 4000 kārṣāpanas a field that originally belonged to the brāhmaṇa's father and made a grant of it for supplying food to the assembly of monks coming from all quarters that dwelt in the cave constructed by him. This is certainly a formidable list of benefactions for one ruler.

As to spending money for the marriages of brāhmaṇas and settling them as householders, a few words may be said here. Dakṣa²⁰¹⁹ III. 32-33 says 'The merit of him, that establishes a brāhmaṇa who is without father or mother by performing his saṃskāras and by getting him married, is beyond reckoning'. A man does not secure that bliss by observance of agnihotra or the performance of Agniṣṭoma, which he secures by establishing a brāhmaṇa in life'. Aparārka (p. 377) quotes a long passage from the Kālikāpurāṇa about Naiveśika dāna. Its purport is briefly as follows: 'The donor should choose eleven brāhmaṇas of śrotriya families (devoted to the study of the Veda) and of good character and conduct, should build eleven houses for them, should get them married at his expense, should furnish the houses with stores of corn, with cattle and maid servants, beds, seats, vessels of clay and copper and other utensils for taking food and with garments; and having thus furnished the houses, should settle the eleven brāhmaṇas in the eleven houses and for their maintenance bestow upon each one hundred nivartanas of land or a hamlet, or half a village; he should induce the brāhmaṇas to be agnihotrits. By so doing he secures all the merit that is secured by the performance of sacrifices, vratas, various dānas or pilgrimages to sacred places and enjoys in heaven all pleasures. A man who is unable to do as much as above may settle only one brāhmaṇa according to his means and he secures the same rewards'. In the Epigraphic records there are numerous instances of kings spending for the marriages of brāhmaṇas. For example, the Apsad Inscription of Ādityasena (vide Gupta Inscriptions No. 42, p. 203) speaks of gifts of agrahāras on the marriages of one hundred brāhmaṇa girls to brāhmaṇas. A copper-plate grant of the Śilāhāra prince Gaṇḍarāditya speaks of the king having got 16 brāhmaṇas married at his expense and of having created endowments of three nivartanas for each for their maintenance at the time of their marriages (vide J. B. B. R. A. S. vol. 13, p. 1, dated 1032 śaka). As the brāhmaṇas were supposed to lead a life of comparative poverty, plain living and high thinking and as they were the inheritors, preservers and transmitters of the sacred literature of the country, as they also engaged in teaching without stipulating for any fee, the State that had in those days no settled educational system as in modern times deemed it its duty to provide the resources which would enable the brāhmaṇas to carry on their self-imposed task. Yāj. II. 185 declares that the king should set apart in his capital a place for the habitation of brāhmaṇas learned in the Veda, should establish them there, should provide means of maintenance for them and then say to them 'follow your duties' (svadharma). Aparārka quotes (p. 792) thereon from Bṛhaspati several verses that add 'the king should bestow on the brāhmaṇas who are learned and kindle the sacred fires (agnihotrits) houses and lands under his own edicts from which no taxes in the present or future would be levied. The brāhmaṇas so settled should perform for the citizens their religious rites whether daily or to be performed on occasions or kāmya or for averting evil omens or for the sake of prosperity and should give decisions in the cases of doubts. They should make rules and conventions for the whole village or for corporations and guilds and for religious purposes. Those rules must be observed and when there is trouble caused by rogues and thieves all must join to put it down and that object must not be left to one person.'²⁰²⁰ These prescriptions indicate what benefit was expected of the marriages and settlement of learned brāhmaṇas. Kauṭ. II. 1 also prescribes that lands free from taxes and fines should be settled upon purohitas, śrotriyas &c. There is nothing peculiar to India or to the caste system in this. Among the numerous charitable purposes mentioned in the preamble to the Statute of Elizabeth (43 Eliz. chap. 4) which (preamble) is even now applicable in England 'the marriage of poor maids' is one.

The gift of land has been eulogized as the most meritorious of all gifts from ancient times. Vas. Dh. S. 29. 16 quotes a verse which is found also in Bṛhaspati 7, Viṣṇudharmottara and Matsyapurāṇa (quoted by Aparārka pp. 369, 370), the Mahābhārata (Anusāsana 62. 19) and which says 'whatever²⁰²¹ sin a man may commit when in straitened circumstances, he is purified therefrom by making a gift of only as much land as is equal to gocarma'. Aparārka (pp. 368, 370) quotes many verses from the Vispudharmottara, the Ādityapurāṇa, the Matsyapurāṇa on the high rewards reaped by the gift of land. The Vanaparva²⁰²² (93. 78-79) declares 'whatever sins a king is guilty of in bringing the earth under his control, all those he gets rid of by performing sacrifices with munificent gifts; by bestowing on brāhmaṇas lands and cows in thousands, the king becomes free from all sins as the moon is freed from darkness' (Rāhu). Anusāsana 59. 5 voices the popular sentiment that 'gifts of gold, cows and land save even the wicked'.

2021. यत्किञ्चित्कुरुते पापं पुरुषो वृत्तिकर्तितः । अपि गोचर्ममात्रेण भूमिदानेन क्षुध्यति ॥ वसिष्ठ 29. 16, अनुशासन 62. 19, बृह. 7, भविष्यपुराण 4. 164. 18. The mita. on ya. I. 210 quotes it as Manu's and reads the 2nd पाद as 'ज्ञानतोऽपि वा'. Brhaspati defines gocarma as equal to ten nivartanas and a nivartana is defined by him as land that is 30 rods (square) with a rod of ten cubits. दशहस्तेन दण्डेन त्रिंशद्दण्डैर्निवर्तनम् । दश तान्येव विस्तारो गोचर्मतन्महःफलम् ॥ बृह. 8. The *mita*śara on ya. I. 210 quotes बृह. as सप्तहस्तेन...दश तान्येव गोचर्मं दद्यात् स्वर्गे महीयते ।. ज्ञातातप I. 17 also reads 'दशहस्तेन &c'. Br. 9 gives another definition of gocarma 'that extent of land which a thousand cows with their calves and a bull occupy without being compelled to stand doing nothing is called gocarma' सवृषं गोसहस्रं तु यत्र तिष्ठत्यतन्द्रितम् । बालवत्सप्रसूतानां तद्गोचर्म इति स्मृतम् ॥ पराशर XII. 49 says that that land which a hundred cows with one bull occupy without being closely packed together is gocarma. Viṣṇu Dh. S. 5. 181 defines gocarma differently as 'that much land of whatever extent the crops raised on which will maintain one man for a year'. Vide Aparārka p. 1225 and Hemādri (Vratakhanda, part 1 pp. 52-53) for several definitions of gocarma. The word nivartana is very ancient. Kauṭ. (II. chap. 20) says that daṇḍa is equal to four aratnis, ten daṇḍas are equal to one rajju and 3 rajjus are equal to a nivartana (so that a nivartana is 30 daṇḍas). The Band. Dh. S. (III. 2. 2-4) speaks of a brāhmaṇa who maintains himself by cultivating six nivartanas of land. A field of 100 nivartanas is mentioned in Nasik Inscription No 5 (E. I. vol. VIII p. 73). The word nivartana occurs also in a grant of the Pallava king Śivaskandavarman (E. I. vol. I p. 6). Vide E. I. vol. XI p. 280 for a note on nicartana.

As gifts of land were so highly valued, the smṛtis contain numerous rules about them. Yāj. (I. 318-320)²⁰²³ prescribes the following rules: 'when a king makes a gift of land or bestows a nibandha he should execute a writing (about the gift) for the information of future good kings. He (the king) should issue a permanent edict bearing his signature and the date on a piece of

I. 318-320. विश्वरूप on या. I. 318-320 reads दानाच्छेदोपवर्णनम् and remarks 'एतद् दानफलम्, एतदाच्छेदनफलं, षड्विं वर्ष...नरके वसेत् इत्यादि.' For the verse षड्विं... वसेत् vide Appendix. Nibandha is a fixed payment to be made every year or month or on certain occasions to a person or temple or the like, as for example of so many betel leaves or betelnuts out of each load of betel leaves or nuts. It is translated rather inaccurately as corrody by Colebrooke and others. Viśvarūpa on Yāj. II. 124 explains it as 'a permanent endowment' (akṣayanidhi); the Mit. explains 'एकस्य भाण्डभरकस्येयन्तो रूपकाः एकस्य पर्णभरकस्येयन्ति पर्णानि'. The Mit. explains 'दानच्छेदोपवर्णनम्' differently as 'दीयते इति दानं क्षेत्रादि तस्य च्छेदः...नद्यावादी (-घातो ?) निवर्तनं तत्परिमाणं च तस्योपवर्णनम्'; अपरार्क p. 579 'अस्मिन् ग्रामे प्रतिक्षेत्रं क्षेत्रस्वामि-नैतद्धनमस्मै प्रयच्छं प्रतिमासं वा देयम्'. This passage of Yāj. is cited in The Collector of Thanu v. Har 6 Bom. 546 (F. B.) at pp. 557-558 and the definition of nibandha from the Vyavahāramayūkha in Ghelabhai v. Hargovan 36 Bom. 94 at p. 101. One of the verses of बृहस्पति is अनाच्छेद्य-मनहार्यं सर्वभाष्यनिवर्जितम् । चन्द्रार्कसमकालीनं पुत्रपौत्राचव्यागतम् ॥ (अपरार्क p. 579). For examples of the grants of nibandhas, vide E. I. vol. XI p. 295 at p. 309 where numerous dues on articles are given to a temple by the Paramāra king Cāmundaśāja (on one bhāraka of candied sugar and jaggery one varṇakā and on loads of cotton thread dyed with mañjishṭhā one rupee, one cocoanut on a load of cocoanuts, one betel-nut from one thousand nuts, one palikā on each jar of ghee or oil), E. I. vol. XI at p. 331 (Inscription at Yewur dated 1105 A. D. as to a gift of nibandha for the benefit of a temple of Keśava 'on sales of areca nuts an impost of five areca nuts on each gold piece and 25 leaves on each load of betel leaves'), E. I. vol. XI p. 26 at p. 30 the grant of one hāra of barley corn for each water wheel for the worship of a Jain saint in saṃvat 1167), E. I. vol. XI. p. 35 (grant in saṃ. 1189 for two palikās of oil from each oil-mill payable to the shrine of a Jain saint), E. I. vol. XI. p. 37. In the Mathurā Brāhmī Inscription of the 28th year of the reign of the Śāka king Devaputra Huiṣika (about the beginning of the 2nd century A. D.) a permanent endowment was called 'akṣayanīvi (E. I. vol. 21 p. 55 at p. 60). So also the same word is used in the Nālandā stone Inscription of the time of Yaśovarmadova with regard to a Buddhist temple (E. I. vol. 20 p. 37 at p. 39). Vide also E. I. vol. 15 p. 15 and E. I. vol. 17 p. 345 at p. 348. The Gupta Inscription No. 62 (p. 261) records the gift of twelve golden dināras made as an akṣayanīvi (a permanent endowment) from the interest of which one bhikṣu was to be fed every day.

cloth or on a copper-plate marked at the top with his seal and write down thereon the names of his ancestors and of himself, the extent (or measurements) of what is gifted and set out the passages (from smṛtis) that condemn the resumption of gifts'. Viśvarūpa the oldest extant commentator of Yāj. states that the edict or order should also bear the names or signatures of the royal officers such as ājñā, dūtaka, the name of the place where the king's army is encamped &c. and that the names of women (such as the queen mother or queen) should be mentioned, and that verses stating the result of resuming gifts made by former kings should find place in the edict. Aparārka (pp. 579-580) quotes long extracts from Bṛhaspati and Vyāsa on the same subject. Bṛhaspati says that a royal edict recording a gift of land should be executed on a piece of cloth or on copper-plate, should state the place (of issue) and (the names of) the king's ancestors, that it should be stated to last till the sun and moon endure, that it was not to be resumed or taken back and was to be free from all future taxes and that it was to go on to the sons and grandsons from generation to generation (of the donee), it should state that heaven would be the reward of the donor and those that continued the gift, that the result of the resumption of the gift would be hell for 60,000 years to the resumer and it should bear the king's seal, the year, the month, the fortnight and day and should bear the signature of the superintendents (royal officers). Vyāsa after stating these requisites adds that the edict should be addressed to brāhmaṇas and other respectable people, to the king's officers, to all householders and to all others including medas and cāṇḍalas, that it should state that the gift is made for securing merit for one's parents and one's self.

The thousands of copper-plate grants and inscriptions on stone published so far show that these directions contained in Yāj., Bṛ. and Vyāsa have been followed to the letter from at least the 5th century onwards. In the earliest inscriptions verses about the merit of gifts and the sin of resumption do not occur. For example, in Gupta Inscription No. 8 (pp. 36 ff) dated 88 of the Gupta Era (i. e. 407-8 A. D.) of Chandragupta II the only words (in prose) are ' whoever would cut off this charitable gift would be guilty of the five great sins ' ; similarly in the Gupta Inscription No. 5 (p. 32) dated Gupta era 93 the words are ' whoever would destroy this charity now set on foot would be guilty of the murder of brāhmaṇas and cows and of the five sins that bring immediate punishment'. In the Inscriptions of the early Pallava king Sivaskandavarman also (E. I. vol. I p. 7) such verses are not found. In the copper-plate grant of Skanda-gupta (dated 146 Gupta year i. e. 465-66 A. D., Gupta Inscriptions²⁰²⁴ No. 16, p. 68) there is a verse on the point, but it is not one of those that are found in most inscriptions.

In the earliest records verses lauding gifts and deprecating their resumption are few (one or two) but in later records their number increases. For example, in the copperplate of Maitraka Vyāghrasena (E. I. vol. XI, p. 221) there are only two verses and in the plates of Dhruvasena dated Gupta-Valabhi saṃvat 206 and 210 respectively there are only two and three verses (E. I. vol. XI, pp. 107, 111), while there are 16 verses in an inscription of Yaśahkarnadeva dated in Kalacuri saṃvat 823 (E. I. vol. XII p. 205) and 15 verses in the copperplate grant of Cāhamāna Ratnapāla dated in Vikrama saṃvat 1176 (E. I. vol. XI, pp. 312-313). In most of the inscriptions containing these laudatory and imprecatory verses, they are cited as from Vyāsa or Manu or from smṛti in general. In the Appendix²⁰²⁵ a list of about forty such verses is given and in the footnotes it is pointed out wherever possible from what smṛti or other source they are taken and a reference is made to some of the earliest inscriptions and grants where they occur. The references will show that these verses occur in inscriptions from all parts of India. Two of the most usual verses are: 'the earth was donated by many such kings as Sagara and others; whatever king is lord of the earth at any particular time enjoys the reward (merit) of the gift of that land. The donor of land enjoys bliss in heaven for sixty thousand years and he who

In the Sanjan plates of Amoghavarṣa I (E. He deals with only seven verses and refers only to the Purāṇas and the Mahābhārata. In my notes (in the appendix) an attempt has been made to trace some of them to the smṛtis. It is quite possible to trace more of these verses in the smṛtis if a more thorough search were made than I could find time to make.

destroys (or resumes) it or who abets the destruction dwells in hell for the same period.' In spite of such imprecations it appears that lands donated by former kings were sometimes confiscated by their successors. For example, in an inscription of Indrarāja III dated śake 836 it is stated that the king restored four hundred villages that had been confiscated by former kings (E. I. vol. IX, p. 24 at p. 33 'pūrvaprthvipāla-viluptāni'); in the Talmanchi plates of Cālukya Vikramāditya I (dated 660 A. D.) there is a recital that 'he re-established the endowments of temples and brāhmanas that had been lost in the three kingdoms' (E. I. vol. IX, p. 100). The Rājataranginī (V. 166-170) states that king Śaṃkaravarman (in the first half of the 10th century), the son of Avantivarman, deprived temples of all their properties for replenishing his treasury emptied by his vices.²⁰²⁶ Parāśara (XII. 51) says that the sin of resuming land already donated cannot be expiated even by performing a hundred Vājapeya sacrifices or by the gift of millions of cows. In the Khoh plates of Parivrājaka Mahārāja Saṃkṣobha (Gupta Inscriptions No. 25 p. 115) dated Gupta saṃvat 209 (528-529 A. D.) there is a peculiar curse pronounced on him who would interfere with his gift 'him who would interfere with this gift I shall, though functioning in another body (on account of rebirth), consume (burn) with terrible curses (or imprecatory thoughts)'. Vide also Gupta Ins. No. 23 p. 107 of G. S. 191. When a grant of a village or villages was made kings excepted therefrom grants already made in favour of shrines of gods and brāhmanas. For example, in the Pikira Grant of Siṃhavarman (E. I. VIII. p. 162) it is stated 'this village is granted by us as a gift to brāhmanas excepting the cultivated lands given as endowment to gods' (devabhogaḥalavarjam). In E. I. vol. X. p. 88 (of 697 śake) the grant excludes 'the portion already bestowed on gods and brāhmanas' (pūrvapratta-deva-brahma-dāya-rahitaḥ). The grant of the village by the Candella king Paramardideva in saṃ. 1236 expressly excludes five balas (land measure) of land granted to Buddha (i. e. to a temple of Buddha then existing). Vide E. I. XX, at p. 129. This shows that a Hindu king respected an endowment already made to a shrine of Buddha or to a monastery of Buddhists (devaśrī-buddha-satka-pañcahalam

I. 14, p. 194 (saṃ. 1150); E. I. vol. I, p. 85 at p. 88 (G. S. 334). There are many instances where kings making grants of a field say that they purchased it from the owner and then bestowed it. For example, in E. I. vol. 17 p. 345 there is a grant by Kumāragupta (G. S. 193) of this character and see p. 856 above where such a grant is referred to. Even in the most ancient grants what is granted is set out with great particularity. A few examples will show this. In the Nasik Inscription No. 3 of Vāsīthiputa²⁰²⁷ Siri-Puṣumāyi (E. I. vol. 8 p. 65) the grant is in these words 'And to this village of Sāmalipada (Sāmalipadra) we grant the immunity belonging to monk's land, making it not to be entered by royal officers, not to be touched (by any of them), not to be dug for salt, not to be interfered with by the district police, (in short) to enjoy all kinds of immunities'. So also the Mayidavolu plates²⁰²⁸ of the Pallava Śivaskandavarman state (E. I. vol. VI, p. 87) 'to this village of Viripara we grant all the immunities enjoyed by the brahmadeyas. Let it be free from digging for salt, free from being interfered with by the district police (or officers), free from supply of bullocks in succession, free from the entrance of soldiers, free from supply of boiled rice, water pots, cots and lodgings, with these and all other immunities prescribed (by rules) regarding all brahmadeyas, we have caused it to be exempted'. In the Gupta Inscriptions No. 55, p. 235 (the Chammak copperplate of Pravarasena II)²⁰²⁹ there are numerous words about the various taxes and exactions remitted which it is difficult to understand at this distance of time, but some of which may be stated 'it was to be free from taxes, not to be entered by the regular soldiers, nor by cāṭas, it was to be entirely free from all obligations of forced labour, it was to carry with it hidden treasure and all deposits.'

It is often stated in the grants that lands or villages are granted with the eight bhogas (vide E. I. vol. VI. at p. 97, the Gadag Ins. of Hoysala Vira-Ballāla in śake 1114). The eight bhogas are enumerated in some of the inscriptions themselves. In the Śrīśaila plates of Virūpākṣa (of śake 1388) they are stated to be nidhi (treasure trove), nikṣepa (what is deposited on the land), vāri (water), aśman (stones, mines), akṣiṇī (actual privileges), āgāmi (future profits), siddha (what is already brought under cultivation), sādhya (waste land that may in future be turned into cultivable land).²⁰³⁰ In the times of the Marathas when lands or villages were granted it was usual to put in such words as 'jalataru-trṇa-kāṣṭha-pāṣāṇa-nidhi-nikṣepa' (water, trees, grass, wood, stones, treasure-trove and deposits). It has been decided by the modern Indian Courts that these words conferred on the grantee ownership in the soil itself and that in the absence of these words it is possible to hold that the grant was only of the royal share of the revenue and not of the soil itself.²⁰³¹

The question whether the king is the owner of all land in his kingdom has been discussed from very ancient times. Jaimini (VI. 7. 3) states the proposition that in the Viśvajit sacrifice (where the sacrificer has to donate everything that belongs to him) even the emperor cannot make a gift of the whole earth of which he may be the ruler, since the earth is common to all (to the sovereign as well as to those who cultivate it and make use of it). Śābara²⁰³² elaborates this by adding that others have as much right over the earth as the emperor, that the emperor is entitled to a share of crops produced from the earth as his since he protects them; but that all other persons also walk on the earth, produce crops on it, get their sustenance from it and so they also have rights over the earth and therefore there is no difference between the emperor and other persons as to rights over the earth. This view is relied upon by the Vyavahāramayūkha²⁰³³ which says 'therefore it is said in the 6th chapter of Jaimini that the whole earth cannot be given away by the emperor and a province by a feudatory chief. The ownership in the several villages and fields on the entire earth or in a province belongs to the holders of the land alone, while kings are entitled only to collect taxes. Therefore when kings now make what are technically called gifts of fields, no gift of land (soil) is effected thereby, but only provision is made for the maintenance of the donee (from the taxes which are alienated by the king). Where however houses and fields are purchased from the holders thereof (by the king) he has also ownership (over the fields &c.) in those cases and he in such cases secures the full merit of the gift of land (if he makes a gift of such fields)'. These passages embody the important proposition that the state is not the owner of all lands, but is only entitled to levy taxes from the holders of land.

There is another view also according to which the king was the owner of lands and the subjects were only occupants. This latter view, being more convenient and paying, has been adopted in modern times by the British Government in its policy and legislation (e. g. vide section 37 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, Bombay Act V. of 1879). The Mit. on Yāj. I. 318 states²⁰³⁴ that the words of Yāj. imply that the privileges of making a gift of land or of a nibandha belonged only to the king and not to the governor of a province or a district under the king. The Mit. on Yāj. II. 114 quotes a *smṛti*²⁰³⁵ 'land passes on the happening of six circumstances viz. with the consent of one's village, of one's agnatic relations, of sāmantas, and of one's coparceners and when accompanied with water and (dakṣiṇā of) gold' and remarks that the consent of sāmantas (neighbours) is only necessary as a safeguard against disputes about boundaries and that of the villagers is necessary for giving notice of the alienation to all. As the king is not mentioned here, the king's consent does not appear to have been necessary for the gift of land by a private person. But it appears that the king's consent was sometimes sought for gifts by private persons and obtained e. g. in Gupta Ins. No. 31 p. 135 Mahārāja Śarvanātha (G. S. 214) approves of a gift of two villages made to a person and his sons and grandsons in succession for the worship of the goddess Piṣṭapurikādevī by a donee to whom they had been originally granted.

On account of the great value attached to copper-plate grants as documents of title, there were great temptations to forge them. In the Madhuban copper-plate of Harṣa (E. I. vol. VII. p. 155 at p. 158) reference is made to a grant fabricated by a certain brāhmaṇa named Vāmarathya about a village called Somakunḍakā. Manu IX. 232 prescribes death as the penalty for fabricators of royal charters. Vide Fleet on 'Spurious Indian Records' in I. A. vol. 30, p. 201.

From Manu and other smṛtikāras it appears that so far as lands already brought under cultivation are concerned they appear to hold that the ownership of the land is in the cultivators and the king is only entitled to levy taxes for the protection he affords. In Manu VII. 130-132 it is stated 'the king should take a fiftieth part of cattle and gold and a sixth, 8th or 12th part of the crops and a sixth part of trees, flesh, honey, ghee, perfumes, herbs, liquids, flowers, roots and fruits &c.' and in X. 118 Manu allows the king to raise his demand in times of emergency to a fourth of the produce of land. Manu IX. 44 states that a field belongs to him who uproots the stems of trees and shrubs from waste or uncultivated land. Manu VIII. 39 provides that in ancient treasure-trove found underneath the ground and in mines the king is entitled to a share because he affords protection and because he is lord of the earth. This militates against the view that the king is the owner of all lands, since, if that were so, Manu would have declared that the king took all the mines and treasure found in a cultivated field. In VIII. 243 Manu prescribes a fine for a cultivator not cultivating his field at the proper time or allowing the crops to be eaten up. But this would not make the king the owner, since the fine is imposed because the king is deprived of his share of taxes by the action of the cultivator. All these passages show that Manu held that the ownership of arable land was in the cultivator himself and the king was only entitled to demand a certain share of the produce (which is designated bhāga or kara as in Manu VII. 133). This is further supported by the conduct and practice of powerful but good kings who purchased lands from their holders when they wanted to donate lands already cultivated. It may be conceded that land that was waste or not cultivated by anybody was deemed to belong to the king. Manu (VII. 115-119) enjoins that the king should appoint a headman for a village and officers for ten, 20, 100 and a thousand villages, that each of the preceding one was to report to the officer next above him about crimes and other matters, that the headman of a village was to take for his livelihood the perquisites (such as food, fuel &c.) that the king could daily demand from the villagers, and that the other officers were to be remunerated by grants of plots of land (which when first granted must have been uncultivated). Kauṭ. II. 1 states that land prepared for cultivation may be granted to cultivators who will pay a tax for life, that lands may be confiscated from those who do not cultivate them and may be given to others, that lands bestowed upon superintendents, accountants and similar persons as remuneration cannot be sold and mortgaged by them. For want of space this subject cannot be further pursued here. In modern times opinion has been sharply divided on the question whether the revenue from the land is in the nature of rent or is a tax. Baden Powell in 'Land Systems of British India' vol. I, pp. 240, 280 holds that land revenue is not rent but is a tax. In an elaborate judgment delivered by Sir Michael Westropp C. J. after exhaustively reviewing the original sanskrit texts (pp. 30-39) and the works and reports of famous statesmen and writers such as Elphinstone, Munro, Mill and Wilson (pp. 39-53) the conclusion arrived at is stated to be that 'the proprietary right of the sovereign derives no warrant from the ancient laws or institutions of the Hindus and is not recognized by modern Hindu lawyers as exclusive or incompatible with individual ownership' (p. 53).²⁰³⁶

The word agrahāra has been applied to the grant of lands or villages to brāhmanas from very ancient times. It occurs frequently in the Mahābhārata e. g. Vanaparva 68. 4, Āśrama-vāsi-parva 2. 2, 10. 41, 13. 11, 14. 14, 25. 5. Vide E. I. vol. I, p. 88 (grant of the Valabhi king Dhruvasena III. in G. S. 334 i. e. 653-654 A. D.) and in the Madhuban copper-plate of Harṣa dated in the 25th year of his reign (i. e. 631, A. D., E. I. vol. I, p. 73 and VII at p. 158).

Gifts of certain kinds are called Mahādānas. According to the Agnipurāṇa ²⁰³⁷ (209. 23-24) the Mahādānas were ten, viz. gifts of gold, horses, sesame, elephants, maids, chariots, land, house, a bride, and a dark-brown (kapilā) cow. The Mahādānas are, however, usually enumerated as 16 in the purāṇas (vide Matsya, chap. 274-289, Agni, chap. 210, Līṅga-purāṇa II, chap. 23 ff). The sixteen mahādānas are: Tulā-puruṣa (weighing a person against gold or silver which is then distributed among brāhmanas), Hiraṇyagarbha, Brahmaṇḍa, Kalpavṛkṣa, Gosahasra, Kāmadhenu (or Hiraṇyakāmadhenu), Hiraṇyāśva, Hiraṇyāśvaratha (or simply Āśvaratha), Hemahastiratha (or simply Hastiratha), Pañcalāṅgala, Dhara-dāna (or Haimadharādāna), Viśvacakra, Kalpalatā (or Mahākalpa), Saptasāgara, Ratnadhenu, Mahābhūtaghaṭa. In the Līṅgapurāṇa (Uttarārḍha, chap. 28 ff) the names are somewhat different. The names of these Mahādānas (of some at least) go back to centuries preceding the Christian Era. The word 'Mahādānāni' occurs in the Mahābhārata (Āśramavāsi-parva 3. 31, 13. 15). In the Hathigumpha Inscription of Khāravela (2nd century B. C.) Kalpavṛkṣa appears to be mentioned (E. I. vol. XX. p. 79). Bāṇa often refers to Mahādānas in general and Gosahasra in particular.²⁰³⁸ It has already been shown (on

p. 856) how Uṣavadāta made extensive gifts some of which fall under mahādānas. The Tulāpuruṣa is very frequently spoken of in the Epigraphic records. The Cambay plates of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa king Govinda IV (dated śake 852) state that the king was weighed against gold (E. I. vol. VII. p. 26). Vide also E. I. vol. XI p. 112 (in Dantivarman Ins. of śake 675), E. I. vol. IX, p. 24 (Rāṣṭrakūṭa Indrarāja III weighed against gold in śake 836), E. I. vol. XI, p. 20 at p. 23 (Hematulā of Govindacandra mentioned in saṁ. 1186), E. I. vol. XIV, p. 197 (dated saṁ. 1156, when 32 villages were given as dakṣiṇā after the two mahādānas of tulāpuruṣa and gosahasra); E. I. vol. VII, p. 17 (refers to tulāpuruṣa of Kṛṣṇarāja of Vijayanagara in śake 1437). The tulādāna is mentioned in the ancient Tamil work Śilappadikāram (vide p. 311 of Prof. Dikshitar's translation). In E. I. vol. XII, at p. 10 it is stated that king Lakṣmanasena of Bengal granted a village as dakṣiṇā when he performed the Mahādāna called Hemāśvaratha. The Sanjan plates of Amoghavarṣa (dated śake 793) speak of the Hiraṇyagarbha mahādāna performed by Danti-durga at Ujjayinī (E. I. vol. XVIII, pp. 235, 238). In the Śrīraṅgam plates of Devarāja II of Vijayanagara dated śake 1350 it is stated that the prince gave a dinner to one lakh of brāhmaṇas at the holy place or Prayāga (modern Allahabad) and on a lunar eclipse performed the Pañca-lāṅgala vrata (J. B. B. R. A. S. vol. XIII, p. 1 at p. 3).

Brief notes will now be added for setting out the procedure of the mahādānas. The Matsya-purāṇa (chap. 274-289) devotes about 400 verses to these. Aparārka (pp. 313-344) not only quotes almost all these verses of the Matsya-purāṇa, but also adds further details from the Bhaviṣyottara-purāṇa in certain cases. Hemādri (Dānakhaṇḍa pp. 166-345) is far more elaborate and quotes (in addition to the Matsya) long passages from the Liṅga, Garuḍa and other purāṇas and from works on Tantra and the Āgamas. The Dānamayūkha devotes pp. 86-151 to the 16 mahādānas. The Matsyapurāṇa (274. 11-12) states that the mahādānas were performed by such ancient heroes and kings as Vāsudeva, Ambarisa, Bhārgava, Kārtavīrya Arjuna, Rāma, Prahlāda, Pṛthu and Bharata. It then gives general directions about the construction of the pandal (maṇḍapa) required in making these mahādānas. The maṇḍapa may be of various sizes, 16 aratnis (one aratni being equal to 21 aṅgulas of the donor) or 12 or 10 cubits (one cubit being the length of the arm from the tip of the middle finger to the end of the elbow), should have four doors and a vedi (raised platform) of seven or five cubits prepared with bricks, there was to be an arch on the vedi for holding the balance, it should have nine or five kuṇḍas ²⁰³⁹ (pits in the ground for holding fire) or one kuṇḍa, two auspicious water jars were to be placed at each door of the pandal, the tulā was to have two posts and a cross beam of the same wood (such as āśvattha, bilva, palāśa &c.) and was to be decked with golden ornaments. These details have to be passed over here for want of space. The rest of the procedure about tulāpuruṣa is briefly as follows (Matsya, chap. 274) : Priests knowing the four Vedas were to be placed on the four sides respectively (viz. R̥gvedins to the east, Yajurvedins to the south, Sāmavedins in the west and Ātharvaṇas in the north). Then four homas were to be offered to Gaṇeśa, the planets, the lokapālas, the eight Vasus, the Ādityas, the Maruts, to Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva, the sun and the herbs and Vedic hymns referring to these were to be recited.

At the end of the homa, the guru invokes with flowers and incense the lokapālas (lords of the worlds or quarters) with paurāṇika mantras, viz. Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirṛti, Varuṇa, Vāyu, Soma, Īśāna, Ananta and Brahmā. Then the donor should give golden ornaments, ear ornaments, golden chains, wristlets, rings, clothes to the priests and double (what is given to each ṛtvik) to the guru. Brāhmaṇas should then recite the vedic hymn on śānti (propitiatory verses averting evil). ²⁰⁴⁰ Then the donor again bathes and clad in white garments and wearing garlands of white flowers and having flowers in his folded hands invokes the balance that is supposed to be Govinda (Viṣṇu), and after per-ambulating the balance, he should step into one pan and in the other pan brāhmaṇas should place pure gold. Then the earth should be invoked and thereafter the donor should leave the balance and give half of the gold to the guru and the other half to the brāhmaṇas, pouring water on their hands before doing so and he may also make grants of villages to the guru and other priests. Then he should honour brāhmaṇas, other respectable people and the poor and helpless with gifts. One who performs this rite stays for innumerable years in the world of Viṣṇu. The same procedure was applied to weighing a man against silver or camphor (Aparārka p. 320, Hemādri, dānakhaṇḍa p. 214). Apart from kings who got themselves weighed against gold as shown above, lesser persons such as ministers sometimes indulged in this mahādāna, as Candēśvara, a minister of the Mithilā kings, states with pride in his Vivādaratnākara (vide H. D. vol. I, p. 370).

2039. There is a work called Kuṇḍārka by Śaṅkara, son of Nīlakaṇṭha, which in 15 stanzas succinctly gives all information about kuṇḍas. They are of ten kinds, circular, lotus-like, crescent-shaped, yoni, triangular, quadrangular, pentangular to octagonal. The diagonal drawn from north-east to south-west may be one hasta, two hastas, four, 6 or eight according as the oblations to be offered are 1000 or more up to 10,000 or from 10,000 up to a lakh, or from a lakh up to ten lakhs (4 hastas), from ten lakhs up to a crore (six hastas) and any number beyond a crore (8 hastas). This extent is necessary for preventing the oblations from falling outside the kuṇḍa. Kuṇḍas of different forms were employed according to the rites performed. Vide Hemādri (dāna, pp. 125-134) for further details.

Hiranyagarbha:—(Matsya 275, Liṅgapurāṇa II. 29). The preliminary procedure about the pandal, the time, place, the materials, the puṇyāhavācana, the invocation of the lords of quarters is the same in this and the other mahādānas as in tulāpuruṣa. The donor should then bring forward a golden kuṇḍa (basin or vessel) 72 fingers high and 48 broad and having the shape of a muraḥ (tabor) but looking like the interior surface of a golden lotus (with eight petals). The golden vessel (it is called Hiranyagarbha) should be placed on a heap of sesame. Then the golden vessel is to be addressed with paurāṇika mantras, identifying it with Hiranyagarbha²⁰⁴¹ (the Creator). He should then enter the golden vessel, sit facing the north, hold in his hands golden images of Brahmā and Dharmarāja and hold his head for five breaths between his knees (to simulate the position of the foetus in the mother's womb). The guru then repeats on the golden vessel the mantras of garbhādāna, pūṁsavana and sīmantonnayana (and mentally revolves the other procedure of these); the guru thereafter makes the donor rise out of the golden vessel to the accompaniment of auspicious music. Then the remaining twelve saṁskāras are²⁰⁴² performed symbolically on the donor, who repeats the mantra to Hiranyagarbha and says 'formerly I was born from my mother but only as a mortal now being born of you I shall assume a divine body.' Then the donor, seated on a golden seat, is bathed with the mantra 'devasya tvā' (vide above note 653a) and he distributes the golden vessel among the guru and other priests.

2041. Rg. X. 121. 1-10 is a hymn to Hiranyagarbha and begins 'Hiranyagarbhaḥ samavartatāgre bhūtasya jātaḥ patir-eka āsīt'.

Brahmāṇḍa:—(Matsya 276). In this dāna, two vessels (pans) of gold are to be prepared resembling the two halves of a hemisphere (to represent the dome of heaven above and the earth below). The two halves are to be made of gold weighing from 20 palas to a thousand according to the donor's ability and their length and breadth should be from 12 to 100 fingers; the pans should have (golden) figures of the eight diggajas, the vedas and six aṅgas, of the eight lokapālas and of brahmā in the middle of them, of Śiva, Viṣṇu, the sun on their top, of Umā and Lakṣmī, of Vasus, Ādityas and Maruts inside; the two should be covered with a silk garment and placed on a heap of sesame; eighteen kinds of corn should be arranged round them. Then in the eight quarters from the east golden images of Anantaśayana (Viṣṇu lying on the snake), Pradyumna, Prakṛti, Samkarṣaṇa, the four vedas, Aniruddha, Agni, Vāsudeva should be respectively arranged. Ten jars covered with cloth should be placed near; gifts of ten cows with golden-tipped horns, with copper vessels (for milking them) and covered with garments should be made and gifts of sandals, umbrellas, seats, mirrors should be made and the golden pans (called Brahmāṇḍa) should be addressed in paurāṇika verses and the gold should be distributed to the guru and priests (2 parts to the guru and one part to each of eight priests).

Kalpapādapa or Kalpavṛkṣa:—(Matsya 277, Liṅga II. chap. 33). A golden tree is to be manufactured with several fruits hanging down from it and with many ornaments and clothes. The gold may be from three palas to a thousand according to one's means. From half of the gold the Kalpapādapa is to be prepared and placed on a heap (prastha is a measure of 32 palas) of jaggery, with images of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva and the sun and five branches and the other four trees, Santāna, Mandāra, Pārijātaka and Haricandana are to be made each from $\frac{1}{4}$ of the one half of the gold taken and planted respectively in the east, south, west and north. Under the Kalpavṛkṣa, figures (golden) of Kāmadeva (the god of love) and his four wives are to be placed. Eight jars filled with water and covered with silk cloth and surrounded by lamps, chowries, umbrellas are to be arranged and 18 dhānyas ²⁰⁴³ also; prayers are to be offered to the Kalpavṛkṣa to ferry the donor over the ocean of samsāra; then the kalpavṛkṣa is to be donated to the guru and the other four trees ²⁰⁴⁴ to four priests. Aparārka (p. 326) quotes Bhaviṣyottara to the effect that a sonless man or woman should make this mahādāna.

Gosahasra :—(Matsya 278, Līṅga II. 38). The donor should subsist for three days or one day on milk alone and then the preliminary procedure of invoking lokapālas, puṣyāhavācana, homa etc. should be gone through. Then fragrant substances should be applied to the body of a bull made to stand on the altar and ten cows out of 1000 should be selected. They should be covered with clothes, have their horns gold-tipped and the hoofs tipped with silver and these cows should be brought inside the pandal and honoured. A golden image of Nandikeśvara (Śiva's bull) having golden bells round its neck, covered with silken cloth, scents and flowers, with horns gold-tipped, should be placed in the midst of the ten cows. The donor should bathe in water that is medicated with the herbs called sarvaśadhi ²⁰⁴⁵ and with flowers in his folded hands invoke the cows with mantras expressing the greatness of cows and address the image of Nandikeśvara as Dharma and should bestow the golden image of Nandi on the guru with two cows and donate one cow each to eight priests and to other brāhmaṇas five or ten cows each out of the remaining. The owner should then subsist on milk alone for one day and should be continent that day. The donor would dwell in the world of Śiva and would save his piṭṛs and maternal grand-father and other maternal ancestors.

Kāmadhenu :—(Matsya 279, Līṅga II. 35). The figures of a cow and a calf should be made from very pure gold, either one thousand or 500 or 250 palas in weight and one without

The donor should invoke the cow with paurāṇika mantras and then make a gift of the cow and calf to the guru. Hemādri (dānakhaṇḍa, pp. 265-274) quotes passages from the Matsya, Agni, and Liṅga purāṇas and from the Kāmika and other works.

Hiraṇyāśva :—(Matsya 280). On the altar deer skin should be spread and sesame placed and a golden horse is to be made from gold of the same weight as in Kāmadhenu and the donor is to invoke the image of the horse (identified with the supreme God) and the image is to be donated to the guru. Hemādri (dānakhaṇḍa p. 278) adds that the horse figure is to have silver welded on in five places,²⁰⁴⁶ viz. the four feet and the mouth.

Hiraṇyāśvaratha :—(Matsya 281). A golden chariot should be made with figures of seven or four horses, four wheels, a golden flagstaff surmounted by a sapphire jar. There are to be four auspicious jars. Then this is donated along with chowries, an umbrella, silken garments and cows according to one's means.

Hemahastiratha :—(Matsya 282). A golden chariot resembling a toy-cart should be made with four wheels, having figures of eight lokapālas, Brahmā, Śiva, the Sun, with Nārāyaṇa, Lakṣmī and Puṣṭi in the middle of it, on the flag-staff there should be an eagle and the figure of Gaṇeśa on the end of the pole, there should be four golden elephants. Then it is to be invoked and donated.

Pañcalāṅgalaka :—(Matsya 283). Five ploughshares should be made of some strong wood (teak, sandal &c.) and five of gold, ten fine oxen should be decked with gold on their horns and with pearls on their tails, silver on their hoofs and a gift of these and of land equal to one kharvaṭa, *kheṭa*²⁰⁴⁷ or village or a gift of one hundred or fifty nivartanas according to one's means should be made. A brāhmaṇa with his wife is to be honoured with golden chains, rings, silken garments, wristlets.

Dharādāna or Haimadharādāna :—(Matsya 284). A golden figure of the earth resembling Jambudvīpa is to be made with mountains on the borders and mount Meru in the middle, showing hundreds of figures and the seven oceans, made out of from five palas up to 1000 palas of gold according to one's means. Then it is to be invoked with many verses and half or $\frac{1}{4}$ of it is to be donated to the guru and the rest to the other priests.

Viśvacakra :—(Matsya 285). A wheel with 16 spokes and 8 fellys should be made of gold, which may be in weight from 20 palas to a thousand palas according to one's means. On the first nave there should be the figure of Viṣṇu in yoga posture, with the conch and cakra near him and the figures of eight goddesses. On the second nave the sages Atri, Bhṛgu, Vasiṣṭha, Brahmā, Kaśyapa and the ten avatāras of Viṣṇu should be carved, on the third Gaurī and the mother-goddesses, on the 4th the twelve Ādityas and four Vedas, on the fifth the five bhūtas (elements, earth &c.) and the eleven Rudras, on the sixth the eight lokapālas and the eight elephants of the quarters, on the seventh eight²⁰⁴⁸ missiles and (eight) auspicious things and on the 8th the gods at intervals. Then the donor should invoke this wheel and donate it.

Mahūkālpatā :—(Matsya 286). Ten kālpatās with figures of various flowers and fruits should be made of gold, they should have figures of Vidyādhara couples, of deities resembling lokapālas and the several śaktis, viz. Brāhmī, Anantaśakti, Āgneyī, Vāruṇī and others and above all there should be a canopy. Two of the kālpatās should be placed in the middle of a circle drawn on the altar and the other eight in the eight quarters on the altar. There should be ten cows and jars. Two should be bestowed on the guru and the remaining eight on eight priests.

श्चेति शस्त्राणि तेषु चार्प्यं प्रशस्यते ॥ गरुडपुराण quoted in हेमाद्रि (दानखण्ड p. 331) and the eight maṅgalya things are 'दक्षिणावर्तशङ्खश्च रोचना चन्दनं तथा । सुकाफलं हिरण्यं च छत्रं चामरमेव च ॥ आदर्शश्चेति विज्ञेयं मङ्गल्यं मङ्गलावहम् ॥
पराशर in the same.

Saptasāgaraka :—(Matsya 287). Seven vessels (kuṇḍas) with a diagonal of either $10\frac{1}{2}$ aṅgulas (prādeśa) or 21 aṅgulas should be made from gold weighing from 7 palas to a thousand palas according to one's means. The seven vessels should be respectively filled with salt, milk, clarified butter, jaggery, curds, sugar, holy water. In the several kuṇḍas golden images of Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Śiva, the Sun, Indra, Lakṣmī and Pārvatī should be dipped and all jewels should be thrown in them and all dhānyas should be arranged round them. A homa to Varuṇa should be performed and then the donor should invoke the seven oceans (symbolized by the seven kuṇḍas) and then they should be donated.

Ratnadhenu :—(Matsya 288). The figure of a cow is to be made of precious stones. 81 padmarāga (ruby) stones are to be placed in the mouth of that figure, a hundred puṣparāga stones in the tip of her nose, a golden tilaka on her forehead, a hundred pearls in the eyes, a hundred pieces of coral on the two eyebrows, two pieces of mother-o'-pearl represent the ears, there should be golden horns, and the head should be of one hundred diamond stones, with one hundred on her neck, one hundred sapphires on the back, a hundred lapis lazuli on the sides, crystal on the belly, a hundred saugandhika stones on the waist, hoofs of gold and tail of pearls and other parts of the cow's body are to be represented in a similar manner with various precious stones and the tongue with sugar and dung with jaggery, urine with ghee and a calf is to be made with $\frac{1}{4}$ of what is required for the cow and then both are donated.

Mahābhūtaghaṭa :—(Matsya 289). A golden jar is to be set with precious stones with a diagonal of from $10\frac{1}{2}$ aṅgulas to 100 aṅgulas. It is to be filled with milk and clarified butter and on it figures of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva are to be drawn as in the case of Kalpavṛkṣa, and the figures of the earth raised by the great boar, of Varuṇa on his conveyance of Makara, of Agni on a ram, of Vāyu (on a deer), of Gaṇeśa on a rat should be kept in the jar together with the figures of Ṛgveda having a rosary, Yajurveda holding a lotus, Sāmaveda holding a lute, Atharvaveda holding sruc and srucā ladles and Purāṇas (the fifth veda) holding a rosary and water jar. The golden jar then should be donated.

Most of the smṛtis highly extol the gift of a cow or cows. Manu IV. 231 states that the donor of a cow reaches the world of the Sun. Yāj. (I. 204-205), Agnipurāṇa 210. 30 prescribe that when making a gift of a cow, she should have the horns and hoofs tipped with gold and silver respectively, she should be accompanied with a bell metal vessel (for milking her) and she should be covered with cloth, she should be mild in temper and the gift should be accompanied with a money payment and that whoever makes such a gift stays in heaven for as many years as there are hair on the cow's body. Vide Sāmavarta verses 71, 74-75 also. In the Anuśāsana-parva²⁰⁴⁹ (51. 26-34 and chapters 77, 78 and 81) there are frequent eulogies of cows. Anuśāsana 57. 28-29 are just like Yāj. I. 204-205. Anuśāsana (83. 17-18) explains that the cow is a constituent element of sacrifice, that the cow nourishes men (with milk), that their progeny (the oxen) are useful in agriculture and therefore cows deserve the highest praise. Aparārka (p. 295-297) quotes numerous passages from the purāṇas eulogizing cows. Among cows kapilā is the best for gift (Anuśāsana 73. 42 and 77. 8). Anuśāsana (77. 10 ff) explains why the dark-brown cow (kapilā) is the best. Yāj. I. 205 states that if the cow donated is kapilā it saves (from sin) the donor's family up to seven generations (including himself). Aparārka p. 297 quotes Sāmavarta to the effect that the kapilā cow is equal to ten ordinary cows. The Varāhapurāṇa chap. 111 deals with the gift of a kapilā cow. The method of giving a cow is briefly as follows²⁰⁵⁰ (Hemādri, Dānakhaṇḍa p. 451 ff, Dānamayūkha pp. 185-186): The cow is made to stand facing the east together with her calf and is worshipped by the donor (after having bathed and tied his top-knot) who sits near the tail and the donee sits facing the north. The donor holds in his hand a vessel containing clarified butter in which a piece of gold is put. The tail of the cow is dipped into the butter and then taken out and placed into the right hand of the donee with the hair turned towards the east and also water, sesame and kuśa grass are placed in the donee's right hand. The donor holds in his hand a vessel full of water from which he sprinkles water with paurāṇika mantras, gives dakṣiṇā and then the cow starts with the donee and the donor follows them a few steps and repeats certain verses eulogizing cows. The Agnipurāṇa (210. 34) specially recommends that one who is at the door of death should make the gift of a cow (particularly a dark one) who would enable him to cross the blazing river in the world of Yama called Vaitaraṇī (and hence the cow is also called Vaitaraṇī).

The procedure in the दानमयूख is 'अद्येत्यादि गोदानं करिष्ये इति सङ्कल्प्य प्राङ्मुखीं सवत्सां गां विप्रं च संपूज्य समुवर्णमाज्यपात्र हस्ते गृहीत्वा तत्र पुच्छं धृत्वा कृत्वा विप्रहस्ते कुशतिलजलाभ्यादाय उक्तफलेष्वभिमतफल-सुक्ता यज्ञसाधन मनया गवेति मन्त्रं पौराणमन्त्रं च पठित्वा जलमुत्सृजेत् । दानप्रतिष्ठार्थं दाक्षिणां दत्त्वा ब्राह्मणधेनू अलुवज्य गावः सुरभयो नित्यं ... इति यमोक्तां गोमतीं विद्यां जपेत् । दानमयूख pp. 185-186. हेमाद्रि and दानमयूख quote gomatī verses from the महाभारत also viz. अनुशासन 78. 23-25.

Yāj. I. 206-207 (206 = Agnipurāṇa 210. 33), Viṣṇu Dh. S. 88. 1-4, Vanaparva 200. 69-71, Atri 333, Varāhapurāṇa 112²⁰⁵¹ attach special importance to the gift of a cow when she is just on the point of giving birth to a calf (and therefore styled 'ubhayatomukhī) and the donor is said to stay in heaven as many years as the hair on the body of the cow and her calf. Aparārka (pp. 299-301) quotes a long prose extract from Cyavana on the procedure of this gift. When the head of the calf has appeared, the donor should say to the worthy donee 'accept this cow for conferring a favour on me and not because you desire this gift' and repeat Rg. IV. 19. 6. Then taking hold of the cow with the formula 'ka idam kasmā adāt' (Atharvaveda III. 29. 7, Āśv. Śr. 5. 13, Āp. Śr. 14. 11. 2), the donor takes down the calf and recites in a loud voice Rg. IV. 27. 1 ('garbhe nu'). Then after kindling fire the donor repeats mantras addressed to the gods, pitrs, rivers, mountains, plants, seas, serpents, herbs respectively viz. Rg. I 139. 11, X. 16. 12, X. 75. 5, IX. 75. 4, III. 8. 11, VII. 49. 1, VI. 75. 14, I. 90. 6. Then the donor should propitiate the Earth with mantras (addressed to the Earth) viz. Rg. I. 112. 1, I. 22. 13, I. 185. 7, I. 164. 41; the donor should offer 84 oblations of clarified butter, feed brāhmaṇas and receive their benedictions in the terms of Rg. V. 51. 11 ('svasti no'). The gift of such a cow with the paraphernalia of gold or silver, fields, corn, clothes, salt and the like, sandal-wood, releases a man from the sins of eating or drinking forbidden food, brāhmaṇa murder, incest &c.

In imitation of the gift of the cow gifts of certain articles were made and they are also described as dhenus. The Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 82. 17-22) speaks of ten dhenus viz. of guḍa (jaggery), ghr̥ta (ghee), tila (sesame), jala (water), kṣīra (milk), madhu (honey), śarkarā (sugar), dadhi (curds), rasa (other liquids) and godhenu (cow itself). It gives (chap. 82) a detailed description of guḍadhenu and adds that the liquid dhenus should be kept in jars and others should be in heaps, that the same procedure applies to all, and that some add suvarṇadhenu, navanīta-dhenu (cow of butter) and ratnadhenu (cow of jewels). The Agnipurāṇa (210. 11-12) enumerates the same ten dhenus. In the Anuśāsana-parva 71. 39-41 the three dhenus of ghr̥ta, tila and jala are mentioned. The Varāhapurāṇa (chap. 99-110) describes in detail twelve dhenus, viz. all mentioned in the Matsya (except ghr̥ta and godhenu) and navanīta, lavaṇa (salt), kārpaśa (cotton) and dhānya (corn). The procedure of all is more or less the same. Black antelope skin four cubits in length is to be spread on the ground that has been cowdunged and has darbhas strewn on it with the neck portion to the east (this represents the cow) and a smaller skin is also spread (to represent the calf). If it is guḍa-dhenu it is made of 2 or 4 bhāras²⁰⁵² and the calf is made with one fourth of that for the cow. Various articles such as conch shells, sugarcane pieces, pearls, chowries, coral &c. are placed on the skin, to represent the various limbs of the cow, which is worshipped with dhūpa (incense) and lamps and invoked with paurāṇika mantras. Then the articles are donated to a brāhmaṇa. Hemādri (Dāna, p. 401) notes that according to the Padmapurāṇa a single jar of liquids and one drona of solids constitute these dhenus, while the Dānaviveka establishes that *kumbha*²⁰⁵³ is equal to 1000 palas and others hold that kumbha contains 512 palas. These several dhenus may be donated on eclipses, on the full moon days of Kārtika and Māgha, on Yugādi days or when the 7th tithi of a month falls on a Sunday and that the donor should subsist for three days on the substance to be donated. Aparārka pp. 303-313, Hemādri (Dāna.) pp. 397-466, Dānamayūkha pp. 172-184 dilate upon these dhenus, but all those details are passed over here for want of space.

It appears that on account of the high merit associated with the gift of cows, donors sometimes passed old and weak cows on to donees. The Kāthopaniṣad I. 1. 3 appears to contain a condemnation of such practices.²⁰⁵⁴ "He who makes gifts of cows that simply drink water and eat grass, but yield no milk and do not possess strength (to conceive and produce calves) reaches those worlds called 'anandāḥ' (without delights)." The Mahābhārata (Anuśāsana 77. 5-6) echoes the very words of the Kāthopaniṣad. In the Anuśāsana-parva 66. 53²⁰⁵⁵ it is said that one should not bestow on a brāhmaṇa a cow which is lean or is without her calf, which is barren and diseased, which is wanting in a limb or is exhausted. Hemādri (Dāna, pp. 448-449) quotes this and other passages of similar import that state that 2053. प्रस्थ, आढक, द्रोण and खारी are ancient measures of corn. Even Pāṇini mentions some of these. Vide Pāṇ. V. 1. 33 and V. 4. 110 (for khāri), V. 1. 53 (for āḍhaka). The Āp. Dh. S. II. 8. 20. 1 mentions droṇa. There was no unanimity as to their exact extent. Aparārka (p. 305), Hemādri (Vratākhaṇḍa) part I (p. 57), Par. M. II. part 1, p. 141 quote verses (the latter two say from Bhaviṣyapurāṇa) which give the following table: 2 पल = प्रस्थ, 2 प्रस्थ = कुडव, 4 कुडव = प्रस्थ, 4 प्रस्थ = आढक, 4 आढक = द्रोण, 16 द्रोण = खारी. Parāśara VI. 70 says that 2 prasthas are equal to āḍhaka and 32 prasthas are equal to a droṇa and the Par. M. remarks देशभेदेन शास्त्रद्वयस्य व्यवस्थापनीयत्वात्. Vide मित्ता. on या. III. 265 and 274, लीलावती of भास्कराचार्य (verses 7-8). According to Aparārka (p. 846) a kumbha is equal to 2 droṇas. The Prāyaścittatattva (p. 514) quotes the Kalpataru to the effect that 10 droṇas are equal to a khāri and 20 droṇas to a kumbha.

The Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 83. 92) speaks of ten kinds of dānas called parvatadānas or merudānas, viz. of dhānya (corn), lavaṇa (salt), guḍa (jaggery), hema (gold), tila (sesame), kārpāsa (cotton), ghṛta (ghee), ratna (precious stones), rajata (silver), śarkarā (sugar). The Agnipurāṇa (210. 6-10) enumerates these ten. Aparārka (pp. 344-354) quotes all the chapters of the Matsya. Hemādri (Dāna, pp. 346-396) not only dilates upon these ten dānas, but speaks of 12 of such dānas from Śaiva works like the Kālottara. These dānas were called parvata, śaila or acala because the substances were heaped up like hills. The procedure in all of them is the same. A square platform inclined towards the north-east or east was to be prepared, smeared with cowdung and strewn with kuśa grass. In the midst of it a heap was to be made to represent a mountain with smaller heaps to represent hills at the foot of the mountain. In the case of the mountain of dhānya, it is to be made with 1000 or 500 or 300 droṇa measures of corn. Three trees of gold are to be planted on the middle of it and in the four directions lotus-like plants of pearls, gomeda and puṣparāga, emeralds and sapphires, lapis lazuli respectively. Many more picturesque features such as gold and silver images of 81 gods are described in the Matsya. A guru and four priests are to be chosen for homa and 13 āhūtis are to be offered to each of the gods. In the gift of salt, from 1 to 16 droṇas thereof are to be employed, in the gift of jaggery from 3 to 10 bhāras, in that of gold from 1 to 1000 palas, in that of sesame from 3 to 10 droṇas, of kārpāsa from 5 to 20 bhāras, of ghee from two kumbhas to 20, of ratnas from 200 pearls to 1000, with attendant hills of precious stones $\frac{1}{4}$ of the pearls, of cotton from 20 palas to 10 thousand, of sugar from half a bhāra to 8 bhāras.

The smṛtis, purāṇas and digests speak of the gifts of many animals such as of elephants, horses, buffaloes, of articles like clothes, deer-skins, umbrellas, shoes, which are all passed over here. But two or three of these many dānas deserve notice. Aparārka (pp. 375-376) extracts a long passage from the Bhavisyottara about constructing in the month of Caitra a maṇḍapa for the distribution of water to travellers in the midst of a city or in a waterless desert or near a temple. A brāhmaṇa was to be engaged for wages to distribute water and this was to be continued for four months or at least three fortnights.

of the planets are to be made respectively of copper, crystal, red sandal-wood, gold (for both Mercury and Jupiter), silver, iron, lead and bell-metal or they may be drawn on a piece of cloth in these colours or may be painted in circles on the ground with colours; that flowers and clothes may be offered to them of the respective colours described above; fragrant substances, incense of guggulu should be offered to them and oblations of cooked food may be made to them in fire with the following mantras respectively, viz. Rg. I. 35. 2, Vāj. S. 9. 40, Rg. VIII. 44. 16, Vāj. S. 15. 54, Rg. II. 23. 15, Vāj. S. 19. 75, Rg. X. 9. 4, Vāj. S. 13. 20, Rg. I. 6. 3. The fuel-sticks to be offered to the nine planets should respectively be of the following trees and plants: of arka plant, palāśa, khadira, apāmārga, pippala, undumbara, śamī, dūrvā and kuśa grass. 108 or 28 samidhs of each of these should be thrown into the fire, they being anointed with honey, clarified butter, curds and milk. The foods on which the brāhmaṇas are to be regaled at dinner in the grahayajña are respectively rice mixed with jaggery, rice cooked in milk, haviṣya food (i. e. the food on which the ascetics live), corn that ripens in sixty days cooked in milk, curds and rice, rice with clarified butter, rice mixed with crushed sesame, flesh (with rice), rice of various colours. The fee (dakṣiṇā) to be paid should respectively be a milch cow, conch, a draught ox, gold, clothes, horse (white), dark cow, iron weapon, a goat. 'The rise and fall of kings depend upon the (aspects of) planets and the existence and destruction of the world depend upon planets; therefore the planets should be honoured the most'—says Yāj. I. 308.

The Matsya-purāṇa²⁰⁵⁸ in chap. 93 contains a detailed procedure of grahaśānti and chapter 94. (1-9) describes how the images of the nine planets are to be represented. Vide Vaik. IV. 13 and also Baud. gr. śeṣa-sūtra I. 16 for a similar treatment. In modern times the dānas (articles donated) to propitiate the nine planets are those stated in the 2058. The mantras of the nine planets slightly differ in the Matsya-purāṇa (93. 33-37) from those of Yāj. I. 300-301. Matsya 93. 59-63 names the same dakṣiṇās as Yāj. and Aparārka p. 575 quotes those verses. All the nine verses of Matsya 94 are quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. I. 297-98. Yāj. probably meant to rely only on the Vāj. S., but as some of the mantras occur in the Rg., references to the latter have been given.

Dharmasindhu ²⁰⁵⁹ quoted below. The S. R. M. (pp. 123-164) contains a long-drawn procedure of Grahamakha, a rite to propitiate the planets. A Grahamakha is either nitya (on Viṣuva day, ayana day, birth nakṣatra), naimittika (to be performed on such occasions as upanayana) and kāmya (for removal of adversity &c.)

Aparārka (pp. 365-366 on Yāj. I. 209) quotes a long passage from the Nandipurāṇa about the founding of hospitals (ārogya-śālā) where medicines were supplied free to patients. 'Since the four puruṣārthas (goals of life) viz. dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa, depend upon health, he who provides for securing this may be said to have made gifts of everything.' The passage further states that a competent physician should be appointed. Hemādri (dāna, pp. 893-95) quotes the same passage and another from the Skandapurāṇa to the same effect.

The smṛtis prescribe that when a man accepts as a gift what he should not accept, he incurs sin from which he becomes free by giving up the thing, by reciting certain vedic mantras, (like the Gāyatrī) and by tapas (prāyaścitta). Vide Manu XI. 193 (= Viṣṇu Dh. S. 54. 28). This sin is said to be due to 'asat-pratigraha' which may arise either from the caste or actions of the donor (e. g. the donor may be a cāṇḍāla or patita) or from the time or place (e. g. taking a gift in Kurukṣetra or in an eclipse) or from the object given (such as a gift of wine or of an ewe, of the bed-stead of a deceased person or of the cow called 'ubhayatomukhi'). Yāj. III. 289 and Manu XI. 194 (= Viṣṇu Dh. S. 54. 24) prescribe for asat-pratigraha the penance of staying in a cow-stable for one month subsisting on milk alone, observing complete celibacy, repeating the Gāyatrī mantra 3000 times every day. The donor, in the above cases, may incur no sin, but the donee does. The Dānakriyākaumudī (pp. 84-85) quotes passages from several purāṇas condemning the acceptance of gifts on the Ganges and other sacred rivers and places, and the gifts of elephants, horses, chariots, the beds

The *Dānacandrikā*²⁰⁶⁰ quotes the Padmapurāṇa to the effect that a brāhmaṇa who is in great difficulty to maintain himself may accept a gift on the banks of the Ganges and other sacred rivers, but should himself make a gift of the 10th part of it and then he would incur no sin.

We have already seen (pp. 838-39) how even in the Rgveda various rewards are promised to those who make gifts of cows, horses, gold or clothes. The Tai. S. I. 8. 4. 1 makes it a matter of give and take between gods and man (dhehi me dadāmi te nime dehi ni te dadhe). The same sentiments and notions continued down to the latest ages and are re-inforced by further and very detailed promises of rewards for several kinds of gifts. Vas. Dh. S. 29. 2-27, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 91-92, Saṁvarta verses 46-93 may be read in this connection.

A gift once completed by acceptance is irrevocable. Yāj. II. 176 prescribes 'what is promised should be given and what has been donated should not be taken back'. *Nārada*²⁰⁶¹ (Dattā-pradānika, verse 8) declares that the price of goods (delivered), wages, what is paid for pleasure (derived from dancers &c.), a gift made through affection, a gift made through gratitude (for favours received), money paid for a bride (to her kinsmen) and gifts for religious and spiritual purposes—these are given irrevocably. But a gift though promised was not complete and irrevocable in all cases. Gaut. V. 21 declares that a gift, though promised, need not be completed if the donee to whom it is promised is a person guilty of irreligious or improper conduct (such as visiting prostitutes). Manu VIII. 212 is similar in import. Kātyāyana states²⁰⁶² that if a man of his own free will promises a gift to a brāhmaṇa, but does not carry out that promise, he becomes a debtor (to that brāhmaṇa) in this world and the next. This means that a gift promised to a brāhmaṇa, though not completed by acceptance and delivery, could not be revoked and could be enforced in a court as a debt and the promisor fined for breach.

Gautama states (V. 22) that the promises made by those who were carried away by rage or extreme joy or who were under a sense of dread or were ill or distressed or covetous or made by a minor (under 16) or an extremely old man or by one who is a fool (or under delusion) or was intoxicated or made by a lunatic may be revoked by them and in doing so they incur no sin or blame. Nārada ²⁰⁶³ (Dattāpradānika, verses 9-16) amplifies this by stating 16 kinds of invalid gifts, viz. all those in Gautama (except those due to joy and covetousness) and also what is promised as a bribe, promises in jest, giving to a person mistaking him for another, gift induced by fraud or made by one who is not his own master, gift made to a man with the idea of getting something in return (but who does not do so), gift to a person who is unworthy, though he proclaimed himself to be worthy, and a gift for a purpose which is sinful. Kātyāyana (quoted by Aparārka p. 781) is just like Nārada and adds that if a man is in danger of life and promises the gift of all his wealth to whosoever may save him, he may resile from the promise. Aparārka p. 782 quotes verses from Brhaspati similar to Nārada's. Manu VIII. 165 declares that a sale, mortgage or gift brought about by fraud, or every transaction in which a trick is played, may be set aside (by the king). Though a gift made by one who is ill or distressed (ārta) is declared by Gautama to be revocable, Kātyāyana ²⁰⁶⁴ states an exception viz. that when a man whether in sound health or suffering from a disease declares a gift for religious purposes and dies without completing it, then his son (or other heir) should be made to carry out that gift. This verse contains the germ of the idea of wills, since the mere declaration of the intention of a man to make a gift for religious purposes is here made enforceable after his death. Aparārka p. 782 conveys that the word 'son' is only illustrative and that every heir taking the estate is liable to make good the promise of the deceased.

In modern times a gift or bequest for dharma without any qualifying expression is held to be too vague an indication of the donor's or testator's intention to constitute a valid gift to charity and is declared to be void for uncertainty. Vide 6 Bom. 24, 14 Bom. 482, 17 Bom. 351, 23 Bom. 725, 735 (P. C.). But this is opposed, as pointed out in 30 Mad. 340 at pp. 342-346, to the spirit of the ancient Hindu law. The word 'dharma' when used in relation to gifts had a well-recognized meaning and not a vague uncertain one. It means 'iṣṭa' and 'pūrta' gifts according to Manu IV. 227. It appears that in 23 Bom. 725 their Lordships of the Privy Council rested content with the meaning of the word given in Wilson's Dictionary, did not examine any original Sanskrit texts to find out the meaning of the word dharma used in connection with gifts and applied the principles laid down in such English cases as Morice v. The Bishop of Durham (9 Ves. 399 and 10 Ves. 522). But there is no reason why the charitable intention being quite clear the court as representing the king should not have by framing a scheme applied the property donated or bequeathed to one charitable purpose out of the several objects specified in the definition of pūrta on principles analogous to the doctrine of cy-près.²⁰⁶⁵

CHAPTER XXVI

PRATIṢṬHĀ AND UTSARGA

Pratiṣṭhā and Utsarga (foundation of temples and dedication of wells, tanks, parks &c. for the benefit of the public).

The subject of gifts naturally leads on to the topics of pratiṣṭhā and utsarga. We saw above (p. 157 f. n. 370) how the construction of temples, wells and similar religious and charitable foundations and institutions was included under pūrtadharmā and how śūdras were entitled to perform such dharma. The Mit. on Yāj. II. 114 points²⁰⁶⁶ out that women (and widows) were entitled to spend on pūrtā objects, though they were not authorized to perform iṣṭa dharma (i. e. vedic sacrifices &c.). Modern decisions have gone so far that a Hindu widow whose powers of alienating for secular purposes property inherited from her husband are very limited has been held to possess greater powers of alienation if the alienation be made for the spiritual benefit of her deceased husband and dedications by her of a small fraction of the property for the continuous benefit of the soul of the deceased owner have been upheld.²⁰⁶⁷ Such works of public utility have been highly recommended from very ancient times. Śābara²⁰⁶⁸ on Jaimini I. 3. 2 refers to the smṛti rules about charitable objects which are based on such śruti passages as 'O Agni, who art ancient and a king, thou art to the man who desires to offer a sacrifice like prapū (shed where water is distributed to travellers) in a desert'. Rg. X. 107. 10 a puskariṇī (a tank) is mentioned. The Viṣṇu Dh. S. (chap. 91. 1-2) states 'one who digs a well (for the public) has (the consequences of) half his sins destroyed when the water has begun to flow forth; one who dedicates a pond is forever happy (free from thirst) and attains the world of Varuṇa.' Bāṇa in his Kādambarī (para 44) ²⁰⁶⁹ mentions that smṛtis enjoined upon men the foundation (for public use) of halls, shelters, wells, prapās, gardens, temples, embankments, water wheels &c. Some sages went so far as to say that the reward of sacrifices is only heaven, but by pūrta (consecration of temples, tanks and gardens) one secures release from saṃsāra.²⁰⁷⁰ This shows that charitable works for the use of the public or large sections of the public came to be regarded as more meritorious than sacrifices the gifts in which benefited only brāhmaṇas.

From very ancient times the procedure of dedicating a well or tank to the public has been settled. Among the earliest is the one in the Sāṅkhyāyana gr. V. 2 (S. B. E. vol. 29 pp.134-135) which is as follows: Now about the censecration of ponds, wells and tanks. In the bright fortnight or on an auspicious tithi (day) having cooked a caru (boiled food) of barley in milk he (the donor) should sacrifice with the two verses 'tvam no agne' (Rg. IV. 1. 4-5) and with the verses 'ava te heḷa' (Rg. I. 24. 14), 'imam me varuṇa' (Rg. I. 25. 19), 'uduttamaṃ Varuṇa' (Rg. I. 24. 15), 'imāṃ dhiyam' (Rg. VIII. 42. 3) and with the words 'the domestic one, he who goes away from the house, the refreshing one, he who goes into the kennel, he who dwells in the kennel, he who comes out of it, the greedy one, the destroyer of enemies' to the different directions beginning with the west (Vāruṇī, one over which Varuṇa presided) from left to right. In the centre he makes oblations with milk with the verses 'viśvatas cakṣuruta' (Rg. X. 81. 3), 'idam Viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17); he plunges into the water with the verse 'yat kim cedam Varuṇa' (Rg. VII. 89. 5).²⁰⁷¹ A cow and a pair of clothes are the fee for this sacrifice. Then follows the feeding of brāhmaṇas.

The Āśv. gr. pariśiṣṭa IV. 9, Pār. gr. pariśiṣṭa, Matsya-purāṇa chap. 58, Agnipurāṇa chap. 64 contain a more extensive procedure about the dedication of wells and reservoirs of water. That in the Pār. gr. pariśiṣṭa is briefly as ²⁰⁷² follows: "In the northward passage of the sun, in the bright half, on an auspicious day, tithi, vāra (week day), nakṣatra and karaṇa the donor should cook caru sacred to Varuṇa of barley, offer the two ājyabhāgas and sacrifice in fire ten oblations of clarified butter with the mantras, Rg. IV. 1. 4, IV. 1. 5, I. 25. 19, I. 24. 11, Kāt. śr. 25. 1. 11 (ye te śataṁ Varuṇa), ayāścāgne (Kāt. śr. 25. 1. 11), Rg. I. 24. 15, Rg. I. 24. 8, Vāj. S. IV. 36, Vāj. S. VIII. 24.²⁰⁷³ He then sacrifices (ten oblations) of the mess of cooked food to Agni, Soma, Varuṇa, Yajña, Ugra, Bhīma, Śatakratu (Indra), Vyūṣṭi (prosperity), Svarga (Heaven) and lastly to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt (with svāhā at the end of each as in ' agnaye svāhā '). After partaking of the remains of the cooked food he should introduce aquatic animals (like fishes and tortoises in the pond &c.) and having bathed and decked a cow he should make the cow enter the reservoir, repeat the Puruṣa-sūkta (Rg. X. 90. 1-16) and donate that cow to the ācārya and should also make presents to him of two ear-rings, clothes and of another cow as fee and give a dinner to brāhmaṇas." Aparārka (p. 413-414), the Nirṇayasindhu and others add from the Bahvṛca gr. pariśiṣṭa that when the cow enters the water, he should repeat a mantra ' may you make this water holy : may the water always be pure, holy and ambrosia-like ; while saving me (from sin) may you bathe in sacred water ; she crosses from region to region and also saves (me and others) ' ; and that the donor holds the end of the cow's tail, enters the water and brings her out in the north-east corner (of the reservoir). This procedure does not apply to the consecration of a well. In that case a cow is only made to go round the well.

Gradually the procedure prescribed in the purāṇas came to have the upper hand so much so that Aparārka (p. 15) says that in pratiṣṭhā the procedure prescribed in the purāṇas has to be followed and no other.²⁰⁷⁴

Aparārka (pp. 409-414), Hemādri (Dāna pp. 997-1029), Dānakriyākaumudī (pp. 160-181), Jalāśayotsarga-tattva of Raghunandana, the Pratiṣṭhāmayūkha and Utsargamayūkha of Nilakanṭha, Rājadharmakaustubha (pp. 171-223) and several other works give a very comprehensive procedure of the consecration of wells, ponds and tanks, based upon the grhya-pariśiṣṭas, the purāṇas such as the Matsya chap. 58, the Tantras, Pāñcarātra and other works. This procedure is passed over here. The idea²⁰⁷⁵ was that unless the reservoir was consecrated in the way prescribed its water was not holy and when consecrated it became holy. Pratiṣṭhā generally means dedicating to the public with prescribed²⁰⁷⁶ rites. Utsarga means 'divesting oneself of ownership over a thing and dedicating it for the use of all.' There were four principal stages in the procedure of pratiṣṭhā; first the saṅkalpa,²⁰⁷⁷ then the homa, then the utsarga (i. e. declaration that the thing has been dedicated) and lastly the dakṣiṇā and feeding of brāhmaṇas. In Deosaran Bharthi v. Deoki Bharthi 3 Patna 842 it was said (at p. 850) 'the essential ingredient that constitutes a gift whether of movable or of immovable property in the Hindu Law is the Saṅkalpa and the Samarpaṇa whereby the property is completely given away and the owner completely divests himself of the ownership in the property'. In the case of temples, the proper word to use is pratiṣṭhā and not utsarga.

There is a difference in the technical meaning of dāna and utsarga. In the former the donor gives up his ownership over a thing, makes another the owner of it and cannot thereafter use it nor has he any control over it. When a man makes an utsarga, he no doubt gives up his ownership, but he gives up the thing for the benefit of all (as in the formula above he uses the word 'sarvabhūtebhyaḥ') and so the opinion of most writers is that he can as a member of the public make use of the thing dedicated by him, though there were a few authors who recommended that he should not do so.^{2077a}

Reservoirs of water that are dug out by man are of four kinds, kūpa, vāpī, puṣkariṇī and tadāga.²⁰⁷⁸ Some of the works define kūpa as a well that is from five to fifty cubits in length (if rectangular) or in diameter (if it is circular). It has generally no flight of steps to reach the water. Vāpī is a well with a flight of steps on all sides or on three or two sides or one side only and its mouth may be from 50 to 100 cubits; a puṣkariṇī is from 100 to 200 cubits in length or diameter and a tadāga (a tank) is from 200 to 800 cubits. The Matsyapurāṇa 154. 512 states that a vāpī is equal to ten kūpas (in merit) and a hrada (deep reservoir) is equal to ten vāpīs; a son is equal to ten hradas and a tree is equal to ten sons. According to the Vasiṣṭha-saṁhitā quoted by Raghunandana a puṣkariṇī is up to 400 cubits and a tadāga is five times as much. At certain auspicious times only the consecration of wells and tanks is to take place.²⁰⁷⁹

which the sacrificial animal was tied), for idhma (samidhs which were thrown into fire), for the several ladles like gruva, juhū etc. The Tai. Br. I. 1. 3 speaks of seven holy trees. The Tai. S. III. 4. 8. 4 states that idhma (samidhs) should be of the nyagrodha, udumbara, āśvattha and plakṣa trees, as they are the abodes of Gandharvas and Apsarases.²⁰⁸⁰ Besides trees with their verdant foliage looked beautiful and the leaves of some of them (such as the mango tree) are hung up even now in pandals and at entrances of houses as auspicious in marriage and other ceremonies. Hemādri cites a passage from the Brahmapurāṇa that the twigs and leaves of the Āśvattha (the pipal tree), udumbara, plakṣa, cūta (mango) and nyagrodha are styled *pañcabhaṅga*²⁰⁸¹ and are auspicious in all rites. The palāśa tree was held to be so sacred that one was not to make seats, sandals or tooth brush from it or its branches and twigs (Baud. Dh. S. II. 3. 25). Trees gave shelter against heat and also yielded flowers and fruits (for worship of gods and pitṛs). When felled their wood was useful in building houses, for making implements of husbandry and for producing heat and warmth. In his 7th Pillar Edict (of Delhi-Topra) Āśoka mentions the construction of wells at a distance of 8 krośas and the planting of hayan trees and mango groves (C. I. I. vol. I pp. 134-135). The Mahābhāṣya (vol. I. p. 14) quotes a portion of an ancient verse which conveys that if a person waters and tends mango trees, his pitṛs feel extremely pleased.²⁰⁸² Manu IV. 39 and Yāj. I. 133 require the snātaka to circumambulate well-known trees (like āśvattha) if he meets them on the way. The Kādambarī also refers to this practice of worshipping trees, particularly by women desiring to have a son.²⁰⁸³ The Mahābhārata (Anuśāsanaparva 58. 23-32) highly eulogizes plant life and divides plants into six kinds viz. vrkṣa (tree), latā (creepers that cling to trees), valli (creepers that spread on the ground), gulma (bushes), tvaksāra (trees whose bark is strong, while the inside is hollow, like bamboos) and grass and adds that he who plants trees is saved (in a future existence) by them just as sons do and that they should be tended like sons.²⁰⁸⁴ The Viṣṇu Dh.S.91.4 says the same thing. Hemādri (Dāna pp. 1030-31) cites a long passage from the Padmapurāṇa how by planting different trees and plants like āśvattha, āśoka, tamarind, pomegranate and others a man secures such rewards (respectively) as wealth, removal of sorrow, long life, a wife, &c. Vṛddha-Gautama (Jiv., part 2, p. 625) identifies the Āśvattha tree with Śrī Kṛṣṇa. The Mahābhārata (Śānti 69. 42) forbids even the felling of the leaves of trees like the āśvattha that have a platform²⁰⁸⁵ built for them (caitya). Śāntiparva 184. 1-17 graphically describes how trees have life since they feel pain and pleasure and grow though cut. The Bhaviṣyapurāṇa quoted in the Utsargamayūkha (p. 16) states 'he who plants either one āśvattha or one picumarda or one nyagrodha or ten tamarind trees, or the three trees i. e. kapittha, bilva and āmalaka or plants five mango trees would not see hell (i. e. would not be condemned to hell for his sins).²⁰⁸⁶ The Matsyapurāṇa (chap. 270. 28-29) requires that to the east of the maṇḍapa of a temple fruit-bearing trees should be planted, to the south trees that contain milky sap, to the west a reservoir of water with lotuses therein should be constructed and to the north a flower garden and sarala and tāla trees. Vas. Dh. S. 19. 11-12 prescribes that no one should injure (i. e. cut) trees that yield fruits and flowers except only for purposes of cultivating the land²⁰⁸⁷ (and for sacrificial purposes, as laid down in Viṣṇu Dh. S. 51. 63). The Viṣṇu Dh. S. V. 55. 59 prescribes that the king should award the highest fine, the middling fine, or a fine of 100 kārṣāpaṇas or of one kārṣāpaṇa respectively against those who wrongfully cut a tree bearing fruit or a tree that bears flowers, or who cut creepers and shrubs or grass.

Hemādri (Dāna. pp. 1029-1055) deals at length with the planting of trees, the dedication of a garden and the merit acquired by making gifts of various trees. The procedure of dedicating a garden is prescribed in Śān. gr. V. 3, Āśv. gr. pariśiṣṭa IV. 10, the Matsyapurāṇa 59, Agnipurāṇa 70 and in many other works. It is modelled on the dedication of wells and tanks. The Matsyapurāṇa expressly states that the procedure of the consecration of a tank is extended to the consecration of everything, such as a prāsāda (a large house or hall for public use), a garden &c., the only difference being that the mantras are different.²⁰⁸⁸ The procedure in Śān. gr.²⁰⁸⁹ (V. 3) is: Having established the sacred fire in that garden and having cooked a mess of food, the donor should sacrifice with the words (Viṣṇave svāhā, Indrāgnibhyām svāhā, Viśvakarmaṇe svāhā) and with verses Rg. III. 8. 6 ff. (yān vo naro), verse by verse. Then he recites over the garden the verse Rg. III. 8. 11 'vanaspate śatavalśo vi roha.' The fee for the sacrifice is gold.

Devatā-pratiṣṭhā—(Consecration of an image in a temple).

Though the dharmaśūtras speak as shown above of images and temples, it strikes one as somewhat strange that none of the principal gr̥hya and dharma-sūtras contains any procedure of consecrating an image in a temple, while in the purāṇas and some of the digests much space is devoted to the topic of devatā-pratiṣṭhā. The Matsyapurāṇa in chap. 264 and the Agnipurāṇa in chap. 60 and 66 deal with devatāpratiṣṭhā in general. There are special chapters in the purāṇas on the consecration of the image of Viṣṇu or of Śiva or the Liṅga. It would be impossible to deal in any detail with all this matter. The worship of god can be done in two ways, viz. without any outward symbol and with a symbol. The first is achieved by a prayer and offering oblations into fire; the second by means of images. But even image worshippers are quite conscious that god is pure consciousness (cit), is one without a second, is without parts and without a physical body, and that the various images

The worship of god through the medium of images is again two-fold, viz. done in one's house and in a public temple. The latter is, according to many works, the best and the completest, since it allows of the celebration of festivals and the performance of the varied items or modes of worship (upacāra). Private worship of idols in one's house has already been dealt with above (pp. 726-736) under Devapūjā. Now the worship of images in temples remains to be dealt with. The establishment of images in temples is again of two kinds viz. calārcā (where the image can be lifted up, moved to another place) and sthirārcā (where the image is fixed on a pedestal or is not meant to be lifted up or moved). The consecration of these two differs in certain details.

Here numerous matters have to be considered. The principal matters to be attended to according to the Matsyapurāṇa (264-66) are: the auspicious time for the consecration of an image, the erection of a maṇḍapa to the east or north of the temple, the erection of a vedi therein, erection of four torāṇas (arched gates) for the maṇḍapa, placing two auspicious jars at each of four gates filled with scented water and herbs and covered with mango leaves and white cloth, raising of banners all round the maṇḍapa, worship of lokapālas (guardian deities of quarters), erecting another maṇḍapa for bathing the image in, bringing the image and honouring the artisans, drawing lines on the image or līṅga with a golden needle to represent the lustre of eyes, the selection of a qualified sthāpaka or ācārya and of from eight to 32 other priests (called mūrtipa); taking the image or līṅga to the maṇḍapa meant for bathing the image, bathing the image to the accompaniment of music with pañcagavya mixture, with mṛttikā (loose earth), with holy ashes and water; rendering it pure by repeating four mantras (viz. samudrajyeṣṭhāḥ, āpo divyāḥ, yāsām rājā and āpo hi ṣṭhā, which are respectively Rg. VII. 49. 1-3 and X. 9. 1); offering worship after the bath to the image with sandalwood paste and covering it with a garment (with the verse 'abhi vastrā' Rg. IX. 97. 50), placing the image in a standing position with the mantra 'uttīṣṭha' (Rg. I. 40. 1); placing the image in a chariot with the verses

'ā mūraja' and 'rathe tiṣṭhan' (Rg. VI. 47. 31 and VI. 75. 6) and entering it in the maṇḍapa with the verse 'ā kṛṣṇena' (Rg. I. 35. 2); placing the image on a bed on which kuśa grass and flowers are strewn with the face (of the image) towards the east; placing a water jar (called nidrākalaśa) having gold in it and a piece of cloth at the mouth towards the head of the image with the mantras 'āpo devīr' (Tai. S. VII. 3. 13. 1) and 'āpo asmān' (Rg. X. 17. 10); placing under the head of the image silken pillows, sprinkling honey and clarified butter, and worshipping with mustard with the verse 'āpyāyasva' (Rg. I. 91. 16 or IX. 31. 4) and 'yā te rudra' (Tai. S. IV. 5. 1. 1); offering worship with sandalwood paste and flowers and tying a band (pratisara) on the right hand (of the image) with 'bārhaspatya' mantra; placing a parasol, chowrie, mirror, jewels, auspicious herbs, household utensils, fine vessels and seats by the side of the image with the verse 'abhi tvā' (Rg. VII. 32. 22); honouring the image with the presentation of various foods and condiments with the verse 'tryambakaṁ yajāmahe' (Rg. VII. 59. 12); placing four priests and four door-keepers in the four directions viz. a priest knowing Rgveda in the east and so on and each of the four priests is to repeat from his own Veda several hymns and verses e. g. the Rgvedin priest should recite Śrisūkta (Rg. I. 165), Pavamāna hymn (from Rg. IX. 1), Śāntikādhyāya (Rg. X. 16), then a hymn to Indra. Then the ācārya is to perform homa towards the head of the image with Śāntika mantras and offer into the fire 1000 samidhs (fuel sticks) each of palāśa, udumbara, aśvattha, apāmārga and śamī trees and then touch the feet of the god; preparing nine kuṇḍas each one cubit square and offering into them one thousand samidhs each time on touching the navel, the chest and the head of the image; remembering the eight forms (mūrti) of god viz. the earth, fire, the sacrifice, the sun, the water, wind, moon and ākūśa and offering homa to these with vaidika mantras; placing auspicious jars near each kuṇḍa; bathing the image at every watch and offering incense, food (naivedya), sandalwood paste; offering bali to all beings, and dinner to brāhmaṇas and persons of other castes at one's desire; celebrating a festival at night with dances, song and music; this may go on from one day to seven days (it is called adhivāsana); then the temple building is to be sprinkled over; finding out a place for the image either to the north or slightly to the north-east in the temple; a stone in the form of a tortoise is to be placed on the temple floor; preparing a piṇḍikā and bathing it with pañcagavya with mantras; then raising the image with the mantra 'uttīṣṭha' (Rg. I. 40. 1), bringing it in the inmost chamber of the temple and placing it on the pīṭha (pedestal), offering it arghya water, pādya water, madhuparka; then the nyāsa (depositing) of eight kinds of jewels viz. diamond, pearl, lapis luzuli, conch, crystal, puṣparāga, indranila and nīla in the eight directions from the east, also of eight kinds of grains viz. wheat, barley, sesame, mudga, nīvara, śyāmāka, mustard and rice and also eight fragrant things such as white and red sandal-wood, agaru, uśīra &c. Nyāsa of all these is to be made after repeating om and the paurāṇika mantras (with 'namo namaḥ' at end) of the eight guardians (lokapālas) viz. Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirṛti, Varuṇa, Vāyu, Soma, Īśāna and also of Brahmā (9th) and Ananta (10th); raising the image and fixing it in the scooped up portion of the pedestal with the mantra 'dhruvā dyaur' (Rg. X. 173. 4); placing one's hand on the head of the image and contemplating on the well-known form of the deity that is established, whether Viṣṇu, Śiva, Brahmā, the Sun; repeating appropriate mantras (viz. those of Rudra, Viṣṇu, Brahmā, the Sun in the case of the respective gods whose image is established); establishing deities near the principal image of the god's dependants (such as Nandī in the case of Śiva); invocation (āvāhana) of the principal deity with its attendants with paurāṇika mantras; bathing the image with curds, milk, clarified butter, honey and sugar and then with water in which flowers and scents are mixed up; repeating the following mantras again and again viz. 'yaj-jāgrato dūram-upaiti' (Vāj. S. 34. 1), 'tato virād-ajāyata' (Vāj. S. 31. 5), 'sahasraśīrṣā' (Rg. X. 90. 1), 'yenedam bhūtam' (Vāj. S. 34. 4), 'na tvāvām' (Rg. VII. 32. 23); touching four times with water the feet, the waist and head (of the image); giving gifts of clothes, ornaments &c. to the ācārya and to the poor, the blind and the distressed and to others that may be gathered to see; filling with sand any aperture in any direction in which the image appears to be unstable and performing propitiatory rites for the guardian of that quarter and making gifts suitable to each lokapāla; celebrating a festival for three, five or seven days.

The general procedure of consecrating an image has been given above at some length from the Matsyapurāṇa in order to convey some idea how in the first centuries of the Christian era the consecration of images was done. It will be noticed that mostly vedic mantras were employed though a few paurāṇika mantras also occur. In medieval digests like the Devapratisthātattva other elements were added from Tantra works. Special attention may be drawn to the fact that in the above procedure the word prāṇapratisthā does not occur in the Matsya. Raghunandana (in Devapratisthātattva) quotes Devipurāṇa to the effect that prāṇapratisthā is done after touching the cheeks of the image with the right hand and that without this vivification a mere image does not attain to the position of a deity worthy of worship. In the Devapratisthātattva, the Nirṇayasindhu, the Rājadharmakaustubha and other works the prāṇapratisthā is based on the 23rd chapter (paṭala) of the Śārādātīlaka (verses 72-76). The mantra is given below.²⁰⁹¹

The Devapratisthātattva (p. 505) quotes the Hayaśīrṣapañcarātra to the effect that generally a brāhmaṇa should officiate at the consecration of an image of Viṣṇu, but a kṣatriya can officiate for a vaiśya or a śūdra yajamāna and a vaiśya may do for a śūdra yajamāna, but a śūdra cannot officiate.

In the Matsyapurāṇa, the Agnipurāṇa, the Nṛsiṃhapurāṇa, the Nirṇayasindhu and many other works there are descriptions of the consecration of the images of Vāsudeva, of a liṅga and other deities, which are all passed over here for want of space. In these works following Tantric practices three kinds of *nyāsa*s viz. Māṛkānyāsa, Tattvanyāsa and Mantranyāsa are referred to. The Māṛkānyāsa consists in repeating the letters of the alphabet from a (including 'am' and 'aḥ') to ḷ (in the form of akārūya namaḥ svāhā) and offering an oblation in fire. The Tattva-nyāsa consists in repeating 'Ātmatattvāya namaḥ, svāhā' and the same formula as to Ātmattvādhipati, Kriyāśakti, Śivatattva (or Viṣṇutattva), Śivatattvādhipati, Icchāśakti, Vidyātattva, Vidyātattvādhipati, Ādhāraśakti. The Mantranyāsa is as follows : taking a mantra of certain letters for a god (e. g. one of 12 letters as in ' om namo bhagavate Vāsudevāya ') one has to repeat each letter in the formula ' om oṃkārya namaḥ svāhā '.

The Dharmasindhu III (pūrvārdha) sets forth a brief procedure of the consecration of images in which only one priest is required (vide pp. 333-34). In modern times also the procedure of devatāpratiṣṭhā contains numerous elements and is extremely long.

The Vaikhāṇasa Smārtasūtra (IV. 10-11) contains perhaps the earliest extant detailed description of the consecration of the image of Viṣṇu. But it appears to have been mainly concerned with an image installed in private houses or with the worship of an image by one individual. It is briefly as follows:²⁰⁹² After the daily homa comes the daily worship of Viṣṇu, which (worship) comprehends in itself the worship of all gods. A brāhmaṇa passage (Ait. Br. I. 1) says ' Agni is indeed the nethermost (or the lowest) among gods and Viṣṇu the highest; between these two stand all the other deities '. Therefore having established in one's house the highest god Viṣṇu the householder worships him at the end of the evening and morning homa. He should make an image of Viṣṇu in length not more than six fingers; he should perform its consecration in the bright half (of a month) on an auspicious nakṣatra. Three days before he should prepare the space (kuṇḍa) of the grhya fire and perform the several rites of prokṣaṇa, drawing lines as described (in Vaik. I. 9). Then he is to perform homa up to āghāras (as described above pp. 210-11). Then he performs the sacrifices to the limbs in the words ' to the teeth, svāhā : to the jaws, svāhā ', and other oblations with the six mantras beginning with ' ato devā ' (Rg. I. 22. 16-21). Then he performs while repeating audibly the hymn to Puruṣa (Rg. X. 90. 1-16) the opening of the eyes (of the god Viṣṇu) with a golden needle. Having spread in a river or a pond or in a vessel filled with water cloth and kuśa grass with the mantras beginning ' ye te śatam ' (mentioned in Vaik. III. 17) he lays down (the image of) the god on these with the head turned to the east and leaves the image there. On the second day after he bathes, he offers at night the āghāra in the usual way; he brings eight jars, fills them successively with pañcagavya, ghee, curds, milk, water mixed with whole rice, water with fruits, water with kuśa grass, water with jewels (pearls &c.); worships the god, bathes the image with the (contents of) the (eight) jars successively with the following mantras: 'vasoḥ pavitram' (Vāj. S. I. 31), 'agna āyāhi', 'iṣe tvōrje tvā', 'śam no devīr',²⁰⁹³ 'catvāri śrīgā' (Rg. IV. 58. 3), 'somo dhenum' (Rg. I. 91. 26), 'catvāri vāk' (Rg. I. 164. 45), 'idam viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17); he further bathes the image with perfumed waters to the accompaniment of the mantras 'āpo' (Rg. X. 9. 1), 'hiraṇya-varṇāḥ' (Tai. S. V. 6. 1. 1) and the pavamāna section. He then makes to the north of the fire a vedi (altar) with rice, places a seat on it, spreads cloth on it, places the god thereon and having decked (the image) with clothes &c. worships the image. He has the benediction pronounced (by the brāhmaṇas), he touches the pratisara (a band or ribbon) with the svasti hymn²⁰⁹⁴ and ties it (on the right hand of the image) with the mantra 'svastidā viśaspatir' (Rg. X. 152. 2). He then lays the god down as before. After filling with purified clear water a jar that is not dark-coloured, he places it by the (right) side of the image, touches it with the syllable 'om' and throws into it a bunch of kuśa grass, whole rice, a piece of gold and a jewel (pearl). Having meditated on the god who is really without parts as residing in his own heart and also in the clear water, as golden in splendour, as having red face, eyes, hands and feet, as wearing the śrīvatsa mark and a yellow garment, as having (in his hands) the conch and the disc, as of benign countenance and as possessed of all parts (i. e. complete) he should bow before him. Having sprinkled water round the fire and having lauded the work of the hotṛ, he invokes the god by name in the southern praṇidhi vessel in the words 'om bhūḥ puruṣam' (āvāhayāmi) and performs invocations in the same way with vyāhrtis separately and together and of Nārāyaṇa,

Viṣṇu, Puruṣa, Satya, Acyuta, Aniruddha, Śrī, Mahī. Having poured out the rice (for the sacrificial offering) he sacrifices four times with ghee and with a hymn to Viṣṇu, with the Puruṣasūkta (Rg. X. 90), with the mantras beginning with 'ato devāḥ' (Rg. I. 22. 16-21) and with the mantra 'medinī devī'; he should then offer the mess of boiled rice sprinkled over with clarified butter after invoking the god's names (Keśava and 11 others mentioned in Vaik. III. 13). On the following morning he bathes, placing the god in the standing position after uttering 'om'; carries the image with the jar while muttering the śākuna hymn (Rg. II. 42. 1-3 and II. 43. 1-3) in the north-western direction into his house or in a temple or in the agnihotra-shed; placing down on the pedestal meant for the image jewels and gold he installs the image of Viṣṇu saying 'I install Viṣṇu' while repeating a hymn to Viṣṇu and the hymn to Puruṣa (Rg. X. 90). He makes a nyāsa on the head, on the navel, on the feet and the chest of the image of the syllables svaḥ, bhuvaḥ and bhūh and om; fixing his mind on the god with the mantra 'idam Viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17) and taking with a bunch of kuśa grass the clear water that has been already poured in the jar and that has already the śakti (power personified) in it, he makes (the water) flow on the head of the image and performs the invocation with the words 'I invoke Viṣṇu'. Having propitiated by worship as laid down in the śāstric rules he presents the sacrificial food (to the image).

In Vaik. IV. 12 the daily worship of Viṣṇu is set out.

The practice of attaching dancing girls to temples is of respectable antiquity. The origin of this practice appears to be analogous to the institution of Vestal virgins in Rome. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī (IV. 269) speaks of two dancing girls attached to a temple (devagr̥hāśrite nartakyau) who danced and sang at a place as it was the custom of their family, though the temple itself was buried underground. In the Vaghli (Khandesh District) stone Inscription dated śake 991 (1069-70 A. D.) there is a grant of Govindarāja making provision for dancing and singing by damsels²⁰⁹⁵ (vilāsinī). In the Inscription of the Cāhamāna king Jojaladeva dated samvat 1147 (1090-91 A. D.) the courtezans of all temples are said to have been ordered to come in their best dress and celebrate a festival with music (E. I. vol. XI. 26 and 27) and the king records an imprecation against all who might stop that practice. The Itṭagi (20 miles east of Gadag) inscription dated 1112 A. D. records (E. I. vol. XIII. p. 58) that a brāhmaṇa named Mahādeva donated houses for the retinue of dancing girls and other attendants of the gods at Itṭagi. This practice of devadāsīs (minor girls dedicated to the service of temples) or bhāvins (which term is known in the southern parts of the Ratnagiri district) was held by the modern Indian Courts to be immoral and whoever disposes of any person under the age of 18 years (or obtains possession of any person) with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or with knowledge that the person is likely to be employed or used for any such purpose at any age is liable to be prosecuted under Sec. 372 and 373 of the Indian Penal Code (as amended by Act 18 of 1924).²⁰⁹⁶ In Bombay there is the Bombay Devadasis Protection Act (Bombay Act X. of 1934) which declares the performance of ceremonies for dedicating an unmarried woman to an idol or temple illegal and renders the dedicator or abettor thereof liable to punishment (one year's imprisonment or fine or both).

Punaḥ-pratiṣṭhā :—(Re-consecration of images in temples). The Brahmapurāṇa quoted by the Devapratīṣṭhātattva and the Nirṇayasindhu says 'when an image is broken into two or is reduced to particles, is burnt, is removed from its pedestal, is insulted, has ceased to be worshipped, is touched by beasts like donkeys or falls on impure ground or is worshipped with mantras of other deities or is rendered impure by the touch of outcasts and the like—in these ten contingencies, god ceases to indwell therein.' When an image is polluted by (contact with) the blood of a brāhmaṇa or by the touch of a corpse or the touch of a patila it should be re-consecrated. If an image is broken in parts or reduced to particles it should be removed according to śāstric rules and another should be installed in its place. When an image is broken or stolen a fast should be observed. If images of metal such as of copper are touched by thieves or cāṇḍālas they should be purified in the same way in which polluted vessels of those metals are purified and then they should be re-consecrated. If an image properly consecrated has had no worship performed without pre-meditation (i.e. owing to forgetfulness or neglect) for one night or a month or two months or the image is touched by a śūdra or a woman in her monthly illness, then the image should have water adhvāsa (placing in water) performed on it and it should be bathed with water from a jar, then with pañcagavya, then it should be bathed with pure water from jars to the accompaniment of the hymn to Puruṣa (Rg. X. 90) repeated 8000 times, 800 times or 28 times, worship should be offered with sandal-wood paste and flowers, naivedya (food) of rice cooked with jaggery should be offered. This is the way in which the re-consecration is effected.

R. 60 (Crown Cases) for convictions for dedication of minor girls to temple-service and marrying them to an idol; also 1 Mad. 164, 15 Mad. 41 and 75. The Marathi word 'bhāvin' is derived from bhāvinī (a woman having bhāva) and bhāva in the language of Sanskrit rhetoric means 'love of god' (ratir-devādi-viṣaya ... bhāva iti proktaḥ 'Kāvya-prakāśa IV. 35). Vide Enthoven's 'Tribe and castes of Bombay' vol. I. pp. 145-147 for information about Bhāvins.

Jirṇoddhāra (rehabilitating old or dilapidated temples &c.). This subject is closely connected with the preceding topic and is dealt with in the Agnipurāṇa, chap. 67 and 103 (about liṅgas); the Nirṇayasindhu (III. pūrvārdha p. 353), the Dharmasindhu (III. pūrvārdha p. 335) give an extensive procedure following the Agnipurāṇa. This is done when the image in a temple or a liṅga is burnt, or reduced to particles or is removed to another place. The Agnipurāṇa (103. 4) says that if an image or liṅga is carried off by the strong current of a river, it may be re-consecrated elsewhere according to the rites prescribed in the śāstra. According to the Agnipurāṇa²⁰⁹⁷ (103. 21) a liṅga that is reputed to have been established by the asuras (like Bāṇāsura) or famous sages or by gods or by those who were expert in Tantra should not be removed to another place, whether it be worn out or broken, even after the performance of prescribed rites. The Agnipurāṇa prescribes (chap. 67. 3-6) that an image of wood when extremely worn out may be burnt, one of stone may be thrown into water, one made of metal or of a jewel (pearl &c.) should be thrown into very deep water or the sea after carrying it covered with cloth in a cart to the accompaniment of music and on the same day another of the same dimensions and substance should be installed after the purification of the image is effected. When the daily worship of an image had been stopped of set purpose or when it is touched by śūdras and the like, purification can be effected only by re-consecration. Re-consecration can be done even in intercalary months or when Venus is too near the sun to be visible. When a temple or a well or a tank is breached or when a garden embankment or a public hall is injured, one should offer four oblations of clarified butter with the four verses 'idam Viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17), 'mā nastoke' (Rg. I. 114. 8), 'Viṣṇoḥ karmāṇi' (Rg. I. 22. 19), 'pādosya' (Rg. X. 90. 3), and then a dinner may be given to brāhmaṇas.

The procedure of jīrṇoddhāra is given at length in the Nirṇayasindhu, the Dharmasindhu and other works. Vṛddha-Hārta IX. 409-415 also deals with re-consecration. Śāṅkha-Likhita quoted in the Vivāda-raṭnākara and other works say that, when an image, a garden, a well, a bridge (over a moat or river), a flagstaff, a dam, a reservoir of water are breached, they should be repaired (or raised), re-consecrated and the person guilty of breach should be fined 800 paṇas.²⁰⁹⁸ When worship was stopped, some authors prescribed re-consecration, while others prescribed only prokṣaṇa as laid down in the Devapratīṣṭhātattva (p. 512) or Dharmasindhu (III pūrvārdha p. 334).

The Kirāḍu (Jodhpur) Inscription of the time of king Bhīmadeva of Anahillapātaka records that in place of an image broken by Turuskas (Moslems) a new one was installed in saṃvat 1235 (1178-79 A. D.) by the wife of Tejaḥpāla, a subordinate officer of the feudatory Cāhamāna Mahārājaputra Madanabrahma (vide E. I. vol. XX, Appendix p. 56 No. 381).

Mathapratīṣṭhā :—(the founding of a monastery or a college for teachers and pupils.)

The founding of maṭhas appears to have been not very ancient. The Baud. Dh. S. (III. 1. 16) in speaking of a householder who is an agnihotrin remarks 'after departing from his house he (the householder) stops at the extremity of the village, builds there a hut (kuṭī), or a cottage hall (maṭha) and enters it'. Here maṭha does not appear to have any technical sense. In the lexicon of Amara a maṭha is defined as 'a place where pupils (and their teacher) reside'. A temple and a maṭha were both established from the same religious motive or sentiment, but they served different purposes. A temple was built principally for the purpose of prayer and worship. It also often provided for religious instruction, for the recitation of the Mahābhārata, the Rāmāyaṇa and the purāṇas, for kīrtans to the accompaniment of music. But these latter were only secondary purposes. In the case of the maṭhas they were primarily intended for the instruction of pupils or the laity by some great teacher in the tenets of a sect or in the doctrines of some philosophy or in some branch of learning such as grammar, mīmāṃsā, astronomy and the like. In many cases shrines or temples are associated with or affiliated to the maṭhas, but the worship of a particular deity is not the primary object of maṭhas. Mathas among the followers of the Vedic religion probably owed their origin to the example of Buddhist monasteries (vihāras) ²⁰⁹⁹. The foundation of maṭhas received a great fillip after the times of the celebrated Advaita teacher, the great Śaṅkarācārya, whom tradition credits with having established for the propagation of his system of Vedānta four maṭhas at Śṛṅgerī, Puri (Govardhanamaṭha), Dvārakā (Śāradāmaṭha) and Badarī (Jyotirmaṭha). Vide E. C. vol. VI Sg. No. 11 (an inscription dated 1652 A. D.) where reference is made to a grant in Śṛṅgapura, the dharmapīṭha established by Śaṅkarācārya, to the famous maṭha at Śṛṅgerī for the worship of Mallikārjuna, Vidyā-śaṅkara-svāmī and Śāradāmbā. Other ācāryas like Rāmānuja and Madhva established their own maṭhas and the number of maṭhas is now legion. Originally a maṭha started by a sannyāsin like the great Śaṅkarācārya must have had no property, as ascetics were prohibited by the śāstras from possessing property, except such articles of personal use as clothes, sandals, religious books on palm leaf or paper &c. Besides sannyāsins were required not to stay long in one place. So people built shelters for them, in order to accommodate them when they visited their town or village and these were probably originally called maṭha, which in its narrow sense means a place where an ascetic resides. In its wider sense it means an institution where a teacher presides and instructs several disciples in religious and analogous tenets, practices and dogmas. But gradually the zeal and devotion of the disciples and followers of the great teachers endowed the maṭhas with considerable moveable and immoveable properties. The origin of maṭhas (spoken of as maṭṭams in South India) has been lucidly set forth as follows in Sammantha Pandara v. Sellappa Chetti 2 Mad. 175 at p. 179 'a preceptor of religious doctrine gathers around him a number of disciples whom he initiates into the particular mysteries of the order and instructs in its religious tenets. Such of these disciples as intend to become religious teachers renounce their connection with their family and all claims to the family wealth and as it were affiliate themselves to the spiritual teacher whose school they have entered. Pious persons endow the schools with property which is vested in the preceptor for the time being and a home for the school is created and a maṭṭam constituted. The property of the maṭṭam does not descend to the disciples or elders in common; the preceptor, the head of the institution, selects from among the affiliated disciples him whom he deems the most competent and in his own life-time instals the disciple so settled as his successor, not uncommonly with some ceremonies. After the death of the preceptor the disciple so chosen is installed in the gaddi and takes by succession the property which has been held by his predecessor. The property is in fact attached to the office and passes by inheritance to no one who does not fill that office. It is in a certain sense trust property; it is devoted to the maintenance of the establishment, but the superior has a large domain over it, and is not accountable for its management nor for the expenditure of the income, provided he does not apply it to any purpose other than what may fairly be regarded as in furtherance of the object of the institution. Acting for the whole institution he may contract debts for purposes connected with his maṭṭam and debts so contracted might be recovered from the maṭṭam property and would devolve as a liability on his successor to the extent of the assets received by him'. 2100. Vide Rājatarāṅgiṇī VI. 87-88 where the king is said to have donated to the head of a maṭha (maṭhādhipati) where pupils were taught almost all his wealth.

The head of a maṭha is called svāmi, maṭhapati or maṭhādhipati or mahanta (usually written as mohunt in the Law Reports). The head of the maṭha is usually appointed according to the custom and practice of each maṭha, generally in one of three ways, viz. (1) the head for the time selects from among his disciples a fit one to succeed him, (2) the disciples elect one from among themselves to succeed on the demise of the head, (3) the ruling power or the original founder or his heirs appoint the head when there is a vacancy.

That temples and mathas have throughout the centuries been supplementary to each other, both ministering to the religious and spiritual wants of the people can be shown by a few examples. It has been seen how Bāṇa (in the seventh century) refers to the recitation of the Mahābhārata in the temple of Mahākālā at Ujjayinī. The Rājatarāṅginī (V. 29) states how king Avantivarman of Kashmir appointed one Rāmaṣa Upādhyāya to the post of expounder (vyākhyātrpadaka) of grammar in a temple (about 900 A. D.). The Agnipurāṇa²¹⁰¹ enjoins that in a temple of Śiva or Viṣṇu or the Sun if any one reads a book he may thereby acquire (the merit of) the imparting of all knowledge. Some maṭhas on the other hand provided for instruction not only in spiritual knowledge but also in secular knowledge. In the Patna Inscription of the time of the Yādava king Siṅghaṇa, we read that Caṅgadeva, the court astronomer and astrologer, established in śake 1128 (1207 A. D.) a maṭha for the study of the Siddhānta-śiromapi (an astronomical work) of Bhāskarācārya, the grandfather of Caṅgadeva (E. I. vol. I. p. 338), the maṭha being endowed with lands and other sources of income by two feudatories of Siṅghaṇa. Vide also E. C. vol. VI. Sg. No. 11 referred to above (p. 907) where in endowing the maṭha at Śringerī provision was made for the worship of Mallikārjuna and Śāradāmbā.

A passage quoted in the Dānacandrikā from the Skandapurāṇa states that a maṭha should be provided with cots and seats, should be thatched with grass and provided with platforms and should be donated to brāhmaṇas or ascetics at some auspicious time; by so doing a man secures all his desires and if he has no worldly desires he secures release (from saṃsāra).²¹⁰²

The word maṭha was sometimes used in the sense of a dharmaśālā, a place provided for the temporary residence of travellers from distant parts. For example, the Rājatarāṅgiṇī VI. 300 states that queen Diddā constructed (about 972 A. D.) a maṭha for the residence of the people from Madhyadeśa, Lāṭa and Saurāṣṭra.

Throughout India for many centuries there have been well-endowed temples and maṭhas. But how the rulers or the ancient and medieval courts of justice regulated the administration of these institutions or their funds or how they prevented or stopped maladministration or misappropriation is not dealt with exhaustively anywhere.

In Girijanund Datta Jha v. Sailajanund Datta Jha 23 Cal. 645 it is observed as follows (at p. 653) 'notwithstanding the existence of numerous richly endowed Hindu shrines all over India from the earliest times, the Hindu Law strictly so called is, as Sir T. Strange complains (see his Hindu Law, Ed. of 1839, vol. 1, p. 32) meagre in its provisions relating to religious endowments, a fact which may perhaps be accounted for on the supposition that the high reputation for piety and purity of character justly enjoyed for the most part by the priestly classes of ancient India who had the management of the shrines was deemed a sufficient safeguard against breach of duty, so as to render detailed rules of law to regulate their conduct unnecessary'. In the following some of the meagre material that can be gathered from Dharmaśāstra works and analogous writings is set out. Manu (XI. 26) first appeals to the religious sentiments of people by declaring that the wicked man who from greed seizes the property of gods or of brāhmaṇas feeds in another world on the leavings of the food of vultures. Śābara remarks (on Jaimini²¹⁰³ IX. 1.9) that when it is said that a village or field belongs to a god, that is not a literal expression but used only in a secondary sense. That is said to be owned by a person which one can use as one likes; a field or a village cannot be used by a deity; but the attendants on the god (or temple) are maintained out of what is donated to a temple or god. From this it follows that all those rules that apply to a gift to a human being do not apply to a property dedicated to an idol. Medhātithi²¹⁰⁴ (on Manu XI. 26 and II. 189) points out that images cannot be said to be owners in the literal sense, but only in a secondary or ideal sense, since the idol in a shrine cannot use the property at its will nor can it safeguard it and ownership consists in being able to use the thing owned as one desires and in being able to preserve it. In modern times courts in India have laid down that an idol is a juridical person capable of holding property, though from the vary nature of the case the possession and management of the property rests with a manager or a trustee. A maṭha is in the same position as an idol. The rights of the idol or of the maṭha can be safeguarded and vindicated in a court of law only by the manager or trustee of the temple or by the head (called mohunt) of the maṭha.²¹⁰⁵ Vide Bhupati Nath v. Ram Lal 37 Cal. 128 (F. B.) at pp. 145-153 where Mr. Justice Mukerji examines at length passages of Śābara, Medhātithi, the Dāyabhāga and its commentators to explain what is meant by a gift to an idol according to the notions of the Hindu writers. Manu and other smṛtikāras lay down that it is part of the king's duty to prosecute and fine persons interfering with or destroying the property of temples. Yāj. II. 228 prescribes a fine of 40, 80 or 160 paṇas respectively for cutting off the twigs, principal branches of trees or the entire trees themselves that grow on built up platforms or in cemeteries or on boundaries or in holy places or near temples. Yāj. (II. 240 and 295) prescribes the highest amercement for fabricating a false edict or for tampering with royal edicts by inserting more or less than what is intended to be granted by the king. The Mit. on Yāj. II. 186 says that the king should sedulously safeguard all rules made about the pastures for cows (in a village) or about the preservation of tanks and temples. Manu IX. 280 requires the king to pronounce the death sentence on those who break into a royal storehouse or an armoury or a temple and prescribes that the breaker of an image shall repair the whole damage and also pay a fine of five hundred paṇas. Kauṭ. III. 9 prescribes punishment for encroachment on temples. From the Kauṭīliya²¹⁰⁶ we know that kings appointed an officer called 'devatādhyakṣa' (Superintendent of temples) and that when the king's treasury became empty it was part of the duty of that officer to bring together all the wealth of the temples in the forts and other parts of the country and the king could in an emergency use that wealth (and probably used to return it later when financial stringency ceased). Among matters called prakīrṇaka (miscellaneous) of which the king was to take cognisance suo motu without anybody's complaint, Nārada includes (in verse 3) 'abstraction of gifts' and 'gifts of villages and towns to brāhmanas' (verse 2). According to the Sm. C. among the topics called *chalas*²¹⁰⁷ were two viz. the destruction of a reservoir of drinking water and of a temple. Kātyāyana states that mere wrongful possession for any length of time of women, of state property and of temple property would not confer ownership on anybody. These texts indicated that the Government of the day protected temple properties, tanks, wells and the like that were dedicated to the public and exercised powers of superintendence and correction in matters affecting them. Yāj. II. 191 says that those who look after the business of guilds etc. in which many are interested should be students of the Veda, men of rectitude and free from greed. They are styled kāryacintaka by him. Bṛhaspati²¹⁰⁸ quoted by Aparārka says (p. 796) that these kāryacintakas (committee) should consist of two, three or five persons and that if there be disagreement between the larger bodies and the committee the king should decide that dispute and should bring round to the proper path whoever might be in the wrong. It appears that from very ancient times (3rd or 2nd century B. C.) the committee in charge of religious foundations was called goṣṭhi and the members *goṣṭhika*²¹⁰⁹. In some inscriptions the superintendent of a temple is called sthānapati (vide Śrīraṅgam plates of Deva-rāya II dated śake 1356 in E. I. vol. 18, p. 138). In the Sirpur Stone Inscription of Mahāśivagupta (about 8th or 9th century A. D.) of Mahākosala provision is made for a portion of the property granted being heritable by the sons and grandsons of the donees only if they were worthy, kept up agnihotra, studied the six aṅgas and had clean mouths and did not engage in service and further that if the heir did not possess these qualities or died without leaving a son &c., then another person, a relative with the requisite qualifications, could be made the recipient of that share, and he was to be elderly and learned and was to be chosen by mutual agreement and the king's express order was not to be necessary for his selection.²¹¹⁰ Paṭhīnāsī quoted by Aparārka p. 746 ordains that the king should not deprive temples and corporations of their properties. A record from Malabar of the 11th century A. D. gives the details of temple administration in Kerala, that was in the hands of Yogam (corporation) wielding independent power (E. I. vol. 18 p. 340). The Peshwa's Government at Poona often interfered when disputes arose about properties dedicated to shrines and tombs of saints between the managers of the temples or among the heirs of the saint to whom lands had been originally donated. For example, the Peshwa made an award in 1744 A. D. about the principal religious and charitable institution in the Deccan, viz. the Chinchvad Samsthan, whereby he set apart one half of all properties bestowed on the shrine at that place for purely religious and charitable purposes and distributed the other half between the manager and his kinsmen who were all descendants of the original founder, Shri Moraya Gosavi (vide *Chintaman v. This privilege of ancient rulers to redress grievances and correct abuses in the management of religious and charitable endowments devolved upon the British Government as laid down by the Privy Council in Rajah Muthu Ramlinga v. Perianayagum Pillai, L. R. 1 I. A. 209 at p. 232 'It is evident...that the British Government, by virtue of its sovereign power, asserted as the former rulers of the country had done, the right to visit endowments of this kind and to prevent and redress abuses in their management'. The Indian Central and Provincial Legislatures have placed on the Statute book many Acts regulating religious and charitable endowments. A list of the most important of these enactments is given below.²¹¹¹

Property dedicated to a god is called 'devottara' (the word being written as debutter in the Law Reports, particularly from Bengal). Vide Sham Charan Nandi v. Abhiram Goswami, 33 Cal. 511 at p. 523. A good deal of litigation comes up to the courts about the rights and liabilities of the trustees and the sevakas (called Shebait in Bengal), about their mismanagement of the temple properties and their removal and so forth.

Among impartible things Manu (IX. 219) included yoga-kṣema. The Mit. on Yāj. II. 118-119 shows that several meanings were attached to that expression by various writers, but that relying upon a verse of Laugākṣi it prefers the meaning of iṣṭa and pūrta. Therefore the Mit.²¹¹² declares that gifts dedicated by a person to the public by expending ancestral wealth such as tanks, gardens, and temples could not be partitioned by the sons and grandsons. In modern times also the same is the rule. Besides properties dedicated to temples and other religious and charitable purposes are generally inalienable, according to legislative enactments and judicial decisions,²¹¹³ except where an alienation is absolutely necessary for the upkeep of the religious worship or for the benefit and preservation of the institution.

A question arises whether, when a work of public utility is dedicated, the founder possesses any control over the thing dedicated and if so to what extent. The Vīramitrodaya (on *Vyavahāra*²¹¹⁴) furnishes an answer to this question. The following is the gist of its argument keeping as close to the original as possible. When a man throws an oblation into fire, his ownership over the oblation comes to an end; but the oblation belongs to nobody. No human being has accepted it. Yet the sacrificer can prevent any one who wants to desecrate the offering by bringing it into contact with something impure from doing so and can see to it that the offering is reduced to ashes in the fire undisturbed. Similarly when a tank or a garden is dedicated to the public, the ownership of the founder in the thing is gone, but there is no other individual owner and no new ownership arises in any single person; yet the founder can prevent a third person making himself owner of the thing dedicated to the public and it cannot be argued that the founder cannot interfere for protecting the thing and that there is no blame if he does not safeguard the assumption of ownership by a third person. The practice of respectable people viz. the exercise of the right of preservation in the case of both (i. e. in the case of what is offered into the fire and what is dedicated to the public) is based on this consideration. The śāstric injunction about utsarga does not merely contemplate the divesting of one's ownership and dedication to the public, but also that the thing dedicated be enjoyed by the public without interference or encroachment, just as in homa also one does not merely desire to throw an oblation into fire (and rest content with that) but one desires to see that the oblation is reduced to ashes and is not rendered impure. This shows that the founder of a temple or the builder of a tank or garden would always retain a power to preserve the thing dedicated.

Questions as to whether a new image can be substituted by the trustee or the shebait of a temple or whether he can remove the image to another place do come before the courts. Vide Kali Kanta Chatterji v. Surendra 41 C. L. J. 128; Prathamatha Natha v. Pradyumna Kumar 30 C. W. N. 25 (P. C.) where the P. C. laid down (p. 33) that family idols are not merely movable chattels and that their destruction, degradation and injury are not within the power of the founder or other custodian for the time being; vide Hari Raghunath v. Anant Bhikaji 44 Bom. 466, where it was held that the manager of a public temple has no right to remove the image from the old temple and instal it in another new building, especially when the removal is objected to by a majority of the worshippers.

CHAPTER XXVII

VĀNAPRASTHA (forest hermit)

Vaikhānasa appears to have been the ancient name for Vānaprastha. In the Anukramaṇī one hundred Vaikhānasas are said to have been the seers of Rg. IX. 66 and a Vamra Vaikhānasa is the seer of Rg. X. 99. The Tai. Ā. I. 23 connects the word Vaikhānasa with the nakhas of Prajāpati (ye nakhās te vaikhānasāḥ).²¹¹⁵ It appears that in ancient times there was some work called Vaikhānasa śāstra which treated of the rules for forest hermits. Gaut. III. 2 uses the word Vaikhānasa for this āśrama. Baud. Dh. S. II. 6. 19 defines a vānaprastha²¹¹⁶ as one who follows the practices laid down in Vaikhānasa-śāstra. Vṛddha-Gautama (chap. VIII, p. 564) appears to suggest that Vaikhānasas and Pāñcarātrikas were two schools of Vaiṣṇavas, the former calling Viṣṇu by the appellations of Puruṣa, Acyuta and Aniruddha, while the Pāñcarātrikas spoke of Viṣṇu as having the four mūrtis or vyūhas viz. Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣana, Pradyumna and Aniruddha.²¹¹⁷ The Par. M. vol. I, part 2, p. 139 after quoting Vas. Dh. S. 9. 11 (śrāmaṇakenāgnimādhaya) remarks that Śrāmaṇaka is Vaikhānasa-sūtra that propounds the duties of tapasvins. Kālidāsa in the Śākuntala speaks of the life led by the charming Śakuntala in Kaṇva's hermitage as *vaikhānasa vrata*²¹¹⁸ (I. 27). Manu VI. 21 describes the Vānaprastha as abiding by the views (mata) of Vaikhānasa and Medhātīhi explains that Vaikhānasa is a śāstra in which the duties of the forest hermit are expounded. The Mahā-

These and other verses are quoted as from आश्वमेधिकपर्व by परा. मा. I. part 1 p. 366. अप्पयदीक्षित in his वेदान्तकल्पतरुपरिमल (Vijianagram Series) p. 453 tells us that, according to the वैखानसशास्त्र, the Pāñcarātra school is not Vaidika.

bhārata²¹¹⁹ (Śānti 20. 6 and 26. 6) states that the view of the Vaikhāṇasas is that it is better to have no desire for amassing wealth than to hanker after wealth. Śaṅkarācārya on Vedānta-sūtra III. 4. 20 speaks of the third āsrama as vaikhāṇasa and as indicated by the word tapas used in Chān. Up. II. 23. 1.

The word vānaprastha is according to the Mit. the same as vanaprastha, which means 'one who stays in a forest in a pre-eminent way' (by observing a strict code of life). Kṣīra-svāmī derives it differently.²¹²⁰

The time for becoming a forest hermit arises in two ways. According to the Jābālopaniṣad quoted above (p. 421) a man may become a vānaprastha immediately after the period of studenthood or after passing some years as an householder. Manu (VI. 2) indicates the age by saying 'when a householder sees his skin wrinkled and his hair growing white and sees the sons of his sons he may betake himself to the forest'. The commentators were divided in their opinions, some holding that all three conditions (wrinkles, grey hair and seeing son's sons) must be fulfilled before one could become a forest hermit, others held that only one of them need be fulfilled and others again said that these conditions are only indicative of the age viz. that a man must be old or over 50. Kullūka on Manu III. 50 quotes a smṛti 'a man may resort to a forest after 50'.

Gaut. III. 25-34, Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 21. 18—II. 9. 23. 2, Baud. Dh. S. III. 3, Vas. Dh. S. IX, Manu VI. 1-32, Yāj. III. 45-55, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 95, Vaik. X. 5, Śaṅkha-smṛti VI. 1-7 (in verse), Śāntiparva 245. 1-14 and Anuśāsana 142, Āśvamedhika-parva 46. 9-16, Laghu-Viṣṇu III, Kūrmapurāṇa (uttarārdha chap. 27) contain numerous rules about forest hermits. The principal points are stated below with a few references :

(1) One may go to a forest with one's wife or one may leave her in charge of one's sons (Manu VI. 3, Yāj. III. 45). The wife may accompany if she desires. Medhātithi notes that some explained that if the wife was young he may place her in charge of the sons and that an old wife may accompany her husband.

2120. वने प्रकर्षेण नियमेन च तिष्ठति चरतीति वनप्रस्थः वनप्रस्थ एव वानप्रस्थः संज्ञायां द्वैर्ष्यम् । मितः on या. III. 45. क्षीरस्वामी on वानप्रस्थ however says 'प्रतिष्ठन्ते अस्मिन् प्रस्थः वनप्रस्थे भवो वानप्रस्थः वैखानसाख्यः.'

(2) He takes with him to the forest his three Vedic fires and his gr̥hya fire²¹²¹ together with such sacrificial utensils as the ladles called sruca, sruva. Ordinarily the wife's co-operation is required in offering sacrifices, but when the wife is given in charge of the sons, her co-operation then is supposed to be dispensed with or it may be held that she has consented to all acts by agreeing to stay with the sons. On repairing to the forest he should perform the śrauta sacrifices of new moon and full moon, the āgrayāṇa iṣṭi, the *cāturmāsya*s, Turāyāṇa and Dākṣāyāṇa (Manu VI. 4. 9-10, Yāj. III. 45). The sacrificial food was to be prepared from corn like nivāra growing in the forest. It appears that according to some writers the forest hermit was to give up his śrauta and gr̥hya fires and kindle a new fire in accordance with rules laid down in the śrāmaṇaka²¹²² (i. e. the Vaikhāṇasa sūtra) and offer sacrifices therein. Vide Gaut. III. 26, Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 21. 20 and Vas. Dh. S. IX. 10.²¹²³

2121. If he has followed the ardhādihāna mode, then he has separate śrauta and gr̥hya fires; but if he has followed the 'sarvādhāna' mode, then he has only śrauta fires, which alone he takes with him. When a man consecrates the three śrauta fires he may do so with half of his smārta fire and keep the other half of the smārta fire. This is ardhādihāna. If he does not keep the smārta fire separate it is sarvādhāna. Vide Āp. Śr. V. 4. 12-16, V. 7. 8 and Nirṇayasindhu (III pūrṣvārdha, p. 370). If he has no śrauta fires then he takes only the gr̥hya fire. One who has no wife living can also become a forest hermit. Vide Mit. on Yāj. III. 45. Dākṣāyāṇa is a modification of the Darsapūrṇamāsa sacrifice (Āp. Śr. III. 17. 4 and 11, Āśv. Śr. II. 14. 7ff and com. on Kāt. Sr. I. 2. 11) and Turāyāṇa is an iṣṭyāyana according to Āśv. Śr. II. 14. 4-6 and a sattra according to Āp. XXIII. 14. 1.

2122. Medhātithi on Manu VI. 9 states that the Śrāmaṇaka fire is to be kindled by him only whose wife is dead or who becomes a forest hermit immediately after the close of the period of student-hood.

2123. आवणकेनाग्निमाधाय । गौ. III. 26 ; आमणकेनाग्निमाधायद्विताग्निः ... स्यात् । वसिष्ठ IX. 10. हरदत्त on गौ. explains 'आवणकं नाम वैखानसं शास्त्रम्'. These words occur also in Baud. Dh. S. II. 6.20. मेधातिथि explains that he is to swallow holy ashes in order to deposit fires in his self, while Nārāyaṇa explains that he is to do so by repeating the mantra 'Yā te agne yajñiṣā' (Tai. S. III. 4. 10. 5). The Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 30-31 refers to this 'भवतं नः समनसाविति आत्मन्यग्नीन्समारोपयते । या ते अग्ने यज्ञिया तच्चरिति त्रिष्टिरेकैकं समाजिगृह्णीत ।'. The Vaik. IX. 1-5 details how a person on entering the order of *vaikhāṇasa*s is to establish the śrāmaṇaka fire. At first it deals with the establishment of śrāmaṇaka fire by one whose wife accompanies him and then by one whose wife does not accompany him and winds up सम्यस्य भेदः आमणकाग्निरित्याहुः । तस्मादेतद्विधानमेनमग्निं च आमणकमित्याह विखनाः । अपत्नीकश्च भिक्षुवद्गो होमं कृत्वा ... वने निवसेत् तपसां आमणमेतन्मूलम् ।

Ultimately he is to leave the keeping of fires by depositing the sacred fires in his own self according to the rules prescribed (in Vaikhānasa sūtra). Vide Manu VI. 25, Yāj. III. 45.

(3) He has to give up all food that he used to partake of when he was in his village and also all household paraphernalia (cows, horses, beds &c.) and subsist on flowers, fruits, roots and vegetables growing in the forest on land or in water or on corn fit for sages such as nivāra and śyāmāka (Manu VI. 5 and 13, Gaut. III. 26 and 28). But he has to avoid partaking of honey, flesh, mushrooms growing on the ground, and the vegetables called Bhūstr̥ṇa, Śigruka, the Śleṣmātaka fruit, though these are forest produce (Manu VI. 14). Gautama allowed him as a last resort to partake of the flesh of animals killed by carnivorous beasts. Yāj. III. 54-55, Manu VI. 27-28 allow him to beg for alms at the dwellings of other hermits or allow him to go to a village and bring by begging silently eight morsels of food. He can use salt prepared by himself only (Manu VI. 12).

(4) He has to perform the five daily sacrifices to gods, sages, Manes, men (guests) and to bhūtas with food fit for ascetics or with fruits, roots and vegetables and give alms thereout (Manu VI. 5 and 7, Gaut. III. 29-30, Yāj. III. 46).

(5) He has to bathe thrice in the day, in the morning, at noon and in the evening (Manu VI. 22 and 24, Yāj. III. 48, Vas. IX. 9); while Manu VI. 6 appears to prescribe a bath twice a day only in the morning and in the evening. So there was an option.

(6) He was to wear a deer-skin or a tattered garment (i.e. one of bark or kuśa grass or the like) and allow his hair and nails to grow. Vide Manu VI. 6, Gaut. III. 34, Vas. IX. 11.

(7) He should be devoted to the study of the Veda and recite it inaudibly (Āp. Dh. S. II 9. 22. 9, Manu VI. 8, Yāj. III. 48).

(8) He should live a life of complete continence, should be self-restrained, friendly (to all), collected in mind, ever liberal but never a recipient and be compassionate towards all beings (Manu VI. 8, Yāj. III. 45 and 48). In view of Yāj. III. 45, Vas. IX. 5 and Manu VI. 26, Kullūka seems²¹²⁴ to be wrong in holding that if a forest hermit takes his wife with him he may cohabit with her at the prescribed times.

(9) He is not to use corn growing on ploughed land in the forest even if the owner neglects to garner it nor is he to eat fruits and roots growing in villages (Manu VI. 16 and Yāj. III. 46).

(10) He may cook wild corn or he may eat only what becomes naturally ripe (like fruits) or he may pound between stones the grain to be used by him, or may employ his teeth only as mortar and he is not to employ ghee in his cooking or religious rites but only the oil of wild fruits (Manu VI. 17 and Yāj. III. 49).

(11) He is to eat only once either in the day in the 4th part (of the day divided into eight) or at night or he may take food every alternate day or once after two or three days (Viṣṇu Dh. S. 95. 5-6, Manu VI. 19). He may also follow the method of the penance of Cāndrāyana (stated in Manu XI. 216) or he may subsist on wild fruits, roots and flowers only (Manu VI. 20-21, Yāj. III. 50) or may eat only once at the end of a fortnight (according to one's ability). He may reduce gradually the quantity of food he takes, ultimately subsisting on water alone or on wind (Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 23. 2, Manu VI. 31). Vide Viṣṇu Dh. S. 95. 7-12 also.

(12) He may accumulate food materials only for a day or a month or a year (but never for more than a year) and should throw away his stored food material every year in the month of Āśvina (Manu VI. 15, Yāj. III. 47, Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 22. 24).²¹²⁵

(13) He should practise severe austerities by standing in the midst of five fires (4 fires in the four directions and the blazing sun overhead), by standing in the open in the rains, by wearing wet garments in winter (Manu VI. 23-34, Yāj. III. 52, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 95. 2-4) and thus habituate his body to privations and mortifications.

(14) He should gradually give up residing in a house, but should stay under a tree and subsist only on fruits and roots²¹²⁶ (Manu VI. 25, Vas. IX. 11, Yāj. III. 54, Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 21. 20).

2126. वृक्षमूलनिकेतन ऊर्ध्वं षड्भ्यो मासेभ्योऽनग्निरनिकेतः । वासिष्ठ IX. 11.

(15) At night he should sleep on the bare ground, should pass the day either sitting or moving about or in the practice of Yoga and should make no effort to enjoy the things that give pleasures (Manu VI. 22 and 26, Yāj. III. 51).

(16) He should study the various texts of the Upaniṣads for the purity of his body, for the increase of his knowledge and ultimately for realising brahma (Manu VI. 29-30).

(17) If the forest hermit suffers from some incurable disease and cannot properly perform his duties or feels death to be near, he should start on the great journey (Mahāprasthāna) turning his face towards the north-east, subsisting on water and air only, till the body falls to rise no more (Manu VI. 31, Yāj. III. 55). The Mit. and Aparārka (p. 945) on Yāj. III. 55 quote a smṛti 'a forest hermit may resort to the distant journey or may enter water or fire or may throw himself from a precipice'.²¹²⁷

The Baud. Dh. S. III. 3 gives an intricate classification of vānaprasthas. They are either pacamānakas (who take cooked or ripe food) or apacamānakas (who do not cook their food). Each of these two classes is again sub-divided into five. The five pacamānakas are sarvāranyakas, vaituṣikas, those who subsist on fruits, roots and bulbous roots, those who subsist on fruits only, those who subsist on vegetables only. Sarvāranyakas are of two kinds, viz. indrāvasikṭas (who bring creepers, shrubs and cook them, offer agnihotra therewith and offer it to guests and eat the rest) and reto-vasikṭas (who bring the flesh of animals killed by tigers, wolves or hawks and cook it and offer to Agni &c.). The apacamānakas are five viz. unmajjakas (who do not employ implements of iron or stone for holding food), pravṛttāśinah (who eat food from their hands, without using any vessel), mukhenādāyinaḥ (who eat food with their mouth, without using their hands, as beasts do), toyāhāras (who subsist on water only), vāyubhaksāḥ (who observe total fast). These are according to Baud. the ten dikṣās of Vāikhānasa. Manu also (VI. 29) calls the rules to be observed by forest hermits dikṣās.

Brhat-Parāśara (chap. XI. p. 290) speaks of four divisions of vānaprasthas viz. Vāikhānasa, Udumbara, Vālakhilya and Vanevāsi; while Vaikh. VIII. 7 says that the vānaprasthas are either sapatnīka (who stay with their wife) or apatnīka and the first are of four varieties viz. Audumbara, Vairiñca, Vālahhilya and Phenapa. The Rāmāyaṇa (Aranya, chap. 10. 2-6) speaks of forest hermits under various designations such as the Vālahhilyas, Aṣmakutṭhas &c.

Any person of the three higher varṇas could become a vānaprastha, but a śūdra could not do so. Manu VI. 1 when starting the topic of vānaprasthas employs the word ' dvija '. In the Sāntiparva 21. 15 it is stated that a kṣatriya after transferring the kingdom to his son should subsist in a forest on wild food and follow the śrāvāṇa scriptures.²¹²⁸ In the Āśva-medhika-parva 35. 43 it is expressly stated that the order of vānaprasthas is meant for the three dvijātis.²¹²⁹ The Mahābhārata cites many examples of royal personages becoming vānaprasthas. Yayāti after crowning his youngest and most dutiful son Pūru as a king is said to have become a forest hermit (Ādiparva 86. 1) where he practised various austerities (Ādi. 86. 12-17) and ultimately ended his life by fasting (Ādi. 75. 58). In the Āśramavāsi-parva (chap. 19) the blind king Dhṛtarāṣṭra is said to have become a forest hermit with his wife Gāndhārī who put on bark garments and deer-skin. The Par. M. (I. part 2, p. 139) relying on Manu VI. 2, Yama and other sages states its view that men of the three varṇas could become forest hermits. Women also could repair to the forest. The Mausala parva-(7. 74) states that when Kṛṣṇa left the mortal body, Satyabhāmā and other queens of Kṛṣṇa entered the forest having resolved to undergo severe austerities. The Ādiparva (128. 12-13) narrates that, on the death of Pāṇḍu, Satyawatī with her two daughters-in-law repaired to a forest for austerities and died there. Vide also Sānti 147. 10 (for Mahāprasthāna) and Āśramavāsi-parva. 37. 27-28. According to Vaik. VIII. 1 and Vāmanapurāṇa 14. 117-118 a brāhmaṇa could pass through all four āśramas, a kṣatriya through three (he could not be a sannyāsin), a vaiśya through two (brahmacarya and gārhaṣṭhya) and a sūdra could resort to only one viz. the householder's mode of life. Vide the story of Sāmbūka referred to above (p. 119).

The question whether ending one's life by starting on the Great Journey or by falling from a precipice is sinful exercised the minds of many writers on dharmaśāstra. The Dharmaśāstra writers generally condemn suicide or an attempt to commit suicide as a great sin. Parāśara (IV. 1-2) states that if a man or woman hangs himself or herself through extreme pride or extreme rage or through affliction or fear he or she falls into hell for sixty thousand years.²¹³⁰ Manu V. 89 says that no water is to be offered for the benefit of the souls of those who kill themselves. The Ādiparva (179. 20) declares that one who commits suicide does not reach blissful worlds. Vas. Dh. S. (23. 14-16) ordains " whoever kills himself becomes abhiśasta (guilty of mortal sin) and his *sapinda*s have to perform no death rites for him ; a man becomes a killer of the self when he destroys himself by wood (i. e. by fire), water, clods and stones (i. e. by striking his head against a stone), weapon, poison, or ropes (i. e. by hanging). They also quote a verse ' that divija who through affection performs the last rites of a man who commits suicide must undergo the penance of Cāndrāyana with Tapta-kṛcchra ". Vas. Dh. S. 23. 18 prescribes a prāyaścitta for merely resolving to kill oneself (even when no attempt is made). Yama (20-21) prescribes that when a person tries to do away with himself by such methods as hanging, if he dies, his body should be smeared with impure things and if he lives he should be fined two hundred paṇas ; his friends and sons should each be fined one paṇa and then they should undergo the penance laid down in the śāstra.²¹³¹

In spite of this general attitude, exceptions were made in the smṛtis, the epics and purāṇas. When a man was guilty of brāhmaṇa murder, he was allowed to meet death at the hands of archers in a battle who knew that the sinner wanted to be killed in that way as a penance or the sinner may throw himself head downwards in fire (Manu XI. 73, Yāj. III. 248). Similarly the drinker of spirituous liquor expiated his sin by taking boiling wine, water, ghee, cow's milk or urine and dying thereby (Manu XI. 90-91, Yāj. III. 253, Gaut. 23. 1, Vas. Dh. S. 20. 22). Vide also Vas. Dh. S. 13. 14, Gaut. 23. 1, Āp. Dh. S. I. 9. 25. 1-3 and 6 for similar deadly penances for incest and for drinking liquor and for theft. The Āp. Dh. S. (I. 10. 28. 15-17) quotes Hārīta who condemns such penances involving death.²¹³² At extremely holy places like Prayāga, the Sarasvatī and Benares persons were allowed to kill themselves by drowning with the desire of securing release from saṃsāra. The Śālyaparva (39. 33-34) states 'whoever abandons his body at Prthūdaka on the northern bank of the Sarasvatī after repeating Vedic prayers would not be troubled by death thereafter'.²¹³³ The Anuśāsanaparva (25. 62-64) says that if a man knowing the Vedānta and understanding the ephemeral nature of life abandons life in the holy Himālayas by fasting, he would reach the world of brahma. Vide also Vanaparva 85. 83 (about suicides at Prayāga). The Matsya-purāṇa (186. 34-35) eulogises the peak of Amarakaṇṭaka by stating 'whoever dies at Amarakaṇṭaka by fire, poison, water or by fasting enjoys the pleasures (described in verses 28-33). He who throws himself down (from the peaks of Amarakaṇṭaka) never returns (to saṃsāra)'.²¹³⁴

There are historical examples of this practice supplied by Epigraphy. The Khairha plates of Yaśaḥkarpadeva (dated Kalacuri saṃvat 823 i. e. 1073 A. D.) narrate that king Gāṅgeya obtained release along with his one hundred wives at the famous banyan tree of Prayāga (E. I. vol. XII. p. 205 at p. 211).²¹³⁵ King Dhaṅgadeva of the Chāṇḍella dynasty is said to have lived for more than 100 years and to have abandoned his body at Prayāga while contemplating on Rudra (E. I. vol. I. p. 140). The Cālukya king Someśvara after performing yoga rites drowned himself in the Tuṅgabhadrā in 1068 A. D. (E. C. vol. II. Sk. 136). The Raghuvamśa VIII, 94 poetically describes how Aja in his old age when his health was shattered by disease resorted to fasting and drowned himself at the confluence of the holy rivers, the Ganges and the Śarayū, and immediately attained the position of a denizen of Heaven.

Apart from suicide for purposes of penance or at holy places the smṛtis allowed, as said above, a forest hermit to start on the great journey to meet death and also allowed in certain circumstances death by entering fire, or by drowning or by fasting or by throwing oneself from a precipice even for those who were not hermits. Gautama (14. 11) prescribes that no mourning need be observed for those who wilfully meet death by fasting, or by cutting themselves off with a weapon, or by fire, or poison or water or by hanging or by falling from a precipice. But Atri (218-219) states some exceptions viz. 'if one who is very old (beyond 70), one who cannot observe the rules of bodily purification (owing to extreme weakness &c.), one who is so ill that no medical help can be given, kills himself by throwing himself from a precipice or into fire or water or by fasting, mourning should be observed for him for three days and śrāddha may be performed for him.²¹³⁶ Aparārka (p. 536) quotes texts of Brahmagarbha, Vivasvat and Gārgya about an householder 'he who suffering from serious illness cannot live, or who is very old, who has no desire left for the pleasures of any of the senses and who has carried out his tasks may bring about his death at his pleasure by resorting to mahāprasthāna, by entering fire or water or by falling from a precipice. By so doing he incurs no sin and his death is far better than tapas, and one should not desire to live vainly (without being able to perform the duties laid down by the śāstra).²¹³⁷ Aparārka (p. 877) and Par. M. (I. part 2, p. 228) quote several verses from Ādipurāṇa about dying by fasting, by entering fire or deep water or by falling from a precipice, or by going on mahā-prasthāna in the Himālāyas or by abandoning life from the branch of the vaṭa tree at Prayāga, the verses declaring that not only does such a man not incur sin but he attains the worlds of bliss. In the Rāmāyaṇa (Aranya, chap. 9) Śara-bhaṅga is said to have entered fire. We find that the Mṛccha-kaṭika (I. 4) speaks of king Śūdraka as having entered fire. In the Gupta Inscriptions No. 42, the great Emperor Kumāragupta is said to have entered the fire of dried cowdung cakes. The editor remarks that there is necessarily no reference to the fact that the emperor voluntarily embraced death by fire. But it appears that there is no great propriety in the description if all that is meant is that the Emperor's corpse was burnt with 'karīṣa'.

Some put forward a Vedic passage 'one who desires heaven should not (seek to) die before the appointed span of life is at an end (of itself)' as opposed to the permission for suicide given by the smṛtis. Medhātithi on Manu VI. 32²¹³⁸ quotes this Vedic text and explains it away by saying that if śruti intended to lay down an absolute prohibition against suicide in every case, it would have simply said 'one who desires heaven should not (seek to) die'. The Vāj. S. (40. 3) contains a verse saying 'whoever destroy their self reach after death Asura worlds that are shrouded in blinding darkness', which really refers to persons ignorant of the correct knowledge of the Self. But this has been interpreted by many as referring to those guilty of suicide (ātmahan). Vide Uttararāmacarita IV, after verse 3²¹³⁹ and Br. Up. IV. 4. 11 for a verse similar to that in the Vāj. S. The Rājataranṅgi (VI. 1411) refers to officers appointed by the king to superintend prāyopaveśa (resolving on death by fasting).

Among Jains a similar rule prevailed. The Ratnakaraṇḍa-śrāvaka-cāra (chap. 5) of Samantabhadra (about 2nd century A. D.) dilates on Sallekhanā, which consists in abandoning the body for the accumulation of merit in calamities, famines, extreme old age and incurable disease.²¹⁴⁰ The Kālandri (Sirohi State) Inscription records the suicide of a Jain congregation by fasting in saṃvat 1339 (E. I. vol. XX., appendix p. 98 No. 691).

From the account of the death of Kalanos the Indian gymnosophist at 73 given by Megasthenes (Mc Crindle p. 106) we can gather that the practice of religious suicide prevailed long before the 4th century B. C. Strabo (XV. 1. 4) states that with the ambassadors that came to Augustus Cæsar from India also arrived an Indian gymnosophist who committed himself to the flames like Kalanos who exhibited the same spectacle before Alexander.

In the times of the purāṇas the method of starting on mahā-prasthāna and suicide by entering fire or falling from a precipice came to be forbidden and was included in Kalivarjya.²¹⁴¹

It will be noticed that some of the duties and regulations prescribed for vānaprasthas are practically the same as those for sannyāsins. For example, the rules laid down in Manu VI. 25-29 for forest hermits are almost the same as those for *parivrājakas*²¹⁴² (Manu VI. 38, 43, 44). The Āp. Dh. S. employs the same words twice in delineating the characteristics of both (II. 9. 21. 10 and 20). The order of hermits gradually leads on to or rather passes over into that of sannyāsins. Both have to observe celibacy and restraint of senses, both have to regulate the intake and quality of food, both have to contemplate on the passages of the Upaniṣads and strive for the knowledge of Brahman. There were no doubt some differences. The vānaprastha could be accompanied by his wife at least in the beginning, a sannyāsin could not be so. A vānaprastha had to keep fires, perform the daily and other yajñas at least in the beginning, the sannyāsin gave up his fires. The vānaprastha had to concentrate upon tapas, upon inuring himself to privations, severe austerities, and self-mortification, while the sannyāsin was concerned principally with saṁyama (restraint or quiescence of senses) and contemplation of the highest Reality, as stated by Śaṅkarācārya on Vedāntasūtra III. 4. 20.²¹⁴³ Owing to the great similarity and virtual fusion of the two āśramas the stage of vānaprastha came to be gradually ignored and people passed from the householder's life directly to the life of sannyāsa. Govindasvāmī on Baud. Dh. S. III. 3. 14-17 remarks that the ācārya (Baudhāyana) should be asked why he describes the two orders of vānaprastha and sannyāsa as distinct.²¹⁴⁴ In course of time no one probably became a vānaprastha and therefore having recourse to the stage of vānaprastha came to be forbidden in the Kali age.²¹⁴⁵

SANNYĀSA

Sannyāsa.—(the order of ascetics). That the Chān. Up. was well aware of the three āśramas of student-hood, householder and forest hermit has been shown above (p. 420). It is somewhat doubtful whether the Chān. Up. regarded sannyāsa as the fourth and the last stage in a man's life when ideally planned. It merely states that 'one that holds fast by the realization of brahman attains immortality'. But it appears that a stage of the abandonment of worldly riches, a life of begging and contemplation of the Absolute and its realization had been known to the earliest Upaniṣads like the Bṛhadāraṇyaka. Whether it was the fourth stage or whether it could be reached even in the stage of brahmacharya or of a householder is left in doubt so far as the older Upaniṣads are concerned. The Jābālopaniṣad (4) has been quoted above (p. 421) to show that it gave an option either to regard sannyāsa as the 4th stage in a man's life or to resort to it immediately after any of the first two āśramas.

In the Br. Up. (II. 4. 1) we see that Yājñavalkya ²¹⁴⁶ when about to become a parivrājaka (a wandering ascetic) tells his wife Maitreyī that he was going to leave home and that he wanted to divide whatever wealth he had between her and her co-wife Kātyāyanī. This shows that a parivrājaka had even then to leave home and wife and to give up all belongings. The same Upaniṣad in another place (III. 5. 1) states 'those who realize Ātman give up the hankering after progeny, possessions and heavenly worlds and practise the beggar's mode of life ; therefore the brāhmaṇa, having completely mastered (and so risen beyond) mere learning, should seek to be like a child (i. e. should not make a parade of his latent capacities or knowledge) and having completed (gone beyond) knowledge and bālya (child-like behaviour) he should attain to the position of a muni, and having risen beyond the stage of a muni or non-muni, should become a real brāhmaṇa (one who has realized brahman). Vide also Br. Up. IV. 4. 22 for similar words and sentiments. The Jābālopaniṣad (5)²¹⁴⁷ declares that the ascetic (parivrāt) wears discoloured (not white) garments, has a tonsured head, has no possessions, is pure, hates (or injures) no one, begs for alms and thereby tends to attain non-difference from brahman. In the Paramahansa, the Brahma, the Nārada-parivrājaka, and the Sannyāsa Upaniṣads numerous rules are laid down about sannyāsa. But the antiquity and the authenticity of these Upaniṣads is extremely doubtful and therefore passing them over attention will be confined to the dharmasūtras and other ancient smṛtis.

Some of the most salient features are set out below with a few references.

(1) In order to qualify himself for sannyāsa, a person had to perform a sacrifice to Prajāpati in which whatever he had he distributed to priests and the poor and the helpless (Manu VI. 38, Yāj. III. 56, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 96. 1, Śaṅkha VII. 1).²¹⁴⁸ The Yatidharmasaṅgraha (p. 13) prescribes that the Prājāpatyesti should be performed by him who had kept the three vedic fires and the iṣṭi to Agni should be performed by others who kept only the grhya fire. The Jābālopaniṣad 4 adds that the sacrifice should be for Agni (and not for Prajāpati as some hold). The Nṛsimhapurāṇa (60. 2-4) requires that before entering upon this order one should perform eight śrāddhas. The Nṛsimhapurāṇa 58. 36 allows every one who is a vedic student to become an ascetic if his tongue, his sexual emotions, his appetite for food and his speech are pure (i. e. under strict control). The eight śrāddhas are daiva (to Vasus, Rudras, Ādityas), āṛṣa (to the ten sages viz. Marīci and others), divya (to Hiraṇyagarbha and Vairāja), mānuṣya (to Sanaka, Sanandana and five others), bhautika (to five bhūtas, pṛthvī &c.), paitṛka (to Kavyavād fire, Soma, Aryaman, pitṛs called Agniṣvāta &c.), mātṛśrāddha (to ten mātṛs such as Gaurī, Padmā), ātmaśrāddha (to Paramātman). Vide Yati-dh. p. 9 and Sm. M. p. 177. Manu is careful to point out (VI. 35-37) that a man should fix his mind on mokṣa after studying the Veda, procreating sons, performing sacrifices i. e. after discharging his debts to the sages, the pitṛs and gods. Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 3-6 and Vaik. IX. 6 state that an householder who has no children or whose wife is dead or who has established his children in the path of dharma or who is over 70 may become an ascetic. Kautīlya (II. 1) prescribes that if a person embraces the order of ascetics without making proper provision for his wife and sons he shall be punished with the first amercement.²¹⁴⁹ He has to deposit his fires in himself and leave home (Manu VI. 38).

(2) After leaving home, wife, children and possessions, he should dwell outside the villages, should be homeless and stay under a tree or in an un-inhabited house wherever he may be when the sun sets and should always wander from place to place; but he may remain in one place only in the rainy season²¹⁵⁰ (Manu VI. 41, 43-44, Vas. Dh. S. X. 12-15, Śaṅkha VII. 6). Śaṅkha (quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. III. 58) allows him to stay in one place only for two months in the rains, while Kaṇva says that he may stay one night in a village and five in a town (except in the rains). When he follows the rule of staying four or two months in one place, he should do so from the full moon of Āśāḍha or an ascetic may always stay on the banks of the Ganges.

(3) He should always wander alone without a companion, as by so doing he will be free from attachments and the pangs of separation. Dakṣa (VII. 34-38) emphasizes this²¹⁵¹ point very well 'the real ascetic always stays alone; if two stay together, they form a pair; if three stay together they are like a village and if more (than three stay together) then it becomes like a town. An ascetic should not form a pair or a village or a town; by so doing he swerves from his dharma, since (if two or more stay together) they begin to exchange news about the ruling prince, about the alms obtained and by close contact sentiments of affection, jealousy or wickedness arise between them. Bad ascetics engage in many activities viz. expounding (texts) for securing money or honour and also gathering pupils round them. There are only four proper actions for an ascetic and no fifth viz. contemplation, purity, begging, always staying alone'. Nārada says 'there are six acts which ascetics must do as if ordered by the king under the threat of a penalty viz. begging, japa, contemplation, bath (thrice daily), purity and worship of Śiva or Viṣṇu (quoted in Yati-dh. p. 62 and Sm. M. p. 188).^{2151a}

(4) He should be celibate, should always be devoted to contemplation and spiritual knowledge and should be unattached to all objects of sense and pleasure (Manu VI. 41 and 49, Gaut. III. 11).

(5) He should move about avoiding all trouble or injury to creatures, should make all creatures safe with him, should bear with indifference all disrespect, should entertain no anger towards him who is furious with him, should utter benedictions over him also who runs him down, should never utter an untruth (Manu VI. 40, 47-48, Yāj. III. 61, Gaut. III. 23).

(6) He should neither kindle śrauta fires nor gṛhya fire nor even ordinary fire for cooking food and should subsist on food obtained by begging (Manu VI. 38 and 43, Āp. Dh. S. I. 9. 21. 10, Ādiparva 91. 12).

(7) He may enter a village for begging food only once a day, he should not ordinarily stay in a village at night (except in the rains) but if he stays at all he should do so only for one night (Gaut. III. 13 and 20, Manu VI. 43, 55).

(8) He should beg alms from seven houses without selecting them beforehand (Vas. Dh. S. X. 7, Śāṅkha VII. 3, Ādi. 119. 12 'five or ten houses'). Baud. Dh. S. (II. 10. 57-58) prescribes that he should visit for alms the houses of brāhmaṇa householders of the Śālīna and Yāyāvara types and should only wait for as much time as would be required for milking a cow. Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 69 quotes the view of others that an ascetic may take alms from persons of all varṇas or food from only one among dvijātis; Vas. X. 24 also says that he should beg of brāhmaṇas only. The Vāyupurāṇa I. 13. 17 prescribes that ascetics should not eat food belonging to one man (but should eat food collected from several houses), or flesh or honey should not accept āmaśrāddha (i. e. śrāddha with uncooked food), should not use salt directly or by itself (i. e. they may eat vegetables in cooking which salt has been used). According to Uśanas (quoted in Sm. M. p. 200 and Yati-dh. pp. 74-75) food obtained by begging is of five kinds viz. mādhukara (collecting food from any three, five or seven houses at random just as bees collect honey from any flowers), prākpraṇīta (when a request is made by devotees to take food at their houses even before the ascetic gets up from his bed), ayūcita (when invitation to take food at his house is given by a man before the ascetic starts on his begging round), tātkālika (the food that is announced by a brāhmaṇa the moment the ascetic approaches), upapanna (cooked food brought to the maṭha by devoted disciples or other people). Vas. Dh. S. X. 31 says that a brāhmaṇa ascetic should avoid food at śūdra houses and Aparārka p. 963 explains this as implying that in the absence of brāhmaṇa houses an ascetic may beg for food from kṣatriyas and vaiśyas. In later times begging alms from persons of all castes was forbidden, being included among kalivarjya actions ('yates tu sarva-varṇeṣu na bhikṣācaraṇam kalau'). Vide Sm. M. p. 201. It was stated by Parāśara and Kratu that no fault attaches to an ascetic if he being very old or very ill took food from a single person on a certain day or for several days or begged for food at the house of his sons, friends, teacher or brothers or wife (vide Sm. M. p. 201, Yati-dh. p. 75). According to Parāśara I. 51 and the Sūtasamhitā (Jñāna-yoga-khaṇḍa 4. 15-16) the first claim on the food cooked in the house is that of an ascetic and a brahmacārin and one has to perform the Cāndrāyana penance for taking one's meals without giving alms to them. In giving food to an ascetic first water is poured on his hand, then food is given and then again water is poured on his hand (Parāśara I. 53 quoted by Haradatta on Gaut. V. 16). Vide Āp. Dh. S. II. 2. 4. 10 and Yāj. I. 107.

(9) He should go out for begging when the smoke from kitchens has ceased to rise and when the noise of pestles has died down and the live coals (in the kitchen) have been extinguished and the plates used for the dining (by the householders) have been kept aside i. e. he should beg food in the evening (Manu VI. 56, Yāj. III. 59, Vas. X. 8, Śaṅkha VII. 2). He should not take as alms honey or flesh (Vas. X. 24). He should not endeavour to secure alms by the practice of predicting, interpreting portents and omens or by the practice of describing the consequences indicated by them, nor by astrology nor by expounding the principles of a lore nor by casuistry (or discussion) nor should he approach a house that is already besieged by hermits, brāhmaṇas, birds and dogs, beggars or others (Manu VI. 50-51).

(10) He should not eat food to satiety, but should eat only as much as is necessary to keep body and soul together and should not feel delight when he gets substantial alms nor feel dejected when he gets little or nothing (Manu VI. 57 and 59, Vas. X. 21, 22 and 25, Yāj. III. 59). There is a famous verse 'an ascetic should take only eight morsels of food, a forest hermit 16, a householder 32 and a vedic student an unlimited number' (Āp. Dh. S. II. 4. 9. 13, Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 68).

(11) He should hoard nothing and he should own or possess nothing except his tattered garments, his water jar, begging bowl (Manu VI. 43-44, Gaut. III. 10, Vas. X. 6). Devala quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. III. 58 declares that the ascetic should possess only a water-jar, a pavitra (cloth for straining water), pādukās, an āsana and a kanthā (wallet for protection from extreme cold). The Mahābhārata states that wearing ochre-coloured garments, shaving the head, and keeping a water jar and three staffs—these are only outward signs meant to secure food and do not lead to mokṣa^{2151b} (dialogue of Janaka and Sulabhā). The Mahābhāṣya (vol. I. p. 365) also declares that a man is known to be a parivrājaka on seeing his three staffs. The Vāyupurāṇa I. 8 (quoted by Aparārka pp. 949-950) lays down what he should possess. He should take a staff of bamboo the outward surface of which is intact, which is not formidable and which has the parvans (the parts between the joints) of equal length, which is surrounded by a rope of cow's tail hair four āṅgulas in length and has three knots and which he holds in his right hand; he should have a śikya (loop on which to carry his jar or other things) made of kuśa or cotton or hemp threads or strings and of the form of a lotus and six muṣṭis (fists) in length; he should also have a water jar and a pātra (vessel or bowl for begging); he may have a seat (āsana) of wood square or round in size for sitting on or for washing his feet; he should have a loin-cloth to cover his private parts and a kanthā (patched garment or wallet) for protection against cold and he may have two pādukās (sandals). He should have only these and should not accumulate anything else.

(12) He should wear garments only for covering his private parts and may wear such garments as were worn by others and are used by him after washing (Gaut. III. 17-18), while Āp. Dh. S. (II. 9. 21. 11-12) states that he should wear clothes thrown away by others and that some say that he may be naked. Vas. (X. 9-11) says that he should cover his body with a piece of cloth (śāṭī) or with deer skin or with grass cut down for cows. Baud. Dh. S. II. 6. 24 requires that his garments should be ochre-coloured (quoted by Aparārka p. 962).

(13) The begging bowl and the plate from which the ascetic eats should be made of clay or wood or of a gourd, or of bamboo which should be without holes and he should not use metal vessels; and these vessels are to be cleaned with water and scoured with cow's hair (Manu VI. 53-54, Yāj. III. 60 and Laghu-Viṣṇu IV. 29-30).

(14) He should pare his nails, cut all his hair and beard (Manu VI. 52, Vas. Dh. S. X. 6); but Gaut. III. 21 appears to allow him an option viz. he may tonsure the whole head or keep only a top-knot.

(15) He should sleep on raised ground (sthaṇḍila), should feel no concern if he suffers from an illness, he should neither welcome death nor should he feel joy for continuing to live, but he should patiently wait till the time of death, as a servant waits till the time he is hired expires (Manu VI. 43 and 46).

(16) He should generally observe silence except when he repeats the Vedic texts learnt by him (Manu VI. 43, Gaut. III. 16, Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 79, Āp. Dh. S. II. 9. 21. 10).²¹⁵²

(17) He should be tridaṇḍī (carrying three staffs) according to Yāj. III. 58, while Manu VI. 52 simply says he should be daṇḍī (i. e. carrying a staff). The word daṇḍa is used in two senses, a staff of bamboo or restraint. Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 53 gives an option that he may be ekadaṇḍī or a tridaṇḍī and also says that he should not cause harm to creatures by speech, actions and mind (II. 6. 25). Manu XII. 10, which is the same as Dakṣa (VII. 30), declares that that man is called tridaṇḍī who has restraint over his speech, mind and body. Dakṣa makes certain apt remarks 'Even gods who pre-eminently possess the sattva-guṇa are carried away by pleasures of sense; what of men? Therefore he who has given up his taste for pleasures should resort to daṇḍa; others cannot do it as they will be carried away by pleasures. An ascetic is not called tridaṇḍī by carrying bamboo staffs; he is tridaṇḍī who has the spiritual daṇḍa in him. Many people make their livelihood under the guise of (carrying) three daṇḍas' (VII. 27-31, quoted by Aparārka p. 953). Restraint of speech requires that he should observe silence, restraint of action that he should cause injury to no creature and restraint of mind that he should engage in prāṇāyāma and other yogic practices. Dakṣa himself says (I. 12-13) that the three staffs are the special outward sign of a yati as the girdle, deer-skin and staff are the outward signs of the vedic student or long nails and beard are indicia of the forest hermit. Laghu-Viṣṇu IV. 12 says he may be ekadaṇḍī or tridaṇḍī. The Jīvanamuktiviveka (p. 154) quotes verses to the effect 'he who wields the staff of the knowledge of Reality is called ekadaṇḍī, while he who merely holds a stick in his hand without knowledge and eats everything (or has all sorts of desires) reaches terrible hells'.

(18) He should recite the vedic texts referring to yajñas or gods or texts of a metaphysical character found in the Vedānta (such as 'satyam jñānam-anantam brahma' in Tai. Up. 2. 1). Vide Manu VI. 83.

(19) He should walk after ascertaining with his eye that the ground he treads is pure, should drink water after passing it through a piece of cloth (in order to prevent ants &c. being taken in by him), he should utter words purified by truth and should do what his conscience (inner voice) decides to be right or proper (Manu VI. 46, Śāṅkha VII. 7, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 96. 14-17).

(20) In order to generate the feeling of vairāgya (desirelessness) and to curb his senses he should make his mind dwell upon the body as liable to disease and old age and as packed full of impurities; and should revolve in his mind the transitory nature of all mundane things, the trouble one has to undergo in body and mind from conception to death, the incessant round of births and deaths (Manu VI. 76-77, Yāj. III. 63-64, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 96. 25-42).

(21) Truthfulness, not depriving another of his possessions or his due, absence of wrath (even against one who harms), humility, purity (of body and food &c.), discrimination, steadiness of mind (in sorrow), quiescence (or restraint) of mind, restraint of senses, knowledge (of the self), these are the dharma of all varṇas (or these constitute the essence of dharma). And these have to be acquired most of all by the ascetic, since the outward signs, viz. the scanty clothing, the water jar &c. are not the real means of discharging the real duties of sannyāsa, as anyone can possess these outward signs. Vide Manu VI. 66, 92-94, Yāj. III. 65-66, Vas. X. 30, Baud. Dh. S. II. 10 55-56, Śānti. 111. 13-14, Vāyupurāṇa vol. I. 8. 176-178 (ten characteristics, five called vratas and five upavratas).

(22) He should endeavour to purify his mind by prāṇāyāma and other practices of yoga and thereby enable himself gradually to realize the Absolute and secure final release (Manu VI. 70-75, 81, Yāj. III. 62, 64).

In many works ascetics are divided into four classes. The Mahābhārata (Anuśāsana 141. 89) says that ascetics are of four sorts, kuṭīcaka, bahūdaka, hamsa and paramahamsa, each later one being superior to each preceding one.^{2152a} Vaik. VIII. 9, Laghu-Viṣṇu IV. 14-23, Sūtasamhitā (Mānayaogakhaṇḍa chap. 6), Bhikṣukopaniṣad, Prajāpati (quoted by Aparārka p. 952) define these four. They do not all agree. The kuṭīcaka, as the name itself implies, is one who resorts to sannyāsa in his own house or in a hut erected by his sons, begs food of his sons and relatives, wears the top-knot, the sacred thread, has the three staffs, carries a water-jar and stays in the same hut. The description of these four contained in Vaik.,²¹⁵³ being probably among the oldest available, is set out here. The kuṭīcakas stay in the hermitages of sages like Gautama, Bharadvāja, Yājñavalkya and Hārīta, take eight morsels of food every day, know the essence of the path of Yoga and hanker only after mokṣa (release). The bahūdakas have three staffs, the water-jar and wear garments dyed with ochre, beg for food at seven houses of sage-like brāhmaṇas or other well-conducted men but avoid taking flesh, salt and stale food. The hamsas stay not more than one night in a village and not more than five nights in a town for alms or subsist on cow's urine or dung, or fast for a month or always perform the cāndrāyana penance. Pitāmaha quoted in Sm. M. (varṇāśrama p. 184) states that the hamsas carry only one daṇḍa, enter a village only for alms and otherwise stay under a tree or in a cave or on a river bank.

The Paramahamsas always stay under a tree or in an uninhabited house or in a burial place and either wear a garment or are naked; they are beyond the pairs of dharma and adharma, truth and falsehood, purity and impurity. They treat all alike, they regard all as the Self, to them a clod of earth or gold is the same and they beg alms from persons of all varṇas. The description in the Bhikṣukopaniṣad is almost in the same words and also contains the words of the Jābālopaniṣad as to Paramahansa. It appears that long before the Āp. Dh. S. (II. 9. 21. 13-17) i. e. at least five or six centuries before Christ there were people who thought that an ascetic was beyond all vidhi (injunctions to do a thing) and niṣedha (prohibition), that he was above the ordinary rules about truthfulness or falsehood, that he should not care for pleasure or pain or for the study of the Vedas, or for this world or the next, he should simply seek to realize the Self, that when he realizes the Self all his sins, if any, would be liquidated thereby. Āp. combats these ideas by saying that such sentiments were opposed to the śāstras laying down rules about ascetics, that by realizing the Self, he cannot be free from the effects of what he does or the consequences of having a body. The sentiments which Āp. controverts arose from such passages as the one²¹⁵⁴ in the Br. Up. IV. 4. 23 ' This is the eternal greatness of the man who realizes brahma that by the actions he does, he does not add to it or detract from it. Therefore one should only know the real nature of that greatness; he on knowing brahma is not affected by an evil action.' In the Kauṣītaki Br. Up. III. 1 it is stated²¹⁵⁵ ' whoever realizes One (the Supreme Spirit), his worlds (i. e. his position) are not destroyed by any action of his, not even if he kills his parents, not even by theft nor by the murder of a learned brāhmaṇa.' These words are not to be taken literally, they are merely a boastful utterance (a prauḍhivāda), they are really laudatory statements emphasizing the supreme value of the realization of brahman. Similarly the Chān. Up. IV. 14. 3 says ' just as water does not stick to a lotus-leaf, so sinful actions do not cling to him who knows this'. In the same Upaniṣad (V. 2. 1) we read ' to him who knows this, nothing becomes unfit as food.' The Upaniṣads, however, generally lay great stress on moral virtues and emphasize that a high moral life is absolutely necessary for the seeker after spiritual truth. Vide Br. Up. IV. 4. 23, Chān. Up. III. 14. 1, Katha Up.

I. 2. 23, I. 3. 8-9 and 12. The position of the Vedāntasūtra (in III. 4.27-31) is that the seeker after eternal truth must be endowed with restraint of senses and quiescence of mind and he cannot act just as he pleases (Śabdaścātośkāmakāre) and spurn all rules of morality. Śaṅkarācārya on Vedānta-sūtra II. 3. 48 and other places makes this position perfectly clear. Viśva-rūpa on Yāj. III. 66 states that even ascetics of the paramahansa type are not allowed (by Yāj. and other sages) to behave as they please. The Par. M. (I. part 2, pp 172-176) says that the paramahansa should have only one daṇḍa and argues that paramahansas are of two kinds viz. vidvat (those who have already realized brahman) and vividiṣu (those who are eager seekers after realization) and relies on Br. Up. III. 5. 1 for the former and Br. Up. IV. 4. 22 and Jābālopaniṣad for the latter. Yājñavalkya is an example of vidvat-sannyāsa, which leads to jīvanmukti (i. e. release even when the body still persists), while the latter (vividiṣā-sannyāsa) leads to release after the body is no more (i. e. videha-mukti). Vide Jīvan-muktivi-veka p. 4 ff.

The Jābālopaniṣad²¹⁵⁶ (6) describes the state of paramahansas at great length. They are sages like Saṁvartaka, Āruṇi, Śvetaketu, Durvāsas, Rbhu, Nidāgha, Jaḍabharata, Dattātreya, Raivataka; they do not exhibit any visible signs of their order or any visible rules of conduct; though they are really not mad they behave like one mad; they go out for alms only for keeping body and soul together; they are unaffected by acquisition or absence (of alms), they have no house but wander about and stay in a temple or on a heap of grass, on an ant-hill, or at the foot of a tree or on a river bank or in a cave, they have attachment for nothing, they are centred in contemplation of the One Spirit. According to Sūtasmihitā

The story of संवर्तक who was a great Yogin and wandered about naked is found in आश्वमेधिकपर्व chap. 6 and Śaṅkara on V. S. III. 4. 37 also refers to that story. The words तत्र परमहंसा नाम रेवतकप्रभृतयः are quoted by सायण on तै. आ. II. 11 and अयत्क उत्तमवदाचरन्तः are almost like वसिष्ठ X. 18-19.

(II. 6. 3-10) it is only haṁsa and paramahaṁsa that give up śikhā and the sacred thread.

The Sannyāsopaniṣad (13) adds two more varieties to the four enumerated above viz. 'turiyātīta' and 'avadhūta' and defines them as follows: 'turiyātīta' (one who is beyond the 4th stage viz. of paramahaṁsa) eats only fruits in the way cows take food (i. e. he does not hold them in his hands), if he takes cooked food then only from three houses, he wears no cloth, his body only continues to live (but he is not conscious of that fact), he deals with his body as if it were dead. The avadhūta is beyond all restrictions, he takes food from all varṇas except those who are charged with mortal sins or are patita (outcasts) and eats like an ajagara (a boa constrictor) i. e. lying down and opening only his mouth without any effort and is solely absorbed in the contemplation of the real nature of the Spirit. Medhātithi ²¹⁵⁷ (on Manu VI. 32) is quite emphatic that sannyāsa does not consist in defying all the rules of śāstra, but in giving up the sentiment of egoism and of possessiveness and that it is not true to say that for the sannyāsin all rules (even of morality) are non-existent.

One important question on which opinion was sharply divided is whether sannyāsa was allowed to all the three varṇas or only to brāhmaṇas. Those who held that it was allowed only to brāhmaṇas argued as follows: In the Br. ²¹⁵⁸ Up. IV. 4. 22 we find the words 'this Self brāhmaṇas seek to know by the study of the Veda'; similarly Br. Up. III. 5. 1 states 'after knowing this Self, brāhmaṇas give up the hankering after progeny, wealth and heavenly worlds and practise hugging' and Muṇḍaka I. 2. 12 'closely examining the worlds that are the rewards of actions, a brāhmaṇa should come to be disgusted &c.'. Here, the word 'brāhmaṇa' being used, śruti indicates that brāhmaṇas alone can be sannyāsins. Manu (VI. 38) begins his description of the 4th stage with the words 'a brāhmaṇa should leave his house and go into the world as a wanderer' and winds up the chapter (VI. 97) by saying 'I have declared this fourfold procedure in relation to brāhmaṇas'. Laghu-Viṣṇu V. 13 emphatically states that the ascetic order is meant only for brāhmaṇas and the other three āśramas are meant for all dvijas. Those who assert that all the regenerate classes can resort to sannyāsa hold that the word 'brāhmaṇa' in the upaniṣads is used only as illustrative (upalakṣaṇa) and not in an exclusive sense and that a Sūtrakāra (Kātyāyana) expressly says ²¹⁵⁹ 'the three varṇas after studying the Veda can pass through four āśramas'. The Jābālopaniṣad (4) ordains 'whether a man has fulfilled his vratas or not, whether he has performed samāvartana (the ceremonial bath after studying Veda) or not, whether his fires (Vedic) have ceased or not he should resort to the wandering ascetic's life the very day on which he feels disgust with mundane affairs'.²¹⁶⁰ It thus allows even a brahmacārī to become an ascetic; a kṣatriya and vaiśya could be a brahmacārī. Yāj. III. 32 states that sannyāsa is a means of purification (of the mind) in the case of twice-born classes. Besides the only condition precedent mentioned by the Jābālopaniṣad for resorting to pravrajyā (ascetic life) is vairāgya and whoever feels the latter is authorized to betake himself to that stage. Yāj. III. 61 while laying down the observances of ascetics employs the word 'dvijaḥ' and not 'brāhmaṇaḥ'. The Kūrma-purāṇa also says (Uttarārdha 28. 2) that a dvija should become an ascetic.

Both these opposing views are supported by the most famous authors. The first view that only brāhmaṇas can be sannyāsins is affirmed by the great Śaṅkarācārya in his bhāṣya on Br. Up. III. 5. 1 and IV. 5. 15. It is most interesting and also very refreshing that Suresvara ²¹⁶¹ in his Vārtika on Śaṅkara's bhāṣya on Br. Up. III. 5. 1 first explains the views of his guru, then enters the lists against his great master and combats his views with cogent arguments. Most of the medieval writers and works such as Medhātithi on Manu (VI. 97), the Mit., the Madanapārijāta (pp. 365-373), the Smṛtimuktāphala (Varnāśrama p. 176) uphold the view that only brāhmaṇas can resort to the 4th āśrama, while a few works like the Smṛticandrikā (I. p. 65) support the second view. The position of Viśvarūpa²¹⁶² (on Yāj. III. 61) that only brāhmaṇas can resort to sannyāsa causes great perplexity. Sureśvara and Viśvarūpa are generally regarded as identical (vide H. D. vol. I. pp. 261-263 and Journal of the Andhra Historical Society for 1931, vol. V, p. 187). But Sureśvara holds the view that the word brāhmaṇa in the relevant texts is only illustrative. Therefore it follows that either Sureśvara changes his views or that Sureśvara and Viśvarūpa are not identical. Ānandagiri in his commentary on Sureśvara's Vārtika (p. 759) cites passages from the Mahābhārata (Ādi. 119) to establish that ksatriyas could resort to sannyāsa.²¹⁶³ Śāntiparva (63. 16-21) allows sannyāsa to kings when their life is about to end. But the general words of Śānti 62. 2 appear to be in conflict with this.²¹⁶⁴ Kālidāsa states that Raghu became a yati when he grew old, installed his son on the throne and stayed in a cottage outside the capital and draws a very poetic and striking picture of the contrast between the old king turned ascetic and the prince become king (Raghu-vaṃśa VIII. 14 and 16).

So far as the smṛti texts and the medieval works are concerned a śūdra could not become a sannyāsin. The Śāntiparva (63. 11-14) is quite clear that a śūdra cannot be a bhikṣu. It also (18. 32)²¹⁶⁵ informs us that in its day many (probably including śūdras) assumed the outward signs of the 4th āśrama, got their heads tonsured and moved about in ochre-coloured garments (kāṣāya) for securing alms and gifts. But there are clear indications that śūdras did assume even in the times of ancient smṛtis the ascetic's garb and mode of life. The Viṣṇu Dh. S. V. 115 and Yāj. II. 241 (as read by Viśvarūpa) prescribe the fine of one hundred paṇas for one who gave a dinner to śūdra ascetics in rites for gods and the manes. When the Āśrama-vāsika-parva 26. 33 states that Vidura was buried as an ascetic, the commentator Nīlakaṇṭha remarks that this indicates that even śūdras can follow the mode of the ascetic life.^{2165a}

It appears that even women could in rare cases adopt the ascetic's life in ancient brāhmanic times. The Mit. on Yāj. III. 58 quotes a sūtra of Baud. (strīṇām caike) to the effect that according to some ācāryas even women could adopt the ascetic mode of life. Patañjali in his Mahābhāṣya (vol. II. p. 100) speaks of a woman ascetic (parivrājikā) named Śaṅkarā. Yama quoted in the Sm. C. (on vyavahāra p. 254) declares 'neither in the Vedas nor in the dharmasāstras is pravrajyā enjoined for women; (procreation and care of) progeny from a male of the same varṇa as herself is her proper dharma, this is the established rule.'²¹⁶⁶ The Sm. C. gives in a far-fetched way absence of sexual intercourse as the meaning of pravrajyā here. Atri (136-137) lays down that six actions by women and śūdras lead to sinfulness viz. japa, tapas (austerities), pravrajyā (ascetic's life), pilgrimages, endeavour to secure miraculous power by repeating spells, sole devotion to the worship of a goddess.²¹⁶⁷ In the drama called Mālavikāgnimitra Kālidāsa describes the Paṇḍitā Kauśikī as wearing the garb of an ascetic (in I. 14). It must be said that the general trend of Hinduism is against women adopting the homeless or ascetic life. The Jātakas (e. g. IV. 392) rarely speak of cāṇḍālas as adopting the homeless condition.

When the question is asked whether sūdras or women could resort to sannyāsa there is likely to be some confusion. The word 'sannyāsa' conveys two ideas: abandonment of all actions (kāmya karma) that spring from the desire to secure some object or other and secondly, following a certain mode of life (āśrama) the outward signs of which are carrying a staff and the like and the entrance into which is preceded by the utterance of the praiṣa. The *Jīvan-muktiviveka*²¹⁶⁸ (p. 3) states that mokṣa (amṛtatva) depends upon tyāga (abandonment) as stated in the Kaivalyopanīṣad (2) 'not by actions, nor by progeny nor by wealth, but by tyāga some attained mokṣa' (release). For such abandonment even women and sūdras are eligible, the best example of a woman giving up everything being that of Maitreyī, the wife of Yājñavalkya, who plainly told the sage (Br. Up. IV. 5. 3-4), 'what have I to do with that which will not make me immortal (will not release me from saṃsāra)?' The Bhagavad-gītā (18. 2) also declares that sannyāsa means the giving up of actions springing from desires (to secure certain objects). The Jīvan-muktiviveka further states that by resorting to the āśrama of sannyāsa the mother and the wife of a sannyāsin are supposed not to be born again as women (but they may be born as men). So women and sūdras may abandon all actions, though they could not adopt the peculiar ascetic mode of life with its outward symbols. According to Śrīkara's bhāṣya on Vedāntasūtra I. 3. 34 the order of sannyāsa, the peculiar rules of which are recommended by Vedic texts, is only for the three varṇas, while mere nyāsa (abandonment of worldly pleasures and desires) can be resorted to by women, sūdras and mixed castes.²¹⁶⁹

Some espoused the view that sannyāsa was meant only for the blind, the cripple and the impotent, that is, for persons who possessed no eligibility (adhikāra) for the performance of Vedic rites. Śaṅkarācārya in his bhāṣya on V. S. III. 4. 20 refutes the view that the passage of the Jābālopaniṣad (4) cited above relates to those who are not eligible for performing Vedic rites and establishes that that passage has in view the general prescription that there is a stage of life called pārvirājya (sannyāsa) meant for all that seek release from saṁsāra. Sureśvara in his Vārtika on Śaṅkara's Br. Up. bhāṣya (p. 1908 v. 1144) also refutes the view.²¹⁷⁰ Medhātithi on Manu VI. 36 rejects this view (of some) by saying that the blind or cripple cannot follow the rules and practices (such as not staying in one village for more than one night) just as they cannot perform Vedic rites and hence it could not have been intended by the smṛti writers that sannyāsa was only for the blind and the cripple, nor can the impotent take to sannyāsa as no upanayana is performed in their case. The Mit. on Yāj. III. 56 follows Medhātithi. The Sm. Mu. (p. 173) and Yati-dh. (pp. 5-6) quote verses to the effect that 'the son of an apostate from sannyāsa, one having bad nails or black teeth, one emaciated by phthisis, one devoid of a limb—these do not deserve to resort to sannyāsa. Similarly those who are guilty of mortal sins or are suspected of them or are vrātyas, those who have left the path of truth, purity, sacrifices, vratas, tapas, charity, study of the Veda and homa should not be allowed to take up the ascetic life'.

One of the principal rules for a yati was that he was to leave wife and home and never to think of sexual matters or to revert to the life of a house-holder. Atri²¹⁷¹ (VIII. 16 and 18) declares 'I see no penance (expiation) for that twice-born man, who, after having resorted to the duties of a celibate (sannyāsin), falls off from that stage; he is neither a dvija nor a śūdra, his children become cāṇḍālas called Vidūra'. Śaṅkara on V. S. (III. 4. 42) explains that these words are only intended to emphasize the great effort required to remain celibate as a sannyāsin and that expiations are as a matter of fact prescribed for a bhikṣu having sexual intercourse. Dakṣa VII. 33 requires the king to brand on the forehead with the mark of dog's foot and banish from the kingdom a person who after becoming a sannyāsin does not abide by its rules (of celibacy &c.). It has been seen above that a man who falls away from the order of sannyāsins became a slave of the king for life (p. 185). Atri requires a sannyāsin not to stay even for a day in the place where live his father and mother, brother and sister, wife or son or daughter-in-law, his agnates or cognates or friends, or his daughter or her sons (Sm. Mu. p. 206).

Originally these injunctions about complete restraint and abandonment of sexual life and total lack of property were faithfully followed by ascetics. The great ācārya Śaṅkara was a celibate all his life, but he is said to have established four maṭhas as stated above (p. 907) for the propagation of his doctrines and philosophy at Śrīngapura (modern Śrīrgerī) and other places. Pious devotees bestowed considerable donations on these maṭhas. In course of time these maṭhas went on increasing and huge properties came to be under the control of the pontiffs of these several maṭhas. There arose ten orders of advaita sannyāsins alone ²¹⁷² viz. tīrtha, āśrama, vana, aranya, giri, parvata, sāgara, sarasvatī, bhārati and purī. These ten orders are said to be the pupils in succession of the four disciples of Śaṅkara i. e. the first two of Padmapāda, the next two of Hastāmalaka, the next three of Tṛṭṭaka (or Totaka) and the last three of Sureśvara. The several maṭhas at Śrīrgerī, Kāñci, Kumbhakōṇam, Kuḍalgi, Sankēśvara, Śivagangā have been quarrelling among themselves as to their jurisdictions ²¹⁷³ and their rights to claim monetary payments from the people and to exercise spiritual authority in matters of expiations, excommunication &c. teachers ²¹⁷⁴ and pupils appear to have been fabricated, no two of which agree in toto and in some of them Sureśvara is said to have lived for 700 or 800 years. The disciples of Rāmānuja and Madhva also have many māṭhas of their own. Vallabhācārya (one of the great ācāryas that interpreted the Vedānta-sūtras) and his disciples do not accept the order of sannyāsa. According to them in the Kali age sannyāsa is forbidden for the seeker as it leads on to regret and worry ^{2174a} (if its rules are to be strictly observed) and that the partiyāga (abandonment) that is the essence of sannyāsa does not consist in resorting to the 4th āśrama but in behaving in the way in which bhaktas (devotees) like Uddhava acted (vide Bhāgavata III. 4). Most of these māṭhas have large endowments or incomes which are spent in pomp and show (e. g. keeping golden images and paraphernalia). Very few of the heads are really learned even in ancient Sanskrit Literature in all its branches, they are impervious to modern tendencies and requirements, are obscurantists and generally oppose all ideas of reform. Only a very few māṭhas are presided over by persons who have been celibate throughout their lives. Most of them originally were householders and then took to sannyāsa. Besides the succession to the gādi is often a hole and corner affair. When the incumbent is about to die the influential and intriguing persons round him catch hold of some aspiring householder, make him a disciple of the dying sannyāsin and afterwards he is installed as the pontiff.

Bodas, which last (in Marathi) is a very valuable work, containing lists of pontifical succession of five māṭhas (pp. 91-103) and also the Māṭhamnyāsetu (in Sanskrit) mentioning the several māṭhas, their traditions, mottoes &c.

2174 a. बल्लभाचार्य in his संन्यासनिर्णय, (published by M. T. Telivala in 1918 with eight commentaries) states 'अतः कलौ स संन्यासः पश्चात्तापाय नान्यथा । पाषण्डित्वं भवेच्चापि तस्माज्ज्ञाने न संन्यसेत् ॥ 16; तस्मादुक्तप्रकारेण परित्यागो विधीयताम् । अन्यथा भ्रश्यते स्वार्थादिति मे निश्चिता मतिः ॥ 21' । पुरुषोत्तम in his com. (called विवरण) on verse 16 remarks that bhaktas (those who follow the path of bhakti, devotion to Kṛṣṇa) should resort to renunciation (partiyāga) in the way which Lord Kṛṣṇa ordered his great devotee Uddhava to follow (vide Bhāgavata III. 4. 20-21) and not by way of sannyāsa taught by those who follow the path of knowledge 'यस्माद्वि-विदिषासंन्यासस्य कलौ खेदादिजनकत्वं विद्वत्संन्यासस्य चासम्भवस्तस्मात् ज्ञानमार्गे वैधं संन्यासं न कुर्यात् ।'

He retains his attachment to his former family and uses a good deal of the income for his relatives and friends. Real reform of the mathas cannot come unless great improvements are made in selecting a successor. There must be several disciples, the selection must not be made on the incumbent's death-bed, representative bodies must have a voice in the selection. The heads of ascetic mathas have often come to the courts on questions about dignity, jurisdiction and properties. For example, in 3 Moore's Indian Appeals p. 193 the Śringerī Pontiff claimed a declaration that he alone was entitled to proceed on the public road in a palanquin crosswise and for an injunction restraining the Swami of the Lingayats from doing so; in Madhusudan Parvat v. Shree Madhav Teertha, 33 Bom. 278, the Śaṅkarācārya of the Śārādā matha at Dwarka sued for a declaration that the defendant was not entitled to the title and dignities of a Śaṅkarācārya and that he was not entitled to call for or receive any offerings from people at Ahmedabad or other places in Gujarat either in his assumed capacity of a Śaṅkarācārya or as a Śaṅkarācārya of the Jyotir-matha (this claim was also rejected on the grounds that the suit was not of a civil nature and that the offerings were voluntary).

In Vidya Shankara v. Vidya Narsimha, 51 Bom. 442 (P. C.) the Privy Council had to deal with a pretty tangle of claims between four persons, the plaintiff and the defendant each claiming to be the lawful Śaṅkarācārya of Sankeshwar and Karvir matha and both having selected a disciple to succeed them. These illustrations indicate how the world-renouncing ideal of conduct set forth by the great Śaṅkarācārya is honoured in modern times by those who swear by his name. They should lay to heart the words of the Jivanmuktiviveka and the quotation in it from Medhātithi (pp. 158-159) ²¹⁷⁵ viz, ' if an ascetic secures a matha as a fixed place of residence and thereon a sentiment of ownership arises in him his mind will be disturbed when loss or expansion of the matha takes place; therefore an ascetic should not possess a matha nor should he have vessels of gold or silver for his use nor should he gather pupils round himself for securing service from them or in order that they may honour him, spread his fame, or bring money to him, but he may gather disciples only for removing their ignorance.'

In J. R. A. S. for 1935 pp. 479-486 Dr. J. N. Farquhar contributes a very learned article on the organization of the sannyāsins of the Vedānta. Therein he shows how Moslem armed fakirs molested and even killed Hindu ascetics, how Madhusūdāna Sarasvatī approached the Emperor Akbar, how failing to get complete redress he initiated ksatriyas and vaiśyas into seven out of the ten orders of sannyāsins and armed them, how these sannyāsins fought against the moslem fakirs and also among themselves, how even non-brahmin women are initiated into the giri and purī orders and how in Northern India the pure monastic orders are those of tirtha, āśrama and sarasvatī. This innovation later on led to serious consequences. The sannyāsins and fakirs infested the province of Bengal and their incursions and depredations caused great alarm in the first days of the British rule (latter half of the 18th century²¹⁷⁶). This shows how the rule of ahiṃsā enjoined upon ascetics became perverted. Various estimates have been made about the number of persons in India professing to lead the ascetic life. They could easily have been 10 per cent of the population, particularly in Northern India. They generally led very indolent, parasitic and dissolute lives. There are however, reasons to believe that in recent times the number of so-called sannyāsins is being substantially reduced owing to several causes. There have been swarms of monks and nuns in Christian countries also. Before the suppression of the monasteries by Henry VIII in England about 400 years ago, the number of monks, nuns and persons dependent on them was enormously large. Vide 'English monks' by Geoffrey Baskerville, p. 285, (f. n. 2) where the figures of monks and nuns in England, France and Spain at various periods are given.

According to both ancient and modern Hindu Law, when a man became a sannyāsin, he became cut off from his family and lost all his rights to property, partition and inheritance in that family. Vas. Dh. S. 17. 52 lays down that those who resort to another āśrama (i. e. vānaprastha or sannyāsa) are excluded from their share (in the family property)²¹⁷⁷ This result, however, does not follow by merely wearing the garments of a sannyāsin, but in order that this result may follow a person must have performed the necessary ceremonies for entering the order of sannyāsins. On the other hand whatever belongs to a sannyāsin such as his clothes, his sandals, his books would not devolve on his blood relations as heirs but will go to his spiritual heir (viz. his pupil). Vide Yāj. II. 137 and the Mit. thereon. These rules, however, do not apply to a śūdra turning an ascetic. He does not become severed from his family by entering the order of asceticism, unless a usage to that effect is established. Vide Somasundaram v. Vaidhilinga, 40 Mad. 846 (at p. 869), Harishchandra v. Atir Muhmud, 40 Cal. 545.

The most serious inroad, however, on the ideal of sannyāsa was made when people professing to be ascetics were allowed to have wives or concubines. The Vāyupurāṇa (quoted in the Yati-dharmasaṅgraha p. 108) invokes dire consequences on him who after becoming a sannyāsin has sexual intercourse, viz. he becomes a worm in ordure for 60,000 years, passes through the lives of a rat, a vulture, a dog, a donkey, a pig, a tree without flowers and fruit, a goblin and then he is born as a cāṇḍāla. The Rājatarāṅgiṇī (III. 12) records²¹⁷⁸ that when the queen of Meghavāhana built a monastery she established in a portion of it ascetics who followed the rules of conduct laid down for their order and in the other portion ascetics, who were condemnable because of their acting like householders, together with their wives, sons, cattle and wealth. In the Presidency of Bombay several cases have come before the courts about the rights of succession to Gharbhari Gosavis²¹⁷⁹ (i. e. ascetics who have a house and family). Vide Gosain Rambharti v. Mahant Surajbharti, 5 Bom. 682 (where it was held that a Gosavi who succeeded as a disciple to a mohunt did not forfeit his rights by subsequent marriage), Balgir v. Dhondgir, 5 Bom. L. In the Gupta Inscriptions we have several records of a line of kings who were the feudatories of the imperial Guptas and who bear the appellation 'nṛpati-parivrājaka' (kingly ascetics). Fleet thinks (p. 95 n. 1) that the word means no more than what is conveyed by such words as 'rājarsi', but this is unconvincing. Their gotra was Bharadvāja and the founder is said to have been an incarnation of Kapila (p. 115). It is likely that the founder, after being a king, ultimately became a sannyāsin and his descendants (in the fashion poetically described by Kālidāsa) also became ascetics after adorning the throne for some time. Hence they probably came to be called nṛpati-parivrājakas. It is interesting to note that Vyāsa quoted in Sm. M. (p. 176) and Yati-dh. (pp 2-3) forbade sannyāsa in the Kali age, though he made an exception to this extent that as long as the division of society into varṇas existed and as long as the Veda was studied so long sannyāsa could be resorted to in the Kali age.²¹⁸⁰ Nāgeśa in his Vrātyatāprāyaścitta-nirṇaya (p. 46) makes the curious statement that according to the Sannyāsa-paddhati of Vyāsa a wise brāhmaṇa should not resort to sannyāsa when 4400 years of the Kali age will have expired (i. e. after 1299 A. D.).²¹⁸¹ This dictum was probably due not only to the difficulties of observing to the letter the code of life sketched for sannyāsins, but also to the fact that about 1299, the whole of India was being harassed by Moslem invaders and adventurers who made the helpless sannyāsins the first target for their fanatic zeal and persecution. The Nirṇaya-sindhu (III, pūrvārdha, end) quotes the above verse of Vyāsa and remarks that this prohibition of sannyāsa is meant to apply to sannyāsa with three dāṇdas.

The Baud. Dh. S. II. 10. 11-30, the Baud. gr. śeṣasūtra IV. 16, the Vaik. IX. 6-8 contain the procedure of becoming a sannyāsin. That of the Baud. Dh. S. being probably the most ancient among extant works is briefly set out below:²¹⁸² After having cut the hair on the head, the beard, the hair on the body, the nails, he makes ready three sticks, a loop of strings, (a piece of cloth as) a water strainer, a jar and a bowl. Having taken these he should go to the end of his village, or to the extremity of the boundary of his village, or the fire-hall; he should partake of clarified butter, milk and curds (mixed together) and should fast or drink water. Then he should recite the vyāhrtis separately preceded by 'om' and followed by the words 'I enter the Sāvitrī' and by one pāda of the sacred Gāyatrī and then all together.²¹⁸² Before sunset, he heaps fuel on the gārhapatya fire (if he has maintained Vedic fires), brings the anvāhāryapacana (dakṣiṇāgni) to the spot, takes the flaming āhavanīya fire out of the gārhapatya, melts clarified butter on the gārhapatya, cleanses it (with blades of kūśa), takes four portions of the butter in the spoon called 'śruc' and offers in the āhavanīya fire on which fuel-sticks have been heaped a full oblation (i. e. whole spoonful) four times saying 'om svāhā'. This is called Brahmānvādhāna (putting fuel-sticks on fire for securing knowledge of brahman). Then in the evening after agnihotra has been offered, he strews grass to the north of the gārhapatya fire, places on the grass sacrificial vessels in pairs with the upper parts turned downwards, spreads darbha grass to the south of the āhavanīya fire on the seat meant for the brahmā priest, covers it with black antelope skin and remains awake the whole of that night. Then he rises at the time (muhūrta) sacred to Brahmā and offers agnihotra in the early morning at the proper time. Then after covering the part of the altar called prṣṭhyā and bringing water he prepares an offering for Agni Vaiśvānara cooked on twelve potsherds. That well-known iṣṭi will be the last he will perform. Afterwards, he throws in the āhavanīya fire those sacrificial vessels which are not made of stone or earth. And throwing the two arāṇis (the wooden logs by the friction of which fire was produced for vedic rites) into the gārhapatya fire with the words ' may you two be of one mind with us ' he (mentally) deposits the three fires in himself. Repeating the mantra 'yā te agne yajñiṃ tanūr' (Tai. S. III. 4. 10. 5) he inhales the smell of the smoke of each of the three fires thrice. Then standing within the sacrificial enclosure he says thrice in a low voice and thrice aloud the words ' om bhūḥ, bhuvāḥ svaḥ. I have entered the order of sannyāsa (lit. I have abandoned), I have entered the order of sannyāsa, I have entered the order of sannyāsa '. Lastly he pours out as much water as will fill his joined hands saying ' I promise that no injury will proceed from me to any creature '. He must henceforward restrain his speech. He holds his staff saying ' thou art my friend, protect me '. He takes the śikya (loop of strings) with the words ' yadasya pāre rajasah ' (Tai. S. IV. 2. 5. 2); he takes the cloth for straining water with the text ' yena devāḥ pavitreṇa ' (Tai. Br. I. 4. 8 and Nirukta V. 6); he takes the water jar reciting ' yena devā jyotiṣordhvam ' (Tai. S. V. 7. 2. 2); he takes the bowl after reciting the seven vyāhrtis. Taking with him the staffs, the loop of strings, the cloth as a water strainer, the water-pot and the bowl he goes to a place where water can be had, bathes, sips water and sprinkles himself (performs mārjana) with the Surabhimatī ²¹⁸⁴ verse (dadhi-krāvṇo, Rg. IV. 39. 6), with Ablīṅgā verses, Vāruṇī verses, Hiraṇyavarṇā verses (Tai. S. V. 6. 1. 1 = Atharvaveda I. 33. 1-4) and Pāva-mānī verses (Rg. IX. 1 &c.). While still in the water he performs sixteen prāṇāyāmas after (mentally going over) the Aghamaṣṇa verses (Rg. X. 190. 1-3), comes out of the water on the bank, wrings his garments, puts on another pure (washed) garment, sips water, takes the cloth for straining water with the words ' om bhūr bhuvāḥ svaḥ ' and performs tarpaṇa to the seven ²¹⁸⁵ vyāhrtis. He then fills his joined hands with water and performs tarpaṇa to the Manes just in the same way as he did to the gods, then he worships the sun with the two verses ' udu tyam ' (Rg. I. 50. 1) and ' citram ' (Rg. I. 115. 1). He then offers tarpaṇa to the Ātman (self) with ' the syllable om is brahma; this light (the sun) that diffuses warmth is indeed

brahman; this which gives warmth is indeed the Veda; this indeed that sheds warmth is the (proper) object of knowledge'; then he worships the Ātman with the words 'the Self is brahman, it is light'. Let him repeat the Gāyatrī verse one thousand times or an unlimited number of times. Repeating 'om bhūrbhuvah svah' he takes up the water strainer (cloth) and fetches water. Let him not thereafter perform ācamana with water that has not been drawn up (from a well), which has not been strained²¹⁸⁶ and which has not been completely cleansed. Let him not wear thereafter whitegarments. He may carry one staff or three. He has to keep the following vows: ahimsā (abstaining from injury to any creature), truthfulness, not depriving others of any property of theirs, continence, and liberality. There are five minor vratas (vows) viz. absence of anger, waiting upon the guru, avoidance of carelessness (or rashness), cleanliness, purity in food. Then follow rules as to begging for alms (some of them are at pp. 933-934 above). When he returns from begging, he places the alms in a pure spot, washes his hands and feet and announces (the alms) first to the sun with the verses 'udu tyam' (Rg. I. 50. 1) and 'citram' (Rg. I. 115. 1); he also announces the alms to brahman with the text 'brahma jajñānam' (Tai. S. IV. 2. 8. 2 = Atharvaveda IV. 1. 1). It is declared (in Vedic texts) that after the brahmūdhāna the sacred fires are contained in the sacrificer himself; his prāṇa, apāna, vyāna, udāna and samāna represent the five fires gārhapatya, anvāhāryapacana (dakṣiṇāgni), āhavanīya, sabhya and āvasathya. These five fires indeed abide in the Ātman; he, therefore, offers (the oblations) in the Ātman only. This sacrifice offered in the soul, which is centred in and based on the Ātman, leads the soul to bliss. Giving compassionately portions of the alms to creatures and sprinkling the remainder with water, he should partake of it as if it were some medicine. After he has eaten and taken ācamana he worships the sun with the *Jyotiṣmatī*²¹⁸⁷ verse viz. 'ud vayam' (Rg. I. 50. 10) after inaudibly muttering the 2186. Vide Manu VI. 46 for straining water. 'Liberality'—the ascetic has ex hypothesi no property, but his tyāga may consist in imparting knowledge and giving his mss. or books to the needy.

2187. Rg. I. 50. 10 is उदयं तमसस्पति ज्योतिष्पदयन्त उत्तरम् । It contains the word ज्योतिः and is therefore styled ज्योतिष्मती. Bühler is inaccurate in holding the verse 'udvayam' as different from Jyotiṣmatī (vide S. B. E. vol. 14 p. 281). The words वाद्ये आसन्नतोः प्राणः are also अथर्ववेद 19. 60. 1.

two texts 'vān me āsan' (Tai. S. V. 5. 9. 2) and 'naśoh prāṇah' (Tai. Ār. X. 72). Let him eat food given without asking, regarding which nothing has been settled beforehand and which comes to him by chance and so much only as is necessary to support life.

Now they quote the following rules for the case where the teachers explain the Upaniṣad 'standing (in the day), keeping silence, sitting (at night) in the posture^{2187a} of crossed legs, bathing thrice a day, he shall subsist entirely on rice grains, oil-cake, food from barley, sour milk and milk'. It is declared in Vedic texts 'on that occasion he shall keep strict silence and converse as much as is necessary with the teachers deeply versed in the three vedas, with ascetics or other learned persons in the several āśramas, after pressing the teeth together, all the while contemplating on what he hears, but not in such a way as would cause a breach of his vow. He may keep only one of the rules out of the three viz. standing (in the day), rigid silence and sitting with crossed legs (at night) and not all together. Eight things do not cause him who is intent on vows as above to break his own vow viz. water, roots, clarified butter, milk, sacrificial food, the wish of a brāhmaṇa, an order of his guru, and medicine. Let him mutter the mantras in the evening and morning that are repeated in the Agnihotra. He should perform his evening sandhyā adoration with mantras addressed to Varuṇa²¹⁸⁸ and in the morning with those addressed to Mitra (Rg. III. 59). It is declared in the Veda 'limited in number are the ṛk verses, the sāmāns and the yajus formulæ, but there is no limit to this that is brahma.' In this way (i. e. repeating om) the ascetic may give up the rest of the Veda, but should stand firm by the root of the Veda (viz. om). The Veda is the tree and its root is praṇava (om). He should meditate on 'om'. Prajāpati has declared that praṇava leads on to union with brahman. Let him cleanse the vessel of brahman with seven vyāhrtis.²¹⁸⁹

2187 a. वीरासन is defined as 'एकं पादमथैकस्मिन् विन्यस्योरो हु संस्थितम् । इतरस्मिन्त्यथैवोचं वीरासनमुदाहृतम् ॥' कालिदास in रुचुङ्ग 13. 52 refers to this posture in योग.

Among medieval works the Smṛtyarthasāra (pp. 96-97), the Sm. M. (pp. 177-182), the Yati-dh. (pp. 10-22), the Nirṇaya-sindhu (III. Uttarārdha pp. 628-632), the Dharma-sindhu give various detailed procedures. Many of the medieval works and manuals (paddhatis) on sannyāsa frequently refer to a work called Brahmānandī, which I have not been able to secure. The procedure in the Dharmasindhu contains the following elements. Sannyāsa is to be resorted to in the northward passage of the sun and for a man who is about to die even in the southward passage. He should find out a teacher possessed of the virtues of quiescence and note for three months the duties of ascetics in his company, should purify himself with japa of the sacred Gāyatrī, Rudra mantras and by Kuśmāṇḍa homa (for which see Tai. Ār. II. 7). He should then make a *saṅkalpa*²¹⁹⁰ after reciting the place and time on a rikṭā tilhi and should perform the prāyaścitta of catuḥkṛcchra by giving a cow or money for each as stated above (pp. 199-200). Then he should begin to perform on the 11th or 12th day 16 śrāddhas of himself and sapindikarāṇa. Then he is to perform eight śrāddhas (vide above p. 932) and tarpana as a subordinate part (aṅga) of these eight śrāddhas. On the day these eight śrāddhas are performed or on the next day he should shave off the whole head after keeping six hairs out of his top-knot, pare his nails, then take his bath, then he is to donate to brāhmaṇas and his sons all his wealth except his wearing apparel and the materials for homa. The garments he is to wear should be dyed with red chalk; he should secure a bamboo staff as high as his head &c. and as thick as his finger and brought by a brāhmaṇa; that staff should be sprinkled over with water from a conch to the accompaniment of 'om', the puruṣa hymn (Rg. X. 90) and such names (of Viṣṇu) as Keśava. He should also keep ready a water jar, a strip for his loins and a garment to cover his body and a wallet and pādukās (sandals). He should declare his resolve (saṅkalpa) to become a paramahansa and perform the worship of Gaṇeśa, pun्यāhavācana, worship of mother goddesses and Nāndī-śrāddha. He should then perform japa by saying 'namah' to Brahmā (in the dative), Viṣṇu, Rudra, Sūrya, Soma, Ātman, Antarātman, Paramātman and also repeat the first pādas of each of the four

Vedas. He should then eat three handfuls of barley flour with 'om' and touch his navel. He should then sip thrice clarified butter or water mixed with milk and curds repeating the mantras 'trivṛd-asi', 'pravṛd-asi', 'vivṛd-asi' (all three in Vāj. S. 15. 9) and then drink water with the mantra 'may the waters purify' (Tai. Ār. 10. 23), then perform ācamana and declare his resolve to fast. Then comes Sāvitrīpraveśa (as in Baud. above); then he should kindle his grhya fire or if he has no grhya fire then he should bring domestic fire with the mantra 'prṣṭo divi' (Rg. VII. 5. 27) and kindle it with the three mantras 'tat savituḥ', 'tām savituḥ' and 'viśvāni deva' (Rg. III. 62. 10, Vāj. S. 17. 74, Rg. V. 82. 5). Then comes brahmānvādhāna before sunset (see above p. 954). He should thereafter perform evening sandhyā adoration, homa and vaiśvadeva and keep awake the whole night near the fire. Then the next morning after the daily homa and Vaiśvadeva he should offer a mess of cooked food to Agni or Vaiśvānara and perform the homa to prāṇa and others, the puruṣasūkta homa and Virajā homa. The Virajā homa is a lengthy performance and the principal elements in it are: the offering of 40 oblations of each out of the three viz. fuel-sticks, boiled rice and clarified butter after repeating certain formulae such as 'may my five prāṇas be purified, may I be light (illumination) free from rajas (the principle of activity or obstruction) and from evil, svāhā; this is for the prāṇa and the rest, it is not mine.' In this way oblations are offered to five senses, the mind, buddhi, seed, thought and saṅkalpa, to the constituents of the body, to the several limbs of the body (head, hands and feet &c.), to puruṣa and others, to the five elements, to the five guṇas of the elements, to the five kośas (sheaths) and several others. Then an oblation of ājya is made to Prajāpati. Then he should recite the Puruṣa hymn (Rg. X. 90) and the first sentences of the four Vedas, offer oblations to Agni Svīṣṭakṛt, distribute gifts to students and others, he should burn his wooden utensils in his grhya fire if he has kept one and donate the metal vessels to his guru, then he should deposit the fire in himself by reciting 'ayam te yoniḥ' (Rg. III. 29. 10) and 'yā te agne yajñīyā' (Tai. S. III. 4. 10. 5) thrice and should face and take in the blaze and warmth of his grhya fire, should take a black antelope skin and leave his house. He should give blessings to his sons and other near relatives and bid good-bye to them with the words 'to me belongs no one nor do I belong to any one.' Then he should go to a reservoir of water, take in his folded hands water and offer it to all gods with the hymn Rg. X. 103 (1-13). He should declare a resolve to resort to sannyāsa for the realization of brahman and offer three handfuls of water in the reservoir. He should then discharge water into the reservoir from his joined hands saying 'I have given up the hankering for sons, wealth, worlds and for everything, may there be safety to all creatures from me, svāhā.' Then he should again declare that he has abandoned everything, all pleasures, all sentiments of anger &c., all joys of flowers, scents, dancing and music, all duties of varṇa and āśramas &c.; he should also declare 'I shall not cause any injury to any creature in thought, word or by the body; may all creatures have no fear of me.' He should think of the sun and other gods as witnesses to this declaration and standing in navel-deep water should again perform the Sāvitrīpraveśa and offer water in declaring 'I have risen beyond the desire for sons, worlds and wealth and shall practise begging.'

After this comes the utterance of the praiśa (the call or direction). In a low, moderate and loud voice the entrant should declare 'om, bhūḥ I have given up everything, om bhuvah, I have, om svah, I have....., om bhūr bhuvah svah, I have given up everything' and should discharge water in the reservoir of water with the words 'may there be no injury to all creatures from me, svāhā.' He should pluck out the top-knot, take out his sacred thread and hold them in his hand and offer them in water with water with the words 'water is indeed all deities, I sacrifice (the top-knot and sacred thread) to all gods, svāhā' and then he should send up a prayer to Vāsudeva. Then he should remove his wearing apparel and walk five steps with his face to the north. Then the ācārya should bow to the entrant and should hand over to the latter a piece of loin cloth and upper garment and a staff. The entrant should wear them and hold the staff with appropriate mantras and also a water jar and an āsana (a seat). He should then hold a fuel-stick in his hand, bow to his guru, sit down in the eagle posture and make a request to the guru in the words 'Oh teacher, who are like the Lord of the Universe to me, save me who am scorched by the fire of saṁsāra and who am bitten by Death; I have thrown myself on your mercy' and also repeat the verse 'yo brahmānam' (Svetāśvatara Up. VI. 18 quoted in note 856 above).²¹⁹¹ Having waited upon the guru with these words and placing his right knee on the ground, he should clasp the feet of his guru and should say 'teach, Sir, brahma to me.' The guru should contemplate on his soul as brahman, should recite over a conch full of water the sacred syllable 'om' twelve times, should pour the water from the conch on his disciple, should recite the propitiatory verse 'śam no mitraḥ' (Rg. I. 90. 9), then lay his hand on the head of the disciple, should recite the Puruṣa hymn (Rg. X. 90), should place his hand on the heart of the disciple and mutter the mantra²¹⁹² 'I place thy heart in disciplined obedience to me,' the guru should then mutter in the right ear of the disciple the syllable 'om' and should enlighten him about the significance of 'om' and of pañcikarāṇa; ²¹⁹³ he should then impart to the disciple one of the four great Vedānta sentences (mahāvākya) 'prajñānam brahma' (Ait. Up. III. 3), 'āyam-ātmā brahma' (Br. Up. II. 5. 19), 'tat tvam-asi' (Chān. Up. VI. 8. 7), 'aham brahmāsmi' (Br. Up. I. 4. 10) in accordance with the tradition of his school and enlighten him about the meaning thereof. Then he should give to the disciple a name ending in tīrtha, āśrama &c. according to the tradition of his order. Then the guru may bring about what is called paryāṅkaśauca and give to the disciple the yogapaṭṭa.

The paryāṅka-śauca (purification by being seated on a stool &c.) may be briefly described. On an auspicious day a householder seats the ascetic in front of him on a wooden stool or seat, places five heaps of earth to his left and also to his right and also pure water on both sides. Then the householder simultaneously washes the two knees of the ascetic with water and earth from the first heap of earth on the left. Then he should wash his own left hand with earth and water taken from the half of the first heap on the right and with the remaining half of the first heap on the right he should wash both his hands seven times with the same water. With the second heap on the left he should wash simultaneously the two thighs (jaṅghā) of the ascetic four times and with one half of the second heap on the right he should wash his own left hand seven times and with the other half of the second heap (on the right) he should wash both his hands four times. The ankle, the upper part of the foot and the lower part (sole) of the foot of the ascetic are respectively washed with the third, fourth and fifth heap on the left and his own left hand and both hands are washed a certain varying number of times with 3rd, 4th, 5th heaps on the right.

2193. पञ्चीकरण is a Vedānta doctrine analogous to त्रिवृत्करण (which occurs in the Chān. Up. VI. 3 and 4 and V. S. III. 4. 20). Vide the वेदान्तसार for it and the work called पञ्चीकरण by Śaṅkarācārya (in Benares Sanskrit series).

The yogapaṭṭa (lit. the cloth of yoga, union with Spirit) is given in the following way: After the ascetic has undergone paryāṅkaśauca, he should cleanse his waist, wear a string round his waist and his loin cloth and cover his waist with a piece of cloth. He should then sit with his guru's permission on a high seat and should propound some Vedānta topic in the presence of the persons assembled. The ascetic guru should sprinkle on the head of his ascetic disciple water from a conch to the accompaniment of the Puruṣa hymn (Rg. X. 90), should honour him by offering clothes, sandalwood paste, flowers, incense, lamp and naivedya. He (the guru) should hold a piece of cloth over the head of the disciple, recite along with the other yatis the chapter called Viśvarūpa (11th chapter of the Bhagavadgītā) from the 15th verse to the 33rd verse. He should then give the name already determined upon to the disciple and say to him 'Henceforward you may admit to samnyāsa one who is eligible for it, initiate him and give him the yogapaṭṭa.' Then the disciple bows to the yatis older than himself. Then the guru gives to the disciple a waist-thread and a staff marked with five mudrās and should offer his own salutation to the disciple according to the tradition of his order. Other ascetics and house-holders also should bow to the disciple, who should only repeat the word 'Nārāyaṇa,' should leave the high seat and seat his guru thereon, should bow to the guru according to the rules of the order and to the other ascetics.²¹⁹⁴

The Jābālopaniṣad (5)²¹⁹⁵ allows samnyāsa to those even who are suffering from disease and are about to die, all that is required being that they should declare in words and resolve in their mind to enter the order of samnyāsa. No extensive ceremonial is required. Āngiras and Sumantu quoted in Sm. M. (pp. 174 and 182) state 'when a man is shattered by old age or harassed by his enemies or is suffering from (an incurable) disease he may resort to samnyāsa by merely uttering the praiṣa (vide above p. 960) and no further rites would be absolutely necessary. He should recite thrice in the morning, at noon and in the evening, ' I have given up everything (or entered upon samnyāsa) ' and further say ' I forswear whatever action I may have done through ignorance, indolence or carelessness; I shall cause no harm to creatures with my hands or feet, with my speech, body or mind; may all creatures have no fear from me.' The Dharmasindhu (III, uttarārdha) says that in this samnyāsa for those at the door of death the absolutely essential elements are the resolve (samkalpa), the uttering of the praiṣa and the giving of the promise of non-injury and the rest of the rites may or may not be performed according to circumstances. Even now such a samnyāsa (called āturasamnyāsa) is sometimes resorted to by religious-minded men in extremis, the only essentials gone through being samkalpa (declaration of resolve), kṣaura (tonsure of the head), sāvitrīpraveśa (described above at p. 954) and praiṣoccāra (utterance of praiṣa).

One question on which controversies have raged from very ancient times is whether an ascetic should give up his top-knot and sacred thread also. The Jābālopaniṣad ²¹⁹⁶ (5) states that Atri asked Yājñavalkya how a man who did not wear a yajñopavīta (when he became an ascetic) could still be a brāhmaṇa and that the great sage replied that in the case of the ascetic the Self was his yajñopavīta and the same Upaniṣad (6) states that the paramahansa is to abandon in water the three dāṇḍas, the water-jar, the śikya, the begging bowl, the water-strainer, the topknot and yajñopavīta and should be a seeker after the Self. In the Āruṇika Up. (2) it is said²¹⁹⁷ that he should discharge his yajñopavīta on the earth or in water and that he should give up his śikhā and the sacred thread. Śaṅkara in his bhāṣya on Br. Up. III. 5. 1 sets out at some length the arguments and the authorities on both sides and ultimately gives it as his own view that the sacred thread and śikhā should be given up by the ascetic. Viśvarūpa on Yāj. III. 66 also discusses this matter and propounds the same view. On the other hand Vṛddha-Hārīta²¹⁹⁸ VIII. 57 declares 'if an ascetic gives up the acts peculiar to brāhmaṇas, viz. keeping a topknot and wearing a sacred thread, he becomes a cāṇḍāla while alive and is born a dog after death.' The Jīvanmuktiviveka (p. 6 ff.) and Par. M. I. part 2, p. 164 ff. discuss this point and arrive at the same conclusion as Śaṅkara. The Mit. on Yāj. III. 58 gives an option. In modern times saṁnyāsins give up these two.

Some special rules are laid down about the āhnikā (daily rites) of ascetics.²¹⁹⁹ They have to perform śauca, brushing the teeth, bath, just as house-holders have to do. Manu V. 137 (= Vas. Dh. S. VI. 19, Viṣṇu Dh. S. 60. 26, Śaṅkha 16. 23-24) says that forest hermits and ascetics have respectively to perform three and four times as much śauca (bodily purification) as house-holders. As to food, it has already been seen (p. 935) that they are to eat only once and only eight morsels. Ascetics have to worship Puruṣottama (i. e. Vāsudeva with his four forms), Vyāsa (with his four pupils, Sumantu, Jaimini, Vaiśampāyana, Paila), the Bhāṣyakāra Śaṅkara (with his four pupils) and so on. Certain rules are laid down for an ascetic as regards giving and receiving honour or salutation. An ascetic should bow to gods and to older ascetics who act according to the rules of their order, but should not offer namaskūra to an house-holder even if the latter be well-conducted. If another person bows to an ascetic, the latter should not pronounce any benediction but should only utter the word²²⁰⁰ 'Nārāyaṇa.' When an ascetic (even one who has taken samnyāsa on his death-bed) dies, he is to be buried and not cremated. No mourning is to be observed for a yati when he dies (Atri 97) and no śrāddhas are to be offered on his death except the pārvana on the 11th day after death (vide Aparārka p. 538). If an ascetic hears of the death of his son or any other relative, he does not become impure and has not to bathe but on hearing of his mother's or father's death he has to bathe, though he observes no mourning^{2200a}

According to the theory of Dharmaśāstra, the king is not only the head of the civil administration and the fountain of justice, but he is also the final controlling authority in preserving religious and spiritual institutions, he is to see that people follow the dharma, to punish them for breaches of the religious and spiritual codes and to see to the administration to them of appropriate penances. In short, he is also the Defender of the Faith. Vide Gaut. XI. 9-11, Viṣṇu Dh. S. III. 2-3, Nārada (prakīrṇaka) verses 5-7, Yāj. I. 337 and 359, Atri 17-20, Manu VII. 13. But he regulated spiritual and religious matters not by his arbitrary authority but on the advice of his purohita and ministers and after taking the opinion of the assemblies (pariṣad) of learned men. Whenever difficult questions arose about the validity of anything from the religious point of view or about penances for lapses, or about excommunicating or outcasting a man the opinion of the assembly of learned men was sought. Therefore, detailed rules are laid down in the Dharmaśūtras and smṛtis about the constitution of pariṣads. In modern times, the British Government being neutral in matters religious or ecclesiastical, the ascetic heads of the various maṭhas have been in the habit of assuming to themselves jurisdiction over persons professing to follow their dogmas in ecclesiastical matters such as prescribing penances for lapses, settling disputes between castes, and deciding upon questions of outcasting. A few words must be said about the pariṣads and about the claims of the Śaṅkarācāryas (the modern heads of maṭhas) to regulate religious matters affecting their followers.

Among the oldest texts on this point is the one contained in the Tai. Up. I. 11. viz. the exhortation of the teacher on the eve of the student's departure at the close of his studies.²²⁰¹ ' If you have hereafter a doubt about any rite or about a course of conduct, you should behave in the way in which the brāhmaṇas of your place, who are thoughtful, intent (upon doing their duties), act spontaneously (without being urged by any one), are not hard-hearted and have an eye only to dharma (and not to kāma or artha) will behave. The same holds good about your conduct towards persons charged (generally falsely) with sins or lapses'.

The words 'sabhā' (Rg. X. 34. 6) and 'samiti' (Rg. X. 97.6) occur even in the Rgveda but their exact significance is doubtful and the former word at least seems to bear the sense of 'gambling hall' in some passages. In the Upaniṣads, however, the words samiti and pariṣad assume a more definite sense, meaning 'an assembly of learned men in a particular locality'. The Chān. Up. V. 3. 1 states that Śvetaketu Āruṇeya²²⁰² repaired to the assembly (samiti) of the Pāṇcālas (where Pravāhaṇa Jaivali put him five questions of a metaphysical and esoteric nature). The Br. Up. VI. 2. 1 when narrating the same episode employs the word 'pariṣad'. These passages establish that in the times of the Upaniṣads there were assemblies of learned men where intricate questions were discussed. Gaut. 28. 46 prescribes just as the Tai. Up. I. 11 does that in matters about which there is no certain rule (or there is doubt) one should do what is commended by respectable persons not less than ten in number, who are clever in discussion and are above covetousness.²²⁰³ The Āp. Dh. S. I. 3. 11. 34 declares that holidays other than those stated by him may be observed as settled by pariṣads. The Baud. Dh. S. II. 1. 44-45 prescribes "the relatives of a brahmacārī who is guilty of sexual intercourse should empty a water pot in the pariṣad and the offender should confess 'I, so and so by name, am guilty of such and such a misdeed' and that after the erring person has performed penance and when he has touched water, milk, ghee, honey and salt, the brāhmaṇas should ask him 'have you performed the penance?' The other shall then reply 'yes'; then they shall admit him who has performed penance to all sacrificial rites making no difference between him and others."²²⁰⁴ This clearly establishes that at least five centuries before the Christian era it was the privilege of the assembly of the learned brāhmaṇas to administer penance to a sinner and then restore him to all rights of interdining and other social intercourse. Vas. Dh. S. I. 16 declares 'there is no doubt that whatever persons who have studied dharmaśāstra and the three Vedas expound as purifying themselves and others is the proper dharma.' Āp. Dh. S. I. 1. 1. 2 declares that the conventions of those that know dharma are the authoritative standard (of conduct for ordinary men). When the smṛtis declare that Veda, smṛti and the usages of śiṣṭas are the three sources of dharma (e. g. Vas. Dh. S. I. 4-5) they convey that śiṣṭas can and should determine from time to time what is religious conduct. When Bṛhaspati enjoins that doubts about dharma should not be settled by blindly following the letter of śāstras, but that logic and reasoning should be employed, he strikes the true note of the spirit of the ancient sages.^{2204a} Vide also Manu XII. 106 and Gaut. XI. 23-24 for the importance of tarka in settling matters of dharma. Manu XII. 108 states 'if one were to ask how one should act in matters of dharma on which no express rule is declared in this work, the reply is that in such cases what is declared to be a proper rule of conduct by respectable (śiṣṭa) brāhmaṇas would undoubtedly be the dharma.' Yāj. III. 300 requires that a person guilty of a sin or lapse should declare it to an assembly of learned brāhmaṇas and undergo such vrata (penance and observances) as is approved of by the pariṣad. Śaṅkarācārya in his bhāṣya on Br. Up. IV. 3. 2 makes the very significant ²²⁰⁵ remark "it is therefore that in coming to a decision on a subtle point of dharma, it is desirable to have a pariṣad working and a specially distinguished person is wanted (to give the lead) as stated in the rule 'a pariṣad should consist of not less than ten persons or of three or of one (specially distinguished)'" These several authorities establish that for over 1500 years before the great Śaṅkarācārya the pariṣad of learned brāhmaṇas was the acknowledged authority for settling doubtful points of dharma and administering penances on lapses from proper conduct, and that Śaṅkarācārya himself acknowledged this privilege of the pariṣad.

The next question is: what is the number of persons required to constitute a pariṣad for deciding on doubtful points of dharma and what their qualifications should be. According to Gaut. 28. 46-47 a pariṣad should consist of at least ten ²²⁰⁶ persons viz. four, each of whom has mastered one Veda, three members who are respectively a (perpetual) student, a house-holder and a saṁnyāsin and three more each of whom has studied distinct dharmaśāstras. Vas. Dh. S. III. 20, Baud. I. 1. 8, Parāśara VIII. 27 and Āṅgiras declare that four persons each of whom has mastered one of the four Vedas, one who knows the Mīmāṃsā, one who has studied the six subsidiary lores of the Veda, one who has studied dharmaśāstra and three persons who are a house-holder, a forest hermit and a saṁnyāsin constitute a pariṣad of ten. Manu XII. 111 defines the ten as consisting of three masters of each of the three Vedas (excluding the Atharvaveda), one who has studied Logic, a student of Mīmāṃsā, a student of Nirukta, a master of dharmaśāstras and three members in each of the first three āśramas. Brhaspati ²²⁰⁷ quoted in Par. M. II. 1 p. 218 declares that a pariṣad may be constituted by seven or five persons sitting together who have studied the Vedas, their six subsidiary lores and dharmaśāstra and that such a pariṣad resembles a solemn sacrifice. Vide also Āṅgiras quoted by Aparārka p. 23 for seven or five men as constituting a pariṣad. Vas. Dh. S. III. 7, Yāj. I. 9, Manu XII. 112, Parāśara VIII. 11 state that at least four or three men should constitute a pariṣad, but they should be students of each of the four Vedas, should be agnihotrits and should have also studied dharmaśāstra. If even three cannot be found then even a single man can declare the dharma in case of doubt (Gaut. 28. 48), but he must possess special qualifications. Gaut. 28. 48, Manu XII. 113 (= Atri 143) require that he must be the best of brāhmaṇas, a śiṣṭa and a deep student of the Veda. Yāj. I. 9, Parāśara VIII. 13, Āṅgiras²²⁰⁸ say that a single person who is the best among ascetics possessing knowledge of the Self may form a pariṣad and declare what the proper rule is on a point of doubt. Though the texts permit in extreme cases a single man to declare dharma in case of doubt they give emphatic warning that this should not be done as far as possible. Baud. Dh. S. I. 1. 13 observes²²⁰⁹ 'the way of dharma is very subtle and difficult to follow and it has many entrances (i. e. it appears different in different circumstances); therefore a person though knowing much should not undertake single-handed to propound the proper course of conduct in case of doubt.' The texts also emphasize that doubtful points of dharma are not to be decided by the votes of ignorant people, even if they muster in thousands. Manu XII. 114-115 (= Baud. Dh. S. I. 1. 17 and 12 = Vas. Dh. S. III. 5-6 = Parāśara VIII. 6 and 15) state 'Even if thousands of brāhmaṇas who have observed no vṛata and who have studied no Vedic mantras and who make their living merely by virtue of their caste come together they do not constitute a pariṣad. When such foolish persons deluded by ignorance and ignorant of dharma declare (a penance for a sin) the sin is multiplied a hundred-fold and reaches the propounders.'

The Mit. on Yāj. III. 300 remarks that the number mentioned as constituting a pariṣad is not material, that all that is meant is that for lesser sins a small number of learned men can declare the penance, but in the case of serious sins, the number of persons who constitute the pariṣad should be large. Devala²²¹⁰ quoted in the Mit. on Yāj. III. 300 says that when the sin is not grave, brāhmaṇas may declare the penance without reference to the king (and restore the sinner to his privileges) but when the sin is grave, then the king and brāhmaṇas must carefully examine the matter and then declare the penance. Parāśara (VIII. 28-29) ordains²²¹¹ 'brāhmaṇas should declare penance for sins with the king's consent, that they should not declare the expiation of sins by penance of their own motion and that if the king decides to give prāyaścitta without reference to brāhmaṇas, the sin becomes increased a hundred-fold.' It is the duty of the pariṣad to declare an appropriate penance when a man comes to it, declares his lapse and seeks to be freed from the taint and if the pariṣad knowing what the appropriate penance is refuses to administer it, they incur the same sin as that committed by the man who approaches them.²²¹² Parāśara VIII. 2 prescribes that one should on being convinced of his having committed a sin at once repair to the assembly of learned men, should prostrate himself on the ground before them and request them to administer prāyaścitta (expiation). The Mit. on Yāj. III. 300 quotes Parāśara that the sinner should announce his sin after offering the present of a cow or a bull or the like to the pariṣad.

It will be shown immediately below that these rules of the smṛtis were observed to the letter by Hindu kings and learned brāhmaṇas in medieval times. When the successors of Śaṅkarācārya began to interest themselves in the work done by the pariṣads for centuries before the advent of the first ācārya cannot be ascertained. A large part of Northern India was under Moslem rule for about 500 years from about 1200 A. D. and a portion of the Deccan and a part of South India also were under Moslem rule for about three hundred years. Numerous documents have been published by the late Mr. Vishvanath K. Rajwade (a scholar who made unique contributions to the elucidation of Maratha History, Marathi Philology and Marathi Literature) and his friends. From these it appears that during the time of the Maratha domination learned brāhmaṇas of holy places like Paithan, Nasik and Karad were consulted in religious matters by the king or his minister, that the holders of the 'gādi' of Śaṅkarācārya at Śaṅkeśvara and Karavīra and other seats were also rarely consulted in these matters and that it is only after the advent of the British rule that²²¹³ the Śaṅkarācāryas have begun to claim almost exclusive jurisdiction in ecclesiastic matters and in restoring men to their castes or excommunicating them for lapses. It will be seen from passages quoted below that both the learned brāhmaṇas at holy places like Karad and the Śaṅkarācāryas claim the exclusive right in these matters by reason of immemorial usage.

In several works it is said that the pariṣad must be constituted by śiṣṭas (vide Gaut. 28. 46). Śiṣṭa is variously defined by some smṛti works. The Baud.²²¹⁴ Dh. S. (I. 1. 5-6) says 'Śiṣṭas are those who are free from envy and pride, who keep only as much corn as is measured by kumbhi (vide p. 111 f. n. 235), who are free from greed and from hypocrisy, arrogance, covetousness, delusions and anger. Those are śiṣṭas who have studied the Veda according to the prescribed method, together with its appendages (viz. Itihāsa and Purāṇas), who know how to draw inferences from that and who tend to make people realize the teaching of the Veda.' The Mahābhāṣya defines śiṣṭas in almost the same words as Baud. Dh. S. I. 1. 5. Vas. Dh. S. 1. 6 defines śiṣṭa as one whose mind is free from desires.

D.) for the claim of the Śaṅkarācārya of Karavīra 'मठाधिकारी वगैरे याची वहिवाद पाहून नियह ठेवणें अगर शुद्ध करणें हा अधिकार मठकरवीर संस्थानचा आहे. कराडकर यांनीं दरम्यान धांदल करून पत्र लिहिलें हें बरोबर नाहीं.' On the other hand letter No. 227 in the same volume at p. 276 dated śake 1778 addressed to the assembly of brāhmaṇas at Kasegaon by the assembly of Karabhāṭa (Karad in Satara District) asserts 'पूर्वीपासून आचार व्यवहारपद प्रायश्चित्त करण्याचा अधिकार क्षेत्राचा पूर्वापार असून &c.'

The Matsyapurāṇa ²²¹⁵ 145. 34-36 and Vāyu, vol. I. 59. 33-35 derive the word śiṣṭa and restrict it to Manu, the seven sages and other similar great sages, who in each æon (Manvantara or yuga) settle the rules of conduct for succeeding ages.

It is well-known that Shivaji, the great founder of the Maratha Empire, established a council of eight ministers, viz. Mukhya Pradhāna, Amātya, Saciva, Mantri, Senāpati, Paṇḍitarao, Nyāyādhiśa and Sumanta. 'The jurisdiction of the Paṇḍitarao extended over ²²¹⁶ all religious matters, he was to examine and decide disputes about dharma and adharma, he was to honour śiṣṭas (respectable people) on behalf of the king, was to make his signature expressing his approval of the writings (decisions) about ācāra, vyavahāra and prāyaścittas (made by learned brāhmaṇas). He was to superintend and carry into immediate execution gifts, propitiatory rites (for the king).' This shows that even in matters of prāyaścitta (penance for lapses and sins) the final control rested with the Paṇḍitarao, who used to send doubtful matters to learned brāhmaṇas at holy places like Wai, Nasik, Karad for their opinions and accept them. There are letters which show that the Paṇḍitarao convened meetings of learned brāhmaṇas and with their approval declared prāyaścitta in the case of a brāhmaṇa who had been forcibly converted by Mahomedans and who was thereafter restored to caste.

That sometimes the Pontiff of the Śaṅkeśvara maṭha was consulted even in disputes about rights to lands and villages follows from a decision contained in Rao Bahadur Vad's work pp. 203-210 (of 1730 A.D.). Here a dispute arose between Śrīkarācārya (to whom a village had been donated by king Rājārāma) and his agnates, who, taking advantage of the fact that the gift-deed was made in the name of five persons including Śrīkarācārya, put forward their claims to that village. This dispute was referred to the Svāmī of Śaṅkeśvara and Karavira who decided on the authority of Vijñāneśvara, the Vyavahāramayūkha and the Dānakamalākara that though the document was executed in the name of five persons, the gift of the village with water, kuśa and gold was made to Śrīkarācārya alone and that therefore he alone was the true owner.

There are cases where the head of the Karavīra maṭha issued an order (in śake 1644 i. e. 1722 A. D.) asking people to dine with a brāhmaṇa whose wife had illicit connection with a gosāvi and who had performed the necessary prāyaścitta.²²¹⁷

On the other hand in numerous instances the assembly of learned brāhmaṇas was approached either by the Paṇḍitarao or by the interested parties themselves to declare the proper penance and restore the guilty party to his caste.²²¹⁸ Numerous documents and letters showing the part played by the family of Gijre at Karad (in the Satara District) in the matter of giving decisions on questions of dharma-śāstra have been published by the late Mr. V. K. Rajvade. One Gangadhara Ranganatha Kulkarni of Harsul^{2218a} was forcibly converted by the Moslems; then the Marāṭha king Sambhaji ordered his minister the Paṇḍitarao to restore him to his caste after giving him appropriate prāyaścitta and the Paṇḍitarao called a meeting of learned brāhmaṇas, looked into works like the Mitākṣarā and with the approval of the brāhmaṇas administered prāyaścitta to him and sent him on a pilgrimage. There is a similar case in which the Paṇḍitarao under orders from the king writes to the learned brāhmanas of Karad about the prāyaścitta to be administered to one Khandu Jadhav²²¹⁹ who had been forcibly made by the Moslems to eat their food and in which he informs the brāhmanas that a fee of two rupees should be taken from the man. It may be noted in passing that Raje Netaji Palkar who was one of the great commanders under Shivaji, the founder of the Maratha Empire, was made a moslem by the Mogul Emperor Aurangzeb and was subsequently taken back into the Hindu fold by Shivaji. In another document²²²⁰ the learned brāhmanas of Poona, 46 in number, write to the brāhmanas of Karavira about one Narasimha Bhaṭṭa Toro of Paithan who had engaged as a priest in a Vedic sacrifice in which he had offered the effigy of an animal made of flour, who had therefore been made outcast and who was subsequently restored to the caste after undergoing penance.

The above brief account will show that for hundreds of years even before the first Śaṅkarācārya flourished it was the privilege of the assembly of learned brāhmanas to decide doubtful points of religious conduct and prescribe penances for lapses, that the same privilege continued undisturbed till the advent of the British rule, that rarely the heads of the maṭhas, by virtue of their eminent position, their supposed detachment from and renunciation of worldly affairs and their reputation as ascetics, were asked to decide (following Yāj. I. 9) doubtful points of religious and theological importance, that it is only during the last few decades that such heads began to claim exclusive jurisdiction in such matters.

It is desirable in the interest of the solidarity of the several Hindu castes and the rapid growth of progressive and advanced views that matters of practices, penances and restoration to caste should be in the hands of the bodies of learned men or the caste itself than in the hands of a single ascetic styling himself Śaṅkarācārya, who often happens to know nothing of dharmaśāstra and only puts his seal of approval on what interested persons that are round him say.

After this review of the stage of sannyāsa we see that asceticism presents several aspects viz. fasting or at least reducing the intake of food, abstention from meat and drink and pleasures of sense, total absence of sexual gratification and suppression of the sexual emotion, vow of silence, sleeping on bare ground, nakedness or making use of minimum clothing, contempt for the world and its riches. The Hindu Scriptures however do not enjoin self-infliction of pain or flagellation that was indulged in by monks in the early centuries of Christianity. Asceticism in the several forms indicated above is a feature common to all religions. It is the fashion to assert that Indians²²²¹ have the highest regard for asceticism and that the men whose memories they cherish as ideals of human conduct are ascetics. This statement is only partially true. Christ also taught abandonment of worldly ties and the spurning of riches as the best for entering the Kingdom of Heaven (vide Matthew 19. 21, Luke 14. 26 and 33, St. John 2. 15-16). It is only during the last three or four hundred years that Western peoples have given up much of what was thought for centuries to be the main teaching of Christ and regard successful men of action or politicians or men of martial exploits as their ideals and heroes. In India also martial glory has often raised men to the position of heroes or avatāras, but only when they delivered their countrymen from the tyranny and persecution of evil men or foreigners. Paraśurāma, Rāma and Kṛṣṇa are avatāras because they fought against tyranny and barbarity and not because they brought as large a slice of the earth under their domination as possible for purposes of exploitation or vainglory. Martial exploits for self-aggrandisement or for domination for domination's sake have never evoked great enthusiasm in India. Shivaji, the great hero of the Marathas, was paid almost divine honours even during his life-time not for his martial exploits, but for his having freed the Marathas and other peoples from Moslem tyranny, persecution, religious intolerance and fanaticism.

CHAPTER XXIX

SRAUTA (VEDIC) SACRIFICES*

Introductory

A deep study of Vedic sacrifices is quite essential for the proper understanding of the Vedic Literature, for arriving at approximately correct statements about the chronology, the development and the stratification of the different portions of that Literature and for the influence that that Literature exerted on the four varṇas and the caste-system, on the splitting up of the brāhmaṇas themselves among several sub-castes²²²² and on the institution of gotras and pravaras. Early European scholars generally paid scant attention to the deep study of the Vedic sacrifices and endeavoured to understand the meaning of the Vedas principally by reference to grammar, comparative philology and the comparison of several passages containing the same word or words. Max Müller put forward a tentative scheme of chronology based mostly on subjective considerations and prompted by the great prejudice felt by European scholars generally against admitting any great antiquity for the Vedas. Therefore the endeavour of most European scholars has been to show that the mantras could not have been composed before 1400 B. C. It is beyond the scope of this work to enter into any discussion about the dates of the various sections of the Vedic Literature. It must be here said, however, that I do not subscribe to the view that 1400 B. C. is the uppermost limit of the original composition of the Vedic hymns. The hymns may have been composed for aught we know several thousand years before that date. Most of the Vedic Samhitās that we now have are arranged (except the R̥gveda to some extent) definitely for the various aspects of the cult of the sacrifice and indicate a state of things when different priests were required for the sacrifices, who used mantras from the collections they had studied.

For a thorough understanding of Vedic sacrifices, the several Veda Samhitās, the Brāhmaṇas and the Śrauta sūtras must be carefully studied. Among works in English that are very helpful must be mentioned, Haug's translation (with notes) of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, Prof. Eggeling's translation of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa with notes (S. B. E. vol. XII, XXVI, XLI, XLIII, XLIV), Prof. Keith's 'Religion and Philosophy of the Veda and Upaniṣads', translation of the Black Yajurveda (2 vol. in Harvard Oriental Series) and of the R̥gveda Brāhmaṇas (one volume in the same series), Kuntze's 'Vicissitudes of Aryan civilization in India.' (1880) particularly pp. 167-232. Besides these Weber and Hillebrandt have written in German scholarly works on Vedic sacrifices; Caland and Henry published a very learned, exhaustive and methodical work in French on the Agniṣṭoma (1906). In this connection the late Dr. S. V. Ketkar's labours and researches embodied in his Marathi Encyclopædia (vol. 2 and 5) are worthy of special consideration, since they furnish a much-needed corrective to the somewhat one-sided views of most European scholars that have written on Vedic Literature, though one is bound to differ from him in several matters.²²²³ The following pages are based principally on the original texts, though here and there the works of modern scholars have been availed of.

In his Pūrvamīmāṃsāsūtra, Jaimini submits thousands of texts to the principles of mīmāṃsā elaborated by him and arrives at definite conclusions on matters affecting the details of various sacrifices. An attempt has been made in these chapters on śrauta to include many of his conclusions, a task, which so far as I know, has not been essayed by any modern writer on dharma or śrauta up till now.

The fundamental conceptions of Yajña (sacrifice) go back to Indo-European²²²⁴ antiquities though the traces are rather faint. But it is quite clear that the cult of the sacrifice had been much developed in the Indo-Iranian period. There is a very striking resemblance between the Vedic Agniṣṭoma and the Homa ceremony of the Parsis (vide Haug's Ait. Br. vol. I, Introduction p. 59 ff). There are numerous words indicative of the cult of the sacrifice both in the Vedic language and in the ancient Parsi religious books. For example, words like atharvan, āhuti, uktha, barhis, mantra, yajña, soma, savana, stoma, hotr do also occur in the ancient Parsi religious scriptures.²²²⁵ Though Vedic sacrifices are now very rarely performed (except a few simple ones like the Darśa-pūrṇamāsa and the Cāturmāsya), they were in great vogue several centuries before the Christian era. Centuries after the advent and spread of Buddhism we learn from inscriptions and literary traditions that kings often performed the ancient solemn Vedic sacrifices and gloried in having done so. In the Harivaṃśa (III. 2. 39-40), in the Mālavikāgnimitra (Act V, which speaks of Rājasūya), in the Śunga Inscription from Ayodhyā (E. I. vol. XX. p. 54) Senāpati Puṣyamitra is said to have performed the Aśvamedha (or Rājasūya). In the Hathigumpha Inscription (E. I. vol. XX. at p. 79) king Khāravela is extolled as having performed the Rājasūya. In the Bilsad stone Inscription of Kumāragupta dated in the Gupta year 96 (i. e. 415-6 A. D.) it is stated that his great ancestor Samudragupta performed the Aśvamedha that had gone out of vogue for a long time (cirotsannāśvamedhāhartuḥ, in Gupta Inscriptions at p. 43). In the Pardi plates (of Cedi saṃ. 207 i. e. 456-7 A. D.) the Trai-kūṭaka king Dahrasena is described as the performer of Aśvamedha (E. I. vol. X. p. 53). The Pikira grant of Simhavarman (E. I. vol. VIII. p. 162) describes the Pallavas as the performers of many Aśvamedhas and another Pallava grant (in E. I. vol. I p. 2 at p. 5) refers to the performance of Agniṣṭoma, Vājapeya and Aśvamedha. The Chammak plate of the Vākāṭaka king Pravarasena II (Gupta Inscriptions No. 55

The original worship of fire may have been individualistic as well as communal or tribal. The daily agnihotra was an individual affair; but as even simple iṣṭis like darśapūrṇamāsa required four priests, and Soma sacrifices required 16 priests and costly preparations, these sacrifices partook more or less of a public or at least congregational character. It appears that as most brāhmaṇas were poor and could not carry on even the daily agnihotra, which pinned them down practically to one place and did not allow them to move out of the village for securing their livelihood, even agnihotra must have been comparatively rare in early times. Such Vedic sentences as 'one who has begot a son or sons and whose hair is still black should consecrate the Vedic fires' (quoted by Śābara on Jaimini I. 3. 3 and cited on p. 350 above) establish that agnyādhāna was advised for brāhmaṇas when they had reached middle age (and not before). The daily agnihotra required the maintenance of at least two cows, besides thousands of cow-dung cakes and fuel-sticks. For the maintenance of agnihotra and the performance of darśapūrṇamāsa (in which four priests were employed) and the Cāturmāsya (where five priests were required) the house-holder was required to be well-to-do. And the Soma sacrifices could be performed only by kings, nobles and the rich and by those who could collect large subscriptions. We find that kings while making grants often expressed that the object of the grants was to enable the brāhmaṇa donees to offer bali, and caru and to perform agnihotra. For example, in the Sarasvni plates of Buddharāja dated in Kaṭaccuri saṃ. 361 i. e. 609-10 A. D. the grant is made for bali, caru and agnihotra and in the Damodarpur plates (dated 413-44 and 447-48 A.D.) the grants are made for agnihotra and for the performance of the five daily yajñas.²²²⁷ During the centuries of Moslem domination no help from royalty could be expected and so the institution of Vedic sacrifices languished. In the last hundred years or so, solemn Vedic sacrifices have been performed only rarely. But, since many of the grhya ceremonies as set forth in the grhya sūtras closely imitate the procedure of the Vedic fire cult and Vedic sacrifices formed the first and foremost manifestation of the sentiments of faith and worship in India, a work dealing with Dharmaśāstra cannot be said to have dealt with its subject completely and adequately if the treatment of Vedic sacrifices were left out altogether, the following bare outline is presented here, the more so as sacrifices were the first *dharma*s according to Rg. X. 90. 16.

The Śrauta-sūtras contain a very detailed, meticulously accurate and vivid description of the several sacrifices that were performed in ancient times. These works were manuals compiled for the practical purpose of giving directions to those who engaged in such sacrifices. They are based on ancient Brāhmaṇa texts, which they quote at every step, many individual sūtras being couched in the very language of the Brāhmaṇas, and on actual practice and only bring together what was in vogue. The object of the following pages is not to present a thorough and detailed treatment of Vedic sacrifices, but only to indicate what the cult of the Vedic sacrifice was like and to furnish a brief description of some prominent sacrifices. The treatment is mainly based on the Śrautasūtras of Āśv., Āp., Kāt., Baud., Satyāśādha with occasional references to the Samhitās and Brāhmaṇas. The several divergences among the sūtras, the paddhatis and modern practice are not generally dwelt upon for the sake of saving space. One very useful work is a compilation called 'Śrautapadārthanirvacana,' by Nageshwar Shastri published in the Benares Sanskrit series, though one of its drawbacks is that it gives no references to any texts. The Mīmāṃsā-vidyālaya at Poona has prepared sets of all the utensils required in sacrifices and has published an album containing pictures of utensils and maps of various altars required in Vedic sacrifices. The Cāturmāsya, the Paśubandha, the Jyotiṣṭoma have been described in some detail, the darśapūrṇamāsa has been dealt with in extenso, and other sacrifices have been only briefly touched upon in this work.

We find that even in the remotest ages when the hymns of the Rgveda Samhitā were composed and compiled, the main features of the sacrificial system had been evolved. That there were three fires appears clear from Rg. II. 36. 4 (where Agni is asked to sit down in three places), I. 15. 4, V. 11. 2 ('men kindle Agni in three places'). The Gārhapatya fire is expressly named in R̥g. I. 15. 12. The three savanas (i. e. pressings of Soma in the morning, mid-day and evening) are mentioned in R̥g. III. 28. 1 (prātaḥ-sāva), III. 28. 4 (mādhyandina savana), III. 28. 5 (tṛtiya savana), III. 52. 5-6 and in IV. 12. 1 (where it is said that the sacrifice gives food to Agni three times on all days), IV. 33. 11. It may be affirmed that the sixteen priests²²²³ required in Soma sacrifices were probably well-known to the composers of the R̥gveda hymns; R̥g. I. 162. 5 mentions hotṛ, adhvaryu, agnimindha (agnit or āgnidhra), grāvagrābha (grāvastut), śamstā (praśāstr or maitrāvaruṇa), suvipra (brahmā?); R̥g. II. 1. 2 refers to hotṛ, potṛ, neṣṭṛ, agnit, praśāstr (maitrāvaruṇa), adhvaryu, brahmā; R̥g. II. 36 speaks of hotṛ, potṛ (v. 2), āgnidhra (v. 4), brāhmaṇa (brāhmaṇāccharṣin) and praśāstr (v. 6). In R̥g. II. 43. 2 we have udgātā. In R̥g. III. 10. 4, IX. 10. 7, X. 35. 10, X. 61. 1 seven hotṛs are referred to and in R̥g. II. 5. 2 the potṛ priest is spoken of as the 8th. The word 'purohita' occurs very frequently (R̥g. I. 1. 1, I. 44. 10 and 12, III. 2. 8, IX. 66. 20, X. 98. 7). The R̥gveda names Atirātra (VII. 103. 7), Trikadruka (II. 22. 1, VIII. 13. 18, VIII. 92. 21, X. 14. 16). The yūpa (the post to which the sacrificial animal was tied) and its top called caṣāla are brahmā and udgātṛ are the four principal ones and the three that follow each of them in the above enumeration are their assistants.

The functions of the four principal priests are referred to in R̥g. X. 71. 11.
In R̥g. II. 43. 1 we have the singer of Sāmāns. In Agnihotra only adhvaryu is required, in the Agnyādheya, Darśapūrṇamāsa and other iṣṭis four priests are required viz. adhvaryu, āgnidhra, hotṛ and brahman; in the Cāturmāsya five are required viz., the four (of darśapūrṇamāsa) and the pratipasthātr; in the animal sacrifices a sixth is added viz., the maitrāvaruṇa. In Soma sacrifices all sixteen are required. In the cāturmāsya called śākamedha the āgnidhra is addressed as brahmaputra (vide Āsv. Śr. II. 18. 12) and this may explain R̥g. II. 43. 2 (cited on
p. 27 above) where the word 'brahmaputra' occurs). Vide Tai. Br.
II. 3. 6 and Baud. II. 3 for these provisions about the number of priests required. Some added a 17th priest called sadasya and Baud. II. 3 gave him three assistants also, though the Śat. Br. X. 4. 2. 19 forbids the employment of a 17th priest. There are other persons required in a sacrifice, such as the Śamitṛ, the camasādhvaryus, but they are not called ṛtvij. Vide Ap. XXII. 1. 3-6 for the Trikadruka called Jyotir, Gauh and Āyuh.

mentioned in Rg. I. 162. 6. Rg. III. 8 is full of the praise of the yūpa. The person who killed the animal sacrificed (the śamītr) is mentioned in Rg. 162. 10 and V. 43. 4. The Gharma (the pot of boiled milk required in the Pravargya rite or perhaps the Dadhigharma in the mādhyandina savana) is mentioned in Rg. III. 53. 14, V. 30. 15, V. 43. 7. It was believed that the animal offered in a sacrifice went to heaven.²²²⁹ Fire for sacrifice was produced by attrition from two araṇis (vide Rg. III. 29. 1-3, V. 9. 3, VI. 43. 5). The darvi (Rg. V. 6. 9), sruc (Rg. IV. 12. 1, VI. 11. 5), juhū (Rg. X. 21. 3) are mentioned in the Rg. Numerous verses in praise of gifts occur in the Rg. which have been pointed out above (pp. 837-839). In Rg. III. 53. 3 there is a clear reference to the call or permission sought by the hotṛ (āhāva) and the response of the adhvaryu (pratigara).²²³⁰ Rg. X. 114. 5 speaks of the twelve grahas (cups) of Soma. In Rg. I. 28. 1-2 reference is made to the broad-bottomed stone (grāvan) used for beating Soma stalks, the mortar in which Soma is pounded and the adhiṣavāna (pressing) board. In Rg. I. 20. 6, I. 110. 3, I. 161. 1 and VIII. 82. 7 the wooden vessel called 'camasa' used for drinking Soma is spoken of. The word 'avabhṛtha' (concluding bath in a Soma sacrifice) occurs in Rg. VIII. 93. 23. In Rg. X. 51. 8-9 the words prayāja and anuyāja occur. The ten Āpri hymns of the Rgveda indicate that at the time of their composition the animal sacrifice had already some of the principal features that are seen in the śrauta sūtras.

Some of the general rules applicable in all śrauta rites may be stated once for all. Vide Āśv. śr. I. 1. 8-22. Unless otherwise expressly stated, the sacrificer should always face the north, should sit down cross-legged, and the sacrificial materials (like kuśa grass &c.) should have their ends pointed towards the east. The sacred thread should be worn in all rites in the upavīta form, except where the nivīta or prācināvīta form is expressly ordained; wherever a limb (aṅga) is mentioned or no particular limb is mentioned, it is the right limb (hand, foot, finger) that is meant; wherever the word 'dadāti' (he gives) is used the yajamāna (the sacrificer) is the agent of the action. Kāt. śr. I. 10. 12 states that the yajamāna is the actual performer in the case of gifts or repeating texts where the word 'vācayati' occurs in the sūtras or in anvā-rambhāṇa, or in choosing a boon, in the case of observances (such as truthfulness), and in the case of measures (i. e. when it is said that a thing should be of the height of a man, it is the sacrificer's height that is meant). When any rite is prescribed without expressly stating the performer, it is the hotṛ who does it and in the case of prāyaścittas wherever the words 'juhoti' and 'japati' occur the brahmā priest is the agent to do those latter acts. When the first pāda of a ṛk is mentioned for being employed in any rite the whole verse is intended to be recited; when the first words of a hymn are mentioned for being employed in a rite, but the words quoted in the sūtra do not amount to a pāda, the whole hymn is to be repeated in that rite; wherever more than the first pāda of a verse is mentioned, it is intended that three verses are to be recited (that verse and the two following). Japa, āmantraṇa, abhimantraṇa, āpyāyana, upasthāna and mantras that indicate the rite that is being performed are to be recited in a low voice (upāṁśu). A special rule (apavāda or viśeṣavidhi) is stronger than a general rule (prasaṅga).

Other general propositions are: Yāga (sacrifice) is constituted by dravya (material), devatā (deity) and tyāga and yāga means abandonment of dravya intending it for a deity; homa means the offering of dravya in fire intending it for a deity. Yajatis (sacrificial rites) for which no express reward is declared ²²³¹ by the texts are the aṅga (subordinate part) of the principal yāga. Mantras are of four categories viz. ṛk, yajus, sāman and nigada; ²²³³ ṛks are metrical; a yajus has no restriction as to metre, but it is a complete sentence (Kāt. śr. I. 3. 2); a sāman is sung; nigadas are praiśas i. e. words addressed to another calling upon the latter to do a certain thing e. g. 'prokṣaṇīr-āsādaya, srucaḥ sammṛddhi' (Kāt. Śr.

2231. चतयश्चाफलसंयुक्तास्तदङ्गम् । कात्या. श्रौ. I. 2. 4; vide जैमिनि IV. 4 34 for a similar rule.

2232. The division into ṛk, yajus, and sāman was made even before the Ṛk-saṁhitā was composed. For ṛk, vide Rg. X. 71. 11 and X. 90. 9, for yajus Rg. V. 62. 5 and X. 90. 9, for sāman Rg. VIII. 95. 7 and I. 164. 25 (the two famous chants called Rathantara and Gāyatra are named). The word 'nivid' occurs in Rg. I. 96. 2.

II. 6. 34). They are yajus, but they are distinguished from ordinary yajus formulæ by the fact that nigadas are uttered loudly, while ordinarily a yajus is recited in a low voice. Jaimini in II. 1. 33-45 brings out this distinction between ordinary yajus and nigada. Vide Jaimini II. 1. 35-37 for the definitions of ṛk, sāman and yajus. Verses from the Rg. and Sāmaveda are recited loudly, all yajus are muttered in a low voice except āśruta (i. e. passages like 'āśrāvaya'), pratyāśruta (the response 'astu śrausāt'), pravara-mantra (agnir devo hotā &c., set out in note 1139 above), samvāda (requests and permissions as in 'brahman, shall I sprinkle with water' and 'yes, do sprinkle'), sam-praiśa (summons to do something as 'prokṣaṇīr-āsādaya'). Loudness is of three kinds, high-pitched, middle-pitched and low-pitched. The Sāmīdhenī verses are to be recited in a middle pitch, all mantras in the rites from anvādhāna upto ājyabhāga in Jyotiṣṭoma and prātaḥ-savana are to be recited in a low pitch, while in all rites in darśapūrṇamāsa the mantras are to be recited in a low pitch from ājyabhāga to sviṣṭakṛt. The rest of the mantras in darśapūrṇamāsa after sviṣṭakṛt and in Trītiya Savana are to be recited in high pitch. Mantras that are being recited at the time of doing anything (and produce the idea 'I shall do it') are to be recited first and then the act is to be begun (e. g. cutting is to be done immediately on reciting 'iṣe tvā'). Vide Jaimini XII. 3. 25. An act is to be begun to be performed the moment the reciting of a mantra accompanying it is finished (Kāt. I. 3. 5-7). Utkara is the spot where the dust of the Vedi is swept up and pranītā is water kept in a vessel to the north of the āhavanīya after repeating a mantra over it. The sacrificial ground where the fires are maintained is called vihāra (Śabara on Jaimini XII. 2. 1 says 'vihāra iti gārhapatyādīragnistretocyate viharanāt'). The way for going to or coming from the vihāra is between the pranītā (water) and utkara in the case of iṣṭis (i. e. to the east of utkara and to the west of pranītā) and between the utkara and the cātvāla pit in other cases (Āp. śr. I. 1. 4-6, Kāt. śr. I. 3. 42-43). This path for going to the vihāra is called tīrtha. The cātvāla is a pit which is required only in soma and animal sacrifices. Many sacrificial utensils are required out of which the sruva (which may be called the dipping spoon) is made of khadira wood and is one aratni in length and has a mouth (or bowl) that is rounded and is as wide as the front joint of the thumb. The sruc (offering ladle) is one cubit in length, has a bowl at one end of the shape and size of the palm, that has a spout resembling a swan's bill in shape. Sruc is of three kinds: juhū (ladle) made of palāśa, upabṛt of aśvattha and the dhruvā is made of vikāṅkata wood and all other sacrificial utensils are made of vikāṅkata, but those that are not directly connected with homa are made of varana tree; the sword called sphya is made of khadira (Kat. I. 3. 31-39). The principal yajñapātras (or yajñāyudhas as they are often called) are given in the note below.²²³³

All saṁskāras (like adhiśrayana, paryagnikarāṇa, heating a sacrificial utensil) are to be done (except when expressly stated to the contrary) by the gārhapatya fire, but the cooking of a havis may be done on either gārhapatya or āhavanīya according to one's sūtra. When the material is not specified, homa is performed with clarified butter and all homas are done in the āhavanīya when there is no express text and the juhū ladle is to be employed in offering homa (Kāt. I. 8. 44-45). Those parts that are to be done with Rg. mantras are to be done by the hotṛ priest (unless there be a special direction or reason to the contrary), the adhvaryu does what is to be done with Yajurveda, the udgātṛ with Sāmaveda and the brahmā priests with all the three Vedas²²³⁴ (vide Ait. Br. 25. 8). Brāhmanas alone are to be priests (Jai. XII. 4. 42-47). The sacrificer's wife is seated south-west of the gārhapatya fire and her face is turned towards the north-east (Kāt. II. 7. 1). At the beginning of an iṣṭi or other rite five operations (called bhūsamskāra) are to be performed on the mound (khara) of the āhavanīya and also on that of the dakṣiṇā fire viz. parisamūhana (sweeping round with wet hand) thrice from the east to the north, smearing thrice with cowdung (gomaya-upalepana), drawing with the wooden sword (sphyā) three lines from south to north but towards the east (i. e. the last is to be in the east) or from east to west but towards the north, to remove the dust from those lines with the thumb and the ring finger, and sprinkling thrice with water (abhyukṣaṇa).

Agnyādheya²²³⁵

Gaut. (VIII. 20-21) enumerates seven haviryajñas and seven somasamsthās. Agnyādheya is the first of the seven haviryajñas. Agnyādheya is the same as agnyādāna. It is an iṣṭi, which word means 'a sacrifice performed by a sacrificer and his wife with the help of four priests' (vide above note 2228). The details of a model iṣṭi are given later on under darsāpūrṇamāsa. Agnyādheya occupies two days, the first day called upavasatha being taken up by preliminary matters and the 2nd with performance of the main rites. There are two times for the performance of agnyādheya. It may be done on one of the seven nakṣatras, viz., Kṛttikā, Rohiṇī, Mṛgaśīrṣa, Pūrvā Phalgunī, Uttarā Phalgunī, Viśākhā, Uttarā Bhādrapadā. Āp. adds other nakṣatras viz. Hasta, Citrā and states the several appropriate nakṣatras when the sacrificer desires certain results (V. 3. 3-14). According to Śat. Br. II. 1. 2. 17 and Āp. V. 3. 13 a kṣatriya should consecrate sacred fires on the Citrā nakṣatra. Or agnyādheya may be done on a parva day in spring by a brāhmaṇa, in summer, in the rainy season and autumn respectively by a kṣatriya, a vaiśya and an upakruṣṭa (for the latter vide p. 74 above). But even when choosing the season, one must have regard to the seven nakṣatras specified above. Āp. states that the setting up of the fires may take place on Full moon or New moon day and that hemanta or śarad is the proper season for a vaiśya, the rainy season for a rathakāra (carpenter) or all the varṇas may first consecrate the fires in śiśira (Āp. V. 3. 17-20). Vide Jai. II. 3-4 about the meaning of the Vedic passage ' a brāhmaṇa should set up fires in spring ' (Tai. Br. I. 1. 2). The Śat. Br. (III. 1. 2. 19) appears to condemn the setting up of fires by reliance on nakṣatras and recommends (XI. 1. 1. 7) that agnyādhāna should be performed on the New moon of Vaiśākha on which there is Rohiṇī nakṣatra. In case of difficulty one may perform agnyādheya in any season and if one has resolved upon performing a soma sacrifice one need not stop to consider the season or nakṣatra. The man who wants to perform agnyādheya must not be too young nor too old (vide p. 979 above).

Agnyādheya means the placing of burning coals for the generation of the gārhapatya and other fires at a particular time and place by a particular person to the accompaniment of certain mantras.²²³⁶ Agnyādheya comprehends the several acts from the bringing of the aranis (two wooden logs) to the offering of pūrṇāhuti. When this last takes place the person who engages in the rites attains the position of an āhitāgni (one who has consecrated the sacred Vedic fires). Agnyādhāna is meant for all sacrificial rites and not merely for enabling a man to perform darśapūrṇamāseṣṭi (Jai. III. 6. 14-15, XI. 3. 2). The sacrificer should bring home through the adhvaryu priest two aranis from an aśvattha tree that grows inside a śamī tree with the mantra ' yo aśvatthaḥ śamī-garbhaḥ ' (Āśv. II. 1. 17). The branch to be cut must be one on the east or north side of the tree and its foliage must be turned towards the east or north. When the branch falls on the ground the portion of it that touches the ground should be used for making the lower arāṇi. Two arāṇi (logs of the branch) should be cut off, planed and formed into rectangular pieces and they should be allowed to become dry. In the lower arāṇi there is a spot called devayoni (the place of origin of the god i. e. fire) which is 8 and 12 āṅgulas from the two ends of the lower arāṇi (of 24 āṅgulas) where by means of a drill inserted in the upper arāṇi fire is produced by attrition. According to Baud. each arāṇi is 16 āṅgulas long, twelve in breadth and 4 in height, while according to Kāt. (as quoted in com. on Āp.) it is 24 āṅgulas long. According to Āp. (V. 1. 3) the āśvattha may not be growing inside a śāmi tree. The two arāṇi are invoked (abhimantraṇa) with the formula 'āśvatthād...dhehi āyur-yajamāne' (Tai. Br. I. 2. 1.) and the adhvaryu brings together on the altar (vedi) seven items that are earthy and seven items that are of wood or five of each or 8 earthy items (if those of wood are seven). The eight earthy items are: sand, saltish earth, the earth from a hole infested by mice, the earth from an ant-hill, the clay (sūda) from the bottom of a reservoir of water that never dries up, earth that is struck by wild boars, pebbles, gold (Āp. V. 1. 4 ff.) with mantras appropriate²²³⁷ to each. The seven wooden items are: (parts of) āśvattha, udumbara, parṇa (palāśa), śāmi, vikaṇkaṭa, a tree struck by lightning (or by wind or cold) and a lotus-leaf. Baud. II. 12 enumerates these somewhat differently. The sacrificer prepares a raised place for worship (devayajana)²²³⁸

2237. In Tai. Br. I. 2. 1 occur most of the mantras referred to by Āp. under agnyādheya.

2238. Several rules are laid down about the choosing of the place of worship (devayajana) in Śat. Br. III. 1. 1, Ait. Br. I. 3, Drāhyāyaṇa Sr. I. 1. 14-19 &c. It should be the highest place and in its vicinity there should be no spot which is on a higher level than it, it should be even and firm and incline towards the east or north, being a little higher in the south. It should have many plants growing on it and in front of it there should be water (a well &c.) or a large tree or a public road. The Śat. Br. III. 1. 1. 5 emphasizes that if one secures learned and skilful priests it does not matter what kind of sacrificial ground one selects. The Ait. Br. I. 3 requires that the dīkṣita is to walk about and sit usually in the devayajana, and he must not leave it at all at sunrise, sunset and when priests are engaged in śrāvāṇa (saying 'O śrāvaya'). Vide Śāyana on Tai. S. I. 2. 1 for yajñasālā and com. on Kāt. VII. 1. 19-24 for the same. The yajñasālā is called 'dīkṣitavimīta' in the Ait. Br. I. 3 and it is the same as prācīnavamśa-sālā. Iṣṭis are performed in the prācīnavamśa-sālā, but the Uttaravedi required in animal, soma and some other sacrifices is outside it. Further rules are given under Agniṣṭoma.

sloping towards the east with the mantra 'uddhanyamānam-asya' (Tai. Br. I. 2. 1), sprinkles it with water to the accompaniment of the mantra 'śam no devīr' (Rg. X. 9. 4=Tai. Br. I. 2. 1), and constructs a shed having the end of the principal bamboo or ridge turned northwards or eastwards. Beneath the middle of the ridge of the hut towards one end is the place (āyatana) meant for the gārhapatya fire; the place of the āhavanīya fire is to the east of the gārhapatya at a distance of eight prakramas²²³⁹ for a brāhmaṇa, eleven and twelve for a ksatriya and vaiśya respectively or all may have it 24 steps (pada) or at a distance found by the eye to approximate to the distances stated (without actual measurement). The place for the dakṣiṇāgni is near the gārhapatya to the south-east after a third of the distance between the gārhapatya and āhavanīya. There are to be separate sheds for the āhavanīya fire and the gārhapatya in elaborate sacrifices but for the ordinary sacrifices like darsapūrṇamāsa one shed only is usually constructed which houses all the three fires. It is laid down that only Vedic rites are to be performed with the three fires, and that they were not to be used for ordinary cooking or for secular purposes (vide Jaimini XII. 2. 1-7). The sabhya fire is to be established in front of the āhavanīya in the gambling hall and the āvasathya fire is in a shed (for guests) to the east of the sabhya.²²⁴⁰

The sacrificer gets the hair on the head and face shaved, pares his nails and then bathes; the wife also does the same except shaving the hair on the head. The husband and wife are to establish fires after wearing two silken garments each, which are to be given up to the adhvaryu at the time of distributing dakṣiṇā (after the rite of agnyādheya is finished). The sacrificer should perform the saṅkalpa (words indicating resolve) of performing agnyādheya and choose his priests (ṛtvig-varaṇa)

2239. According to the com. on Āp. V. 4. 3 a prakrama is equal to two or three padas, a pada being 15 aṅgulas (Baud.) or 12 aṅgulas (Kāt.). But the com. on Kāt. VIII. 3. 14 says that a pada is equal to two prakramas. The gārhapatya was also called prajāhita (vide Jaimini XII. 1. 13) and the Dakṣiṇāgni was called anvāhūryapacana, because on it was cooked the boiled rice with which piṇḍa-pitṛyajña was performed on the new moon. Vide Manu III. 123, Tai. Br. I. 1. 10 and 'दक्षिणान्वाहूर्यं पचति' quoted by Śaṅkara on Jē. XII. 2. 3.

2240. The com. on Āp. V. 17. 1 notices divergent views about sabhya and āvasathya fires, some holding that these were not to be established at all, others holding that they are optional, while Āp. makes them obligatory.

by touching their hands with appropriate mantras and offer them madhuparka (vide Āp. X. 1. 13-14 for the mantras ' agnir-me hotā &c.). In the afternoon or when the sun is over the trees the adhvaryu should fetch a portion of fire from the aupāsana (grhya fire) and kindle a fire called brāhmaudanika (one prepared for brahmaudana)²²⁴¹ to the west of the place for the gārhapatya or he may take up the whole of the aupāsana fire (of the yajamāna) or he may generate fire by attrition. He should prepare a sthaṇḍila (an altar of sand &c.) and should draw thereon three lines from west to east and three lines from south to north and should sprinkle water on the sthaṇḍila and then he should bring burning coals from the aupāsana fire and place them on the lines so drawn. If he takes up the whole of the aupāsana fire, then he should take on two leaves of udumbara a cake of barley flour and another of rice and should throw on the place of the brāhmaudanika fire the barley cake to the west and the rice cake to the east and then establish the fire thereon. The adhvaryu puts apart at night to the west of the brāhmaudanika fire on the red hide of a bull having the neck part to the east and the hair outside or on a bamboo utensil four dishfuls of rice²²⁴² grains after repeating the mantra ' devasya ' and with the words ' I set apart what is pleasing to prāṇa that is brahman, ' which are repeated four times (with prāṇa, apāṇa, vyāṇa and lastly with brahman only) or he may do so silently. He cooks the grains (of rice or barley) in four vessels filled with water, he does not cleanse the rice grains with his hand after pouring them into the water, nor does he drain off the water while cooking; some cook the grains in milk. From the cooked food (the brahmaudana) he takes some in a spoon (darvī) and offers it into (the brahmaudanika) fire with the mantra ' pra vedhase kavaye ' (Rg. V. 15. 1 = Tai. Br. I. 2. 1). He should say ' this is for Brahman; not mine. ' Having put the cooked food separately into four dishes and pouring plenty of ghee over it, the sacrificer draws the plates over the ground towards the priests without letting them go and brings them near the four priests who are descendants of illustrious sages. The remaining portion of the brahmaudana is drawn out of the pots, the rest of the clarified butter is poured over it and three samidhs of a *citriya*²²⁴³ aśvattha that are wet (not dry), that are a span in length and have on them their leaves and fruits are dipped therein and turned about therein with a mantra and then they are put on the fire to the accompaniment of three gāyatrīs (addressed to Agni) for brāhmaṇas, three Trīṣṭubhs for kṣatriyas and three Jagatīs for vaiśyas (the verses are set out in Āp. V. 6. 3).

2242. The putting apart of grains from a large receptacle on to a smaller receptacle for use in sacrifice later on is called nirvāpa.

When the samidhs are offered into fire he (sacrificer) gives three heifers to the adhvaryu and a similar number to each of the brāhmaṇas who eat the brahmaudana. This brahmaudana along with the gifts of heifers and offering of samidhs may be performed daily for one year before the date of agnyādhāna. These samidhs must be offered by everyone intending to set up the three sacred fires 12 days, three days, two days or a day before the day of agnyādheya. He (sacrificer) has to keep certain observances viz. he does not partake of flesh, does not cohabit, others do not take away fire from his house; he subsists (for three days) only on milk or on boiled rice, he has to speak the truth and to avoid sleeping on a cot. If for some reason the sacrificer is unable to perform agnyādheya in a year (or 12 days &c.) from the time he offered brahmaudana he should again cook brahmaudana, offer the samidhs and then should perform agnyādhāna when he can do so.²²⁴⁴ On the night previous to the day of agnyādhāna the adhvaryu (according to Bharadvāja, all the priests) keeps certain observances viz. he does not eat flesh nor does he approach his wife.

On that night a goat having dark spots on its skin is tied towards the north of the place for the gārhapatya fire with a mantra 'prajā' agne &c.'. The yajamāna observes a vow of silence on that night and people keep him awake that night by playing upon a lute and a flute (but there is an option viz. he may not keep awake nor observe silence). The sacrificer remains awake the whole of that night placing pieces of wood on the brāhmaudanika fire with the verse 'śalkair-agnim &c.' (but if he does not keep awake he heaps on the fire logs of wood at one time and then goes to sleep).²²⁴⁵ At day-break the adhvaryu heats the two arāṇis against that fire with two verses 'jāavedo bhuvanasya &c.' and 'āyam te yonir-ṛtviyaḥ' (both in Tai. Br. I. 2.1). Then the brāhmaudanika fire is extinguished, the two arāṇis are invoked with the verse 'agnī rakṣāṁsi' and the yajamāna keeps waiting for the arāṇis that are brought with the verse 'mahī viśpatnī.' The adhvaryu hands over the arāṇis to the sacrificer with the verse 'dohyā cate', who receives them with a verse and immediately invokes them with two verses. Both (adhvaryu and yajamāna) repeat in a low voice the formula 'mayi gr̥hṇāmyagre &c.'. The adhvaryu arranges the place for the gārhapatya with the verse 'apeta vīta' and sprinkles it with water with 'sam no devīr.' He does the same for the places (āyatanas) of the dakṣiṇa fire (to the south-east) and of āhavanīya, sabhya and āvasathya fires. Even since ancient times there have been agnihotrits who did not set up the sabhya and āvasathya fires. Half of the sand (that has already been brought among the sambhāras) is divided into two parts, one (i. e. $\frac{1}{2}$ of the whole heap) being scattered over the place of the gārhapatya and the other ($\frac{1}{2}$) over the place of the dakṣiṇāgni. The other half of the sand heap is divided into three parts each of which is scattered in the places of the other three, āhavanīya, sabhya and āvasathya (but if no sabhya nor āvasathya is to be kept then the half is entirely scattered over the āhavanīya place). In the same way the other earthy materials are placed over the places of the fires with appropriate mantras. After he places the lime stones or pebbles on the various places he brings to his mind his enemy. Then he spreads the various materials on the fire places and after mixing together the materials of wood to the accompaniment of two mantras he scatters them just as he scattered the sand (after dividing them as stated above). He casts to the north over the materials a piece of gold on the place of the gārhapatya²²⁴⁶ and invokes it with a mantra and assigns at a distance a piece of silver for his enemy or throws it into water if he has no enemy. The same process (of casting a golden piece) is followed as to the places of the other fires. He removes the ashes of the brāhmaudanika fire (that has been extinguished as stated already) and in its place deposits the two arāṇis from which he produces fire by drilling. When the first rays of the sun spread in the sky (i. e. before the sun's disc is seen, but the eastern horizon is lit up by rays) he places the upper arāṇi on the lower one to the accompaniment of the 'daśa-hotṛ'²²⁴⁷ formulae. While generation of fire by attrition is proceeding a white or red horse from whose eyes no water drops (i. e. who is not blear-eyed) and whose knee is dark (or any horse with full testicles) is kept present and a sāman of Śakti Sāṅkṛti is sung; when smoke rises a sāman of Gāthina Kauśika is sung and also the verse 'arāṇyor-nihito' (Rg. III. 29. 2).

He (the adhvaryu) invokes the fire with the mantra 'upā-varoha jātavedaḥ' (Tai. Br. II. 5. 8) the moment it is produced. Then the adhvaryu makes the sacrificer recite the catur-hotṛ (mantras)²²⁴⁸ and invokes the fire when kindled with the mantra 'ajannagniḥ'. When the fire is produced the yajamāna bestows on the adhvaryu the most desirable fee (i. e. a cow), which he accepts with a mantra. After the fire is produced, the yajamāna breathes over it with the formula 'prajāpatistvā' (Tai. S. IV. 2. 9. 1). The adhvaryu holds over the fire his folded hands turned downwards with a verse, makes it blaze forth by means of fuel-sticks with the words 'samrāḍasi' (Tai. S. IV. 3. 6. 2), holds it in his folded hands turned upwards, sits down on a seat and while the Rathantara and Yajñāyajñīya sāmans are being chanted, he establishes the gārhapatyā fire on the sambhūras (the earthy and wooden materials scattered as above) by repeating certain mantras according as the sacrificer has a certain gotra ²²⁴⁹ (or pravara) and the first vyāhrti (i. e. bhūh) or the first two vyāhrtis (bhūh, bhuvaḥ), the first two Sarparājñi formulæ and the first of the Gharmaśiras texts. The formula for establishing the gārhapatya according to the gotra is stated in note 2249. When establishing the gārhapatya on the sambhāras the adhvaryu further repeats certain mantras (given in Āp. Śr. V. 12. 2) and then the yajamāna invokes the fires with the mantra 'sugārhapatyo' (Tai. Br. I. 2. 1) and the adhvaryu makes the yajamāna repeat the Gharmaśiras formulæ. The adhvaryu strews darbhas round the gā-hapatya (i. e. he does paristarāṇa).

The procedure for establishing the āhavanīya is to be so arranged that the fire is actually established when half of the sun's disc rises above the eastern horizon. The adhvaryu lights fuel-sticks on the gārhapatya for being carried forward and he takes in a vessel the sand on which fire would be supported to the accompaniment of four verses. Then while carrying the fire, he raises a little the kindled bundle of fuel-sticks and holds the fire on the sand. Then the adhvaryu makes the yajamāna repeat in the right ear of the horse the Agnitanū formulæ (set out in Āp. Śr. V. 13. 7), holds the fire for some time and then lays it down in the place for the āhavanīya.

The Āgnidhra priest then brings domestic fire or produces fire by attrition, sits down with his knees raised up, and establishes the dakṣiṇāgni, while the Yajñāyajñīya sāmān is being chanted and follows the procedure of repeating formulæ according to the gotra (as above) and repeats the 2nd vyāhṛti (bhuvaḥ), the three Sarparājñī formulæ and the 2nd Gharmaśiras (viz. the verse 'vātaḥ paca'). After repeating several other formulæ (as in Āp. Śr. V. 13. 8) he sets down dakṣiṇa fire on the sambhāras.

The fire brought for establishing²²⁵⁰ dakṣiṇa fire may be fetched from the house of a brāhmaṇa, a kṣatriya, a vaiśya or a śūdra who is extremely prosperous like an asura (if the sacrificer desires prosperity), but he should thereafter never eat at that man's house; or (according to Baud. Śr. II. 17) it may be brought from the gārhapatya fire or according to Āśv. from the house of a vaiśya or of any rich man or it may be produced by attrition.

When the āhavanīya fire is being taken (in a vessel) from the gārhapatya the Vāmadevya is chanted and they proceed towards the east preceded by the horse,²²⁵¹ repeating three mantras. To the south of the vihāra the brahmā priest makes a chariot or a chariot wheel move up till three revolutions of the wheel take place (six times for an enemy). A third part of the distance (between the gārhapatya and the place for āhavanīya) the fire is carried at the height of the knee, the 2nd third at the height of the navel, the last third at the height of the mouth. No one is to come between the sun and the fire. He takes the fire with both his hands stretched to the right. In the middle of the distance the yajamāna gives a gift to the priest. In the middle of the distance the adhvaryu puts down a piece of gold and then crosses over it with the mantra 'nākosi.' The adhvaryu makes the horse that faces the east go over the sambhāras to their north with its right hoof placed in such a way that the live coals of the fire when established would fall on the foot-print made by the horse and making the horse turn to its right he again makes the horse go over the sambhāras with a formula 'yadakrandah' (Rg. I. 163. 1). The horse is held facing the west to the east of the place for the āhavanīya. The horse must be young and according to Paiṅgyāyani Brāhmaṇa a young bull may do (if a horse is not available). According to the Bahvṛca Brāhmaṇa the (āhavanīya) fire should be established on the footmark of an animal called Kamaṇḍalu or of a goat (according to Vājasaneyaka). Then the sacrificer mutters auspicious formulæ²²⁵² and sends to his enemy (a curse) with the formula 'go to him, O fire, with thy terrible forms.' Having invoked the fire with the verse 'Yad-idam divaḥ' (Tai. Br. I. 2. 1) he turning his face to the west and standing to the east establishes the āhavanīya fire. The āhavanīya is laid down upon the sambhāras when the Bṛhat Sāman, the Śyaita, Vāravantiya and Yajñāyajñīya are being chanted, and the procedure of repeating consecrating mantras according to gotra is being followed, when all the vyāhṛtis, all the Sarpa-rājñī mantras, the third Gharmaśīras formula and certain other verses are recited.²²⁵³ The sacrificer invokes the āhavanīya when it is being established with the formula 'ānaśe &c.' (which occurs in Tai. Br. I. 1. 7) and he follows the priest (whether adhvaryu or āgnīdhra) in repeating the various vyāhṛtis, the Sarparājñī verses and the Gharmaśīras formulæ. The fire when established should be propitiated with clarified butter and plants (i. e. fuel-sticks) after repeating certain formulæ (set out in Āp. V. 16. 4). The sāmāns are sung by the brahmā priest in Agnyādheya (and there is no udgātṛ priest).²²⁵⁴

The sabhya and āvasathya fires are established with domestic fire or fire produced by attrition or with fire taken from the

2253. The verses 'abhi tvā śūra' (Rg. VII. 32. 22), 'kayā naś-citra' (Rg. IV. 31. 1), 'tvām-iddhi havāmabe' (Rg. VI. 46. 1), 'āśvam na tvā vāravantam' (Rg. I. 27. 1), 'abhi pra vaḥ surādhasam' (Rg. VIII. 49. 1), 'yajñāyajñā vo' (Rg. VI. 48. 1) are respectively the sāmāns called Rathantara, Vāmadevya, Bṛhat, Vāravantiya, Syaita and Yajñāyajñīya. All these verses occur in the Sāmaveda (vidō vol. III. p. 83, 87, 330, vol. I. p. 120, 483 and 147 respectively, B. I. series). Vide Tai. S. V. 5. 8. 1-2, Ait. Br. 19. 6 for the names of these and other sāmāns. Jai. (III. 3. 9) declares that, though sāman verses are as a rule to be chanted loudly, in ādhāna they are to be uttered inaudibly (upāmsu), since ādhāna is to be done with yajurveda procedure.

āhavanīya, according to the mode of establishment dependent on the gotra as stated above. He puts on each fire three samidhs of the aśvattha tree with three verses (Rg. IX. 66. 19, 21, 20) and three samidhs of śamī smeared with ghee after repeating certain mantras (Rg. IV. 58. 1-3). Or these samidhs may be offered in the āhavanīya (if sabhya and āvasathya are not kept up).

Then he offers a pūrṇāhuti,²²⁵⁵ the sacrificer gives gifts, mutters certain auspicious formulæ, waits in worship upon the five (or three) fires. Then if the yajamāna is a kṣatriya dice play takes place. The gifts given to all the four priests are cloth, a cow and bull, and a new chariot, while a goat, pūrṇapātra and a pillow of several coloured threads are given to the āgnidhra, a horse to brahmā, a bull to adhvaryu, and a dhenu to the hotṛ. There are larger gifts specified according to the sacrificer's ability.

Kāt. (IV. 10. 16) ordains that after establishing the Vedic fires the yajamāna should observe complete celibacy for 12 nights, 6 nights or at least three nights, should sleep near the fires on the ground (and not on a cot), should offer homa of milk to the fires. Baud. II. 20 prescribes further observances for twelve days.

Punarādheya: When within a year after a man sets up the Vedic fires he suffers from severe illness (such as dropsy) or suffers loss of wealth or his son dies or his near relatives are harassed or made captive by his enemies or he becomes cripple in a limb, or if he is desirous of prosperity or fame he again sets up the fires. The procedure is essentially the same as for agnyādheya with a few differences e. g. fires are fed with kuśa grass and not with wood nor with fuel-sticks, the two ājyabhāgas are for agni alone (while in the model sacrifice they are for Agni and Soma), the punarādheya is performed in the rainy season and at mid-day. Other differences and details are passed over.²²⁵⁶ Jai. (VI. 4. 26-27) states that punarādheya is a prāyaścitta only if both the fires (gārhapatya and āhavanīya) have been extinguished or discontinued and (in X. 3. 30-33) that when punarādheya is resorted to for some desired object, the fees that are prescribed in agnyādhāna are not the fees to be given, but other dakṣiṇā is given.

Agnihotra

According to Gau. VIII. 20 there are seven forms of haviryajñas of which agnihotra is the second. From the evening of the day of agnyādheya the house-holder has to perform agnihotra²²⁵⁷ (burnt offering of cow's milk &c.) twice daily in the evening and morning to the end of his life or till he becomes a saṁnyāsin, or as the Śat. Br. (XII. 4. 1. 1) says ' Those who offer agnihotra indeed enter upon a long sacrificial session ; agnihotra indeed is a sattra that ends with old age or death, since he becomes free from it only by old age or death.' Satyāśāḍha prescribes (III. 1) that from the time of setting up the three śrauta fires, agnihotra and darśapūrṇamāsa are obligatory on all members of the twice-born classes and he holds that the nisāda and rathakāra also are bound to perform them, though other sūtrakāras are opposed to this. Vide pp. 45-47 above. Jai. (VI. 3. 1-7 and 8-10) holds that agnihotra being obligatory, it may be undertaken even by him who is not able to perform every detail of it in its entirety, but that a kāmya rite should be undertaken only by him who is able to carry out every detail. Vide also Jai. II. 4. 1-7 where ' yāvajjivam-agnihotram juhōti ' is explained as laying down a characteristic required of the performer. The several sūtras present differing details and mantras,²²⁵⁸ According to one view all the three fires are permanently maintained by the house-holder²²⁵⁹ (Kāt. IV. 13. 5); according to others only the gārhapatya is permanently kept (Āp. VI. 2. 13) and the dakṣiṇāgni is permanently kept only if it was set up by attrition at the time when the house-holder performed agnyādheya. The house-holder calls upon the adhvaryu to bring the āhavanīya from the gārhapatya in the evening and also in the morning; this is so only if the yajamāna engages an adhvaryu in the daily agnihotra, but if the yajamāna does the daily agnihotra himself this call is unnecessary. As to the dakṣiṇāgni in the daily agnihotra, Āśv. (II. 2. 1) mentions several alternatives viz., it may be brought from the house of a vaiśya or from the house of any rich man or it may be produced by attrition or it may be kindled into flames if it is kept permanently. He should take burning coals from the kindled gārhapatya in a vessel and carry them to the place of the āhavanīya with the mantra 'devam tvā devebhyaḥ śrīyā uddharāmi' and should repeat when carrying the burning coals towards the east the mantra 'raise me up from sin that I knowingly or unknowingly may have committed; save me from all the sin that I may have committed in the day' (this in the evening agnihotra, in the morning agnihotra it being said 'sin that I committed at night'). Vide Āśv. II. 2. 3 and 6, Āp. VI. 1. 7, Baud. III. 4. He should face the sun and place the burning coals in the āhavanīya mound with the mantra (amṛtāhutim &c., in Āśv. II. 2. 4, Āp. VI. 1. 8, Baud. III. 4). In the morning agnihotra also he should face the sun and do other things stated above. According to Kāt. (IV. 13. 2) the evening agnihotra is to be commenced before the sun sets and the morning one before the sun rises. Āśv. says that the homa is performed

2256. Vide Tai. S. I. 5. 1-4, Tai. Br. I. 3. 1, Sat. Br. II. 2. 3, Āśv. II. 8. 4-14, Āp. V. 26-29, Kāt. IV. 11, Baud. III. 1-3 for details.

2258. Vide Śat Br. II. 2. 4 ff, Tai. Br. II. 1. 1-11, Ait. Br. 25. 1-7, Āp. 6, Kāt. 4. 12-15, Āśv. II. 2-5, Baud. III. 4-9, Sat. III. 7.

after the sun sets. There have been two views on this point from very ancient times viz. whether agnihotra is to be performed before sunrise or after sunrise. Vide Ait. Br. 24. 4-6 and Kauṣītaki Br. II. 9. Āp. (VI. 4. 7-9) mentions four views as to both evening or morning time for agnihotra viz. it should be the sāṃdhi of day and night for both or it may be when the first star is seen or in the first watch of the night or in the 2nd (for evening agnihotra) and at dawn, or when a part of the disc of the sun just appears on the horizon or after the sun comes up. The householder performs agnihotra after finishing his sāṃdhyā adoration. There is a difference of opinion, some holding that the homa in the grhya fire should precede the agnihotra in the Vedic fires, while others hold that it should come after the Vedic agnihotra.²²⁶⁰ The householder after performing sāṃdhyā follows either of two modes (Kāt. IV. 13. 12 and IV 15. 2, Āp. VI. 5. 3, according to his śākhā), goes towards the āhavanīya through the space between the places of the gārhapatya and dakṣiṇāgni or by a route to the south of these two fire places and having gone round the āhavanīya sits down to the south in his usual place (or crosses from the western side of the āhavanīya and sits down to its south) and the wife also sits in her place (Kāt. IV. 13. 13, Āp. VI. 5. 1-2). The householder then sips water (performs ācamana) with the words 'vidyudasi vidya me pāpmānam-ṛtāt satyam-upaimi mayi śraddhā' (Āp. VI. 5. 3). The wife also sips water.²²⁶¹ Then both husband and wife should observe silence till the agnihotra (morning or evening) is gone through. A man who has no wife can perform the daily agnihotra (vide Ait. Br. 32. 8). The adhvaryu performs parisamūhana (wiping with the wet hand from the north-east to the north) thrice for the three fires. He strews round the āhavanīya fire darbha grass (performs paristarāṇa) in such a way that the darbhas to the east and west have their ends turned to the north and of those to the north and south turned to the east and the strewing proceeds from the east, then to the south, then to the west and then to the north. In the same way he strews darbha grass round the gārhapatya and then round the dakṣiṇ-āgni. Taking water in his right hand, he sprinkles it round the āhavanīya first, beginning from the northeast and ending in the north. Then he walks towards the west pouring a continuous stream of water from the āhavanīya up to the gārhapatya. He then sprinkles (performs paryukṣaṇa) the gārhapatya from left to right and then the dakṣiṇāgni. Or one may sprinkle water (and this is the usual order now in the Deccan) round the gārhapatya first and then round dakṣiṇāgni and then pour a stream of water from the gārhapatya to the east up to the āhavanīya (Āśv. II. 2. 14). Āśv. (II. 2. 11-13) says that the mantra in paryukṣaṇa is 'ṛtasatyābhyām tvā paryukṣāmi' and each fire is sprinkled thrice, water being taken freshly at each time and the mantra being repeated each time and that sprinkling may first be done round the dakṣiṇāgni, then round gārhapatya and then āhavanīya. Vide Kāt. IV. 13. 16-18, Āp. VI. 5. 4.

The homa is performed with cow's milk for him who performs agnihotra as a sacred duty and not for any particular reward in view, but one who desires to secure a village or plenty of food, or strength or brilliance may employ respectively yavāgū (gruel), cooked rice, curds or clarified butter (Āśv. II. 3. 1-2). Then an order is issued to the person engaged to milk the agnihotra cow²²⁶² that stands to the south of the sacrificial ground with her face to the east or north and that has a male calf. At the time of milking the calf is to the south of the cow, and first sucks milk and then the calf is removed and the milking is done. The person to milk the cow should not be a śūdra (Kāt. IV. 14. 1), but Āp. (VI. 3. 11-14) allows even a śūdra to milk the cow, while Baud. (III. 4) says that he must be a brāhmaṇa. Rules are laid down about the udders from which milk is to be drawn and about persons for whom it is to be drawn (Śat. III. 7 based on Tai. Br. II. 1. 8). The milking is not to be begun by pressing the udders, but by making the 2262. Tai. Br. II. 1. 6 identifies the cow with agnihotra and II. 1. 7 states that the cow's milk in its various stages belongs to various deities since the time it is in the udder (when it is Raudra) till after it is offered (when it is dear to Indra).

calf suck them first (na stanān sammṛśati ' Āp. VI. 4. 2 based on Tai. Br. II. 1. 8). Milking is to be begun the moment the sun sets (Āp. VI. 4. 5). The vessel in which the milk is to be held is of earthenware manufactured by an ārya (i. e. one who belongs to the three regenerate classes), but without using a wheel and the vessel must have a wide mouth and straight sides and not slanting ones (Kāt. IV. 14. 1, Āp. VI. 3. 7). It is called agnihotrasthāli (Āp. VI. 3. 15). The adhvaryu takes from the gārhapatya fire some burning coals for boiling the milk and keeps them to the north of the gārhapatya in a separate spot. Then he goes near the cow, holds the vessel in which the cow has been milked, brings it towards the east of the āhavanīya, sits to the west of the gārhapatya and heats the vessel on the burning coals mentioned above. He takes a darbha blade (other than one of those that are strewn round the gārhapatya), kindles it and holding it over the milk illuminates the milk with its light. He then takes water in a sruva and sprinkles one drop or some drops into the boiling milk (Āśv. II. 3. 3 and 5). He should then again hold a burning blade (the same blade used before) over the hot milk and light it up. He does this thrice and then casts away the blade to the north.²²⁶³ There was a difference of view whether the milk to be offered should be brought to the boiling point or should only be simply hot (vide Śat. Br. II. 3. 1. 14-16 and com. on Kāt. IV. 14. 5). Then the pot of milk is slowly lifted with three mantras and drawn down to the north from the burning coals (Āśv. II. 3. 8, Tai. Br. II. 1. 3 ' vartma karoti '). Then the burning coals on which the milk was boiled or heated are thrown back in the gārhapatya fire. Then a sruva and sruc both made of vikaṅkaṭa wood are cleaned with the hand (to remove dust) and are heated on the gārhapatya (or āhavanīya according to Āp. VI. 7. 1). He then again heats the sruc and sruva on the gārhapatya, asks the yajamāna ' shall I take out milk from the pot ²²⁶⁴ with the sruva)' and the yajamāna

2263. The Tai. Br. II. 1. 3 says उवीचोऽङ्गारान् निरुद्धाधिभ्रयति । व्यन्तान् करोति । ... अभिद्योतयति । ... विः पर्यङ्गिकरोति । ... उवीचीनमुद्गासयति । The sprinkling of water from the sruva on the milk is called pratiṣeka (Āp. VI. 6. 3-4). This is referred to in Tai. Br. II. 1. 3. The sruc with which agnihotra is offered is called agnihotra-havanī, which is made of vikaṅkaṭa wood, is as long as one's arm or aratni (Āp. VI. 3. 6 and com. thereon).

replies standing 'Yes, do take out'. Then the adhvaryu holds in his right hand the sruva ladle and in his left hand the agnihotra-havaṇī with its mouth turned upwards, pours out into the agnihotra-havaṇī milk from the milk pot (already heated) with the sruva four times ²²⁶⁵ and keeps the sruva in the milk pot. In Āp. VI. 7. 7-8 and Āśv. II. 3. 13-14 it is said that the adhvaryu knowing the mind of the householder should draw the fullest ladle for the most favourite son of the sacrificer or if the latter desires that the eldest son should be most prosperous and the later ones less and less, then the first ladle is filled to the fullest; on the other hand if he wishes the youngest to be prosperous then the last ladle drawing is the fullest. Then the adhvaryu carrying a samidh of palāśa wood a span in length over the rod of the sruc (inserting his finger between the two), holds the two together over the gārhapatya very near its flames, carries the sruc towards the āhavanīya holding it as high as his nose; when in the midst of the distance between the gārhapatya and the āhavanīya, he brings the sruc down (to the level of his navel) and then again raising it up as high as his mouth, he reaches the āhavanīya and places the sruc and samidh on darbha blades (on the kūrca, says Baud. III. 5) to the west of the āhavanīya. He himself sits to the northwest of the āhavanīya facing the east, bends his knees, holds the sruc in his left hand and with the right hand offers the samidh ²²⁶⁶ in the midst of the āhavanīya fire with the mantra 'rajatām tvāgniṣyotiṣam' (according to Āśv. II. 3. 15). Then he sips water with the mantra 'vidyud-asi vidya me pāpmānam-ṛtāt-satyam-upaimi' (Āp. VI. 9. 3, Āśv. II. 7. 16). When the samidh has caught fire and is burning brightly, he offers the first oblation (of milk) on the samidh about two finger-breadths from its root with the mantra 'om bhūr-bhuvah-svarom, agnirjyotir jyotiragniḥ svāhā' (Vāj. S. III. 9). According to Kāt. he may optionally repeat the mantra 2265. Milk is poured five times for those who are called pañcāvattins such as householders whose gotra is Jamadagni (Āp. VI. 8. 2). According to Baudhāyana (pravarādhyāya 5) Vatsas, Bidas and Ārṣṭi-ṣeṇas are pañcāvattins. Āp. sets out the five mantras repeated at each of the five times when milk is poured with the sruva.

2266. The mantras differ according to the sūtra. According to Āp. VI. 9. 3 one samidh or two or three may be offered and he prescribes different mantras for the three. The Tai. Br. II. 1. 3 upholds the offering of only one samidh.

'sajūr devena' (Vāj. S. III. 10). According to Āp. (VI. 10. 8)²²⁶⁷ in the evening agnihotra the mantra is 'agnirjyotir' &c; while in the morning agnihotra it is 'sūryo jyotir-jyotiḥ sūryaḥ svāhā' (Vāj. S. III. 9). Then he places the sruc on the kuśa blades and looks at the gārhapatya with the thought 'bestow on me cattle'. Then he again takes up the sruc, makes a second offering (of milk) which is larger in measure than the first one, but this is offered silently, while he contemplates upon Prajāpati in his mind²²⁶⁸. This second offering is made to the east or north of the first in such a way that the two will not come in contact. He keeps more milk in the sruc than what is taken up in making the second offering. He then raises the sruc twice (thrice according to Āp. VI. 11. 3) in such a way that the flames of the fire turn north-wards and places the sruc on the kūrca. He scours with his hand turned downwards the spout of the ladle and then rubs his hand to which some drops of the milk stick on the north side of the kūrca (the points of the kuśas that are towards the north) with the words 'salutation to the gods' (Kāt. IV. 14. 20) or 'to you for securing cattle'. Āp. (VI. 10. 10) says that he scours in the evening the sruc (in order to remove what sticks to it) from the end of the handle down to the bowl with the mantra 'iṣe tvā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1.) and in the morning from the bowl to the end of the ladle with the mantra 'ūrje tvā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1). Then while the palm is turned upwards, and while he wears his sacred thread in the prācīnāvīta mode he places his fingers to the south of the roots of the kuśa blades on the ground silently or with the mantra 'svadhā pītṛbhyaḥ' (Kāt. IV. 14. 21 and Āśv. II. 3. 21) or 'svadhā pītṛbhyaḥ pītṛiṇ jinva' (Āp. VI. 11. 4). Then he sips water (but with the sacred thread in the upavīta form) with his face turned to the east. Then he walks to the place of the gārhapatya, takes a fuel-stick (samidh) in his hand while standing. He then sits down to the northwest of the gārhapatya with his face turned towards the east, bends his knee, offers the samidh in the gārhapatyā fire, then drawing out in the sruva milk from the pot offers it into the fire with a mantra (tā asya sūdadohasaḥ ' Rg. VIII. 69. 3, according to Āśv. II. 3. 26, or ' iha puṣṭim puṣṭipatir.....puṣṭipataye svāhā ', according to Kāt. IV. 14. 23). He offers a second oblation of milk by the sruva silently according to Kāt. (IV. 14. 24) or with the words ' bhūrbhuvāḥ svāḥ suprajāḥ prajābhiḥ syām suvīro viraiḥ supoṣaḥ poṣaiḥ ' and with at least any three verses addressed to Agni and with the verses ' agna āyūṁṣi pavase ' Rg. IX. 66. 19-21 (according to Āśv. II. 3. 27-29). Then he offers one oblation of milk with the sruva ladle into the dakṣiṇāgni with the words ' annādāyānna-pataye svāhā ' and a second one silently. He then touches water, turns northwards and with one of his fingers (with the ring finger ' anāmikā ' according to Kāt. IV. 14. 26) he takes out what remains in the sruca and licks it noiselessly without allowing it to come in contact with his teeth. He then sips water and licks it a second time and then sips water. He then takes into another vessel or on his own palm all remnants (of milk &c.) in the sruca and licks the contents of the vessel or his palm once with his tongue. According to Āp. (VI. 11. 5 and VI. 12. 2) and Baud. III. 6 he holds the sruca in such a way that its rod is turned east or north, and licks²²⁶⁹ the sruca itself twice, fills it with water, pours down to the west the water (from the ladle) with the mantra ' propitiate those who partake of leavings ', sips water, and wipes the agnihotrahavaṇī with darbhā blades. Then he washes his hand, performs ācamana twice, goes near the āhavanīya, sits down, fills the sruca with water and spills the water from the ladle to the north of the āhavanīya with the words ' devān jinva; ' he repeats the same process again and wearing the sacred thread in the prācīnāvīta form and turning to the south he pours water to the south of the āhavanīya for the pitṛs with the words ' pitṛn jinva '. He then repeats the same process as for gods and sprinkles water upwards in the north-east a third time with the words ' sapta-ṛṣiṇ jinva '. He fills the sruca a fourth time, removes the darbhās from the place (kūrcasthāna) where they were placed to the west of the āhavanīya, pours down water on that place thrice, so as to end the stream in the east or north. He then heats the sruca and sruva on the āhavanīya fire together and keeps them on the antarvedi or hands them over to an attendant. He then offers three samidhs to each of the three fires in the order in which he performed paryukṣaṇa (i. e. in the order āhavanīya, gārhapatya, dakṣiṇāgni, or gārhapatya, dakṣiṇāgni, āhavanīya). After this the house-holder engages in waiting upon agni with vātsapra prayers or in a brief worship by repeating only ' bhūrbhuvahṣvaḥ &c.' (Vāj. III. 37); then he pays silent homage to the āhavanīya and sits near it for a moment; then he sleeps or sits near the gārhapatya; then he performs paryukṣaṇa for all the fires, then the householder breaks silence and performs ācamana and then when he goes out he contemplates in mind the dakṣiṇāgni. The wife also performs ācamana (at the end) silently.

According to Kāt. (IV. 12. 1-2) the upasthāna (worship or homage) of the fires in the evening after oblations are offered in agnihotra with the Vātsapra mantras (Vāj. S. III. 11. 36 and Śat. Br. II. 3. 4. 9-41) is optional and the householder may simply repeat one verse (Vāj. S. III. 37 and Śat. Br. II. 4. 1. 1-2). Āp. (VI. 16. 4 and 6) prescribes as upasthāna the six verses ' upaprayanto' (Tai. S. I. 5. 5) and several others, which are passed over for want of space. There were several views about upasthāna, some holding that upasthāna was to be performed only in the evening and not in the morning, others holding that it was to be performed at both times but only with the Vātsapra mantras (Rg. X. 45) or with the Gosūkta (Rg. VI. 28) or Aśvasūkta (Rg. I. 163). Vide Āp. VI. 19. 4-9 to VI. 23.

Āp. (VI. 15. 10-13) has certain interesting rules about agnihotra in the case of kṣatriyas. At first he says a kṣatriya should permanently maintain the āhavanīya fire, but he does not perform the daily agnihotra. He should however send food from his house to a brāhmaṇa at the time when the agnihotra homa is ordinarily performed, whereby he secures the performance of agnihotra, but the adhvaryu should make the rājanya recite the mantras of the worship of fire (agnyupasthāna noted above). A rājanya however who has performed somayāga and always speaks the truth may perform agnihotra daily. Āśv. (II. 1. 3-5) says that a kṣatriya (and a vaiśya) may perform agnihotra on the New Moon and Full Moon days, that on other days he should send cooked food to a brāhmaṇa who is devoted to his duties and that a kṣatriya or vaiśya who always abides by truth (in thought and word) and has offered a soma sacrifice may engage in daily agnihotra. It is probable that these rules were made to allow more time to kṣatriyas and vaiśyas for their chief occupations. According to Āp. VI. 15. 14-16, Āśv. II. 4. 2-4 and others the householder should every day personally perform the agnihotra, but if he cannot do that, he must do it personally at least on parva days and on other days a priest, a pupil or a son may perform his agnihotra for him.

The procedure in the morning agnihotra is the same as the evening agnihotra except in a few details e. g. the paryukṣaṇa mantra in the morning is different in Āśv. II. 4. 25 'satyartābhyām tvā paryukṣāmi', while in the evening it is 'ṛtasatyābhyām tvā &c.' (Āśv. II. 2. 11), the samidh is offered into fire in the morning with the mantra 'hariṣim tvā sūryajyotiṣam-ahariṣṭakām-upadadhe svāhā' (while in the evening the mantra is 'rajatām tvāgni jyotiṣam rātrim-iṣṭakām-upadadhe svāhā ' Āśv. II. 4. 25 and II. 3. 15); the mantra in offering an oblation of milk in the fire in the morning is 'bhūrbhuvah-svarom, sūryo jyotiṣ jyotiḥ sūryaḥ svāhā', while in the evening the word 'agniḥ' is substituted for 'sūryaḥ' (Āśv. II. 4. 25 and II. 3. 16). Vide Kāt. IV. 15 for further details.

The sūtras set out rules about what the householder is to do when he leaves his home for one night or for a longer period. Vide Śat. Br. II. 4. 1. 3-14, Āśv. II. 5, Āp. VI. 24-27, Kāt. IV. 12. 13-24. According to Āśv. the important rules are: he kindles the fires into flames, sips water (ācamana) and performs the worship of the āhavanīya, gārhapatya and dakṣiṇāgni by going near them and repeating respectively the three mantras 'śamsya paśūn me pāhi', 'narya prajām me pāhi' and 'atharva pitum me pāhi' (all three in Vāj. S. III. 37). Then while standing near the dakṣiṇāgni he should look at the other two with the mantra 'imān me mitrāvaruṇāu grhān gopāyatam ... punar-āyanāt' (Kāṭhaka S. VII. 3., Mai. S. I. 5. 14, with variations). He then traces the same way back and comes to the āhavanīya and offers worship to it with the mantra 'mama nāma' (Tai. S. I. 5. 10. 1, quoted in note 553 above). He should then start on his journey without looking back at his fires and should mutter the hymn 'mā praṇama.' When he reaches a place from which the roof of his fire-house is not visible he may break silence. On reaching the road leading from his house to his destination he should recite 'sadā sugaḥ' (Rg. III. 54. 21). When he returns from his journey to his village, he should repeat 'api panthām' (Rg. VI. 51. 16). He should then observe silence, take fuel-sticks in his hand and on learning that his fires have been kindled into flames (by his son or pupil) he should look at the āhavanīya with two verses (set out in Āśv. II. 5. 9). Then placing the samidhs he does homage to the āhavanīya with the verse 'mama nāma tava ca' (Tai. S. I. 5. 10. 1) and then he places samidhs on the āhavanīya, gārhapatya and dakṣiṇāgni with one manṭra each (which are Vāj. S. III. 28-30).

These rules apply when the house-holder alone goes on a journey leaving the wife at home. When the house-holder is away alone it is his duty to perform all actions at the time of agnihotra and darśapūrṇamāsa (such as sipping water) which he can perform without his fires and to go mentally ²²⁷⁰ through the whole procedure and to observe all vratas (such as subsisting on roots and fruits when required). Vide Āp. IV. 16. 18, Kāt. IV. 12. 16 and com. thereon. When he goes on a journey alone he should entrust his fires to his wife and should appoint a priest to perform the necessary rites (vide note 1634 above). When the house-holder starts on a journey accompanied by his wife he should take his fires with him. If both husband and wife go on a journey without taking their fires with them, then a priest cannot offer the agnihotra homa in their absence and on return the house-holder has to again set up the fires (has to perform punarūdhāna). ²²⁷¹

DARŚA-PŪRṆAMĀSA ²²⁷²

The Darśapūrṇamāsa sacrifice is the pattern or archetype (prakṛti) of all other iṣṭis (which are called vikṛtis or modifications). The śrauta sūtras therefore describe first the Darśapūrṇamāsa at length, though in the order of time agnyādhāna comes first. Āśv. II. 1. 1 says that all iṣṭis, sacrifices in which an animal is offered and those in which soma is offered are explained by the Paurṇamāsa iṣṭi. According to Āp. III. 14. 11-13 a person, after he sets up the three fires, has to perform the Darśapūrṇamāsa throughout his life (till he becomes a saṁnyāsī) or for thirty years (after which he may stop) or till he becomes very old (and unable to perform the rite).²²⁷³

The word 'amāvāsyā' literally means 'the day when (the sun and the moon) dwell or are together.' It is that tithi (day) on which both the sun and the moon are the nearest to each other, while paurṇamāsi is 'the tithi on which the sun and the moon are at the greatest distance from each other.' Pūrṇamāsa means 'that moment when the moon is full.' Darśa has the same sense as amāvāsyā. Darśa is taken to mean 'the day on which the moon is seen only by the sun and by no one else.' Darśa (m) and pūrṇamāsa (m) secondarily mean the rites that are performed on the amāvāsyā and the paurṇamāsi respectively.²²⁷⁴ An iṣṭi means a sacrifice in which the sacrificer employs four priests.

2273. 'यावज्जीवं दर्शपूर्णमासाभ्यां यजेत' quoted by Śabara on Jai. X. 8. 36. Vide Śat. Br. XI. 1. 2. 13 (S. B. E. vol. 44, p. 5) for 30 years. ताभ्यां यावज्जीवं यजेत । त्रिंशत् वा वर्षाणि । जीर्णो वा विरमेत् । आप. III. 14. 11-13.

2274. Vide वैजयन्ती on सत्याषाढ (I. 1. 'संपूर्णो वा') "गोभिलः । यः परमो विप्रकर्षः सूर्याचन्द्रमसोः सा पौर्णमासी यः परमः संनिकर्षः साऽमावास्या । ... तथा पूर्णो मासश्चन्द्रमा यस्मिन्क्षणे स इत्यपि पूर्णमासस्य निर्वचनदर्शनात् । ... यतो न दृश्यते सूर्यसह-भावादतो 'अमावस्यदन्यतरस्याम्' (पाणिनि 3. 1. 122) इति पाणिनिस्मृत्यापि च सह वसतश्चन्द्राकावस्मिन्निति त्वमावास्याशब्दस्तथा च सूर्येणैव दृश्यते नान्येनेति दर्शशब्दो व्याख्यातः । ".

A sketch of the darśapūrṇamāsa iṣṭi is given below principally based upon the śrautasūtras of Satyāśādhā and Āśvalāyana.

One who has performed agnyādheya should begin the performance of darśapūrṇamāsa on the first Full Moon day after it. The iṣṭi on the Full-moon day may occupy two days, but all the actions to be performed in it can be compressed into one day.²²⁷⁵ If extended over two days it is performed on the full moon day and the pratipad (the first day of the dark half that follows the Full Moon day), the former being called upavasatha day²²⁷⁶ and the latter yajaniya day. On the upavasatha day agnyānvādhāna (offering fuel-sticks into fire) and paristarāṇa are performed in the case of the pūrṇamāsa rite and on the yajaniya day the rest is performed. If it is the first pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi or the first darśa iṣṭi, then the sacrificer has to perform the Anvārambhaṇīyā iṣṭi, which is briefly described in the note below.²²⁷⁷

On the morning of the full moon day the sacrificer, after the performance of his daily agnihotra, sitting on a seat of darbhas to the west of the gārhapatya, holding kuśa grass in his hand and performing prāṇāyāma and accompanied by his wife, makes a samkalpa (resolve) as noted below.²²⁷⁸ Then he says to the four priests viz., adhvaryu, brahmā, hotṛ and āgnīdhra

2275. Vide com. on Kṣt. II. 1. 16-17 'पौर्णमासे यद् द्व्यहकर्तव्यमुक्तं तदेकस्मिन्नेवाह्न्यग्न्यन्वाधानादि कर्मापवर्गान्तं भवति । अस्मिन्पक्षे प्रातः प्रतिपदिन एव सर्वमग्न्यन्वाधानादि कर्मापवर्गान्तं कर्तव्यम् । न पूर्वधुरग्न्यन्वाधानदिने प्रतिपदः प्रधानकालत्वादङ्गानां प्रधानकालस्य न्याय्यत्वात् । तत्र च व्रतोपायनीयाशनारण्याशनान्यतरागारशयनानि न भवन्ति । उक्तकालाभावात् । ...अन्यद्वपनादि सर्वं भवत्येव ।'

2276. The Śat. Br. I. 1. 7 derives the word by saying that as all the gods betake themselves to the sacrificer's house and abide by him (from 'vas' with 'upa') it is called upavasatha. Com. on Āp. I. 14. 16 says 'श्वो यागार्थे अग्निसमीपे नियमविशिष्टो वास उपवासः'; 'यष्टव्यानां देवतानां योऽग्निसमीपे वासः स उपवसथस्तत्संबन्धयद्वाह्नौपवसथमन्वाधानदिनमिति यावत् ।' com. on सत्याषाढ I. 3. p. 99.

2277. At first two oblations are offered to Sarasvatī with two mantras from Tai. S. III. 5. 1. 1. and the anvārambhaṇīyā follows. In this a cake cooked on eleven potsherds is offered to Agni and Viṣṇu, a caru to Sarasvatī, a cako on twelve potsherds to Sarasvatī and a cake on eight potsherds to Agni Bhagin. Jaimini (IX. 1. 34-35) establishes that the anvārambhaṇīyā is not repeated every time, but is performed only once. Vide Tai. S. III. 5. 1, Āśv. II. 8, Āp. V. 23. 4-9, Baud. II. 21 for further details.

'I choose thee, so and so by name, as my adhvaryu, as my brahmā, as my hotṛ and as my āgnīdhra.' The adhvaryu takes fire from the gārhapatya, carries it to the āhavanīya mound and also to the dakṣiṇāgni mound and places a fuel-stick with its end to the east on the āhavanīya with the verse 'mamāgne varco'²²⁷⁹ (Rg. X. 128. 1, Tai. S. IV. 7. 14. 1). The adhvaryu and sacrificer perform japa by muttering three verses²²⁸⁰ (from Tai. Br. III. 7. 4 set out in Śat. I. 2. p. 71). While he is between the two fires (āhavanīya and gārhapatya) he mutters standing a verse 'antarāgni...manīṣayā' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4). Then he offers a samidh into the gārhapatya fire with Rg. X. 128. 2 (=Tai. S. IV. 7. 14. 1, 'mama devā vihavē'). The adhvaryu and sacrificer mutter two verses 'iha prajā &c.' and 'iha paśavo' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4, Śat. I. 2. p. 71). The adhvaryu then places a samidh on the dakṣiṇa fire with 'mayi devā' (Rg. X. 128. 3, Tai. S. IV. 3. 14. 1). Then the two mutter a verse 'ayam pitṛṇām' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4). Those who maintained sabhya and āvasathya fires offered samidhs to them with mantras²²⁸¹ (from Tai. Br. III. 7. 4).

If the sacrificer is one who has already performed a soma sacrifice then he has to go through the ceremony called 'śākhā-haraṇa'. Such a sacrificer had to offer sānnāyya (which is 2279. A mantra is ordinarily to be recited after saying 'om'. But this is not the rule in śrauta rites and so this has not been stated in the text everywhere. The fuel-stick may be offered either by the sacrificer or by the adhvaryu (Kāt. II. 1. 2).

2280. The first verse is अग्निं युक्तामि सुरथं यो मयोधूर्य उच्यन्तमारोहति सूर्यमङ्गे । आदित्यं ज्योतिषां ज्योतिरुत्तमं श्वो यज्ञाय रमतं देवताभ्यः ॥ This is repeated if the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi extends over two days, but if performed in one day he has to say अद्य यज्ञाय for श्वो यज्ञाय. The third verse is इमामूर्जे पञ्चदशीं ये प्रतिष्ठास्तान्देवान् परियुक्तामि पूर्वः । अग्निर्हव्यवादिह तानावद्वत्तु पौर्णमासं हविरेदिदमेषां मयि ॥ On the darśeṣṭi he repeats अमावास्या हविः for पौर्णमासं हविः in the above.

2281. There is a great divergence of view as to the mantras, the order of the fires and the number of samidhs. Kāt. (II. 1. 3-4) prescribes the offering of two samidhs in each fire (one with a mantra and the other silently). The hymn Rg. X. 128 or Tai. S. IV. 3. 14 is called 'Vihavya'. In the Rg. it has nine verses, in the Tai. S. it has ten. Some held that three verses of this hymn should be repeated for each fire (Āp. I. 1. 5). The order of fires was, according to some, first gārhapatya, then dakṣiṇāgni, then āhavanīya (Kāt. II. 1. 6). Some said that only the vyāhrtis were to be uttered when offering fuel-sticks (Āp. I. 1. 7, Kāt. II. 1. 6). Another view was that fuel-sticks were to be offered silently.

prepared by adding to fresh heated milk the sour milk or curds of the preceding night's milking).²²⁸² According to the Tai. S. II. 5. 4. 1 sānnāyya was offered only by a somayāji. Sānnāyya was offered to Indra or Mahendra (Śat. Br. I. 6. 4. 21 and Kāt. IV. 2. 10). The Tai. S. II. 5. 4. 4 says that only one who is gataśrī (explained above in note 2259) can offer sānnāyya to Mahendra, while Sat. (I. 4 p. 103) says that for a year or two after soma-yāga the sānnāyya should be offered to Indra and then to Mahendra. In the full moon iṣṭi the deities to whom puroḍāśa (cake) is offered are Agni and Agniśoma and in it ājya is offered to Prajāpati silently between the two puroḍāśas. In the new moon iṣṭi the deities of puroḍāśa are Agni and Indrāgni and sānnāyya is offered by a somayāji to Indra or Mahendra instead of the puroḍāśa to Indrāgni (Āśv. I. 3. 9-12).

Now śākhāharana (which applies only to him who has performed soma-yāga and only in darśeṣṭi) will be described. The adhvaryu fetches a fresh branch of the palāśa or śami tree, which (branch) is taken from the eastern, northern or north-east side of the tree, which has many leaves and which has not a dried up end. Vide Jai. IV. 2. 7 about the text 'he brings a branch turned to the east' &c. He cuts it off with the words 'iṣe tvā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1), then touches water, makes it straight or wipes it down with 'ūrje tvā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1), brings it towards the sacrificial ground with a verse 'imām prācīm' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4 set out in Āp. I. 2. 1, Sat. I. 2, p. 76). With that branch he drives away (or separates) from their mothers six calves with the mantra 'vāyavas sthopāyavas stha' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1). The adhvaryu makes the cows (of the sacrificer) start for the pasture with the mantra 'devo vaḥ savitā prārpayatu...mā vaḥ stena īsata māgha-śamsaḥ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1), invokes them, when they have started, with a mantra 'śuddhā apah suprapāne pibantīḥ' (Rg. VI. 28. 7, Tai. Br. II. 8. 8 set out in Sat. I. 2. p. 79). Then he returns to the house of the sacrificer with 'dhruvā asmin.....bahvīḥ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1) and keeps the branch in a well-known place (so that it might not fall or be lost) on the sacred fire ground or on a wooden frame near the fires with 'protect the cattle of the sacrificer' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1). Jai. (III. 6. 28-29) states that śākhāharana is meant for both evening and morning milking.

The sacrificer²²⁸³ crosses by the west of the āhavanīya to its south and performs ācamana (sipping water). Then he contemplates on the sea and pays homage to the deities viz. Agni, Vāyu, Āditya and Vratapati in the manner set out below.²²⁸⁴

Barhīrāharāṇa (bringing in the bundles of sacred kuśa grass for use). There are various stages in this operation, each stage having its own mantra. The mantras are short prose formulæ which occur in the Tai. S. I. 1. 2. They are not set out in detail here. The various stages are: he (adhvaryu) takes up a sickle or the rib of a horse or ox kept to the north of the gārhapatya with the famous mantra 'devasya tvā savitūḥ prasave ādade' (I take thee at the impulse of God savitṛ &c.). He pays homage to the gārhapatya with a mantra. The sickle (but not the rib) is heated on the gārhapatya fire. He then goes to the east or north of the sacrificial ground (vihāra) for some distance, finds out a spot where the desired grass grows, leaves aside one clump of darbhas from those growing there and marks as many clumps of darbha as he feels would be enough for his purpose, leaves one clump or one or two blades with the words, 'I leave you aside as the portion of beasts', touches those darbhas that he intends to cut with 'this is for the gods', holds them by his closed fingers (of the left hand), rubs them upwards with his right hand, brings the sickle in close contact with them, repeats a mantra over the grass and cuts off as much as can be held in his closed fingers the nails of which touch each other. This first handful of blades that are cut is called prastara. Then he further cuts an uneven number of handfuls of darbhas (3, 5, 7, 9, 11),²²⁸⁵ repeating the same processes and mantras for each handful, touches the stumps from which blades are cut off with the mantra 'God Barhis! may you grow into a hundred shoots' and touches the region of his heart with 'may 2283. In the case of one who has not performed somayāga and who therefore offers no sāmānyya the actions from cutting off a twig to its being laid down are not done, but the first important matter that is begun in his case is fetching barhis (kuśa grass). Vide Baud. I. 1 'यद्यु वै न संनयति बहिः प्रतिपदेव'.

2284. अग्रे व्रतपते व्रतं चरिष्यामि तच्छक्रेयं तन्मे राक्षताम् । वायो व्रतपते व्रतं ... राक्षताम् । आदित्य व्रतपते ... राक्षताम् । व्रतानां व्रतपते ... राक्षताम् । Vide Tai. S. I. 5. 10. 3 for the first and Tai. Br. III. 7. 4 for all.

2285. Āp. I. 4. 3 and Baud. I. 2 speak of an uneven number of muṣṭis, while Sat. I. 2, p. 84 says they may be even or uneven in number.

we grow into thousand branches'. He touches water and passes round a handful of darbhas a cord (śulba) from left to right, then puts thereon another handful of darbhas and passes a cord round it. In this way three or five handfuls are surrounded by a cord, which has its end stretched on the ground towards the east or north. Then heaps of blades are added on and over the last heap the prastara is placed. The whole is then firmly bound with the cord and a knot is made. He takes hold of the bundle thus tied, raises it up, places it on his head, returns with it by the way he went, keeps it inside the vedi on some grass (and not on the bare ground) near the spot where the middle paridhi would be. He pronounces over the barhis thus placed a mantra and keeps the barhis near the gārhapatyā on a mat or the like. He also cuts off silently and brings along with barhis other darbhas called paribhojanīya and dried up kuśa grass also (ulaparāji).²²⁸⁶

Idhmāharāṇa (bringing the wood-sticks). Twenty-one wood-sticks of palāśa or khadira are required, out of which 15 are meant for throwing into the fire at the time of repeating the sāmidhenī verses, three are paridhis,²²⁸⁷ two samidhs are to be used at the two āghāras and the 21st is the stick for anūyājas. A cord is made of darbhas and spread on the ground with its end to the north, the idhma is heaped on it with a mantra (Āp. I, 6. 1, Sat. I. 2. p. 89). The bundle is tied with the cord and a knot is made and the idhma is laid alongside of the barhis. The pieces of wood that are thrown off when cutting the idhma are called idhma-pravraścana. A bunch of darbhas called veda is made of the size of the knee of a calf by doubling and tying the darbhas with a cord and cutting the darbhas about one span above the tying cord and a mantra is repeated over it ('vedosi' &c. in Sat. I. 2. p. 90). This veda is employed in sweeping the vedi with a mantra. It is given to the wife when she has to repeat a mantra in any action (compare Āśv. I. 11. 1). The cut portions of darbhas of which veda is formed are called veda-parivāsana. These two, idhma-pravraścana and veda-parivāsana, are placed together. He takes up a branch, cuts off its leaves (but not all) inside the vedi, so chisels one end of it as to make of it a shovel. This is called upaveṣa²²⁸⁸. He recites a mantra over it (upaveṣosi... bhavāsi naḥ, Ap. I. 6. 7, Sat. I. 3. p. 91). In the Full moon sacrifice the upaveṣa is made silently. He places on the upaveṣa a triple (made of three darbhas) band of darbhas in such a way that the roots and end portions of both are in contact but they are not tied together into a knot over it. The sacrificer invokes this triple band called pavitra with a mantra 'trivṛt palāśe &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4, Āp. I. 6. 10, Sat. I. 3. p. 92).

2286. The paribhojanīya darbhas are meant for making seats for the priests, the sacrificer and his wife. Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 79 for a note on barhis, paribhojanīya and veda. Āp. I. 6. 4 states that while making the veda bunch the mantra 'tvayā vedīm vividuḥ' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4) is recited.

2287. परिधि means an encircling stick of wood 'अग्नेः परितो धीयन्ते तानि दारुणि परिधयः' com. on Sat. I. 2, p. 88. They are of some sacrificial tree such as palāśa, kāśmārya, khadira, udumbara &c. They may be undried or dried but must have the bark on. The middle one is the thickest, that to the south is the longest, that to the north is the thinnest and shortest. Vide Āp. I. 5. 7-10 and Sat. II. 8. 1 for paridhis. The paridhis are about three spans or one bāhu long, while samidhs are two spans (prādeśa, distance between the thumb and index finger when both are stretched away from each other).

After this in the afternoon the piṇḍa-pitṛyajña is performed in the darśeṣṭi, but not in the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi. Piṇḍa-pitṛyajña is separately described below.

If the sacrificer has celebrated the soma sacrifice at some time then he has to perform sāyam-doha. When the householder has offered the evening agnihotra, he spreads darbhas to the north of the gārhapatya, washes the sānnāyya utensils (that are the same as are required for sāyam-doha) in twos and lays them on the darbhas with their mouths turned downwards. The utensils are stated in the note below,²²⁸⁹ He then makes 2288. अङ्गारप्रेषणार्थं काष्ठमुपवेष्ट इति समाख्यायते । com. on Āp. I. 6. 7. It is one span long. Com. on कात्या. II. 4. 26 says 'उपवेष्टोऽङ्गारापोहनसमर्थं हस्ताकृति काष्ठम्'. It is of palāśa and one end of it is made to resemble a shovel.

2289. अग्निहोत्रहवणीमुखामुपवेष्टं शाखापवित्रमभिधानीं निदाने दोहनमयस्यात्रं दारुपात्रं वा पिधानार्थम् । सत्याषाढ I. 3. p. 93. These are eight. Vide Āp. I. 11. 5 for these. For agni-hotrahavaṇī and upaveṣa vide notes 2263 and 2286 above. Ukhā is the same as the kumbhī of Āp. Ukhā is an earthen vessel or pan. Abhidhānī is a rope for tying the cow (or the calf according to com. on Āp.). The two nidānas are ropes for tying the hind feet of the cow near her hoofs and knees. Dohana is the pot in which the cow is milked. There is a wooden or metal lid to cover the dohana. Śakhāpavitra is made from the branch out of which the upaveṣa was prepared and consists in the top of that branch which is tied round with three darbhas like a braid (according to Śr. P. N.).

two pavitras (strainers, purifiers) of two darbhas that are alike in appearance and colour, a span in length, the tips of which are not cut, but which are cut from their stems with a knife or sickle by having a blade of grass or wood placed over them (but not with the nails) with a mantra 'pavitre stho' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4) and are invoked with a mantra (prāṇāpāna &c.). The adhvaryu wipes them with water upwards (from the bottom) with the mantra 'you two are holy by the mind of Viṣṇu'. Jai. III. 8. 32 (and also Śabara thereon) says that the two pavitras and the vidhṛtis (described later on) are not taken from the cut barhis, but from the kuśa grass called paribhojaniya. The adhvaryu loudly announces 'purify the cow, the ropes and all the utensils'.²²⁹⁰ The adhvaryu places the two pavitras inside the agnihotra-havaṇī, pours water therein, purifies the water by moving the pavitras eastward and then backwards and raising them up thrice with their tips to the north by repeating the mantra in the gāyatrī metre 'devo vaḥ savitotpunātu' (Tai. S. I. 1. 5. 1) once,²²⁹¹ there being a rest at the end of each pāda (and twice silently). He invokes the water with 'āpo devīr-agrepuvā...(Tai. I. 1. 5. 1, Vāj. S. I. 12-13), then turns the mouths of the vessels upwards and sprinkles them thrice with the water (leaving no water in the agnihotrahavaṇī) and with 'may you purify for this divine rite, for the worship of gods' (Tai. S. I. 1. 3. 1). He keeps the two pavitras in a well-known place. He waits for the cows coming from the pasture with a mantra 'etā ācaranti' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4).²²⁹² The adhvaryu takes the upaveśa with 'thou art dhṛṣṭi, impart brahma' (Tai. S. I. 1. 7. 1), takes out with the upaveśa burning coals from the gārhapatya to its north. He places the ukhā on those coals and kindles burning coals round it with 'may you become hot with the tapas of Bhṛguś and Āngirases' (Tai. S. I. 1. 7. 2). Then he issues a direction to the milker of the cow "announce

2290. Most of the mantras in the sāyamdoha are taken from the Tai. S. I. 1. 3 and 5, 7 and Tai. Br. III. 7. 4 and they are not specified in each case. Some mantras are sautra. Each action is accompanied by a mantra which directly or indirectly refers to it. As the Ait. Br. I. 4 says एतद्वै यज्ञस्य समृद्धं यद्रूपसमृद्धं यत् कर्म क्रियमाणमुत्पन्नं भवतीति ।

2291. According to Āp. I. 11. 9 the three pādas of the mantra accompany each act of utpavana. उत्पवनमुद्गयाभ्यां पवित्राभ्यामूर्ध्वपवनं शोधनमपाम् । पाजिका हस्तद्वयेन पवित्रे गृहीत्वोत्पुनन्ति तन्मूलमन्वेष्टव्यम् । com. on Sat. I. 3. p. 94.

2292. From Āp. I. 11. 10 it appears that the mantra 'etā ācaranti' is recited by the sacrificer.

to me when the calf joins the cow". He places the śākhāpavitra with its tip to the east (to the north in the morning milking) in the ukhā with a mantra, touches the ukhā and restrains his speech²²⁹³ holding the śākhāpavitra. The person who is to milk the cow takes the abhidhāni (the rope) with 'adityai rāsnāsi' (Tai. S. I. 1. 2. 2) and the two nidāna ropes silently and makes the calf join the cow with 'thou art Pūṣan'. The adhvaryu issues a direction that no one is to pass between the cow that is being sucked by the calf and the sacrificial ground (vihāra) and all obey it. The adhvaryu invokes the cow with a mantra and the milker sits down near the cow to milk her with a mantra.²²⁹⁴ The householder repeats a mantra when the cow is being milked and another when he hears the sound of the streams of milk falling into the vessel. The milker brings the milk to the adhvaryu, who asks him 'whom did you milk, declare to us, (this is) an offering to Indra, it is vigour'. The milker refers to the cow by her name (such as Gaṅgā) and adds 'in whom milk has been placed for gods and men'. The adhvaryu replies 'she (the cow named) is the life of all'. The adhvaryu places the pavitra in the kumbhi (or ukhā) and pours therein the milk across the pavitra with a mantra. The adhvaryu gets two more cows milked in the same manner (i. e. with the same mantras &c.) except the directions (such as no one should come &c.). The only difference is that the names of the cows will be different (such as Yamunā) and that the 2nd and 3rd cows are referred to by him respectively as 'viśva-vyacāḥ' and 'viśvakarmā' instead of 'viśvāyuh' (in his pratīvacana). After three cows are milked he loudly utters thrice 'milk much for Indra, may the offering (havya) increase for the gods, for the calves, for men; be ready for milking again'. If there are more cows (generally six are referred to) they also are got milked with the same mantras as for the first cow or silently and the adhvaryu does not hold his tongue, nor does he touch the kumbhī while the other cows are being milked. Jai. (XI. 1. 47-53) concludes that the passage of Tai. Br. about milking the other three cows is a mere anuvāda and not a vidhi and Śabara quotes passages of the śruti that on that night no agnihotra is offered with milk and the children in the house do not get any milk (as all milk is used up for the sānnāyya). When all are milked, if any drops have fallen about (on the ground &c.) he repeats a mantra (Tai. S. I. 1. 3. 1) and invokes the pot in which sānnāyya is to be prepared with a mantra. He washes the inside of the milking vessel with water and then pours that water into the pot (in which sānnāyya is to be prepared). He heats the milk and pours over it (i. e. does abhighāraṇa) clarified butter silently. He draws the heated pot from the burning coals in such a way as to make a line on the ground and places it to the east, north or north-east with a mantra. When the bottom of the heated vessel cools, he adds curds to it in order to coagulate the fresh milk with 'I add soma (i. e. curds) to thee in order to turn thee into curds for Indra' (Tai. S. I. 1. 3).²²⁹⁵ He adds to the vessel what remains sticking to the pot or sruc after agnihotra was offered with a mantra or silently. He pours water in the vessel that is meant as a lid or cover and places that cover or lid on the pot of heated milk. If the covering be of earthenware he throws thereon grass or a twig. He takes out the śākhāpavitra with a mantra (if a palāśa branch was used) or silently (if one of śāmi was used) and keeps it in a secure place. He keeps the sānnāyya in the gārhapatya side of the vihāra on a śikya or some such contrivance with 'O Viṣṇu, guard the offering'.

2293. The com. on Ap. I. 12. 5 explains that 'vāgyamāna (holding one's tongue) means 'not uttering any word except a mantra'. 'मन्त्राद्व्यस्यत्याहारणं वाग्यमनं यदि प्रमत्तो व्याहरेदिति लिङ्गात्' com.

2294. The cow is to be made to yield milk by the sucking of the calf and not by manipulating the udders with the hand. 'वत्सेन च दोहार्थं प्रसवः साध्यः' com. on Sat. I. 3. p. 96. The तै. ब्रा. II. 1. 8 (न संसृजति) forbids manipulation of the udders with fingers to induce the flow of milk. Ap. I. 12. 15 says that there is an option as to whether a śūdra can be the milker in this sacrifice.

He brings another branch with which or with darbhas he separates the calves for the morning milking (on the principal day). The same procedure as for sāyamāndoha is followed in the 2295. There were several views here about adding curds. One, two or three cows are milked on the day previous to the upavasatha day (i. e. on the 14th) and that milk is used to acidify the fresh heated milk of the evening of the upavasatha day. Another method was to milk the cow or cows on the 12th, then to add the curds of that to the milk of the 13th day and add all the curds of those two days to the milk of the 14th day i. e. milking and adding of curds was to go on continuously from the 12th, 13th and 14th or from 13th or from 14th. Vide Āp. I. 13. 12 and Sat. I. 3, p. 99. If no curds be available he adds either rico or pieces of palāśa bark or wild or village badara fruit or pūtika plant (the pratinidhi of soma) to the milk to make it sour. Vide Āp. I. 14. 1, Sat. I. 3, p. 100.

morning milking (of the principal day). There are a few differences as to mantras, as to not adding coagulating substance, which are passed over.

After the sāyamdoha (evening milking) the adhvaryu directs (āgnidhṛa or some other priest or himself) 'strew kuśa grass round the fires, first round āhavanīya, then gārhapatya, then dakṣiṇāgni' or the order may be first gārhapatya, then dakṣiṇāgni and lastly āhavanīya. The darbhās strewn on the south and north have tips turned to the east. The sacrificer mutters a mantra when kuśas are being strewn.

Having done so much he observes the amāvāsyā as an upavasatha. Thus on the amāvāsyā day he performs agnyanvādhāna (offering fuel-sticks into fires), separating the calves with the branch, sāyamdoha, bringing barhis and idhma, preparing the veda and vedi and observing some vows. But two of these viz. separating calves from their mothers and sāyamdoha are performed only by him who has already performed a soma sacrifice. In the case of the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi if spread over two days, on the Full moon day only agnyanvādhāna and strewing kuśas round the fires are gone through and on the next day are performed the bringing of barhis and idhma and making of veda and all the other rites. If the iṣṭi is to be performed in one day only, then kuśa grass is strewn round the fires after the making of the veda bunch.

About sānnāyya Sat. states some divergent views. The Kāpeyas held that even one who has not performed soma-yāga may offer sānnāyya and the deity in his case will be Indra and after he offers Soma, the deity for sānnāyya will be Mahendra. According to Śabara on Jai. X. 8. 44 the Gopāyanas held that one who has not performed a soma sacrifice may offer sānnāyya. According to Sat. himself, for a year or two after Somayāga the deity will be Indra and then Mahendra if the sacrificer so desires. Persons of the Aurva and Gautama gotras and those who are gataśrī (vide note 2259) may if they like offer sānnāyya to Mahendra even before performing Somayāga. Compare Āp. I. 14. 8-11 and vide Jai. X. 8. 35-46 (about the two puroḍāśas and sānnāyya).

On the principal day (i. e. the first day of the dark half in the case of pūrṇamāsa) the sacrificer offers his daily agnihotra before sunrise and begins after sunrise the performance of the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi (and in the case of the darśeṣṭi before sunrise).

He washes his hands with water with the mantra "May I be able to carry out this rite meant for you two and for gods" (Tai. S. I. 1. 4. 1). From the place of the gārhapatya fire to the āhavanīya he spreads a line of dry kuśa grass continuously with their tips to the east (without leaving any space uncovered) with the mantra 'thou art the continuity of the sacrifice, I spread thee for the continuity of sacrifice, thee for the continuity of the sacrifice' (Tai. Br. III. 2.4) and then spreads another line of kuśas to the south and another to the north of this first line silently. To the south of the āhavanīya, seats of kuśa grass are made ready for the brahmā priest and the sacrificer, that of the brahmā being to the east of the seat of the sacrificer and directly to the south of the āhavanīya and of the sacrificer to the south of the south corner of the east side of the vedi. To the north of gārhapatya kuśas are strewn with their tips to the east or north and on them the sacrificial implements (yajñapātras) are placed in twos after being washed with water and with their mouths turned down, viz., the sphya and kapālas &c. (vide above note 2233 for the ten). This is called pātrāsādana (placing the utensils near).²²⁹⁶

Then follows brahmavarāṇa.

The sacrificer sitting on a seat with his face to the north then chooses his brahmā priest who faces the east near the utkara with the formula²²⁹⁷ 'O! Lord of the earth! Lord of the worlds! Lord of great being (Heaven?)! I choose thee as brahmā' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The brahmā priest when so chosen mutters a long formula (which is given in Āp. III. 18. 4 from the Tai. Br. III. 7. 6 and part of which is translated here) 'I am the Lord of the earth, Lord of the worlds, lord of the great being. Being impelled by god Savitr I shall perform the duties of a priest. God Savitr! Here they choose thee (who art) Lord of speech, as the divine

Besides the above the following are also placed:—ब्रुहं चोपशृतं च कुवं च ध्रुवं च प्राज्ञित्रहरणं चेदापात्रं च मेक्षणं च पिष्टोद्वर्णी च प्रणीताप्रणयनं चान्यस्थालीं च वेदं च द्वापरार्त्रीं च योक्त्रं च वेदपरिवासनं च धृष्टिं चेध्वप्रवक्षन् चान्वाहार्यस्थालीं च मदन्तीं च यानि चान्यानि पात्राणि तान्येवमेव द्वन्द्वं संसाद्य। बौ. I. 4; vide also सत्याषाढ I. 4 which adds कुट्टरं, explained as पापाणः कुट्टनसाधनम्.

2297. The choosing of brahmā takes place on the north of the vedi near the utkara, and then the brahmā priest comes to the south of the āhavanīya either from the east side or the west side of the āhavanīya according to one's Śākhā; vide (Kāt. II. 1. 21 and com.).

brahmā priest; I proclaim this to mind, mind proclaims to Gāyatri ... the Viśve Devas to Bṛhaspati, Bṛhaspati to Brahmā, Brahmā is bhūḥ, bhuvaḥ, suvaḥ. Bṛhaspati is the priest of the Gods, I am the brahmā priest of human beings'. Then he loudly says 'O Bṛhaspati, protect the sacrifice' (ibid.) and crossing the altar by the west of the āhavanīya towards the south of the āhavanīya, stands to the south of his seat with his face to the north, takes a kuśa blade from the blades on the seat prepared for him, casts it to the south-west (the direction of Nir-ṛti, ill-luck) with the words 'avaunt,²²⁹⁸ Daidhiṣavya (son of a re-married widow?), get up from this place, occupy the seat of another, who is more ignorant than me' (Tai. S. III. 2. 4. 4.), touches water and sits down on his seat with face to the east with a mantra and then faces the āhavanīya with a mantra 'Here do I, impelled by God Savitr, sit on the seat of Vasu (or prosperity) lower in level (than the āhavanīya mound), I occupy the seat of Bṛhaspati, this I declare to Agni, to Vāyu, to the Sun, to the Earth' (vide Āp. III.18.4, Kāt. II. 1. 24). The brahmā is required to be the most learned in Vedic lore (brahmiṣṭha, as Āp. III. 18. 1 says) and he is to observe silence while mantras are being repeated and superintends all actions. His permission is asked by the adhvaryu at the time of doing most of the acts, such as leading forward the praṇītā water, sprinkling the bundle of fuel-sticks and kuśa grass. There are four priests in darśapūrṇamāsa (vide note 2228). The sacrificer also crosses by the west side of the āhavanīya to its south, throws away silently a blade of kuśa from his seat and then sits down on the seat prepared for him, with his face to the east. The adhvaryu takes two darbhas of equal thickness, the tops of which are not cut off and makes them a span in length by cutting off their roots (without using his nails).²²⁹⁹

The adhvaryu, sitting to the west (or north) of the gārhapatya fire, takes a camasa (a rather flat vessel or pan) in which water is to be carried forward with 'to thee for Dakṣa' (Āp. I. 17. 1) and washes it thrice with water once with mantra and twice silently. The mantra is 'thou art made of plants, may you be washed for gods, may you shine for the gods, may you be pure for gods' (Āp. I. 16. 3). He keeps the two pavitras in the camasa and pours water in the camasa with 'who takes you, let him take you, for whom shall I take you, I take you for him, you for prosperity' (Āp. I. 16. 3) and at the same time contemplates on the Earth with 'I take you with this' (not uttered). He fills the vessel so as to leave some space at the top and purifies the water by the process called utpavana (described above in note 2291). He then invokes them with 'may the divine waters, that are the first purifiers and the leaders carry this sacrifice to the front, may they place the lord of the sacrifice in front, Indra chose you in his fight with Vṛtra, you chose him in the fight with Vṛtra, you are sprinkled' (Tai. S. I. 1. 5. 1). The adhvaryu then asks the permission of the brahmā priest in the words 'Brahman! shall I carry forward the water' and issues a direction 'sacrificer, observe silence'. The brahmā priest mutters a mantra 'Lead forward the sacrifice, sustain these deities, may the sacrificer be on the back of heaven. Place this sacrifice and the sacrificer in the world where the seven sages and other men of holy deeds dwell' and loudly says 'yes, do carry the water forward'. The adhvaryu then repeats the verse 'who carries you forward? Let him carry you forward. I carry forward the divine waters; may they sit round our sacrifice, conveying to the sacrificer thousandfold prosperity, the waters that delight in drink, having a shining (or oily) appearance'. He holds the water in a vessel which is covered by the sphya that has its tip to the east and that is held level with his nose and carries it forward without allowing even a drop to fall down. When the water is being carried the sacrificer invokes it with a mantra.²³⁰⁰ The adhvaryu places the water vessel (pranītāpātra) on darbha grass to the north of the āhavanīya with the mantra 'you are sanctified by brahma (prayers); who employs you? Let him employ for (securing) all desires, for the worship of gods (Āp. IV. 4. 4)' and then covers the vessel with kuśas. All these acts constitute pranītāpranayana. While the water is being placed near the āhavanīya the sacrificer invokes it with the immediately preceding mantra and passes his eye over the whole of the sacrificial ground. No one is to pass between the āhavanīya and the pranītā water (Kāt. II. 3. 4).

2300. The mantra is सूश्च कश्च वाक् चर्कं च गाश्च वद च खं च धूश्च नृश्च पूश्चे-
काश्चपः पूर्वसमा विशाजो या इदं विश्वं युवनं व्यानयुस्ता नो देवीस्तस्मा संविदानाः स्वस्ति
यज्ञं नवत प्रजानतीः । It occurs in आप. IV. 4. 4.

The principal purpose of the praṇītā waters is that they are used for making the ground grains into a dough for puroḍāśa and their final disposal is to be poured into the vedi (Jai. IV. 2, 14-15). The adhvaryu comes back by the same way that he went, places down the sphya among the yajñapātras and touches the sacrificial utensils with his hand wearing a pavitra with the mantra 'may the divine groups enter into the sacrificial utensils'.

Then follows *nirvāpa*²³⁰¹ (taking out handfuls of grains or a portion of other sacrificial material). The adhvaryu takes in his hand the ladle called agnihotra-havanī with 'thou art made of a tree for dakṣa' (strength). Then he holds it in his left hand and takes the winnowing basket (śūrpa) in his right hand with 'to thee for the all-pervading (yajña)'. Then he heats it (ladle) on the gārhapatya fire with 'the rakṣas (evil spirit) is burnt, the enemies are burnt'. He then touches water.²³⁰² The adhvaryu asks the permission of the sacrificer in the words 'sacrificer! shall I take out sacrificial material' and the sacrificer replies 'yes, do take out'. The adhvaryu then utters the words 'I go towards the wide space' and approaches a cart or wooden frame (śakaṭa) standing to the west of the āhavanīya or gārhapatya containing either rice or barley grains (in the husk), which has the shafts turned to the east or north, which has the yoke joined to it and is covered with mats. While touching the right side of the yoke he mutters 'thou art dhūr (destructive fire), injure the destructive (enemy), destroy him who seeks to destroy us and whom we seek to destroy'. He touches the left shaft and mutters the mantra 'thou art of the gods (i. e. belongest to them), thou art the purest (or the most generous), the fullest, the dearest, the best carrier, the best summoner of the gods'. He places (firmly touches with) his right foot on the left wheel (of the śakaṭa) with 'Viṣṇu traversed thee'. He mounts the cart with his left foot with 'thou art an unbent receptacle of havis, mayst thou be strong and not 2301. The mantras required here occur in Tai. S. I. 1. 4 and Vāj. S. I. 7 ff and so are not indicated in each place. 'देवतार्थत्वेन पृथक्करणं निर्वापः' com. on Āp. I. 17, 10.

2302. Whenever any mantra referring to evil spirits and the like is uttered, one has to touch water thereafter before doing anything else. Vide 'रौद्रं राक्षसमासुरमाभिचरगिकं मन्त्रमुक्त्वा विध्यमात्मानं चालभ्योपस्पृशेत्' कात्या. I. 10. 14.

break (or bend)'. He makes an opening by removing the mats covering the śakaṭa and looks at the corn to be used for making the puroḍāśa and at the mats while repeating twice the mantra 'I look at thee with the eye of Mitra, do not be afraid, do not tremble, I shall not injure thee'. He touches the corn (to be used for puroḍāśa) with 'may you sustain strength', then touches his own heart with 'put milk in me' and touches water. Then he throws aside a blade of grass or clod of earth with 'warded off is the evil spirit', touches water and repeats the Daśahotṛ mantras.²³⁰³ He places the two pavitras in the winnowing basket (silently), takes one handful of the grain (from the cart) with 'may the five fingers give you for protection, and not to the enemy' (Maitrāyaṇīya S. I. 1. 5), puts (empties) the handful in the sruc (agnihotrahavanī) and puts in the winnowing basket (on which the two pavitras have been kept) four handfuls of grain by means of the agnihotra-havanī, three with the mantra (repeated thrice) 'at the command of god Savitṛ, with the arms of Ásvins, with the hand of Pūṣan I take out thee that art dear to Agni'²³⁰⁴ and the fourth silently. Jai. (IX. 1. 36-37) concludes that this mantra is the same even in all modifications of the darśapūrṇamāsa and Śabara explains 'savituḥ prasave' as meaning 'urged by the yajamāna' (or when the sun rises), 'ásvins' as meaning the sacrificer and his wife (as they make a gift of the horse in agnyādheya) and pūṣan as meaning 'yajamāna' himself (who supports all). In Jai. XI. 4. 44-45 it is stated that the mantra for nirvāpa 'devasya tvā', the mantra for cutting off barhis (barhirdevasadanam dāmi) are to be repeated and not to be uttered only once. In Jai. V. 2. 4-5 it is established that all the saṃskāras are to be performed on all the grains after four handfuls are taken and not on each handful as it is taken out. The sacrificer invokes with a mantra while the adhvaryu is making the nirvāpa 'I call here Agni, the hotṛ and the gods that are well disposed to sacrifice; may the gods, pleased in mind, come and may they partake of this my offering.' Having finished the taking out of grains in 2303. The 'daśahotṛ' mantras are 'चित्तिः सुक्लं चित्तमाज्यं' &c. quoted in note 2247 above.

2304. If the puroḍāśa is meant for Agni and Soma (jointly) as in pūrṇamāsa, the words 'agnīṣomābhyām juṣṭam' will be substituted for 'agnaye juṣṭam' and the names of other deities in the cases of other puroḍāśas. Vide Kāt. II. 3. 21, Āp. I. 18. 1, Jaimini IX. 1. 38-39.

four handfuls, (the adhvaryu) throws on them some more grains with his hand. If no cart is available, he keeps an earthen vessel on the sphya placed on the altar with its tip to the north or east and takes out the grains from that vessel (this is the modern practice) and then removes the wooden sword from underneath it. The same procedure is followed in the case of puroḍāśas for other deities. The adhvaryu touches the grains taken out with 'this of the gods' and touches the rest (remaining in the śakaṭa or vessel) with 'this is ours together (with the gods).' He invokes the grains taken out with 'I take (or invoke) thee for increase and not for malevolence.' He moves out of the mats covering the cart (or from near the vessel) taking with him the śūrpa with 'thee I release from the fetters of Varuṇa' (compare Maitrāyaṇi S. I. 1. 5). He looks at the sacrificial ground, the fires, the utensils, the priests with 'may I see heaven' and at the āhavanīya with 'the light of Vaiśvānara (Agni).' He gets down from the cart with 'may the posts (or mansions) of Heaven and Earth, stand firm' (if corn is taken from a vessel he only mutters these words). He invokes the grains that have fallen down (when four handfuls were taken out) with 'to Heaven and Earth, svāhā' and goes near the gārhapatya with 'follow wide space (or sky).' He puts down the śūrpa (containing the corn taken out) near the gārhapatya to its west (or near that fire on which in that particular rite he has to bake the cake) with 'I make you sit on the lap of Aditi'²³⁰⁵ and consigns it to the protection of that deity (for which the cake is meant) with 'O fire! protect the sacrificial material.'²³⁰⁶ The adhvaryu pours water in the (agnihotra havanī) ladle to which the awns of the rice or barley grains stick and purifies it thrice with the two pavitrās (blades of kuśa) held in the hands and with the mantra 'may god Savitr &c.' (vide p. 1024 above) and invokes it with 'may the divine waters' &c. Then the adhvaryu seeks the permission of the brahmā priest with 'Brahman! shall I sprinkle' (with holy water the sacrificial material). The brahmā priest mutters 'sprinkle the sacrifice, sustain these deities &c.' and loudly says 'Yes, do sprinkle.' The adhvaryu then sprinkles water thrice, once with the mantra 'at the command of Savitr I sprinkle thee that are dear to Agni' (or Agni and Soma or other deity as the case may be) and twice silently. One should so sprinkle that drops of water may not fall on the fire. He then upturns the sacrificial utensils (i. e. instead of their mouths being down, their mouths are now upturned) and sprinkles them thrice with water with 'may you become pure for divine rite, for worship of gods'.²³⁰⁷ The rest of the water taken for sprinkling is placed to the east of the gārhapatya (in a śruc). It is stated by Jaimini (IX. 1. 2-3) that the prokṣaṇa of the mortar and pestle or the mill-stones has an unseen spiritual result (apūrva).

The adhvaryu sits to the west of the gārhapatya, takes hold of the black antelope skin lying on the altar with 'thou art the whirl of the wind' and shakes it thrice on the utkara holding it in such a way that the neck portion is up and the hairy portion inside (towards himself) with 'destroyed is the evil spirit, destroyed are the enemies'. To the west of the utkara he spreads the antelope²³⁰⁸ skin with its neck portion westwards (Śat. Br. I. 1. 4. 5) and its hairy portion upwards with "thou art the skin of Aditi". The portion²³⁰⁹ of the skin near the anus (of the animal) is twisted below the hairless part and both parts are held together with 'may the earth know thee'. While still touching the skin he places the mortar on it with 'thou art the adhiṣaṇa (the utensil for pressing or beating the grains) made of a tree, may the skin of Aditi know 2308. The black antelope skin has been throughout the ages a symbol of holiness and vedic culture. It is therefore that āryāvarta was defined, as shown above (p. 13), as that territory where the black antelope wanders naturally. Vide Sat. Br. I. 1. 4. 1-2, where yajña is said to have escaped from the gods and wandered about as a black antelope and the white, black and yellow hairs of the antelope are said to represent respectively Ṛg, Sāman and Yajus. On account of its holiness, the antelope skin is employed for husking and bruising the grains (from which the cake is to be made).

2309. प्रति त्वा पृथिवी वेत्तिरिति पुरस्तात्पृथिवीं भसदुपसमस्यति। सत्याषाढ I. 5; आप. I. 19. 5 has पुरस्तात् ... स्यति. thee'. Holding the mortar (ulūkhala) by the left hand he pours into its mouth the sacrificial materials (unhusked grains of rice or barley) thrice with 'thou art the body of Fire,²³¹⁰ thou art a prompter of speech, I take thee for the enjoyment of the gods' and a fourth time silently. He takes the pestle with 'thou art a stone (hard like a stone), though produced from a tree; mayst thou so strike this sacrificial material for the gods that it will be enjoyable to them!' and beats the grains in the mortar thrice with 'may I strike the evil spirit, the enemy of heaven, away!' (the mantra is recited only once according to Jai. XI. 4. 42). After striking thrice the adhvaryu utters a summons to haviṣkṛt, with 'come, O Haviṣkṛt' (repeated thrice)²³¹¹. When the grains begin to be husked the adhvaryu utters a call to Āgnīdhra 'strike loudly'. The āgnīdhra takes kuṭaru (aśman, a stone) with 'thou art a stone, thou art one that makest a hymn of praise (or glory)' and he strikes therewith the large mill-stone (dṛṣad) that is placed on the altar (twice, once with mantra and once silently) and the smaller one (upalā) once with 'proclaim food (to the gods), proclaim strength; may you (all sacrificial utensils) proclaim that (the food) is full of excellent flavour; may we conquer the hordes (of enemies) by this noise'. The āgnīdhra may 2310. As fire blazes forth when oblations are thrown on it, the grains (from which a cake is to be prepared) are said to be the body of fire. One can speak loudly only if one is well-fed and so the grains are said to be prompters of speech.

2311. The praiṣa (summons) is हविष्कृदेहि हविष्कृदेहि हविष्कृदेहि. The figure 3 is used to show that the preceding letter is pluta (of three moras). Haviṣkṛt literally means 'one who separates the grains from the husks.' According to Tai. Br. III. 2. 5 the summons is addressed to many divine haviṣkṛts 'हविष्कृदेहित्याह य एव देवानां हविष्कृतः। तान् ह्वयति विह्वयति त्रिषस्या हि देवाः.' In the case of the brāhmaṇa sacrificer the call for the person who separates is हविष्कृदेहि, for a kṣatriya sacrificer हविष्कृदागहि, for a vaiśya हविष्कृदाद्व and for the śūdra हविष्कृदाधाय. Or the first call may be employed for all. Vide Satapatha I. 1. 4. 12, Āp. I. 19. 9-10, Sat. I. 5. According to some हविष्कृत् is पर्जन्य. The com. on Āp. explains that 'śūdra' here stands for निषादस्थपति. हविष्कृत् means 'the person who prepares the havis' as also the formula used to call him. On the Vedic text 'हविष्कृदेहीति त्रिरवगन्नाह्वयति' Jaimini concludes that this sentence contains an injunction to summon thrice the wife or other separator of grains (III. 2. 5-9). Jai. (XII. 2. 11) establishes that there is no haviṣkṛt call in savanīya puroḍaśas. According to Sat. Br. I. 1. 4. 13 the wife formerly rose to the haviṣkṛt call but in its time either the wife or the āgnīdhra priest rose.

strike silently with the yoke-pin (śamyā) instead of using a stone (Āp. I. 20. 4). He repeats this thrice (i. e. striking with a stone or yoke-pin is done nine times in all). After this the sacrificer's wife or some one else (such as the āgnīdhra) threshes the grains in the mortar (Kāt. II. 4. 14). Jai. (XI. 1. 27) states that the beating has a seen purpose (viz. removal of husk) and so it is to be continued as long as required for effecting that purpose. Jai. (IV. 2. 26) further lays down that the Vedic sentence 'vrihīn-avahanti' is a restrictive injunction (niyamavidhi) in that, when unhusking can be effected either by using the mortar and pestle or by some other method (such by using the nails) it restricts one to the former method. The adhvaryu then holds the winnowing basket near the mouth of the mortar to its east or north with the words 'thou art grown by rain'²³¹² (as it is made of bamboo) and touches the beaten grains (to be used for puroḍāśa) with 'you are grown by rain'. He then puts with his hand the beaten grains into the winnowing basket with 'may (the śūrpa) know thee' (the grains as its own). Holding the śūrpa over the utkara he thrice winnows the grains and frees them from the husk (which falls on the utkara) with 'thrown away is the evil spirit, thrown away are the enemies' (i. e. the husks are meant to be the portion of evil spirits). He makes the husks sticking to the śūrpa fall on the utkara with 'blown away are the enemies'. He puts the husks from the place of the utkara over the (middle) potsherd (on which the cake is to be baked) and places them (the husks) underneath the black antelope skin in its north-west corner with 'thou art the portion of evil spirits'. He does not look at these husks. He presses down with his hand the spot where the husks are kept with 'pressed down is the evil spirit'. He touches water, sprinkles the potsherd (on which the husks were) with water and keeps the potsherd in its place. He separates the husked and unhusked grains with 'may the wind separate you.' He then pours out the grains of rice from the śūrpa in the pot with the words 'may the god Savitr with his golden hands (rays) accept you'. He then takes them and pours them in the mortar and issues a direction (praiśa) to the sacrificer's wife to make the rice free from the thin coating of husk.²³¹³ The wife or some one else or a dāsi (a maid-servant) does the threshing several times, then she hands over the pestle to the agnidhra who beats with the pestle the grains and then the wife does the final beating with 'may you become pure for the gods, shine for the gods, purify for the gods'. The adhvaryu puts the kaṇas (little particles of rice grains) separated from the polished grains of rice in a vessel, cleanses the polished grains that are in the śūrpa with water. That portion which remains after the grains are beaten thrice is made to flow towards the utkara with the water (collected in another vessel) that is used in washing the polished grains with 'this is the portion of evil spirits. May the waters carry it forward from this place, svāhā', the water being also poured inside the vedi. Then he repeats the whole procedure about the black antelope skin from its being taken up to its being spread already described. Then the adhvaryu places the yoke-pin (śamyā) with its head (kumba, thick part) to the north on the antelope skin with 'thou art the support of the heavenly world'; he establishes²³¹⁴ the larger mill-stone (drṣad) with its face to the east on the śamyā in such a way as to cover the śamyā with its western half with 'thou art intelligence (though) made of a stone; may the support of heaven know thee'; then he places the smaller mill-stone on the larger one with 'thou art intelligence (though) a child of the mountain; may the drṣad know thee'. The adhvaryu then bends and looks at the polished grains that are in the śūrpa with 'you are honeyed rays'. He spreads the polished grains on the larger mill-stone thrice with 'at the command of god Savitr.....hands of Pūṣan' (vide p. 1024 for the omitted words). I spread you, you are corn, satiate the gods' and once silently. He draws the smaller mill-stone over the grains to the east with 'to thee for prāṇa'²³¹⁵, to the west with 'to thee for apāna', and holds it firmly in the middle of the lower mill-stone with 'to thee for vyāna'. Ultimately he grinds towards the east with 'I hold this (smaller mill-stone) for the life (of the sacrificer) in a long and continuous series²³¹⁶ of actions (here grinding)'. Thereafter he continuously grinds the grains at his pleasure. He throws the ground grains from the larger mill-stone with the smaller mill-stone on to the antelope skin with 'May God Savitr with his golden hands (rays) accept you' and bends down to look at the ground grains with 'I look at you with an unimpaired eye.' He then issues a direction to the wife 'grind (or pound) without scattering (the grains away from the larger mill-stone or from the antelope skin) and make them into fine flour.' Either the wife grinds or a maid-servant (dāsl) may do so (Āp. I. 21. 8-9); and then keeps aside the well-ground flour in a well-known place. The adhvaryu heats on the gārhapatya water called *madanti*²³¹⁷ brought from the prapītā water. The offerings (of cooked vegetable food) are cooked either on the gārhapatya or on the āhavanīya fire.

2312. The word वृद्ध is employed in all these mantras for attaining prosperity. Vide Tai. Br. III. 2. 5 'वर्षवृद्धा वा ओषधयः । वर्षवृद्धा इषीकाः समृद्ध्यै.' Jaimini IV. 1. 26 has a discussion on the placing of husks or the potsherd on which the puroḍāśa is to be baked.

The adhvaryu, after sitting to the west of the gārhapatya, takes the upaveśa with 'thou art dhṛṣṭi (bold one), give brahma (holy food?).' He separates two burning coals from the western portion of the gārhapatya fire with the upaveśa and keeps them on the eastern side of the gārhapatya mound itself. He casts outside one of the two coals to the north-west of the gārhapatya with 'O Fire! Dash aside the fire that eats (cooks) raw food (not cooked in accordance with śāstra); and forbid that fire that eats flesh (cooks ordinary meat food).' He then touches water, places the remaining coal on that spot on the west (of the gārhapatya mound where he has to place the potsherds) with 'bring that fire that worships the gods.' He then places the middle one²³¹⁸ (of the eight potsherds) thereon with 'thou art firm, make the earth firm, strengthen life, progeny and surround the sacrificer with his kinsmen.' He lays a 2316. Or प्रसिति may refer to the skin (vide Uvaṭa on Vāj. S. I. 20 where this mantra occurs).

2317. According to Āp. I. 23. 24 the kapālas are first arranged (kapālopadhāna) and then the madanti water is heated, while Satyāṣādha (I. 5-6) reverses these processes.

2318. According to Vaikhāṇasa the southern of the two burning coals is cast aside. Vide com. on Satyāṣādha I. 6. p. 133. According to Āp. I. 22. 2 the coal that is not cast away is placed to the south on the gārhapatya mound and thereon the first potsherd is laid.

burning coal on that potsherd with 'burnt is the evil spirit, burnt are the enemies.' The potsherds, whether eight, eleven or more or less, are arranged on the gārhapatya mound. To the east of the central one he places a kapāla with 'thou art the supporter, make the aerial space firm, strengthen prāṇa and apāna, surround the sacrificer with his kinsmen.' Then a third is placed to the east of the 2nd with 'thou art dharuṇa (supporter), support heaven, the eye, the ear and surround &c.' He places the 4th kapāla to the south-east with 'thou art dharma (supporter), support the directions, the home, progeny, surround &c.'; he places the fifth to the south-west with 'thou art the strength (or host) of maruts'; he places the 6th in the north-west with 'thou art a restrainer, support the directions, wealth, prosperity, surround &c.'; he places the 7th to the north-east with 'I place thee that art uninjured from all the directions for the reconciliation (or love) of all kinsmen'; and lastly the remaining one to the north with 'thou art cit ²³¹⁹ (intelligence).'

2319. The arrangement of eight potsherds according to Sat. I. 6 is shown in the diagram. The arrangement according to Āp. I. 22-23 and Kāt. II. 4. 27-34 somewhat differs. The com. on Kāt. II. 4. 37 explains how eleven potsherds are to be arranged and how less or more are to be arranged. Eggeling summarises the com. in S. B. E. vol. 12 p. 34n. Vide Tai. S. I. 1. 7 for ध्रुवमसि &c.

In modern times many agnihotrits do not generally employ eight or eleven potsherds but employ one earthen brick (that would have the shape of the kapālas when placed together), on which lines are scratched to indicate the number of kapālas. Then taking coals from the gārhapatya he spreads the coals on the potsherds (whether 8, 11 or more or less) with the veda bunch repeating for each potsherd 'may you be heated by the tapas of Bhṛgu and Āṅgirasas.'

The adhvaryu heats the pātri (the puroḍāśa pātri, according to Kāt. II. 6. 49) that is washed with water on the fire on which the cake is to be baked and when it is heated and slightly cooled he places the pavitras on it and pours on to it across the pavitras the flour (of ground and bruised grains) from the black antelope skin with the yajus mantra ²³²⁰ 'devasya tvā ... agnaye juṣṭam sṣṛhvapāmi' thrice and once silently. While pouring the ground grains he restrains his speech and gives up the restraint only when he spreads holy ashes over the puroḍāśa (vide below). He purifies the flour by moving forwards and backwards and raising up the two pavitras (darbha blades) the tips of which are turned northwards thrice (i. e. he performs utpavana) once with the mantra 'haryos-tvā vārābhīyāṃ-ut-punāmi' or with the mantra 'devo vaḥ' (vide note 2291 above). He takes in the sruva ladle water from the prapītā water, and supporting it on the veda bunch pours that water on the flour with a mantra 'waters have joined with waters &c.' (Tai. S. I. 1. 8. 1) and also pours thereon the hot water from the madantī vessel with the mantra ²³²¹ 'you are generated from waters' and mixes the flour through and through on all sides with the water from left to right with 'may you be well mixed up with water' (Tai. S. I. 1. 8. 1). He stirs and mixes the flour and water with the mekṣaṇa ²³²² with 'I mix thee together for generation', and makes a ball (of the flour) with 'thou art the head of the sacrifice'. He then divides the ball into two parts with 'may you (two) become separate according to the respective shares (of the deities)'. He makes two balls of equal size from the dough and touches the two separately with 'this for Agni' and 'this for Agni and Soma.'²³²³ From the group of potsherds to the south he removes the burning coals with the veda bunch with 'Here do I remove the face from the approaching (or attacking) army' and then removes the coals also from the group of potsherds that are to the north. Taking the ball of flour that is to be placed on the southern potsherds with 'thou art the head of the sacrifice' he bakes the ball with 'thou art heat and bestower of all life' and similarly bakes the other ball on the northern group of potsherds in the same way.²³²⁴ He makes the cake assume the shape of a tortoise, but its back should be neither too high nor too low like an apūpa and the cake should be as large as the hoof of a horse.²³²⁵ He spreads the cake so that it covers all the potsherds with 'may thou spread wide' (i. e. have progeny &c.). He puts water in the vessel (with the water from which the flour was mixed up) and sweeps the surface of the cake from left to right with his wet hand in such a way that the cake will have a skin-like continuous surface with 'mayst thou take on a skin'. He passes a burning firebrand thrice round each cake with 'vanished is the evil spirit, vanished are the enemies'. He applies over the cakes the flames of burning darbhas with 'may the god Savitrī bake thee in the kindled (fire) called nāka'. He applies heat by passing round the cakes burning fire-brands with 'may fire not burn thy body! O Fire, protect the offering'. He spreads over the cake ashes in which there are also burning coals with 'mayst thou be connected with prayer'. The adhvaryu issues a direction (to the āgnidhra) 'bake the cakes without burning them' and here he gives up the restraint of speech (that was imposed as stated above).

He heats with a burning firebrand the water used for wiping the fingers and for scouring the vessels and draws with the sphya to the west of the āhavanīya (or gārhapatya) three lines

(Tai. S. I. 1. 8. 1).²³²⁶

To the west of the āhavanīya he constructs a vedi, which is in length as much as the height of the sacrificer or which is as long as required for one's purpose and which has curved sides.²³²⁷ The sacrificer repeats a verse 'I make a mansion for him &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6) and touches the spot where the vedi is to be made. The adhvaryu sweeps the spot of the vedi with the veda bunch once with the mantra 'they knew the vedi by means of the veda bunch &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 3. 9) and twice silently before the dust and weeds are removed.²³²⁸ The yajamāna invokes the vedi when it is being swept by repeating certain verses viz. 'you, a young lady, with four tufts of hair &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The adhvaryu takes the sphya 2326. The story of Ekata, Dvita and Trita who are called āpya occurs in Tai. Br. III. 2. 8. In the Rg. we frequently come across Trita, a devotee of Indra, who is there sometimes called Āptya. Vide Rg. I. 105. 9, VIII. 12. 16, VIII. 47. 13. Trita is said to be the scer of Rg. IX. 102 and X. 1-7.

II. 6. 2-10 the vedi should be 4 aratnis on the west side and 3 on the east, three finger breadths deep, should slope towards the east or north, should be contracted in the middle, the corners of its eastern side (called aṁśas, shoulders) should envelope the āhavanīya mound and all the herbs growing thereon and the roots should be uprooted. The vedi is deemed to have the shape of a young woman with broad hips (the two corners of the west side are called śroni) and a slender waist and verses are repeated which describe it in terms of a well-decked young lady. 'पुरस्ताद्दीप्यसी पश्चात्पथीयसी मध्ये संनततरा भवति' आप. II. 3. 2. In the figure here the vedi is away from the gārhapatya. This is so for those who follow the sūtra of Āpastamba. For those who follow Satyāśadha the vedi begins much nearer to the gārhapatya than is seen in the figure here and the dakṣiṇāgni is also nearer the gārhapatya.

The adhvaryu strikes the vedi with the sphya a second time and a third time and the same procedure is followed by him and by the āgnīdhra as at the first striking except that one mantra is different for each priest at each of the two strikings. The adhvaryu strikes with the sphya a fourth time but silently and all actions of the first striking are repeated but without mantras. The adhvaryu removes all the remnants of the darbhas from the vedi, the yajamāna recites the invocatory verse 'I cut off the head' &c. and the āgnīdhra covers a fourth time with his hands with 'may Araru not spring upwards to thy heaven'. The adhvaryu then draws with the sphya on the vedi a line from the south corner of the west side of the vedi towards the east up to the southern shoulder (on the east side of the vedi) with²³³³ 'may the Vasus enfold you with the Gāyatrī metre'. He draws a line on the western side of the vedi towards the north with 'may the Rudras enfold thee with the Triṣṭubh metre' and draws a line from the northern corner of the west side towards the east with 'may the Ādityas enfold thee with the Jagatī metre'. While this is being done the yajamāna mutters a verse 'O Bṛhaspati, envelope the vedi &c.'. 'परिगृह्णाति परि समन्तात्स्वयेन रेखाकरणादिना इयती वेदिरिति ज्ञापनार्थं परिगृह्णाति' com. on Kāt. II. 6. 25. The enveloping with lines may be done up to the middle of the vedi or up to the shoulders (the corners of the east side of the vedi) or up to the āhavanīya mound. पूर्वपरिग्रह (or-परिग्राह) and उत्तरपरिग्रह or-परिग्राह are technical expressions, the first refers to the actions done from enveloping with the mantra to Vasus up to the Āgnīdhra digging the vedi and levelling it. 'पूर्वं परिग्रहमित्यस्य कर्मणः संज्ञा संस्पृहकारार्था ।... जागतेन-त्युत्तरतः उत्तरओजोरारभ्य उत्तरपार्श्वे पुरस्ताद्वेदिमध्ये यावत् अंसपर्यन्तमाहवनीयान्तं वा परिग्रहणं कार्यम् ।' com. on Kāt. II. 6. 25. पूर्वपरिग्राह is somewhat like the first rough plan and उत्तरपरिग्राह conveys the idea of final completion.

or to the āgnīdhra or to the attendants if any) 'O men! make this vedi and make it occupied by the Vasus, Rudras, Ādityas &c.' (Kāṭhaka Sam. I. 9). The āgnīdhra digs up with the sphya the upper layer of dust with 'Araru has been struck off from the earth, bring here him who worships the gods' and carries the dust so dug towards the utkara. When this is being done the sacrificer recites two texts. The āgnīdhra digs the ground from west to east for making the vedi with 'at the prompting of God Savitr, the worshippers do their work'. Whatever roots remain in the ground he removes with the sphya, and all dust that remains he removes to the utkara. The adhvaryu addresses the brahmā priest 'O brahman! shall I undertake the further enfolding of the vedi'. The brahmā priest mutters a mantra 'O Bṛhaspati, enfold the vedi &c.' and loudly replies, 'Yes (om), do enfold'. He enfolds the vedi from the south, west, and north respectively²³³⁵ with 'thou art ṛta (right), thou art the abode of ṛta, thou art the glory of ṛta'. The yajamāna mutters while this is being done a verse 'O Bṛhaspati! enfold the vedi' (same as the one recited by the brahmā above). The adhvaryu says 'thou art dhā (support of the havis), thou art svadhā (the source of pinḍas offered to Manes), thou art the wide earth, thou art rich' and makes the surface of the vedi level by means of the sphya from east to west. The yajamāna invokes the vedi with a mantra 'Having become the earth, it nourished greatness &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The adhvaryu addresses a mantra²³³⁶ (Tai. S. I. 1. 9) to the vedi 'O virapśin! Before the cruel (Araru) creeps out &c.', holds the sphya in a slanting position in a spot which is beyond $\frac{1}{3}$ of the length of the vedi from its western side and issues a direction²³³⁷ 'obtain or set down the 2335. The words ऋतमसि, ऋतसद्वनमसि, ऋतभ्रीरसि are addressed to the vedi. They are from Tai. S. I. 1. 9.

2336. According to Śāyana, विरपिन्द् is irregular for विरपिन्नि addressed to the vedi and means 'having priests.'

2337. The प्रेष is प्रोक्षणीरासादयेष्मावर्हिरुपसादय जुवं च जुचश्च संमृद्धिं पत्नीं संनद्धाज्येनोदेहीति । Vide Tai. Br. III. 2. 9 and Sat. I. 6. p. 153. According to Sat. this is addressed to himself by the adhvaryu who does all these actions in order. According to Kat. II. 6. 36-37 the direction is addressed to āgnīdhra and according to the com. on Āp. II, 3. 11 there is an option. Even if the yajamāna has two or more wives the direction is still पत्नीं संनद्ध, since the rule is that there is no water for sprinkling, put down the idhma (fuel-sticks) and barhis (kuśa grass), clean the sruva and the sruc ladles, gird up the wife (of the sacrificer), and come out with clarified butter.' Then the āgnīdhra (or adhvaryu) places two pavitras inside the agnihotrahavaṇī (sruc), pours water into it, draws the sphya in a slanting position (from the spot where it had been held fixed) a short distance to the north thereby causing a furrowed line on the vedi, holds the sphya in the left hand inside the vedi and the agnihotrahavaṇī in the right hand, drops a little water from the agnihotrahavaṇī on to the furrowed line made by the sphya and places the agnihotrahavaṇī (containing the water) on the spot where the sphya had been originally held fixed slantingly with 'O abode of ṛta.' The adhvaryu brings to his mind him whom the yajamāna hates. When the prokṣaṇī waters are being placed the yajamāna mutters a mantra. The adhvaryu throws the sphya in such a way that it falls on the utkara with 'thou art produced from a tree, thou hast a hundred points, thou art the death of the enemy.' Then seizing the sphya with his fist by the bulging part thereof he draws it towards the east from the utkara. He washes his hands on the utkara and also the sphya with water but does not touch with his bare hand the point of the sphya (i. e. he cleans the other parts of the sphya with his hand by pouring the water thereon and cleans the point by only pouring water thereon). To the north of the āhavanīya he places with both hands the idhma and barhis, the latter to the north of the former. The sphya is placed near the pranītā waters to their west (Kāt. II. 6. 43).

With the ends of the blades cut off in making the veda bunch he (the āgnīdhra or adhvaryu himself) wipes the sruva and the three ladles viz. juhū, upabbṛt and dhruvā, invokes them with 'you are not sharpened (and yet) you destroy our enemies.' He takes up the sruva and the sruc ladles with 'Agni summons you, who are filled with butter, for the worship ṛha in the model sacrifice. Vide Jaimini IX. 3. 20. The next sūtra extends the same rule to vikṛti sacrifices also. In XII. 1. 29 Jaimini establishes that at the time of dīkṣā in a Soma sacrifice the wife is girt up with the yoktra, a fresh girding up is hence not necessary in the prāyaṇīyā and other iṣṭis that are constituent elements in śomayāga. Jaimini I. 4. 11 explains that the word prokṣaṇī is used here in its etymological sense.

of the gods,' heats them on the āhavāniya or gārhapatya with 'burnt is the evil spirit, burnt are the enemies, I heat you with the very dazzling light of Agni.' He cleans the sruva, the bowl by rubbing its inside several times and its outside on all sides once with the tips ²³³⁸ (of the vedaparivāsanāni) and its rod with the roots (of the portions of the cut blades) with 'May I not brush the place of cows ! I clean thee that art strong (or possessed of food) and that subdues enemies ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 1). He cleans the juhū ladle, the bowl by rubbing its inside several times from west to east with the tips (of the cut portions), its outside from east to west with the middle portions and its rod with the roots with 'may I not brush out speech and life-breath, I clean thee &c.' He cleans the upabhr̥t, the inside from east to west (as for sruva), the outside from west to east with the middle portions and the rod with the roots with ' may I not rub out the eye and the ear, I clean thee &c.' He cleans the dhruvā ladle as he did the sruva, with the difference that the mantra is ' may I not rub out progeny and home &c.' He does not allow a cleaned vessel to come in contact with one that is not cleaned, but if they are brought in contact he again heats the vessel (already cleaned) and cleans it again. He takes up the vessel called prāsitraharaṇa, ²³³⁹ heats it on the fire (but without mantras) and cleans it, the bowl with the tips (of cut blades) on all sides from the outside to the inside and the rod with the roots 'with may I not brush out food, progeny and prosperity, I clean thee that art strong and subdues enemies '. According to Āp. II. 4. 10 and com. on Sat. I. 7 p. 158 the sruva ladles and the prāsitraharaṇa are laid on darbhas in front of the utkara or to its west on the north side of the vedi. He sprinkles with water the cut portions of the veda bunch with which the vessels were cleaned and offers them into that fire ²³⁴⁰ (gārhapatya or āhavanīya) on which the vessels were heated with 'this artistic thing (the darbha that springs from water) spread down from heaven, it resorts to the spaces of the earth; we destroy our enemy with it that has a thousand shoots, svāhā!' (Tai. Br. III. 3. 2).

Then comes patnīsaṁnahana (girding up of the sacrificer's wife).

The āgnīdhra takes up the veda bunch, the āyasthālī, ²³⁴¹ yoktra, and the two darbha blades used as pavitra. The wife (of the sacrificer), while sitting to the south-west of the gārhapatya with knee raised up or standing is girt up by the āgnīdhra (by the adhvaryu, according to com. on Āp. II. 5. 6) with the yoktra (cord of muñja grass) with the mantra, 'I hoping for a favourably disposed mind, progeny, good luck, beautiful body and observing the vratas of Agni, gird up myself for meritorious actions' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 1). In modern practice the wife girds up her waist with the yoktra herself. He does not gird her up over the garment worn round the waist but inside it (Āp. II. 5. 5 says there is an option). The yoktra has a loop at one end in which the other end is inserted and the cord is passed round the waist of the wife twice, a knot like that of the top-knot (śikhā of a man) is made to the north of the navel with 'may Pūṣan tie a knot for you' and it is drawn to the south of the navel from left to right. She waits upon (does adoration to) the gārhapatya by standing and saying 'O fire, Lord of the house, call me near'. Standing to the west of the gārhapatya she pays 2340. According to Kāt. II. 6. 50 the cut blades used in scouring the vessels are thrown on the utkara. Āp. II. 5. 1 gives an option.

2341. The āyasthālī is a pot in which clarified butter is taken with a mantra after the pavitra blades are placed therein and from which the sruc ladles are filled. The yoktra is a triple (having three strands) cord of muñja grass with which the waist of the sacrificer's wife is girt with a mantra by the āgnīdhra at the direction of the adhvaryu in sacrificial rites. The wife is made fit for participation in the sacrifice by being girt up. Vide Tai. Br. III. 3. 3 'आशास्तानां सोमनसमित्याह । मेधाशैवेनां केचलीं कृत्वा आशिषा समर्पयति । अग्नेरनुव्रता ... कमित्याह । एतद्वै पत्नियै व्रतोपनयनम् । तेनैवेनां व्रतमुपनयति ।'. According to some (Āp. II. 5. 3) the mantra 'śśāsānā' is recited by the wife. The words in Sat. 1. 7 p. 160 are 'उत्तरतो नाभेर्निष्टक्यं ग्रन्थिं कृत्वा'. निष्टक्यः ग्रन्थिः means शिखाकृतिः ग्रन्थिः (com. on Āp. II. 5.6) i.e. a knot that can be unloosened by untwisting. Girding her up represents making her undergo a vratā for the sacrifice, as stated by the Tai. Br. quoted above.

adoration to the wives of the gods²³⁴² with 'May you wives of the gods summon me near you' and she looks at the same spot (west of gārhapatya and not east) with 'O wife, O wife (of the god)! this is thy world, salutation to thee, do not injure me'. She sits facing the north at a place which is south-west of the gārhapatya with 'May I have no widowed state just as Indrāṇī has none.²³⁴³ May I have good sons like Aditi! O gārhapatya endowed with all means, I sit down near thee for good progeny' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). On sitting down she mutters (japati²³⁴⁴) 'O fire! we, who have virtuous husbands and who have good progeny, who are not treated with contempt, have sat down near thee, that destroyest enemies and that cannot be destroyed (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 1-2); may my sons be destroyers of enemies and my daughter be ruling (a queen); I also am victorious (over my co-wives) and my glory with my husband is highest (Rg. X. 159. 3).' The āgnidhra opens the mouth of the big jar (covered with a piece of cloth or the like) in which ghee has been stored with 'may Pūṣan open thy mouth' and takes from it into another vessel ghee that should be a little more than what would be required in the rite, heats it on the dakṣiṇa fire with 'Viṣṇu traversed this' (Rg. I. 22. 17). He takes up from the spot where all utensils have been placed the ājyasthālī (pot for clarified butter) with 'thou art Aditi, whose pavitra is not cut off' and pours into that pot in which two pavitras are placed plenty of clarified butter²³⁴⁵ 'thou art the milk of the great ones (the cows), the fluid of herbs, I take out from thee that art inexhaustible a portion for the worship of gods (this is the nirvāpa of clarified butter). He melts the butter in the ājyasthālī on the burning coals of the southern portion of the gārhapatya 2342. The region of the wives of the gods is to the west of the gārhapatya.

2343. In Rg. X. 86. 11 (and Tai. S. I. 7. 13. 1) we read इन्द्राणिमासु नारिषु सुभगामहमश्रवम् । न ह्यस्या अपरं च न जरसा मरते पतिर्विश्वस्मादिन्द्र उत्तरः ॥

2344. The com. on Sat. I. 7. p. 161 significantly remarks that the mantras to be repeated by the wife should be learnt by her from her father or husband before agnyūdhāna 'एते मन्त्रा आधानात्पूर्वं पितुः पत्युर्वा सकाशाद्धीत्य प्रयोज्याः'.

2345. The com. on Āp. II. 6. 1 notices that in the absence of ghee made from cow's milk, ghee made from the milk of a she-buffalo or a she-goat may be used as a substitute or even sesame oil. But the mantra is the same (there is no ūha of the words referring to cows that occur in the mantra).

fire with 'to thee for sap', takes it down (from the coals) with 'to thee for strength', holds it over the veda bunch and hands both the pot and the veda bunch to the wife. She first closes her eyes and then holding her breath (opens her eyes and) looks down on the clarified butter with 'thou art the milk of cows; the fluid of herbs, I look on thee for securing good progeny with an invincible eye' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3). The āgnīdhra places the ājyasthālī on the northern portion of the gārhapatya fire and melts it with 'thou art light'; he takes it from the fire with 'to thee for light' and carries it to the south of the āhavanīya with 'follow after light'. He melts it on that fire with 'may Agni not remove thy light'. He takes up the pot and returns by the way he went and places it with a mantra 'thou art the tongue of Agni' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3) to the north of the prokṣaṇī waters on the line drawn with the sphya.

The adhvaryu and the yajamāna both close their eyes, holding their breath, (open their eyes and) look down upon the clarified butter with 'thou art ājya, thou art truth may I partake of thee' (a long mantra from Tai. S. I. 6. 1. 1-2). The adhvaryu purifies (performs utpavana of) the ājya thrice with two pavitras²³⁴⁶ the points of which are held towards the north by continuously carrying them backwards and forwards with 'thou art bright, thou art the flame, thou art light' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3). He performs utpavana of the prokṣaṇī water with 'devo vaḥ savitotpunātu &c.' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3). The adhvaryu fills with the sruva ladle that has no trace of anything sticking to it and that is held in the right hand clarified butter inside the vedi, while holding the sruca together with the veda bunch in the left hand. The juhū ladle is so held that its bowl is alongside of the hollow of the ājyasthālī, that of the upabhr̥t is near the middle of the ājyasthālī and the dhruvā is on the ground. In the juhū and dhruvā four ladlings are made with sruva while in the upabhr̥t eight are made²³⁴⁷, but the upabhr̥t contains the smallest portion of ājya, the juhū contains a good deal and the dhruvā contains 2346. The com. on Sat. I. 7. p. 165 explains how this particular utpavana is done 'आज्यस्याख्यां पवित्रे पश्चाद्भागमारस्य प्राग्भागं नीत्वा पुनः पश्चाद्भागमानीय ततो मन्त्रेणोत्पुनति पुनर्द्विरेवमेव ।'. The Ṛgvedins move the pavitras from the west to the east only.

the largest quantity. When the juhū is being filled the mantras are four 'śukram tvā...grhṇāmi pañcānām tvā...dhartrāya grhṇāmi' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3 and I. 6. 1. 2-3); in the case of the upabṛt the mantras are eight 'pañcānām tvartūnām...suvīryāya tvā...grhṇāmi'; in the case of the dhruvā the mantras are 'suprajāstvāya tvā grhṇāmi.....devatābhyo grhṇāmi' (Tai. S. I. 6. 1. 3). The yajamāna also invokes with the same mantras when the ladling is going on. The adhvaryu removes the ājyasthālī together with the veda and sruva from the vedi, keeps the ājya in some place other than the utkara, invokes the prokṣaṇī waters with 'the divine waters (āpo devīr &c., Tai. S. I. 1. 5. 1) and seeks the permission of the brahmā priest with 'brahman, shall I sprinkle.' When the brahmā says 'yes' he sprinkles thrice the idhma (fire-wood brought, vide p.1014 above), the veda bunch and the vedi, each with a separate mantra (from Tai. S. I. 1. 11. 1). He places the whole bundle of barhis with the knot to the east inside the vedi with a (sautra) mantra 'we had recourse to barhis &c.' and sprinkles the tips, the middle portions and the roots of the barhis respectively with 'to thee for heaven', 'to thee for the aerial region', 'to thee for the earth.' While the sprinkling proceeds the yajamāna repeats a verse 'may the waters and herbs be well disposed to the yajamāna &c.' (Āp. IV. 6. 1). He dips the tips of the barhis in the water contained in the agnihotra-havaṇī and then the roots also. He sprinkles over the knot of the barhis from east to west water from the sruca over which he places his hand (so that water oozes over it from his finger tips) with 'to you for nourishment' (Tai. S. VII. 1. 11). He pours down the remaining prokṣaṇī water from the southern corner (śroṇī) of the west side of the vedi to its north corner with 'svadhā to the pitṛs, mayst thou be strength for the barhiṣad pitṛs, may you (the particles of water) go to the earth with strength' and the yajamāna says 'this is for the Barhiṣad pitṛs.'

Now comes barhirāstarāṇa (strewing the vedi with kuśa grass). He loosens the knot of the bundle of barhis with 'may Pūṣan loosen thy knot'. He takes in his hand the prastara bunch drawing it towards the east slowly from the bundle of barhis (as if towards the āhavanīya) with 'thou art the crest (stūpa) of viṣṇu i. e. yajña (Tai. S. I. 1. 11). With 'I implant prāṇa and apāṇa in the yajamāna' he places the two pavitra blades (used in utpavana above) on the prastara, hands it over to the brahmā priest, who passes it on to the yajamāna who holds it in his hand. He strews darbha^{2347a} grass on the vedi and places the cord that tied the barhis thereon with 'God Barhis! I strew thee that art soft like wool, as a good seat for the gods'. The darbhas are spread in three or five series (or divisions) beginning from the west side of the vedi towards the east (or the reverse according to some) in such a way that the tips of one set that is already spread cover the roots of the next and the grass is so thickly strewn that the ground below cannot be easily seen. When the kuśa grass is being strewn the yajamāna recites a mantra 'O barhis, that are soft like wool, being spread ... place me in heaven &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6), when the vedi is covered with the middle division of the barhis he recites the mantra 'this young lady with four tufts of hair &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6) and when the vedi is completely covered he recites a long passage 'May you be auspicious to me increase food, strength, spiritual lustre, martial brilliance, prosperity, progeny, cattle for me &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6).

He takes out two blades (to be used later) for the anūyājas and keeps them separately to the east, feeds the āhavanīya with fire-wood, takes back the prastara from the hand of the yajamāna, and while holding the prastara himself places the three encircling fuel-sticks (paridhi) round the āhavanīya fire. The middle paridhi is placed on darbhas to the west of the āhavanīya with the tip towards the north with²³⁴⁸ 'thou art gandharva &c.'. While the middle paridhi is being placed the yajamāna recites a mantra (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The other two paridhis are laid to the south and north of the āhavanīya place with their tips to the east, the southern one extending a little beyond the āhavanīya place and touching the middle paridhi and the northern one also touches the middle paridhi. The yajamāna repeats two long passages when the southern and northern paridhis are being laid (portions of which are identical with that repeated by the yajamāna for the middle paridhi). The adhvaryu invokes the āhavanīya 'may the sun guard you against all injuries whatever' (Tai. S. I. 1. 11). He places (in the midst of the āhavanīya fire) two samidhs with their ends turned upwards on which the āghāras (will be offered later on), one to the south with the mantra 'O Fire, the wise one, may we kindle thee &c.' (vītihotram tvā kave &c. Rg. V. 26. 3 or Tai. S. I. 1. 11) and the other to the north of it silently. From the midst of the barhis he takes two darbhas of equal length, that have no blade hooting from inside of them; these are called vidhṛti and are laid down on the barhis strewn on the vedi in the middle portion of the latter with their tips turned northwards with 'you two are the regulators of people'. When the vidhṛtis are being laid down the yajamāna repeats a long passage 'I cut off my enemies with the vidhṛtis.....may you support life, progeny and cattle in me' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The adhvaryu keeps the prastara bunch on these two vidhṛtis with 'sit in this abode of Vasus, Rudras and Ādityas' (Tai. S. I. 1. 11) and the yajamāna repeats a mantra 'this prastara is the support of both Prayājas and Anūyājas &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The adhvaryu places the juhū on the prastara in such a way that its rod will be alongside of the roots of the prastara bunch with a mantra.²³⁴⁹ The upabhṛt is placed to the north of the juhū in such a way that its root is very much to the west of the root of the juhū and it is underneath the vidhṛtis, and the dhruvā is placed to the north of the upabhṛt over the vidhṛtis and its root is very much to the west of that of the upabhṛt. The three should not be so placed as to touch each other. The yajamāna repeats three passages (all from Tai. Br. III 7. 6) addressed to the three ladles when they are being placed. The adhvaryu lays down the sruva to the south of the juhū (or to the north of the dhruvā but a little behind its bowl) with 'thou art a bull possessed of strength, I seat thee in the extent of vaṣaṭkāra'. He places the ājyasthālī also in such a spot as space would permit. The yajamāna repeats a mantra for sruva and another for ājyasthālī (Tai. Br. III 7. 6). The adhvaryu invokes the ladles (sruc) with 'these sat in the world of good deeds; O Viṣṇu! protect them, protect the sacrifice and the lord of sacrifice and me who bring sacrifice' (Tai. S. I. 1. 11, Vāj. S. II. 6). He invokes the clarified butter with 'you are all-pervading, belong to Viṣṇu and are the abodes of Prajāpati'. He takes in his hand the ājyasthālī together with the sruva and the veda bunch, removes with the veda bunch the burning coals from the southern puroḍāśa with 'Here do I remove the mouth from the attacking army' and then removes them also from the northern puroḍāśa. He invokes the puroḍāśa with 'O Sun, O Light, shine forth for great vigour.' He spreads a little clarified butter in the puroḍāśapātrī for each of the two cakes with 'I make a happy seat for you, I arrange for a seat full of pleasure with a stream of butter' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5) and drops clarified butter over (i. e. performs abhighāraṇa) the southern puroḍāśa which is intended for Agni with 'May Agni whose source is ghee increase (or be pleased), may he accept the offerings, anoint the holes, anoint the skin; I sprinkle thee that art good looking, that art dear to Agni and that securest wealth with the lustre of cattle (i. e. ghee) for Agni' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5) and drops butter silently on the northern puroḍāśa. If the second offering be sānnāyya (instead of a puroḍāśa) he drops clarified butter over the boiled milk with a mantra 'May that self of yours that has entered cattle...go to the gods and secure heaven for me who am a sacrificer' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He removes the puroḍāśa into the pātrī (vessel) from the potsherds without allowing it to break up into pieces and without making it roll about with 'this baked (puroḍāśa) that is moist and has broad prominences, that is the protector of the world, that is the generator of thoughts (or prayers) comes out for a bath' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He brushes away the ashes (sticking on the back of the puroḍāśa) with the veda bunch and lays it down in the puroḍāśapātrī on the butter that has already been sprinkled over it with 'Sit on that, be firmly placed in nectar, O offering, that art the essence of rice grains,²³⁵⁰ with a favourable mind' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He sprinkles clarified butter over it a second time and keeps it aside with 'mayst thou be strong.'

2347a. According to the Tai. Br. III. 3. 6 barhis represents human beings and the vedi represents the earth. 'बहिः स्तुणाति । प्रजा वै बहिः । पृथिवी वेदिः । प्रजा एव पृथिव्यां प्रतिष्ठापयति ।'. In Tai. Br. III. 3. 6 we have यजमानो वै प्रस्तारः which Jai. I. 4. 23 says is a mere arthavāda.

2348. The mantra for the middle paridhi is गन्धर्वोसि विश्वावसुर्विश्वस्मादीषतो यजमानस्य परिधिरिह ईदितः, that for the southern paridhi is इन्द्रस्य बाह्वरसि दक्षिणो यजमानस्य ... ईदितः, that for the northern one is मित्रावरुणौ त्वोत्तरतः परिधत्तां ध्रुवेण धर्मणा ... ईदितः. These occur in Tai. S. I. 1. 11 and Vaj. S. II. 3.

He sprinkles clarified butter over each of the potsherds (on which the puroḍāśa was baked), counts them and keeps them aside with 'may not prosperity in the form of food and the flavour of earth pass away' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He anoints both the puroḍāśas with butter with 'may god Savitr anoint thee with honey' (the mantra is repeated twice), the upper part being anointed by the sruva ladle with plenty of ghee in such a way that there are no mere drops of ghee on it as there are specks on the back of the tortoise (but the ghee is well spread over the whole surface) and that the lower skin of the puroḍāśa is anointed with ghee by the right hand. He lays down the two puroḍāśas to the west of the sruvas, that for Agni being to the south and the other being to the north with 'may you occupy this loved seat by your lovable lustre.' If sānnāyya is to be offered, he brings together (makes them touch each other) in the middle of the vedi the two jars of it and then keeps them separate, the one containing the boiled milk on the southern corner of the west side of the vedi and that containing curds on the northern corner thereof. When the sānnāyya is being thus placed the yajamāna repeats a verse 'yasta ātmā' &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5) and repeats a mantra (from Tai. Br. III. 7. 6) invoking the puroḍāśa for Agni, that for Agniśoma (or Indra and Agni), the hot milk, the curds (the sānnāyya in cases where it is offered).

2350. Āp. II. 11. 2 says that if the puroḍāśa is made of barley flour he does not repeat the mantra as the word 'rice' occurs there in.

The adhvaryu lays down the veda bunch in front of the dhruvā ladle with 'this veda sought the earth that was concealed &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6), strews darbhas round the corners of the vedi,²³⁵¹ and prepares the seat for the hotṛ which is to the north of the northern 'śroni' of the vedi and the darbhas spread on the seat have their points turned eastwards or northwards. The adhvaryu invites the hotṛ in the words 'O Hotṛ! come'. The hotṛ priest sits down to the north-east of the āhavanīya with face to the east, performs ūcamana with the sacred cord in the upavīta form, enters the sacrificial ground (vihāra) by the way called tīrtha (vide p. 984 above). He enters with his right foot first, plants his heel alongside of the northern śroni and steps upon the barhis (spread on the vedi) with his toes, spreads out the fingers of both hands which he joins together and holds them on a level with his heart, looks straight at the horizon (and neither upwards nor downwards) and stands facing the east. This is always the position of the limbs of the body in the case of the hotṛ unless there be any express direction to the contrary. The adhvaryu takes a samidh from the idhma and issues a direction to the hotṛ 'recite for Agni that is being kindled'. The hotṛ recites 'salutation to the expounder, salutation to the supervisor, salutation to him who reports, who will repeat (or respond to) this? He will repeat this. May the six broad (or great) ones, viz. heaven and earth, day and night, waters and plants save me from sin. Speech has stood firm (and so has) yajña. I shall deal with (i. e. recite) the metres well. I resort to myself so and so (here the hotṛ utters his name in the objective case). In the past and in future, as to things born and to be born I have recourse to (Agni) who is apāvya (?). Bring me the non-cessation of speech'. So saying he contracts his fingers towards himself and then extends them as before by saying 'O fire! make the cattle take delight in me'. (Then he should proceed) 'Heaven and earth are my armour. Fire is my armour, the Sun is my armour and may the intermediate quarters be my armour! O gods! I shall to-day reflect over that highest part of speech, whereby we may vanquish the asuras; O five people, who deserve sacrifices and food accept my offering.'²³⁵² Having finished this japa, the hotṛ sets about repeating the Sāmidhenī verses.²³⁵³ The yajamāna repeats the daśa-hotṛ mantras before the sāmīdhenīs (vide note 2247 for daśahotṛs). First he utters the syllable 'him' thrice (or once) and the mystic words 'bhūr bhuvah svarom' are muttered inaudibly by him.²³⁵⁴ Then come the sāmīdhenī verses. The sāmīdhenī verses are (vide Āśv. I. 2. 7) eleven viz. Rg. III. 27. 1, VI. 16. 10-12, III. 27. 13-15, I. 12. 1, III. 27. 4, V. 28. 5-6. But fifteen sāmīdhenī verses are to be repeated in Darśa-pūrṇamāsa and the number fifteen of the verses is obtained by repeating each of the first (pra vo vājā, Rg. III. 27. 1) and the last verse (ā juhota Rg. V. 28. 6) thrice. They are all to be repeated in the same pitch ²³⁵⁵ (not minding udātta, anudātta or svarita accents) i. e. ekasruti. Jaimini IX. 1. 33 states that whatever rk is the first or last (whether 'pra vo vājā' &c. or any other) is to be repeated thrice (i. e. repetition three times is an attribute due to the place of a verse and it is not an attribute of any particular verse). The syllable 'om' is to be added at the end of each verse and the adhvaryu sitting down near the āhavanīya throws into the āhavanīya fire a samidh the moment 'om' is uttered by the hotṛ at the end of a verse. The sacrificer then utters at each samidh 'agnaya idam na mama'. In this way when eleven samidhs have been offered, all the remaining samidhs (except one kept aside for the anuyājas) are offered into the fire the moment the last verse but one (viz. samiddho agna, Rg. V. 28. 5) or the last verse (ā juhotā, Rg. V. 23. 6) is recited. Āśv. (I. 2. 8-22) gives detailed rules about how these sāmidhenī verses are to be recited. The note below would illustrate the method of their recital. ²³⁵⁶ The hotṛ repeats the nigada 'O fire, you are great, you are brāhmaṇa (the impulse to prayers), you are Bhārata (the sustainer)' in such a way as to join it with the last 'om' repeated after the last sāmidhenī verse and then makes a stop. Then the 2356. The verses are repeated as follows: प्र वो वाजा गानु सुमनयो३ प्र वो वाजा सुमनयो३मग्न आयाहि वीतये सत्सि बर्हिषो३न्तं त्वा यविष्ठचो३ स नः सुवीयो३मीळिन्यो समग्निरिध्यते वृषो३ वृषोऽग्निः ईळतो३ वृषणं त्वा बृहो३मग्निं दूतं सुकतो३ समिध्यमानो ... मीमहो३ समिद्धो वाळसो३मा जुहोता हव्यवाहनो३माजुहोता वाहनो३-माजुहोता वाहनो३मग्ने महानसि &c. 'Om' being added at the end of सुमन्युः it is to be recited as सुमनयो३म् and then it is to be continuously joined on to the next verse viz. the same verse repeated twice again, the 3rd सुमनयो३म् being joined to the verse अग्न आयाहि वीतये Rg. VI. 16. 10. As तं त्वा follows बर्हिषो३म् it is to be pronounced like बर्हिषो३न् तं त्वा and वृषो३म् followed by वृषोऽग्निः makes that म् be pronounced like a nasal ँ. The hotṛ is not to stop (avasāna) or take breath at the end of verses but at the end of the half verses. At the end of the last 'om' of the last verse the nigada अग्ने महौ असि ब्राह्मण भारत is to be joined on to it and then the hotṛ stops at the word 'Bhārata'. The Tai. Br. III. 5. 3 has अग्ने महौ असि ब्राह्मण भारत । असौ असौ । देवेद्धो मन्विद्धः &c.

2352. The passages नमः प्रवक्त्रे नम उपद्रष्ट्रे जुषध्वम् constitute the entire japa which the hotṛ mutters, the last clause being Rg. X. 53. 4. This last is explained in Nirukta III. 8. The words नमः प्रवक्त्रे &c., are a sautra passage (Āśv. I. 2. 1) and have a parallel in Śān. I. 4 'नमोऽग्र्य उपद्रष्ट्रे नमो वायव उपश्रोत्रे नम आदित्यायारुह्यात्रे &c.'

2353. The verses are called Sāmīdhenī because they are repeated when Agni is being kindled or fed with fuel. अग्नेः समिन्धनार्था क्वचः सामिधेन्यः—com. on Āśv. I. 2. 3. Vide Śat. Br. I. 3. 5. 1 इन्धे ह वा एतद्वर्चुरिध्मेनाग्निं तस्मादिध्मो नाम, समिन्धे सामिधेनीभिर्होता तस्मात्सामिधेन्यो नाम ॥ सामिधेनी means समिधमाधानी and is derived from समिध्.

2354. According to Āśv. I. 2. 3-4 the repetition of 'him' thrice and of 'bhūrbhuvahsvārom' are technically called अभिहिङ्कार. Vide Tai. S. II. 5. 7-8, Tai. Br. III. 5. 2, Sat. Br. I. 3. 5-I. 4. 1. Sat. Br. I. 4. 1. 3 states that the word 'him' is uttered inaudibly.

hotṛ invokes the names of the pravara sages²³⁵⁷ of the sacrificer as many as he may have (1, 2, 3 or 5), the most remote one being first uttered, then the more remote and so on. In the case of a kṣatriya or a vaiśya sacrificer, the invocation is made of the pravara sages of the purohita of the sacrificer or of the names 'Mānava, Aila, Paurūravasa' or of 'Mānava' for all in case of doubt (Āśv. I. 3. 3-5). He then proceeds '(Agni) that was kindled by the Gods and by Manu, that was sung by the sages, whom wise men gladdened, that was praised by the sages, that was aroused by prayers, that is offered ghee, the bringer (or leader) of sacrifices, the charioteer of sacrifices, the unobstructed hotṛ, the swift carrier of offerings'. He takes breath here and proceeds 'thou art the mouth and the vessel of the gods, the juhū of the gods, a camasa (cup) with which the gods drink; O fire! as the spokes are centered in the felly, so thou encompasssest the gods, bring the gods to this sacrificer'.²³⁵⁸ Then he calls upon Agni to bring the several deities, viz. Agni, Soma, Agni, Prajāpati, Agni-somau, the ghee-drinking gods and adds 'bring Agni for the hotra (the function or office of hotṛ), bring thy own greatness, O Jātavedas (fire), bring and sacrifice with a 2357. Vide notes 1139-1140 about reciting the names of the pravara sages. For example, if the gotra of the sacrificer is Śāṇḍilya the hotṛ repeats Śāṇḍila, Asita, Devala; if it be Vatsa, he repeats Bhārgava, Cyāvana, Āpnavāna, Aurva, Jāmadagnya. Agni is here invoked to help the sacrificer as the summoner of the gods on this occasion, as he did help the illustrious ancestors of the sacrificer. Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. pp. 479-480 (note) and S. B. E. vol. 12 p. 115 (note) for pravara. It should be remembered that this pravara repetition is part of the nigada. He takes breath at the end of the pravara words. Then follow the words देवेद्धो ... तूर्णिर्हव्यवाद् (Āśv. I. 3. 6). Here he again takes breath. Then come fourteen words आस्पात्र ... परिभूरसि. Then the words आवह देवान् ... यज form the आवाहननिगद.

2358. The Āśv. śr. I. 3. 6 contains the whole formula 'देवेद्धो मन्विद्ध ऋषिष्टुतो विमलुमदितः कविशस्तो ब्रह्मसंक्षितो घृताहवनः प्रणीर्यज्ञानां रथीरध्वराणामतूर्तो होता तूर्णिर्हव्यवाडित्यवसायास्पात्रं जुह्वदेवानां चमसो देवपानोऽसौ इवाग्ने नेमिर्देवास्त्वं परिभूरस्यावह देवान् यजमानायेति प्रतिपद्य देवता द्वितीयया विभक्त्यादेशमादेशमावहेत्यावाहयेत्यादि ह्रावयन्'. This passage from देवेद्धो to यजमानाय and the one in the next note occur in Śān. I. 4-5. The words आस्पात्रं ... यजमानाय are called प्रतिपत्ति and constitute the words of a nirid. Vide Śat. Br. I. 4. 2. 5-16 for the words देवेद्धो ... यजमानाय and their brief explanations.

good offering'. This part of the formula is given below.²³⁵⁹ These are the deities in this invocation in pūrṇamāsa but in the darśeṣṭi, Indrāgni are to be substituted in place of Agniṣoma for him who does not offer sānnāyya and Indra or Mahendra for him who offers sānnāyya and Prajāpati is omitted.

Having thus invoked the deities (i. e. the whole of the invocation up to this is done standing), the hotṛ sits down with knees raised up, removes the kuśa (on the vedi) to its north and measures the space of a span on the vedi with 'Aditi is his mother, do not cut him off from the air,.....with yajña, with vaśatkāra as the thunderbolt I kill him who hates us and whom we hate' (Āśv. I. 3. 22). The yajamāna repeats a verse 'fire in whom offerings have been thrown is kindled &c.' (Kāthaka Sam. IV. 14), when the fire flames up with the fuel-sticks that are offered and another mantra 'Gods and pitrs, whatever I may be I sacrifice &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5) is repeated. He fans after the deities are summoned as above the āhavanīya fire thrice with the veda bunch. He while sitting takes clarified butter from the dhruvā ladle with the sruva, holds it on the veda, passing the sruva over the north-west corner (of the āhavanīya) where the two paridhis meet he pours,²³⁶⁰ while revolving in his mind the mantra 'to Prajāpati Manu, svāhā', a continuous, long and straight stream

I. 3. 6-14 and 22 (and com. on I. 3. 6) and Śat. Br. I. 4. 2. 16-19. The आ in आवह is to be drawn to three moras (i. e. it is कुत) and this is indicated by the figure 3. Vide 'बृहिप्रेष्यश्रौषड्वौषडावहानामादेः' पा. VIII. 2. 91. The god Prajāpati is mentioned inaudibly. The ājyapās are the devatās of prayājas and anuyājas. Vide Śat. Br. I. 4. 2. 17. The words अग्नि ... महिमानावह are for calling Sviṣṭakṛt. In the Tai. S. II. 5. 9. 4. and Tai. Br. III. 5. 3 the last part of the formula is slightly different 'आ चाग्ने देवान्वाह सुयजा च यज जातवेदः'

of clarified butter on the fire bursting into flames in the āhavanīya place towards the south-east and makes all the fuel-sticks (already thrown over the fire) come in contact with (the butter so poured). The yajamāna says 'this is for Prajāpati' and invokes the butter poured as āghāra with 'thou art the mind of Prajāpati, enter into me with mind.' Taking ājya from the ājyasthālī in the sruva he strengthens (or increases or adds to) the dhruvā with 'let the dhruvā be strengthened with ghee &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1). He then issues a direction to the āgnīdhra 'O Āgnīdhra, clean thrice each of the paridhis and the fire.' The āgnīdhra holds the tying cords of the idhma on the sphya and silently cleans (or wipes) the paridhis with them in the order in which they were placed (round the fire) from their roots to the tips i. e. he cleans the middle one first, moving with his right towards the paridhi from the north with his face towards the east; then he cleans the southern one by going to the south in front of the āhavanīya; then he cleans the northern paridhi by going from behind (the west of) the āhavanīya towards the north; then he returns by the way he went to his usual place and wipes the fire thrice, once with the mantra, 'O fire, that securest strength (or food)! I wipe thee.....that eatest food for the sake of food' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6) and twice silently. When about to make the āghāra he folds his hands in adoration to the gods with his fingers to the east in front (i. e. to the east of) the juhū and upabṛ̥t with²³⁶¹ O fire! thou art the world, spread in all directions; O sacrificer (Agni), adoration to thee' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12. 1). He folds his hands towards the south in adoration with 'to the pitṛs, svadhā.' He then touches water and takes up the juhū in the right hand with 'O juhū! come, Agni summons thee for the worship of the gods' and takes the upabṛ̥t in the left hand with 'O upabṛ̥t! come, god Savitṛ calls thee for the worship of gods' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12. 1). He places the upabṛ̥t on juhū with 'O well-controlling ones, may you two abound in ghee to-day for me, may you be well covered and well surrounded' (compare Vāj. S. II. 7). He takes the juhū from under the upabṛ̥t to the east completely and holds it on the upabṛ̥t in such a way that their bowls are placed on each other and when he is about to throw the ājya into fire he merely holds the upabṛ̥t in his left and holding the juhū in his right makes the offering with it.²³⁶² He crosses over to the south of the āhavanīya with the right foot but without treading upon the prastara and after repeating the mantra 'O Agni and Viṣṇu ! May I not step down on you ! May you become apart from me ! May you not cause trouble (or heat) to me ; may you, who are the makers of worlds, make a place (or world) for me ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12 and Tai. Br. III. 3. 7). He stands to the south of the āhavanīya with ' thou art the seat of Viṣṇu ; from here Indra performed his exploits ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12). He places his right foot inside the vedi and makes the toes of the left foot touch the heel of the right. Then inserting the juhū by the point where the southern paridhi joins the middle one (i. e. from the south-west) he, while standing, pours from it towards the north-east (as in the first) a continuous stream of ājya with ' having well begun, the sacrifice of the sacrificer, which is to rise (i. e. to bring prosperity), which is uninjured and which is offered to Indra, touches heaven ; svāhā ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12) and makes the ghee come in contact with all the fuel-sticks (idhma) thrown into the fire. The yajamāna says ' this is for Indra. ' The adhvaryu, after making this offering (the 2nd āghāra), lets out his breath which he had held up at the time of making the offering. After pouring ājya over the fire he raises up the juhū over the āhavanīya with ' (fire) is kindled pre-eminently. ' He crosses over to the north separating the juhū and upabhart with ' save me, O fire, from evil (or sin) and establish me in good deeds ' (Tai. S. I. 1. 12). With the ājya in the juhū he smears the dhruvā thrice, once with ' ghee is anointed by fire, sacrificial offering is anointed by sacrificial offering, the aerial regions are anointed by fire-flame ' and twice silently. He takes ājya from the dhruvā ladle with the sruva and sprinkles it over²³⁶³ the (ājya in the) juhū with ' suvīrāya svāhā ' and sprinkles ājya from the juhū over that in the dhruvā with ' sacrifice is spread continuously by sacrifice '.

2362. Āp. (II. 13. 5-6) and Sat. (II. 1. pp. 181-182) say that this is the mode of holding the two ladles in all āhutis (he also holds the two on a level with his navel).

2363. Anointing (samāñjana) is done by sprinkling a drop, but pratyabhigharāṇa requires that ājya should be poured in a stream however slight. ' समञ्जनं विन्दुमात्रप्रक्षेपेण प्रत्यभिघारणं किञ्चिद्भाराकरणेनेति भेदेनोपादानं धात्वोः ' com. on Sat. II. 1. p. 185

After keeping the two ladles (juhū and dhruvā) in their proper places, he (the adhvaryu) sets about choosing (invoking) the pravara. The adhvaryu brings in contact with (twice round) the sphyā the tying cords of the idhma and one blade from the kuśas strewn on the vedi and stands to the north of the vedi (or near the utkara) for reciting the pravara mantra. He faces the south (the east according to com. on Kāt. III. 2. 3). The āgnīdhra stands to the west of the adhvaryu facing the south near the utkara. The adhvaryu then inaudibly utters a formula 'who will become the adhvaryu here? He will become the adhvaryu here. Yajña (will be adhvaryu) of yajña, I stand in the abode of Viṣṇu. May speech perform the function of a priest, may mind do so, I resort to speech. Bhūḥ bhuvaḥ suvaḥ !' (Āp. II. 15. 1 and Sat. II. 1. p. 186). The āgnīdhra after touching the binding cords of idhma, the sphyā and the kuśa blade also inaudibly repeats a similar mantra 'who will become the āgnīdhra here &c.' (Āp. II. 15. 2). The adhvaryu addresses the brāhmā priest 'O brahman! shall I call on (the āgnīdhra) to listen to the pravara?' The brāhmā priest first repeats inaudibly 'O lord of speech! make (him) listen to this speech, make the sacrifice be heard among gods, and me among men (Āp. III. 19. 3); sustain these deities in heaven &c.' and then loudly says 'yes, do make him listen (om3śrā3vaya). The adhvaryu says²³⁶⁴ 'ā3 śrāvaya' (make to listen) and the āgnīdhra holding the sphyā covered with the binding cord responds with 'astu śrau3ṣaṭ' (lit. yes, let him hear). The adhvaryu then utters 'May Agni, the divine hotṛ, the wise one, the discriminating one, sacrifice for the gods, like Manu, like Bharata, like that one, like that one. Let him bring (the gods) to the accompaniment of holy prayer. The brāhmaṇas are the protectors of this sacrifice.

2364. The call of the adhvaryu in the form 'O śrāvaya' (for ā śrāvaya) is technically called 'śrāvaya' or 'śruta', while the response of the āgnīdhra in the form 'astu śrau3ṣaṭ' is called 'pratyāśrāvaya' or 'pratyāśruta'. Vide Sat. Br. I. 5. 2. 6-7 where, to explain these two words, a legend is narrated of the sacrifice fleeing from the gods. The formula uttered by the adhvaryu is either आ3आ3वय or ओ3आ3वय according to Sat. II. 1. p. 186 and according to Āp. II. 15. 3 it is also simply आ3वय or ओ3आ3वय. Vide Pāp. VIII. 2. 91-92 for the pluta. The आग्नीध्र responds with अस्तु ओ3वय्.

This (so and so by name) is the human hotṛ'.²³⁶⁵ While the adhvaryu is engaged in the āsrāvaṇa call the hotṛ should follow him with an invocation 'make the sacrifice heard among gods, and make me heard among men for fame, glory and spiritual eminence' (Āśv. I. 3. 23). When the adhvaryu chooses the hotṛ (in the words 'so and so is the human hotṛ') the hotṛ should repeat 'God Savitr! they here choose thee that art fire for the office of hotṛ together with thy father Vaiśvānara. May Heaven and Earth protect me. Agni is the (divine) hotṛ. I am the human hotṛ' (Āśv. I. 3. 23). He gets up with a mantra 'udāyusā &c.' (Tai. S. I. 2. 8. 1) and on getting up recites 'O adhvaryu! sixty plus ninety chains are spread near (or inside) Agni, the hotṛ. They bind the ignorant, (but) the wise one goes beyond (overcomes) them' (Āśv. I. 3. 24). Having approached the adhvaryu with 'I, a hotṛ priest, follow the path of ṛta' (Āśv. I. 3. 25) the hotṛ should touch the adhvaryu on the latter's shoulder with his right hand that hangs by his side and the āgnīdhra also with his left with 'we touch Indra as the purohita in this rite of choosing the hotṛ, whereby the gods reached the highest Heaven and the Āngirases also did so' (Āśv. I. 3. 27). He should wipe (purify) his face thrice with the blades used in binding the idhma, once with 'thou art a 2365. The adhvaryu mutters the name of the hotṛ but the word 'mānuṣaḥ' is loudly uttered and the first vowel in it is made pluta. The Sat. Br. I. 5. 1. 5-13 sets out the pravara-mantra and explains it: अग्निर्देवो देवस्यो होता देवान्यक्षद्विर्वाँश्चिकित्वात्ममुपवद्भरतवत् । ... अथार्षेयं प्रवृणीते । ऋषिभ्यश्चैवैनं तदेवेभ्यश्च निवेदयत्ययं महावीर्यो यो यज्ञं प्रापदिति । तस्मादार्षेयं प्रवृणीते । परस्तादर्वाक् प्रवृणीते । ... स आर्षेयमुक्त्वाह । ब्रह्मणवदा च वक्षः ब्राह्मणा अस्य यज्ञस्य प्रावितारः । असौ मानुषः । सत्यापाद (II. 1. p. 187) says 'अग्निर्देवो ... भरतवद्-मुवदमुवदिति यजमानस्यार्षेयं सह परेण त्रीननन्तरान्'. Āp. II. 16. 5 is almost the same. After भरतवत् the names of the pravara sages are taken; for example, if the yajamāna is of Kausika gotra then he utters कुशिकवत् अघमर्षणवत् विश्वामित्रवत्. Vide notes 1139 and 1140 above for the two modes of taking the pravara names, one with affix वत् (where the first sage mentioned is the most remote, the next comes after him in time) and the other mode by taddhita formation where the latest among the pravara sages is mentioned first as in वैश्वामित्राघमर्षणकौशिकेति. Jai. (VI. 1. 43) asserts that one who has not three pravara sages is not eligible for performing darśapūrṇamāsa. Āp. II. 16. 12 and XXIV. 10. 18 and Sat. II. 1. p. 188 give rules about the pravara names of royal sacrificers and of those who have two gotras and state that some held that 'Manuvāt' is the pravara for all. Vide notes 1152-53. For the प्रवरमन्त्र 'अग्निर्देवो ... प्रावितारः' vide Āp. II. 16. 5 and 11, Sat. II. 1. pp. 187-188.

cleaner (or purifier), purify me together with my progeny and cattle,' and twice silently. After touching water he should, standing to the west of the seat and with face to the east, address the seat of hotṛ (Āśv. I. 3. 30) with 'away, O daidhiṣavya &c.' (vide above p. 1021). He should take a blade of kuśa from the hotṛ's seat with the thumb and the finger next to the smallest and cast it away to the south-west with 'the demon that keeps off wealth is cast aside.' With (Āśv. I. 3. 31) 'here do I like a horse sit down in the seat of vasu' (wealth) he should sit down, the right leg being placed on the left one. He sits down with 'God barhis, may I sit down on thee that occupiest a good seat' (Āśv. I. 4. 7). With the cap of his knee he touches the barhis (spread on his seat) with 'O Hotṛ! May you pre-eminently occupy the barhis' (Āśv. I. 4. 8). Then he mutters (performs japa of) certain texts viz: 'bhūpataye namaḥ chandāṁsi prapadye' (Āśv. I. 4. 9), Rg. X. 158. 1, I. 27. 13, X. 52. 1, X. 53. 2 and 4. When the japa is finished and the fuel-sticks (idhma) thrown on to the fire are blazing he should make the adhvaryu hand over to him the two *sruc*s with this prose formula (nigada) 'may Agni, the hotṛ, know (undertake) the duty of hotṛ, that gives protection. O sacrificer! The deity is well disposed to you in that you have chosen Agni as the hotṛ'. He should finish the nigada (Āśv. I. 4. 11) 'Hold the adhvaryu's sruc that abounds in ghee, that is devoted to the gods and is possessed of all boons; let us praise the gods that deserve praise, let us bow to them that deserve adoration and offer sacrifice to the gods that deserve it' (Āśv. I. 4. 11).

The adhvaryu, when the hotṛ sits down, throws down on the vedi the blade of grass (that was brought in contact with the sphya).²³⁶⁶ The yajamāna says 'O gods and pitṛs, O pitṛs and gods &c.'. The yajamāna should repeat the Caturhotṛ mantras before the prayājas are offered (vide note 2248).

The adhvaryu takes the juhū and upabhr̥t, crosses from behind the paridhis to the south of the vedi with the right foot first and facing the north-east offers the five prayāja oblations of clarified butter beginning to the west of the place where the two streams of the āghāras meet and ending in the east (Āp. II. 17. 1) or he offers the five offerings in the four principal quarters from the east to the north respectively and the last in the middle of the āhavanīya (Sat. II. 2. p. 199). The procedure of prayājas is as follows:—²³⁶⁷ First he says 'āśrā3vaya', the āgnidhra standing near the utkara facing the south and holding the sphya makes the response 'astu śrau3ṣaṭ'. Then the adhvaryu gives a direction to the hotṛ with reference to the first prayāja 'Samidha yaja' (recite the yājyā verse for the deity Samidhaḥ). The hotṛ recites "Whoever we are, we sacrifice to the deity samidhaḥ; may the samidhs, O fire, partake of the ājya. Vau3ṣaṭ". When the sound vaṣaṭ is heard the adhvaryu offers ājya from the juhū towards the eastern and the most blazing part of the āhavanīya fire. He may either occupy the same position or proceed eastwards as he offers each offering. Jai. III. 1. 19-20 deals with this question viz. that he may offer the prayājas²³⁶⁸ by proceeding eastwards. After each 2367. तै. ब्रा. III. 5. 4 has अग्निर्होता वेत्त्वग्निर्होत्रं वेत्तु प्रावित्रम् । स्मो घयम् । साधु ते यजमान देवता । घृतवतीमध्वर्यो सूचमास्पस्व देवायुवं विश्ववाराय । ईदामहै देवा ईदैन्यान् । नमस्याम नमस्यान् । यजाम यज्ञियान् । Vide also Śat. Br. I. 5. 2. 1-3. आश्व. I. 4. 10 has अग्निर्होता वेत्त्वग्निर्होत्रं वेत्तु प्रावित्रं साधु ते यजमान देवता यो अग्निमित्यवसाय होतारमवृथा इति जपेत्. This mantra is called जुगादापन. The hotṛ recites the words अग्निर्होता यो अग्निम् loudly, then stops to take breath and recites inaudibly होतारमवृथाः. From अग्निर्होता to यज्ञियान् is one निगद. The शतपथ explains 'मनुष्या वै ईदैन्याः पितरो नमस्या देवा यज्ञियाः' I. 5. 2. 3.

2368. The prayājas (fore-offerings) are five in Darśapūrṇamāsa and are oblations of ājya introductory to the principal offerings and anuyājas (that are only three in Darśapūrṇamāsa) are offered subsequent to the principal offerings. The prayāja offerings are addressed to five viz., समिधः, तनूनपात् (or नराशंस), इष्टः (or इष्टः), बहिः, स्वाहाकारः (or स्वाहाकृतयः). Jai. (V. 1. 4-7) enjoins that prayājas must be offered in the order of the text viz. first to Samidhaḥ and so on, and II. 2. 2 declares that with each repetition of the word 'yajati (used five times) there is a separate unseen result (adr̥ṣṭa or apūrva). The three deities of the anuyājas are बहिः, नराशंस, अग्निं स्विष्टकृत्. The word is written either as अनुयाज (Rg. X. 51. 8-9) or अनुयाज (Āp. II. 9. 8 and elsewhere). According to Ait. Br. 7. 3 स्वाहाकृतयः means विश्वेदेवाः. In the Nirukta VIII. 22 there is a discussion as to the devatās of prayājas and anuyājas and after mentioning several views Yāska states his own opinion that they are 'āgneya' i. e. they are the different forms (Tanū) of Agni. Jaimini (IX. 2. 59-60) holds that the words 'Samidhaḥ', 'Tanūnapāt' &c. are really the names of a rite, that they do not convey that Samidhs, Tanūnapāt and others are deities and that the mantras repeated by the hotṛ convey the devatā, which is Agni. The com. on Śat. II. 1. p. 198 has a long note on this and accepts Jaimini's position. In Tai. S. II. 6. 1 five prayājas of darśapūrṇamāsa are mentioned and they are brought in relation to the five seasons. The five constituent formulas connected with each of the five prayājas are well brought out in Tai. S. I. 6. 11 'आश्रावयेति चतुरक्षरमस्तु औषदिति चतुरक्षरं यजेति द्व्यक्षरं ये यजामह इति पञ्चाक्षरं द्व्यक्षरो षष्डकार एव वै सप्तदशः प्रजापतिर्यज्ञमन्वायतो य एवं वेद प्रति यज्ञेन तिष्ठति न यज्ञाद्भंशते ।'.

vaṣaṭkāra the hotṛ repeats 'speech is energy. He (vaṣaṭkāra) is indeed energy. May prāṇa and apāṇa be in me' (Āśv. I. 5. 17). The yajamāna says when the first prayāja is offered 'this is for the Samidhs. I gratify Vasanta among the seasons, May he (Vasanta) being gratified gratify me'. The same procedure is followed as to the remaining four prayājas viz. there is first āsrāvaṇa, then pratyāsrāvaṇa by the āgnidhra, praiṣa to hotṛ, recital of the yājyā by the hotṛ with vaṣaṭkāra at end, offering of ājya into fire by the adhvaryu, the tyāga by the yajamāna and connecting the five prayājas with the five ṛtus (seasons) in order from Vasanta (hemanta and śisira being taken as one). The second prayāja offering is meant for Tanūnapāt, but those who belong to the Vasistha, Śunaka, Atri. Vadhryaśva and Rājanya (Viśvāmitra?) gotras substitute Narāśansa for Tanūnapāt (Śāṅ. I. 7. 3 is slightly different). The whole procedure is briefly indicated in Sanskrit in the note below.²³⁶⁹ The first three prayāja offerings are made with the ājya in the juhū, but as to the 4th (to Barhis) he pours half of the ājya contained in the upabhr̥t into the juhū and then makes the offering. Wherever there are more prayājas than 5 (e. g. in Varuṇa-praghāsa there are nine, in Paśubandha ten) the 4th, 7th and 10th are offered in this way (vide Sat. II. 2. p. 199 and Kāt. III. 2. 22-23). Vide Jai. IV. 1. 40 and 41-45. These mantras (in the note) occur in Tai. Br. III. 5. 5 where 'viyantu' is substituted for 'vyantu' (as is usual with the Taittirīyas). The words 'ye3 yajāmahe' used at the beginning of each yājyā are called 'āgūh'; but there are no such words in the anuyājas (Āśv. I. 5. 4). Vaṣaṭkāra is uttered at the end of all yājyās and in anuyājas also. The yājyā is pronounced very loudly and with great distinctness as to the 'ye' of 'ye yajāmahe' and the last syllable of the yājyā is made phula. In Āśv. I. 5. 9. 9-14 there are other rules not set out here. The pronouncing of vaṣaṭ was a very solemn and mystic matter and even in modern times the word is uttered very loudly and forcibly. The Ait. Br. XI. 6 says that 'the vaṣaṭkāra is a thunderbolt; when a man utters vaṣaṭkāra he should think of his enemy; thereby he plants the thunderbolt on him.' Āśv. I. 5. 18 states that vaṣaṭkāra was to be uttered only by day and not by night. There are three tones (mandra, madhyama and uttama). Up to the prayājas and after śamyu-vāka the mandra tone is employed. After prayājas up to sviṣṭakṛt the tone is to be madhyama. Thereafter up to śamyuvāka it is to be high. Vide Āśv. I. 5. 25-28 and Āśv. I. 5. 4-8 for these and several other rules. Āśv. II. 15. 12 states that the āgūḥ (the words yeṣ yajāmahe), the om (at the end of an anuvākya) and the vaṣaṭkāra are pronounced in a high tone everywhere.

The adhvaryu after the five prayāja offerings comes back and pours some ājya²³⁷⁰ (left in the juhū after the prayāja offerings) over the several offerings (havīṃṣi), first over the dhruvā, then over the puroḍāśas, the boiled milk, the curds in the order in which they are sacrificed later on. Lastly he pours a little ājya over the upabhr̥t. He lays down the ladles (sruca). He holds them in his hands from the time when he offers the ājyabhāgas up till the offering to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. He puts into the juhū four ladlings of ājya with the sruva with 'may the dhruvā be strengthened with ghee in each sacrifice for those who serve the gods &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1) and anoints the blades of the prastara with a drop of ājya.

Now follow Ājyabhāgas.²³⁷¹ The adhvaryu issues a direction to the hotṛ 'recite the anuvākya (invitatory) verse for Agni.' The hotṛ repeats Rg. VI. 16. 34 (Agnir-vṛtrāni.....āhutaḥ) with om added at the end. Then there is āśrāvaṇa by adhvaryu and pratyāśrāvaṇa by āgnīdhra, then the praiṣa of adhvaryu to the hotṛ to repeat the yājyā for Agni. The hotṛ repeats the yājyā "may Agni who is favourable (or pleased), partake of the ājya' preceded by 'yeṣ yajāmahe' and followed by 'vauṣaṭ.'

2370. The com. on Sat. II. 2. p. 200 says that this action is the प्रतिपत्तिकर्म (in the language of mīmāṃsakas) of the आज्यशेष and is not meant as अभिचारण; but the com. on Kāt. III. 3. 9. says that this is हविः-संस्कार and not प्रतिपत्तिकर्म.

2371. Ājyabhāgas are two and they are the names of two actions (karmanāmadheya). आज्यभागाविति द्वयोः कर्मणोर्नामधेयम्। आज्यं भागो भागधेयं ययोस्तौ। com. on Sat. II. 2. p. 201. Tai. S. II. 6. 2. 1 and Sat. Br. I. 6. 3. 38 say 'चक्षुषी वा एते यज्ञस्य यदाज्यभागौ'. The praiṣa is अग्नयेऽनुब्रूहि. Vide note 483 above.

On hearing 'vauṣaṭ' the adhvaryu offers ājya in the northern and most blazing part of the āhavanīya. The yajamāna recites 'Agni has his eye (everywhere). May I become possessed of sight by worship offered to him.' The same procedure is followed as to the second ājyabhāga to Soma which is offered in the southern and most blazing part of the āhavanīya fire. In pūrṇamāsa the two ājyabhāgas are called Vārtraghna and in the darśeṣṭi they are called 'Vṛdhanvantau' (Āśv. I. 5. 32 and 35). Vide Jai. III. 1. 23. The adhvaryu is on the north side of the vedi when he takes up portions of ājya in the juhū and issues the direction to recite the anuvākya from there. Then he crosses to the south of the āhavanīya, performs āśrāvāṇa and issues the praiṣa for the recital of the yājyā after the āgnīdhra responds with 'astu śrauṣaṭ.' The whole procedure is briefly set out in the note below.²³⁷²

Puronuvākya and Yājyā are required in ājyabhāgas, in āvāpa, in Svīṣṭakṛt and in Patnīsaṃyājas, but in prayājas and anuyājas there are only yājyās (vide Sat. II. 2. p. 189). The puronuvākya is recited by the priest while sitting, while the yājyā is recited standing and the recitation of these is only a saṃskāra and not a principal act (vide Jai. X. 4. 39-41). Four ladlings with sruva are made in the juhū for all sacrificers in ājyabhāgas and other homas, but in the case of sacrificers whose gotra is Jāmadagnya five (pañcāvatta) ladlings are made in the juhū (Āp. II. 18. 2, Sat. II. 2 pp. 190-191) and one whose gotra is not Jāmadagnya may have five ladlings after taking the permission of a Jāmadagnya. The puronuvākya for the ājyabhāgas in darśeṣṭi are Rg. VIII 44. 12 (for Agni) and Rg. I. 91. 11 (for Soma).

The adhvaryu having gone across (towards the puroḍāśas that are made ready) sprinkles clarified butter on the sruc (juhū) with 'āpyāyatām dhruvā &c.' (vide p. 1059 above), touches the several sacrificial offerings with 'do not be afraid, do not tremble, may I not injure thee; may not thy lustre leave thee; carry across this sacrificer who brings offerings, rain on the earth, in order I shall offer the cut portions; I make an adoration to you, do not injure me' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5).²³⁷³ With his thumb and two fingers (viz. the middle and anāmikā, but using only the fleshy parts and not the nails) he cuts off a portion from the middle of the puroḍāśa (cake) meant for Agni and from its front half. Sat. II. 2. p. 191 and Āp. II. 18. 9 say that the avadāna (portion cut or severed) is as much as the front joint of the thumb (as a general rule) but that the svīṣṭakṛt offering is larger than the ordinary offering for other deities²³⁷⁴ &c. For the Jāmadagnyas a third portion is cut off from the hind part of the puroḍāśa. Portions from ājya and sānnāyya are taken out with the sruva and of cooked food (caru) with the mekṣaṇa. The portion cut from the middle is placed in the eastern part of the bowl of the sruc and the second portion in the western part of the bowl. He sprinkles clarified butter with the sruva (in which ājya is taken from the ājyasthāli) on the cut portions and on the puroḍāśa from which they were cut²³⁷⁵ with 'when cutting portions from thee I acted against thee, I anoint that again with ājya, may that grow again in thee' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). Everytime he offers a fourfold (caturavatta) portion he smears a drop of ājya on the blades of the prastara.

Then follows the principal sacrifice. The adhvaryu issues a direction to the hotṛ 'recite an anuvākya for Agni'. Hotṛ recites (as anuvākya) Rg. VIII. 44. 16 followed by 'om' (as

The sprinkling of butter on the sruc (upastaraṇa), the placing in the sruc of the two portions cut off from the puroḍāśa and the sprinkling of butter over the cut portions (abhighāraṇa) constitute four items and so are called 'caturavatta.' When three portions are cut off from the puroḍāśa or other offering for Jāmadagnyas then there are (with upastaraṇa and abhighāraṇa) five items (pañcāvatta). Vide Śat. Br. agnirmūrdhā...jinrato3m). Then there is āsrāvaṇa and pratyāśrāvaṇa. Then the adhvaryu issues his direction to the hotṛ to recite the yājyā which is Rg. X. 8. 6 (ye3 yajāmahegnim bhuvo.....havyavāho3m vau3ṣaṭ). Then the adhvaryu throws the oblation (āhuti) of puroḍāśa portions on to the fire. The method of this is ²³⁷⁶ that he drops a part of the ājya from the sruc first (that was sprinkled in it at upastaraṇa and abhighāraṇa), then the two puroḍāśa portions are thrown and lastly he allows the remaining ājya from the bill-like mouth of the sruc to flow over the puroḍāśa offerings as if covering them but without disturbing them. The principal āhutis are introduced at the point of the confluence of the two āghāras and each one is offered in the āhavanīya to the east (or north-east) of the preceding one but in contact with the latter. The yajamāna makes the tyāga 'this is for Agni' with 'may I have food to eat on account of this worship of Agni.' After this offering of puroḍāśa to Agni, there is an upāṁśuyāja (a silent sacrifice) with clarified butter offered to Prajāpati or to Agniṣomau or Viṣṇu. When offered to Prajāpati the anuvākyā and yājyā are Rg. X. 121. 10 and Tai. Br. II. 8. 1 ²³⁷⁷ (tavame lokā &c.) and when offered to Agniṣomau they are Rg. I. 93. 2 and 6. According to Āp. I. 19. 12 and Jai. X. 8. 51-61 it is offered only on Paurṇamāsī. In this, the reference to the deity is always inaudible, but even here the āsruta, the pratyāsruta, and two directions for reciting anuvākyā and yājyā and the vaṣaṭkāra are uttered loudly. The sacrificer says in this upāṁśuyāja 'thou art a destroyer; may I be uninjured and may I subdue evil.' The offering is made of the ājya in the dhruvā (Jai. X. 8. 47-48) and the devatā is either Prajāpati or Agni or Viṣṇu (Jai. X. 8. 49-50) and the offering is caturavatta (Jai. X. 8. 33-34). The second puroḍāśa is offered to Agni and Soma on pūrṇamāsa in the same way, the anuvākyā and yājyā being respectively Rg. I. 93. 9 and 5 and to Indrāgni in darśeṣṭi, the anuvākyā and yājyā being Rg. VII. 94. 7 and VII. 93. 4. This is the case when the sacrificer

I. 8. 1 and X. 180. 1 and when it is offered to Mahendra they are respectively Rg. VIII. 6. 1 and X. 50. 4.²³⁷⁸ In the case of sānnāyya he takes two portions of the boiled milk and two of curds (or three of curds for pañcāvattins) and there is upastaraṇa in the sruc only once and abhighāraṇa also once.

After the principal offerings comes the offering to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt.²³⁷⁹ He sprinkles a little ājya in the sruc, cuts off one portion from each of the several remnants of the havis from their northern halves in the order in which the several sacrificial ingredients are offered to the deities (twice in the case of pañcāvattins), sprinkles over these cut portions clarified butter twice, but does not sprinkle ājya on the remnants of havis and offers them in a spot in the north-east of the fire but not so as to come in contact with the other āhutis already offered (viz. ājyabhāgas and puroḍāśa). In this also there is the direction to repeat anuvākyā, recital of anuvākyā, āśrāvaṇa, pratyāśrāvaṇa, direction for yājyā, the yājyā itself and vaśatkāra. The anuvākyā for Sviṣṭakṛt offering is Rg. X. 2. 1 and the yājyā is long and is set out below.²³⁸⁰ The whole of it is to be recited without taking breath or he may take breath after reciting half of Rg. VI. 15. 14. The yajamāna says 'this is for Agni Sviṣṭakṛt and not mine. May I attain to stability and long life by the worship offered to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. May Agni protect 2378. Vide Āśv. I. 6. 1 for the anuvākyās and yājyās of the principal offerings. Śān. I. 8 states them somewhat differently.

2379. According to Baud. I. 17 he cuts off (for Sviṣṭakṛt) portions as follows: सकृद् दक्षिणस्य पुरोडाशस्योत्तरार्धाद्वद्यति सकृद् ध्रुवाज्यासकृदुत्तरस्य पुरोडाशस्य सकृच्छृत्तस्य सकृद्दध्नः. Vide Jai. IV. 1. 28-32.

2380. Āśv. (I. 6. 3-5) gives the rules about the yājyā for Agni Sviṣṭakṛt (vide also Śān. I. 9.): येऽ यजामहेऽग्निं स्विसकृतमयाहग्निरेऽग्निः प्रिया धामान्ययाद् सोमस्य प्रिया धामान्ययाद्भेः प्रिया धामान्ययाद् प्रजापतेः प्रिया धामान्ययाद् अग्नीषोमयोः प्रिया धामान्ययाद् देवानामाज्यपानां प्रिया धामानि यक्षदग्नेर्होतुः प्रिया धामानि यक्षत्स्वं महिमानमायजता मेज्या इषः कृणोतु सोऽध्वरा जातवेदा जुषतां हविरग्ने यद्य... ते अद्याः वीरेषद् । . Vide तै. ब्रा. III. 5. 7 for this याज्या. ऋ is pronounced for इ in the above. प्रजापतेः is repeated inaudibly. Vide Āśv. I. 3. 13-16. अग्ने यद्य... अद्य is Rg. VI. 15. 14. If the उपांशुयाज is offered to Agni-ṣomau or Viṣṇu then अग्नीषोमयोः or विष्णोः is uttered in place of प्रजापतेः. When the 2nd puroḍāśa is offered to Indraṅni on Amāvāsyā then substitute इन्द्राम्योः for अग्नीषोमयोः and if sānnāyya is offered then इन्द्रस्य or महेश्वरस्य.

me from bad sacrifice (or a curse); may Savitr save me from him who speaks evil of me. May I vanquish him who, whether far or near, is my enemy!' (Tai. S. 1. 6. 2. 4). Jai. VI. 4. 3 lays down that if after portions are cut for Sviṣṭakṛt as directed they are destroyed accidentally, there is no fresh cutting for Sviṣṭakṛt again.

The adhvaryu comes back to the north of the vedi from the spot where he offered to Sviṣṭakṛt, fills the juhū with water and pours it round the paridhis (or their places) beginning from the middle one and proceeding from left to right with 'I offer this offering into Vaiśvānara, it is a spring with a hundred or a thousand streams. May he support in this that is being filled, my father, grandfather and great-grandfather' (Tai. Ā. VI. 6) and then touches water. The sacrificer makes the tyāga with 'this is for (my) father &c.' and then touches water. The adhvaryu lays down the two sruc in their proper places. Then he tears the surface (or top) of the puroḍāśa meant for Agni from west to east, inserts his thumb and the anāmikā (ring-finger) and takes out from inside the cake a portion which is as much as a barley grain or the pippala²³⁸¹ berry with 'let this be cut off, somewhat bigger than a barley grain or than the wound made by an arrow. May we not injure this holy and well-offered havis of the sacrifice' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He takes off a portion from the other puroḍāśa also in the same way but without piercing the top. These portions are called prāśitra. The brahmā priest looks at the prāśitra when it is being taken out with 'I look at thee with the eye of Mitra' (Āśv. I. 13. 1). The adhvaryu sprinkles clarified butter on the vessel called prāśitraharāṇa (that in which prāśitra is carried), keeps the prāśitra in it and sprinkles ājya over it (does abhighāraṇa), takes it to the east of the āhavanīya by the space between the brahmā and yajamāna on one hand and the āhavanīya on the other and then lays it down to the west of the āhavanīya (to the west of the praṇītā waters, according to Baud. I. 17). The adhvaryu then sprinkles ājya in the idāpātra, he cuts off the first portion of idā from the southern half of the puroḍāśa meant for Agni with 'from the southern half I cut off (idā) seen by Manu, from whose foot ghee oozes, that is moved by Mitra and Varuṇa, that has a face in one direction only (in the south), without mixing it with others'²³⁸² (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). From the eastern half of the same puroḍāśa he cuts off a thin but long slice which is the portion of the yajamāna (according to Baud. I. 18 it is three or four aṅgulas long) and which is anointed (or smeared) with ājya and placed near the dhruvā (or to the east of the dhruvā) in some vessel on the barhis. Then he cuts off a part from the portion of the cake that is between its southern and eastern parts. In the same way (i. e. repeating the verse 'seen by Manu' &c.) he cuts off a portion as idā from the northern puroḍāśa and other things offered (such as the boiled milk and curds). He then sprinkles ājya over the cut portions and removes them towards the east on the vedi. He crosses to the south in front of the hotṛ, sits behind the hotṛ with his face to the east and anoints the front two joints of the fore-finger of the hotṛ with ājya from the sruva, first the front joint and then the one next to it. The hotṛ wipes with the palm of the hand turned towards his chest the uppermost joint of the finger on the upper lip and the next joint on his lower lip with 'I partake of thee that art sacrificed by the lord of speech for food, for prāṇa' and 'I partake of thee that are offered by the lord of the mind for strength, for apāṇa' respectively (Āśv. I. 7. 1-2; compare Śat. Br. I. 8. 1. 14-15). He touches water. The adhvaryu turns from right to left, comes back to the place whence he went, sits down to the east of the hotṛ with his face turned westwards, offers the idā to the hotṛ and the sacrificer recites a long mantra (Tai. S. I. 6. 3. 1-2, 'Surūpa-varṣa-varṇa ehlīmān...devān-apyetu') and looks at the idā when it is being taken to the hotṛ. The hotṛ accepts the idā (i. e. the vessel of idā) in his joined hands, places the idā in his left hand, keeps his right hand near the idā to its west with the fingers turned northwards and makes the adhvaryu cut off from the idā itself a portion called avāntareḍā into the right hand in the following manner. The adhvaryu spreads drops of ājya on the right hand of the hotṛ with the sruva in which are poured the remnants of the ājya in the idāpātra, then the adhvaryu takes a portion from the idāpātra and drops it on to the right hand and the hotṛ himself cuts a second portion from the middle of the idā with the space between his thumb and the fore-finger; then the adhvaryu sprinkles over the idā in the right hand of the hotṛ ājya as above.²³⁸³ The hotṛ grasps the two portions with the thumb of his right hand, draws in the fingers of the right hand, but (keeping the thumb outside) does not close them into a fist, takes into his right hand the idā placed in his left. He (the hotṛ) raises the idā on a level with his mouth or nose and invokes it.

2382. The word 'idā' is the appellation of a devatā and secondarily applies to sacrificial materials and also to a rite. 'इडा देवता तदर्थमवदानमपीडा।' com. on Śat. II. 3, p. 207. Āp. III. 1. 1 employs idā and prāśitra in the sense of rites. The idāpātra is made of aśvattha wood, has a bowl four aṅgulas wide and is as long as the foot of the sacrificer and has a rod four aṅgulas long. According to Āp. III. 1. 7 and Baud. I. 18, the first portion of idā is cut off from the puroḍāśa to the south meant for Agni. Āp. III. 1. 6 says 'इडापात्र उपस्तीर्य सर्वेभ्यो हविर्भ्य इडां समवधत्ति चतुरवत्तां पञ्चावत्तां वा.' The five avattas are effected by sprinkling ājya twice over the portions cut (vide com. on Āp. III. 2. 1). The story of the deluge, of Manu and of Idā as his daughter occurs in Śat. Br. I. 8. 1. In Śat. I. 8. 1. 7 and 8 we read 'तस्यैह स्म वृत्तं पदे संतिष्ठते तया मित्रावरुणौ संजग्मते । तां होचतुः कासीति । मनोर्दुहितेति ।'

The idopahvānam or ilopa—(invocation of the idā) is described at length by Āśv. I. 7. 7.²³⁸⁴ By this invocation it is supposed that the deity Idā becomes favourable to the sacrificer. It is a nigada, but a large part of it is said inaudibly (up to 'vṛṣṭir hvayatām') and the rest loudly. The sentences run in pairs e. g. 'Idā has been invoked with the Heaven, with the great Āditya; may idā together with Heaven and the great Āditya call us near'. In the portion that is loudly uttered, there are three pauses, viz. after 'idopahūtā,' after 'manuṣyāḥ' and after 'devī devaputre'. The adhvaryu, the āgnīdhra and the sacrificer touch the idāpātra with their hands²³⁸⁵ and remain so till the 2385. According to com. on Sat. II. 3. p. 210 the brahmā priest does not join in touching the idāpātra. This is also the practice in modern times of those who follow Sat. According to Baud. I. 18 and Kāt. III. 4. 12 the brahmā does join.

I. 7. 3-5. Both portions may be cut by the hotṛ or only one. The two portions in the right hand of the hotṛ are called avāntareḍā

2384. Vide Appendix for the text. This invocation differs considerably from the one contained in Sat. Br. I. 8. 1. 19ff, Tai. Br. III. 5. 8.

end of the invocation. When the invocation goes on inaudibly the yajamāna mutters (japati) 'O Idā! come (Āp. IV. 10. 4)' and when it is loudly uttered he mutters 'thou art cit &c.' (Āp. IV. 10. 4, where they are called Manusyagavi mantras) and utters loudly 'May you breathe into all beings, may all beings breathe on account of you &c.' and several other mantras (Āp. IV. 10. 4 and 7). He looks at the hotṛ and thinks of Vāyu in his mind 'O Vāyu! Idā is thy mother' (Āp. IV. 10. 5); when the words 'this yajamāna has been called' are uttered, he mutters 'May I, so invited, be endowed with cattle'. When the invocation of idā is finished, he repeats 'may Indra put in us vigour &c.'. When the words 'the divine adhvaryus' are uttered, the adhvaryu mutters 'May I be endowed with cattle.'

When the invocation of Idā is finished the adhvaryu passes round the āhavanīya towards its east and takes the prāsitra to the brahmā priest and hands it over to him. Āśv. I. 13. 2 describes in detail what thereon the brahmā does. He looks at the prāsitra when it is being brought with 'I look at thee with the eye of Mitra.' He receives the prāsitra in his joined hands with 'I accept thee at the impulse of god Savitr.....with the hands of Pūṣan.' He lays down the vessel containing prāsitra to the west of the āhavanīya inside the vedi on kuśa grass, with its rod to the east, 'I place thee in the navel of the earth, in the lap of Aditi.' He takes the prāsitra with the thumb and the ring-finger and eats without masticating it with the teeth with 'I eat thee with the mouth of Agni, with the mouth of Bṛhaspati.' Then he performs ācamana and again drinks water with 'I sprinkle truth over thee; may the deities that dwell inside waters avert (the evil in) this. Do not injure my eye, my ear, my life.' He should touch his navel with 'I hold thee in the belly of Indra.' Then he washes the vessel in which prāsitra was contained, fills it with water, pours water thrice from it holding the vessel and the palm of the hand towards one's chest.

The hotṛ eats the avāntaredā²³⁸⁶ after the brahmā eats the prāsitra with a mantra 'O Idā! favour this our portion &c.' All the four priests together with the sacrificer as the fifth then partake of the idā with a mantra 'thou art idā, thou art agreeable, thou art the bringer of happiness, place us in abundance of wealth and good progeny. I eat thee for the lustre of the face, for the fragrance of the mouth.' After eating idā they observe silence till they perform mārjana. They perform *mārjana*²³⁸⁷ inside the vedi near the prastara bunch with 'May mind resort to light. May all gods regale themselves here' (Tai. S. I. 5. 3. 2).

The adhvaryu divides the puroḍāśa baked for Agni into four parts (and no other puroḍāśa nor sānnāyya) by piercing its surface and keeps it on the barhis (kuśas strewn on the vedi), the last part being made the biggest of all four. Vide Jai. III.1.26-27. The yajamāna recites a mantra 'bradhna pinvasva &c.' (Tai. Br. III.7.5) and directs the four parts of that puroḍāśa separately as portions of the priests by saying 'this is for brahmā, this for hotṛ, this for adhvaryu, this for āgnīdhra' beginning in order from the south-east. The adhvaryu points out the portion of the yajamāna (vide p. 1065 above). When that is done, the adhvaryu makes the biggest of the four parts which is meant for the āgnīdhra 'ṣaḍavatta' (cut sixfold).²³⁸⁸ The āgnīdhra eats his portion with 'thou art the portion of heaven, thou art the āgnīdhra of fire, thou art the sāmitra of fire, I eat thee with the mouth of fire, salutation to thee! Do not injure me.' The adhvaryu brings the portions of brahmā and yajamāna where they are sitting in separate vessels with the veda bunch. The portions of the hotṛ and adhvaryu are brought by the adhvaryu in other vessels. The adhvaryu, hotṛ and brahmā eat their portions respectively with 'thou art the portion of the aerial region,' 'thou art.....of the earth,' 'thou.....of heaven.'²³⁸⁹ 2387. Mārjana means 'sprinkling water on the head after a mantra is recited' (मार्जनं मन्त्रान्ते क्षिरसि प्रोक्षणमग्निः : com. on Sat II. 3, p. 210). See however note 755 above and Āśv. I. 8. 2.

2388. According to Āp. III. 3.6-7 'ṣaḍavatta' is effected in either of two ways; first upastaraṇa in some vessel (on the hand of the āgnīdhra, according to com.), then placing on it one part out of two in which the largest portion meant for āgnīdhra is cut, then abhighāraṇa, then again upastaraṇa, placing the second part and the abhighāraṇa; or first upastaraṇa twice, then the two parts of the largest portion and then two abhighāraṇas. Sat. II. 3, p. 211 mentions only the first method.

2389. It will have been noticed from the preceding that the four priests have each a share in the cake for Agni and that they also share with the yajamāna the idā. The hotṛ has further the avāntareḍā and the brahmā partakes of the prāśitra besides.

The conclusion of Jaimini (III. 4. 48-50) is that these portions are not meant as the fee paid to the priests (parikraya), but the four parts are meant to be eaten by them.

Plenty of rice is cooked on the dakṣiṇa fire. This is called anvāhārya. The adhvaryu sprinkles ājya over ²³⁹⁰ it (i. e. performs abhighāraṇa) and takes it from the dakṣiṇa fire to the north of it. He issues a direction to the yajamāna 'offer (the boiled rice) to the priests that sit to the south' and when the sacrificer says 'come to the south' the priests do as requested (i. e. come to the south). The yajamāna issues a direction to the four priests 'this boiled rice is yours, take it according to your shares'. The rice is divided into four parts and the priests accept their respective portions with 'I accept thee at the impulse of God Savitr with the hands of Pūṣan; may king Varuṇa take you. Who gave to whom? Desire (Kāma) has given to Kāma O Kāma, this is thy fee. May Āṅgrasa with upturned palm accept it' (the whole formula occurs in Āp. XIV. 11. 2).²³⁹¹ The priests come back to the north (and then brahmā comes to his usual seat). The adhvaryu keeps aside the remnants of the several offerings (such as the agnīṣomīya cake or sānnāyya) and of the boiled rice outside the vedi to its north.

He throws into the āhavanīya the two blades that are now kindled at the fire and had been kept aside (vide p. 1040 above). The adhvaryu says to the brahmā priest 'O brahman! we shall start or commence' (Tai. S. II. 6. 9. 1). The brahmā priest first mutters ' Bṛhaspati is Brahmā, he sat in the seat of Brahmā; O Bṛhaspati! you protected the sacrifice; protect the sacrifice and me' (Āśv. I. 13. 6) and loudly gives permission 'yes, do start' (Om pratiṣṭha). The adhvaryu directs the agnīdhra 'O agnī! take the samidh (that is left) and wipe the paridhis and fire, each once'. The agnīdhra takes the samidh and offers it into fire with the mantra 'O fire, this is thy samidh; ²³⁹² may you increase and be strengthened by it. May the lord of the sacrifice (the yajamāna) increase and be strengthened; svāhā' (Śat. II. 4. p. 212). The yajamāna says as usual 'agnaya idam' and repeats 'O fire, this is thy samidh &c.' (Āp. III. 4. 6) and implores Agni to vanquish and destroy his enemies (the lengthy formula is in Āp. IV. 11. 5). He (the āgnīdhra) without moving about wipes the paridhis as before with the tying cords of idhma (but without holding the sphya), the middle one from south to north and the other two from west to east, and wipes the fire also from west to east with 'O fire, that securest food &c.' (Āp. III. 4. 7 gives the whole). He sprinkles water over the tying cords (with which wiping was done) and throws them into the āhavanīya with 'do not injure our cattle, (you) who are Rudra, the lord of beings &c.' (Sat. II. 3. p. 213). The yajamāna makes the tyāga 'this is for Rudra, the lord of beings, who moves among rows (of Maruts)'.

The yajamāna touches water and mutters a mantra (which is in Āp. IV. 11. 6 'vedirbarhiḥ &c.). The yajamāna also performs japa of the Saptahotṛ ²³⁹³ formulas before the anuyājas are offered. The adhvaryu takes into the juhū the ājya from the upabhr̥t (leaving some in the latter), crosses over to the south with the juhū and sets about offering the three anuyājas. First there is the āśravāṇa (Ośrāṇvaya), then pratyāśravāṇa (astu śrauṣṣaṭ) by āgnīdhra who always holds the sphya when saying this. Then the adhvaryu issues a direction to the hotṛ 'recite the yājyā for the devas.' When the hotṛ recites the yājyā and utters vauṣṣaṭ the adhvaryu standing in one place offers the first ājya offering on the samidh (offered for anuyājas as stated on 1069 above) to its east, the 2nd and 3rd to the west on the samidh itself (but all three are offered to the east of the meeting point of the two āghāras). The third and last offering of ājya is begun on the west but carried east in a continuous stream so as to become mixed up with the first two. In each case the yajamāna repeats the formula of tyāga. The yājyās and tyāga are given below in the note.²³⁹⁴ The adhvaryu then comes back to the north, lays the two ladles (sruc) in their proper places and he and the yajamāna mutter the two formulas (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 2 called vājavatī). The adhvaryu takes up in his right hand with palm upwards the juhū and prastara (prastara being placed over the palm and juhū over the prastara) with 'vājasya.....grabhīt' (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 2) and holds down (so as to bring it in contact with barhis) with palm turned downwards in the left hand the upabhr̥t ladle (which is under the palm) with 'athāsapatnān.....akaḥ' (ibid). He again takes up the juhū with 'udgrābham ca' (ibid) and presses down the upabhr̥t with 'nigrābham ca.' At this time the juhū held in the right hand is far apart from the upabhr̥t held in the left. Then he moves with the right hand having palm turned upward towards the east on the vedi itself the juhū with 'brahma devā avīṛdhan' (the gods increased holy prayer) and with the left hand having palm downwards he leaves outside the vedi the upabhr̥t with 'athāsapatnān...vyasyatām' (ibid. 'Indra and Agni hurled away my enemies' &c.). Then he touches water, sprinkles water over the upabhr̥t, takes it up and anoints with the butter remaining in the juhū the three paridhis, the middle one with 'to thee for Vasus,' the southern one with 'to thee for Rudras' and the northern one with 'to thee for Ādityas.' The yajamāna recites in each case 'this is for Vasus,' 'this is for Rudras,' 'this is for Ādityas' followed in 2394. There are three anuyājas. The first praśa is देवान् यज and the two others are simply यज. The three yājyās are. देवं बर्हिर्वसुवने वसुधेयस्य वेत् ३ वौ ३ वद् । देवो नराशंसो वसुवने वसुधेयस्य वेत् ३ वौ ३ वद् । देवोऽग्निः स्विष्टकृत्सुद्विणा मन्द्रः कविः सत्यमन्मायजी होता होतुर्होतुरायजीयानग्ने यान्देवानाङ्गयानपिप्रैर्ये ते होत्रे अमरसत तां ससन्तुर्षी होत्रां देवंगमां द्विनि देवेषु यज्ञमेरयेम स्विष्टकृत्त्राग्ने होताऽधूर्वसुवने वसुधेयस्य नमोवाके वीही ३ वौ ३ वद् । आम्ब. each case with a prayer noted below.²³⁹⁵ After keeping the juhū in some spot on the vedi other than where the prastara is, the adhvaryu, having mixed the prastara with the two vidhrtis (vide above p. 1045) with 'may heaven and earth be of the same mind; may Mitra and Varuṇa help you with rain' he leaves the vidhrtis on the barhis and smears the prastara ('with the remnants of ājya) in the three ladles (śruc), the points in juhū with 'licking the one that is smeared' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 1), middle portions in upabhrt with 'viyantu vayah' (ibid) and the roots in dhruvā with 'prajāṃ yonim' ²³⁹⁶ (ibid). He does the anointing a second time (with the same mantras). He anoints a third time in the reverse order viz. the roots first in dhruvā, the middle portions in upabhrt and the tops last in juhū (the mantras being the same for each ladle). The yajamāna repeats, while the prastara is being anointed, a mantra 'may kuśa be anointed with ghee' (Āp. IV. 12. 3). Taking out a blade from the prastara so anointed with 'to thee for long life', he places it in a known place (for use later on). When the blade is taken away from the prastara the yajamāna recites a mantra (apipred yajño...yajamānaṃ viśantu).

2392. It is interesting to see that according to Kāt. III. 5. 2-3 the mantra 'this is thy samidh' (Vāj. S. II. 14) is recited by the hotṛ and if he be ignorant then by the yajamāna. This shows that even then priests ignorant of the work expected of them or at least ignorant of the formulas they had to recite for a yajamāna had sometimes to be engaged. The Sat. Br. I. 8. 2. 4 also refers to this स यद्धि मन्येत न होता वेदेत्यपि स्वयमेव यजमानोऽनुमन्त्रयते.

2393. The saptahotṛ formulas are: महाहविर्होता । सत्यहविरध्वर्युः । अच्युतपाजा असीत् । अच्युतमना उपवक्ता । अनापुष्यश्चाप्रतिपुष्यश्च यज्ञस्याभिगरो । अयास्य उद्गाता । तै. अ. III. 5. The four priests, the āgnīdhra, prastotṛ and prati-hotṛ are often called the seven hotṛs.

The adhvaryu takes the prastara (and also the śākhā i. e. twig used at the time of milking cows when sānnāyya is to be offered), introduces the prastara (together with the twig) at the corner in the north where the middle and northern paridhis meet and says 'āśrāvaya.' When the āgnīdhra responds with 'astu śrauṣaṭ,' he issues a direction to the hotṛ 'the divine hotṛs are desired (or requested); you being human and directed to utter the words of success recite hymns for the god called sūktavāka.' The hotṛ begins the recitation of sūktavāka ²³⁹⁷ which is given below.²³⁹⁸ The contents of the sūktavāka may be briefly indicated. He begins 'O heaven and earth, this bliseful event has taken place; we have so flourished as to pronounce the good words (viz. 'fire has accepted this havis &c.') and our adoration (to the gods); O fire, you should declare good words, so that we may feel elevated; thou art the declarer of good words.' Then numerous words follow that state the various attributes of heaven and earth. Then it is declared that Agni and other deities (named) have accepted the offering and made it flourish. Then the sacrificer is named and it is said that he hopes for various blessings such as long life, worthy sons. The whole is concluded with 'we men belong to Agni. May we have (the fruits of) sacrifice and wealth. May both heaven and earth save us from sin (or evil). May the most desirable thing come here. Here is adoration to the gods.' After the sūktavāka the adhvaryu throws upon the āhavanīya the prastara (and the śākhā, in case of sānnāyya) with 'may waters and plants be strengthened; you are the

drops of Maruts; go to heaven and send thence rain to us' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 1).²³⁹⁹ Jaimini makes it clear (VI. 4. 43-47) that śākhā is not a subordinate complement of the prastara but the real meaning of the text 'he throws the prastara with the śākhā' is to indicate the time when the śākhā is to be thrown into fire. Jaimini (IV. 2. 10-13) states that the throwing of the śākhā into fire is pratipattikarma (i. e. that is the final disposal of the śākhā). When throwing the prastara he does not bend his hand but holds it rather straight and hanging downwards and the tips of the prastara are not put beyond the fire nor are they turned upwards, nor are the tips allowed to be first scorched. He raises it up, brings it slowly down and rolls it on the hearth of the āhavanīya (making the upper portion come down and vice versa). The adhvaryu, when the hotṛ says 'this sacrificer seeks (hopes for) blessings' directs the āgnīdhra to consign the prastara to fire. The āgnīdhra thrice raises with his joined hands the prastara into the āhavanīya fire. The sacrificer makes the tyāga to the several deities mentioned in the sūktavāka (agnaya idam, somāyedaṁ &c.) and adds (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 1) 'may I win victory following the victory of Agni' (then of Soma and so on for the other deities).²⁴⁰⁰ When the hotṛ mentions the name of the sacrificer the latter recites 'these blessings have come here' (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 2 and Āp. IV. 12. 5). The adhvaryu directs the āgnīdhra to throw into fire on the prastara the blade of kuśa taken from the prastara and kept aside (as described above p. 1072) and the āgnīdhra²⁴⁰¹ does so with 'Good speed to the tanūs, svāhā'. The yajamāna mutters 'this for the Tanūs' and proceeds 'This pillar spread down from heaven and was raised over the earth. With it that has a thousand shoots we worry our enemy etc.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6 and Āp. IV. 12. 8). The adhvaryu points out thrice with his forefinger the blade thrown into fire with 'this, this' and touches his nose and eyes with 'Agni! thou art the protector of life, protect my life, thou art the protector of eyes' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 2). Then the adhvaryu touches the earth inside the vedi with 'thou art stable' (ibid).

2400. अग्नेरहसुज्जितिमन्त्रोज्ज्वलिति यथालिङ्गं सूक्तवाकदेवताः । आप. IV. 12. 4. Vide जै. IX. 1. 4-5.

2401. According to com. on Āp. III. 7. 4-5 it is the adhvaryu who puts into fire the blade of the prastara.

The āgnīdhra then addresses the adhvaryu 'talk with me'. The adhvaryu asks 'has (the prastara) been consigned to flames'? The āgnīdhra replies 'it has gone to the fire'. Then after āśrāvāṇa and pratyāśrāvāṇa the adhvaryu touching the middle enclosing stick (paridhi) issues a direction to the hotṛ 'Good speed to the divine hotṛs (here the paridhis) and bliss to human hotṛs. Recite for śaṁ-y h'.²⁴⁰² Then the hotṛ recites the verse 'we long for that śaṁ-yoh, for (the) path to sacrifice and to the lord of sacrifice. May divine bliss be ours! May there be bliss for human beings. May the means (of bliss) ascend upwards! All health to the two-footed and the four-footed that are ours' (i. e. to men and cattle).²⁴⁰³ When the Śaṁyuvāka is repeated the yajamāna mutters 'may I attain stability by yajña, śaṁyoh (health and wealth) by the worship of Viṣṇu' (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 3). The adhvaryu then throws into the fire the middle paridhi with 'O God Agni, that paridhi which you laid down svāhā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 2).

The adhvaryu then pushes on to the burning coals of the āhavanīya the other two paridhis together (the southern and northern ones) with 'the food of sacrifice has come together.' He thrusts the tip of the northern paridhi underneath the middle one in the burning coals and keeps the tip of the southern over the middle one. When the paridhis are being thrown on the fire the yajamāna mutters 'I loosen thy girdle &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 3). After the paridhis are thrown the adhvaryu invokes them 'may you spread (i. e. prolong the life of) the sacrificer'.

The adhvaryu then lays on the bowl of the juhū the upabṛ̥ṣṭ and lets flow from the two ladles the remnants of butter into fire with 'O Viśve Devas! You have for your share the remnants (saṁsṛāva) of ājya,...svāhā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 2).²⁴⁰⁴

2403. For the formula 'तच्छंयोरानुष्मिहे' (Tai. S. II. 6. 10. 2) vide note 1684 above. As the most prominent words in it are शंयोः this formula is called शंयुवाक (lit. utterance of śaṁyu). It occurs in Tai. Br. III. 5.11. These words gave rise to the name of a sage शंयु बार्हस्पत्य whose legend is narrated in the Sat. Br. I. 9. 24-25, Tai. S. II 6. 10. Vido S. B. E. vol. 12 p. 254 n. 1.

2404. Vide Sat. Br. I. 8. 3. 23-27 for the offering of the remnants of ājya to the Viśve Devas. This homa of remnants is an aṅga of the paridhihoma. Vide com. on Āp. III. 7. 14.

The yajamāna makes the tyāga with 'this is for Vasus, Rudras Ādityas who are sharers in the saṁsrāva (remnants of ājya),' then utters a benedictory formula invoking blessings (vide Āp. IV. 12. 10 and Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 4) and touches the veda bunch lying inside the vedi.

The priests partake of the remnants of ājya and wash the ājya sticking to the ladles.²⁴⁰⁵

The adhvaryu takes up the juhū and upabhṛt, the hotṛ takes the veda bunch and the āgnīdhra takes the pot of ājya (ājya-sthālī) together with the sruva. Being about to perform the patnīsaṁyājas²⁴⁰⁶ the adhvaryu passes to the south of the gārhapatya fire (from its east side) and the other two priests (hotṛ and āgnīdhra) pass to its north. The adhvaryu places the two ladles on the sphya with 'I place you in the abode of Agni whose house is indestructible; may you who are happy place me in happiness for the sake of happiness; may you who are the foremost (or leaders) protect me when I am in front' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 2-3). They sit to the west of the gārhapatya and set about the offerings of Patnīsaṁyājas with the two ladles in the dhvāna tone. They three sit to the west of the gārhapatya with knees raised up, the adhvaryu being seated to the south, the āgnīdhra to the north and the hotṛ between the two. The hotṛ hands over the veda bunch to the adhvaryu who takes it with 'I have stood up following the immortals with long life &c.' (Tai. S. I. 2. 8. 1), stands up and sits down to the west of the gārhapatya. When the wife (of the sacrificer) holds the veda bunch and touches the adhvaryu with a blade of darbha, the adhvaryu takes into the juhū four ladlings of ājya with sruva (from the pot of ājya). Then the procedure for each of the four offerings resembles the prayāja offerings, viz.

2405. The ladles are the sruva, the juhū and upabhṛt and not the dbruvā (com. on Sat. II. 4. p. 220).

2406. Patnīsaṁyāja literally means offering made to the wives (of the gods) along with (some other deities). 'पत्नीभिः सममिज्यन्ते ते पत्नीसंयज्ञाः,' com. on Sat. II. 5 p. 223. These are four offerings of ājya made in succession to Soma, Tvaṣṭī, Devapatnīs (wives of gods) and Agni Gārhapati. Vide Sat. Br. I. 9. 2 for a treatment of patnīsaṁyājas. Kāt. (III. 1 2-4) shows that there were several views as to the path by which the adhvaryu went to the south. इवान् is explained as अत्र स्वारयस्त्रयः प्रयशुपलव्यः स इवनिर्ध्वानः । सुस्वप्रयत्नवाननभिच्यक्तज्ञद्वययोगः उपांशुः । com. on Āp. III. 8. 8. All formulas must be uttered here in these tones except some words to be specified later on.

the adhvaryu issues a direction to the hotṛ to recite an anuvākya (invitatory prayer) for Soma (then for Tvaṣṭṛ and so on), then the hotṛ recites the anuvākya, then there is āśruta and pratyāśruta, followed by adhvaryu directing the hotṛ to recite the yājya for Soma (or Tvaṣṭṛ or others as the case may be), and when the hotṛ utters 'vai 3ṣaṭ' the adhvaryu pours the ājya oblation from the juhū into the gārhapatya (in this rite). The offering to Soma is made in the northern part of the gārhapatya, that to Tvaṣṭṛ in the southern part and for the rest between these two. The offering to the wives of the gods may be made in an enclosed space (i. e. by placing a screen to the east of the gārhapatya) so as to shut the gārhapatya from view on the eastern side.²⁴⁰⁷ Additional offerings were allowed to be made to Rākā, Sinīvālī and Kuhū by those who desired sons, cattle or prosperity respectively either before or after the offering to the wives of the gods. The procedure is briefly indicated in the note below.²⁴⁰⁸

The yajamāna makes a tyāga (of the offering) with 'this for Soma' (or for Tvaṣṭṛ and so on) and adds a separate formula in each case invoking separate blessings of vigour, cattle, progeny and stability (vide Āp. IV. 13. 1 and Tai. S. I. 6. 4. 3-4). The adhvaryu offers in the gārhapatya with the sruva an

In modern times a wooden frame is placed to the east of the gārhapatya as a screen. The reason why the gārhapatya is screened from view is stated in the Śat. Br. I. 9. 2. 12 to be "for, up to the time of the Samiṣṭayajus the deities continue waiting, thinking 'this he must offer to us'; he thereby conceals this offering from them; and accordingly Yājñavalkya says 'whenever females (human) eat here they do so apart from men'."

III. 4. 9), for देवपत्नीs are देवानां पत्नी ... शर्मं यच्छत and उत ग्रास्यन्तु देवपत्नी ... जनीनाम् (ऋ. V. 46. 7-8), for अग्निं गृह्णति are अग्निर्होता गृह्णति ... सुतावा (ऋ. VI. 15. 13) and हव्यवाळग्निं ... अवांसि (ऋ. V. 4. 2). Vide आश्व. I. 10. 5. The पुरोनुवाक्या and याज्या in the case of राका, सिनीवाली are respectively ऋ. II. 32. 4-5, II. 32. 6-7 and those for कुहू are stated in आश्व. I. 10. 8 (the entire verses are given in this case). They occur in Tai. S. oblation of ājya with²⁴⁰⁹ 'may the wife unite with her husband... svāhā' (Tai. Br. II. 7. 5 quoted on p. 556 n. 1291). The sacrificer's wife touches the adhvaryu (with a blade of darbha) when he makes the last offering. The yajamāna makes the tyāga 'this is for the undecaying Great Soul, the light in Heaven.'

The adhvaryu then smears the two front joints of the hotṛ's finger as before, first the hind joint and then the front joint. He breathes over it and touches water. The adhvaryu drops into the palm of the right hand of the hotṛ four drops of ājya as idā²⁴¹⁰ and six in that of the āgnīdhra. The hotṛ inaudibly invokes both (viz. his own idā and āgnīdhra's, the hand of the latter being held underneath the former's) in the same words as before (vide Appendix under note 2384). When the words 'this yajamāna has been summoned' are uttered, the wife mutters 'being summoned may I surpass in the possession²⁴¹¹ of cattle,' and the adhvaryu also performs japa as above. When the idā is being invoked the adhvaryu, the āgnīdhra and the wife (with a darbha blade) touch the hotṛ. The yajamāna invokes ājya idā with 'may idā cover us with ghr̥ta &c.' (Āp. IV. 13. 4). At the end of the invocation of idā the hotṛ eats the idā (drops of ājya) and the āgnīdhra eats his with 'father Heaven has been invoked, may the fire summon me from āgnīdhra for my life, lustre &c.' (Tai. Br. II. 7. 6). He silently performs mārjana after partaking of idā. The patnīsamnyājas end with the invocation of idā or they may be finished after reciting Śamyuvāka (Sat. II. 5, p. 225; Āśv. I. 10. 9; Kāt. III. 7. 13).

The adhvaryu sitting to the west of the dakṣiṇa fire places on it the chips cut from the idhma (idhma-pravraścana, vide above p. 1014) and offers two oblations called phalīkarapa and piṣṭalepa.²⁴¹² Having thrown into the ājya ladled into 2409. This homa made with a verse beginning with 'sam patnī' is called संपत्नीय in Sat. II. 5. p. 223 and Āp. III. 9. 10.

2410. This is the 2nd idā and consists only of ājya.

2411. According to Sat. II. 5. p. 224 in the idopahvāna there is a modification viz. उपहृतेयं यजमाना for उपहृतेयं यजमानः and so in the 2nd idā the wife performs japa; while (as the com. of Sat. notes) the followers of Rg. retained उपहृतेयं यजमानः in the 2nd idā also and so the yajamāna engages in the japa.

2412. पिष्टलेपसंयुक्तो होमः पिष्टलेपहोमः तथा फलीकरणहोमः । com. on आप. III. 9. 12.

the juhū four times with the sruva the smallest grains (that were produced when rice grains were husked and pounded for making puroḍāśas), the adhvaryu offers them into the dakṣiṇa fire with 'O fire, that hast unhurt life and not cool body, guard me against the sky (lightning) ... make our food free from poison ... svāhā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 3). When this homa is made the yajamāna rubs (wipes) his mouth with 'svāhā to thee, that art Sarasvatī Yaśobhagīnā' (who loves laudation) and makes the tyāga with 'this is for Agni who has long life and not cool body' and wipes his face with 'svāhā to thee, that art Sarasvatī Veśabhagīnā' ²⁴¹³ (who loves residing together, Āp. III. 10. 2). The adhvaryu takes again four ladlings of ājya with the sruva into the juhū and pours therein the remnants of ground grains which still stick to the several utensils and offers them into the dakṣiṇa fire with 'whatever stuck to the mortar, pestle and the winnowing basket...! Svāhā' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6 and Āp. III. 10. 1). The yajamāna says 'this is for the All-Gods'.

The hotṛ hands over the veda bunch to the sacrificer's wife and makes her repeat aloud 'thou art veda...may I secure progeny. To thee for Kāma' (Āśv. I. 11. 1) and the sacrificer recites, when the veda bunch is being given to the wife 'thou art Veda may I secure gifts' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 4) and when the veda is placed on her lap by the wife ²⁴¹⁴ she repeats 'may veda give &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 4). The wife thrusts it with 'drive out the enemy, the hater' (Āp. III. 10. 4). The wife touches her navel with the top of the veda bunch if she desires progeny.

The hotṛ unties the yoktra (the girdle) of the wife with 'I release thee from the fetter of Varuṇa &c.' (Rg. X. 85. 24) ²⁴¹⁵. The wife lays aside the yoktra and the adhvaryu makes her recite 'here do I unloosen the fetters of Varuṇa &c.' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 2). The hotṛ winds round the yoktra twofold, places it to the west of the gārhapatya fire with its loop and end to the east, keeps over it the blades of the veda with their points to the north 2413. The meaning of Yaśobhagīnā and Veśabhagīnā in Sat. II. 5. p. 230 is obscure. In Vāj. S. II. 20 यज्ञोभगिन्यै is explained by महीधर as जीवतः पुरुषस्य यज्ञंसा यज्ञः तस्य यज्ञसो भगिनी वाग्रपा. In काठकसं. V. 4 सरस्वती is called वेशभगिनी.

2414. According to Āp. (III. 10. 3-4) the hotṛ throws the veda thrice on the lap of the wife who returns it back three times.

and lays down a *pūrṇapātra*²⁴¹⁶ (a vessel filled with water) to the east of the blades but touching them. The hotṛ touches that vessel and makes the wife who touches it repeat a mantra 'thou art full &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1). The hotṛ sprinkles water from the pūrṇapātra in all directions and makes the wife, who also sprinkles water from it in all directions, repeat 'Let the gods and the priests purify (or wipe) in the eastern direction &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1-2, quoted in Āśv. I. 11. 7). The hotṛ places into the joined hands of the sacrificer's wife with the palm upwards the yoktra, and places his left hand with palm turned upwards on the wife's folded hands (but in modern practice the hotṛ does not hold his hand over the wife's) and pours down the water from the pūrṇapātra on the hands (his and the wife's) and makes her repeat 'May I not throw away progeny &c.' (Āśv. I. 11. 8). The hotṛ holds by his right hand the tops of the blades of the veda bunch (the binding cord of which has already been unloosened), proceeds from the gārhapatya to the āhavanīya, repeats Rg. X. 53. 6 (tantum tanvan &c.) and without shaking them, strews continuously some of them from the gārhapatya to the āhavanīya. The rest of the blades the hotṛ lays down and, standing to the north-east of the āhavanīya, takes ājya from the pot of ājya (ājyasthālī) in the sruva and offers with svāhā at the end of the mantras oblations of ājya, which are called 'sarvaprāyaścitta' (expiation for all lapses). The mantras are given below.²⁴¹⁷ Having made the oblations the hotṛ pays homage with the 'saṁsthājapa (lit. the prayer muttered on completion)²⁴¹⁸ and goes out of the sacrificial ground by the way called tīrtha (vide above p. 984).

The adhvaryu pours from a vessel full of water (pūrṇapātra) water into the joined hands of the wife in which the yoktra is held. When the wife lets down the water on the ground she mutters 'May I be united with long life, progeny &c.' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 2). After pouring the water she wipes her face with her wet right hand and goes out as she desires.²⁴¹⁹ When the hotr strews the blades of the veda, the sacrificer repeats 'through you they knew the vedi &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 4).

2416. पूरणपात्र is explained by com. on Sat. II. 5 p. 229 as उदकेन पूर्णं पात्रम् । The mantra is 'पूर्णमसि पूर्णं मे भूयाः सुपूर्णमसि सुपूर्णं मे भूयाः सदासि सन्मे भूयाः सर्वमसि सर्वं मे भूया अक्षितिरसि मा मे क्षेष्टाः ।' ते सं. I. 6. 5. 1. quoted in आश्व. I. 11. 6.

2417. The mantras are 'अयाश्वाग्नेऽस्यनभिःस्तीश्च धेहि भेषजं स्वाहा' (आश्व. I. 11. 13 and सत्त्वा. II. 6. p. 232), अतो देवा धामाभिः स्वाहा (ऋ. I. 22. 16), इदं विष्णु पांसुरे स्वाहा (ऋ. I. 22. 17), भूः स्वाहा, भुवः स्वाहा, स्वः स्वाहा, भूर्भुवः स्वः स्वाहा. The oblations are in all seven. The mantras of सर्वपायाश्चित्त differ a great deal in the different sūtras. अयाश्वाग्ने भेषजं स्वाहा is काठकसं. V. 4.

2418. ओं च मे स्वरश्च मे यज्ञोप च ते नमश्च । यत्ते न्यूनं तस्मै त उप यत्तेऽतिरिक्तं तस्मै ते नम इति संस्थाजपः । आश्व. I. 11. 15. This is called संस्थाजप because it is the last of the acts the hotṛ does in this rite.

The adhvaryu comes back by the way he went, repeats 'may the dhruvā be strengthened &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1) and offers two āhutiś of ājya to Sarasvatī with the juhū into the āhavanīya with 'to thee, who are Sarasvatī, called Yaśobhaginā, svāhā' and with 'to thee Sarasvatī called Veśabhaginā, svāhā.' The yajamāna makes the tyāga in similar words. The adhvaryu again takes ājya in the juhū and offers an āhuti to Indra with 'Indropānasya kehamanaso veśān kuru sumanasasḥ sajātān' (Sat. II. 5. p. 230, Āp. III. 10. 2)²⁴²⁰ and the yajamāna says 'this is for Indra &c.' The adhvaryu offers an oblation of ājya with sruva on the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi with 'we offer worship to pūrṇamāsa the foremost &c. svāhā' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5 quoted by Sat. II. 5 p. 230) and a similar oblation on darśeṣṭi with 'Amēvāsyā is fortunate and full of happiness &c. svāhā.' The yajamāna makes tyāga. These are called pārvaṇahoma and according to some they are optionally performed before the offering to Sviṣṭakṛt. Jaimini (IX. 2. 51-56) establishes that these two homas are not performed in other iṣṭis that are the modifications (vikṛti) of darśapūrṇamāsa and in IX. 2. 57-58 establishes that both are not performed on pūrṇamāseṣṭi and darśeṣṭi, but the first homa (in which there is an oblation to pūrṇamāsa) is alone performed on pūrṇamāseṣṭi and the other on darśeṣṭi. The adhvaryu takes ājya six times with the mantra 'āpyāyatām dhruvā &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1) and offers six homas called Nāriṣṭha homas with six mantras²⁴²¹ (with svāhā at the end of each) and the yajamāna repeats the tyāga six times 'to Nāriṣṭhas Agni and Vāyu,' 'to Nāriṣṭhas Indra and Vāyu (twice),' 'to Nāriṣṭhas Soma and Maruts,' 'to Nāriṣṭha Brahman,' 'to Nāriṣṭha Paramātman.'

2419. Āp. III. 10. 9 says that the wife goes out saying 'May I be endowed with prosperity, cattle, progeny, domestic happiness'. The com. on Sat. II. 5. p. 229 explains the words यथार्थं गच्छति as ब्राह्मणे यथार्थं वाक्यज्ञ उक्तस्तं प्राप्नोतीत्यर्थः and quotes Āp. III. 10. 9.

2420. The meaning of the first part of this mantra is obscure and the text appears to be corrupt. It occurs also in Vārāha Śr. I. 3. 7. 13.

2421. The six Nāriṣṭha mantras occur in Sat. II. 5. p. 231, Āp. II. 20. 6 and II. 21. 1. The first four are from Tai. Br. III. 7. 5, the 5th from Tai. Br. III. 7. 11 and the first portion of the 6th from Tai. S. I. 3. 10. 1. According to com. on Āp. II. 21. 1, these homas are offered with the juhū.

The adhvaryu recites 'apyāyatām dhruvā' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1), takes ājya thirty-eight times and offers with the juhū oblations called sarvaprāyaścittas to thirty-eight deities in the āhavanīya with a mantra for each,²⁴²² and there is an appropriate tyūga in each case.

The adhvaryu repeats the mantra 'apyāyatām &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1), increases the dhruvā (with ājya), stands erect inside the vedi and offers with the dhruvā three homas called *Samiṣṭayajus*²⁴²³ in the āhavanīya with 'ye path-finding gods! after finding the path, return by it. O Lord of the mind! place this our sacrifice among the gods, in speech, in the wind' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 3). When the word svāhā is repeated the second time he throws the barhis into the fire. The yajamāna says 'this is for the path-finding gods, for Yajña—for Paramātman' and utters the invocation 'agne adabdhāyo' (Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 3,) and after the barhis is thrown the verse 'divaḥ khīlo' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6). The yajamāna then eats his own share of the sacrificial food with 'let the lord of sacrifice be united with prayer &c.' (Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 1).

But if it is the sānnāyya, he takes in the boiled milk with 'May this havis, a giver of progeny, be for my welfare &c.' (Tai. Br. II. 6. 3) and curds with 'dadhikrāvyo' (Rg. IV. 39. 6). Āp. IV. 14. 2 notes that a yajamāna who is not a brāhmaṇa should not eat sānnāyya. The adhvaryu strews the vedi with 2422. These 38 mantras (some of them of single words like iṣṭe-bhyaḥ svāhā, bhūḥ svāhā) are set out in Sat. II. 6 pp. 232-234. Āp. (III. 11-12) contains most of them, but in a different order.

2423. 'Samiṣṭayajus' would literally mean 'a Yajus formula indicative of the completion of the sacrifice or of sacrificing together for many deities'. It now means 'an oblation'. The mantra is देवा गातु-विदो गातुं विचवा गातुमित मनसस्पत इमं नो देव देवेषु यज्ञं स्वाहा वाचि स्वाहा वाते धाः। Tai. S. I. 1. 13. 3. There is a difference of view about the Samiṣṭayajus. According to Āp. III. 13. 2 (and com.), Band. I. 21, Kāt. III. 8. 4 the oblation is only one (made at the end of the whole mantra), though the word svāhā occurs thrice (twice in the mantra itself and once repeated at the end of the mantra). According to Sat. II. 6 pp. 234-235 the oblations are three. Vide Vāj. S. II. 21 for the mantra (slightly different) and Sat. Br. I. 9. 2. 26-28 for its explanation.

the darbhas spread on the seat of the hotṛ with 'strew over the vedi &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 5). He carries the prāṇitā waters from the eastern side with 'to you for prosperity' and pours them down inside the vedi with 'may he who joined you together separate you'. The adhvaryu pours on those prāṇitā waters a continuous stream of water for the yajamāna who holds it in his joined hands and mutters 'thou art true, be true to me do not perish for me' (sadasi kṣeṣṭhāḥ' Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 1), throws up water in different directions with 'may gods and priests cleanse with water in the east &c.' (Āsv. I. 11. 6-7), pours the rest inside the vedi with 'I discharge you to the ocean, that is your origin' (Āp. IV. 14. 4) and wipes his face with his wet right hand with 'O Sarasvatī! that honey which you have in waters &c.' (Tai. Br. II. 5. 8 quoted in Āp. IV. 14. 4).

The adhvaryu then takes up the upaveśa and conceals it inside the dust of the utkara (vide Āp. III. 13. 6) and if it is desired to practise magic against one's enemy, then he throws the upaveśa on the utkara after taking the enemy's name (Āp. III. 14. 1, Sat. II. 6. p. 237). Vide Tai. Br. III. 3. 11 for the upaveśa and the mantras. The adhvaryu takes leave of the Yajña with 'Let him who yokes you discharge you' (Tai. S. I. 5. 10. 3 quoted in Sat. II. 6. p. 237) and passes his eye over the whole sacrificial ground.²⁴²⁴ Then he discharges the kapālas with 'the kapālas that were in the cauldron' (Tai. S. I. 5. 10. 3-4 quoted in Sat. II. 6. p. 237), counts them and keeps them aside. Then the adhvaryu goes out. The brahmā also places a fuel-stick on fire with 'the fire has been worshipped &c.' (Āp. III. 13. 1 and Sat. II. 8. p. 261) and then leaves by the way he came.

The yajamāna gets up from his seat and takes what are called 'the strides of Viṣṇu' (viṣṇukrama).²⁴²⁵ These are four taken from the south corner (śroni) on the south side of the vedi. He starts towards the east putting the right foot always first, never allows the left foot to come in front, does not go beyond the āhavanīya place and each succeeding step covers more ground than each preceding one. He first recites four mantras 'thou art the stride of Viṣṇu &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 5. 2) when taking the strides. Then he mutters a long prayer to the Sun 'O Light of Mitra rising to-day &c.' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 6 and Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 1, quoted in Āp. IV. 15. 1 and I. 16. 1). He contemplates the destruction of his enemy with the words 'Here do I exclude from a share my enemy the evil-doer &c.' He revolves round himself from left to right with 'I turn the turning of Indra' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 2) and goes round the āhavanīya with 'Let me have auspicious riches and may evil riches remain away from me' (Āp. IV. 15. 4). He bends over the āhavanīya with 'thou art light' (Tai. S. I. 1. 10. 3), pays homage to it with 'May I be united with my children and may my children be united with me &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 2, Āp. IV. 15. 4). He puts the fire into flames 'O fire, being kindled, shine for me &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 2, Āp. IV. 16. 5). He prays to the āhavanīya with 'The sacrifice is endowed with riches, may I be endowed with riches &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 2, Āp. IV. 15. 5.). He prays to the dakṣiṇa fire 'O fire, cook food pleasantly eaten for our progeny' (Āp. IV. 16. 5). He prays to the gārhapatya fire with the two verses to Agni Pavamāna (Rg. IX. 66. 19-20, Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 2), and with 'O Agni Gṛhapati! I am a good house-holder &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 3). If he has no son he prays²⁴²⁶ 'I pray for that blessing full of spiritual lustre for my son (to be)' and if he has a son he prays 'I pray for my son so and so that blessing &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 3). He sits between the two fires inside the vedi with 'to thee (unborn or born son as the case may be) who art light &c.' (Āp. IV. 16. 6). He places on his lap the blades of the veda (that had been unloosened) and sitting inside the vedi mutters the Atimokṣa mantras 'May Agni guard me against those gods that strike the sacrifice &c.' (Tai. S. III. 5. 4. 1-2 indicated in Āp. IV. 14. 10).

2425. This act is called Viṣṇu-krama because the four mantras repeated in it all begin with 'viṣṇoh kramosi' and because the yajamāna actually takes four steps in it. विष्णुक्रमा नाम तद्विष्णुमन्त्रविशिष्टाः पदविक्षेपाः तान्दक्षिणे वेदिशीर्षे क्रामति । com. on आप. IV. 14. 6.

He then comes to his seat, looks at the whole sacrifice with 'who yokes thee? Let him free thee' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 3). He then discharges himself from vrata with 'O fire, lord of vratas, I observed vrata &c.' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 3, Tai. Ā. IV. 41, Vaj. S. II. 28). He then mutters the mantra which speaks of the re-performance of yajña 'Yajña hath become, it has come into being let him make us overlords, may we be lords of wealth' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 4). He then gets up and mutters a text after going out with his face to the east 'O fire, the sacrifice is endowed with cows May this sacrifice be rich in food in halls' (Tai. S. I. 6. 6. 4) and a further prayer (given in Āp. IV. 16. 15).²⁴²⁷ Then after saying 'thou art rain a bow to you' he touches water. Then the sacrificer issues a direction 'the brāhmaṇas have to be satiated' (with dinner &c.).

Lastly the yajamāna offers final prayers by repeating Rg. I. 189. 1, VII. 4. 1, VII. 10. 3, I. 189. 3, I. 189. 2, III. 6. 1 and winds up with 'salutation to thee once, twice, thrice, four times, five times, ten times, a hundred times. May there be salutation to thee up to a thousand times. Do not injure, may we be free from debts in this world, in the next world, in the third world; may we, free from debts, dwell in all the paths, those that are Devayāna (lead to the gods) and those that lead to the pitṛs.' According to Tai. S. II. 5. 3. 1 and Āp. III. 15. 1-5 there is an additional puroḍāśa offered to Indra Vaimṛdha. Jai. (IV. 3. 32-35) declares that this puroḍāśa is offered only on the Full Moon day sacrifice and not in the New Moon sacrifice. Vide Jai. X. 8. 17-19 for seventeen sāmīdhenī verses in the Vaimṛdha iṣṭi.

There are differences in the procedure of darśeṣṭi as compared with that of the pūrṇamāseṣṭi which have been noted in the above at the respective places. There are several modifications of the darśapūrṇamāsa such as the Dākṣāyaṇa yajña, the Vaimṛdha, Sākamprasthiya, which are omitted here for want of space. Jaimini (II. 3. 5-11) establishes that the Dākṣāyaṇa, Sākamprasthiya and Saṁkrama yajñas are modifications of darśapūrṇamāsa.

Pinḍapitṛyajña

It is so called because balls of rice are offered to the pitṛs²⁴²⁸ in this rite. According to Jaimini IV. 4. 19-21 Pinḍapitṛyajña 2427. यज्ञं च म उप च म आयुश्च मे वलं च ... यज्ञारिष्टो मे सन्तिष्ठस्वेति दर्शपूर्णमासाभ्यां सोमेन पशुना वेष्टा जपति । वृष्टिरसि वृश्च मे पाप्मानमृतात्सत्यमुपागामितीष्ट्वाप उपस्पृशति । तदिदं सर्वयज्ञेषूपस्पर्शनं भवति । आप. IV. 16. 15-16. Vide तै. ब्रा. III. 10. 9 for वृष्टिरसि &c.

2428. अमावास्यायां यद्वहश्चन्द्रमसं न पश्यन्ति तद्वहः पिण्डपितृयज्ञं कुरुते । आप. I. 7. 1-2. रुद्रवृत्त explains 'पिण्डैः पितॄणां यज्ञः'; महादेव on सत्यावाह says 'पिण्डैः पिण्डदानेन सहितः पितॄभ्यो देवेभ्यो यज्ञा होमः स पिण्डपितृयज्ञः'—II. 7. p. 245.

is an independent rite and not a mere subordinate part of the darśa sacrifice. On the other hand several writers held that it was a subordinate part (aṅga) of darśa e. g. Kāt. IV. 1. 30 appears to be of that opinion and the paddhati on it notes that all bhāṣyakāras like Karka stick to that opinion.²⁴²⁹ The piṇḍapitṛyajña is briefly described below. For details, vide Sat. Br. II. 4. 2, Tai. Br. I. 3. 10, II. 6. 16, Āśv. II. 6-7, Āp. I. 7-10, Kāt. IV. 1. 1-30, Sat. II. 7, Baud. III. 10-11. It is performed on amāvāsyā day when the moon cannot be seen and its distance from the sun is the least, in the last third part of the day or when only the rays of the sun are visible on the tops of trees.²⁴³⁰ The caru (boiled rice) is cooked on the dakṣiṇāgni and the oblation is offered in the same. In this and other ways a contrast is brought out between rites for gods and for Manes. He kindles a blade on the dakṣiṇa fire and carries it to the south-east of that fire with the mantra 'ye rūpāni &c.' (Vāj. S. II. 30).²⁴³¹ All actions are to be done facing the south-east unless otherwise specified. The darbha grass (to be employed in this rite) is severed at one stroke and is brought with or without its roots (Āp. I. 7. 3-4). Strewing round the dakṣiṇāgni darbha grass (paristarani) with their ends turned to the south in the case of those that are placed to the north or south he spreads darbhas to the north. He places to the north-east or to the north-west of the dakṣiṇāgni singly the yajñapātras required in this rite on darbha grass viz. carusthāli, śūrpa, sphya, mortar and pestle, sruva, dhruvā, antelope-skin, fuel-sticks cut off at one stroke, mekṣaṇa, kamaṇḍalu, and whatever else may be necessary. The adhvaryu going to the south of the śakaṭa (the wooden frame on which the paddy is stored and which is to the west of the fire) fills the carusthāli (vessel for cooking rice) that is placed on the śūrpa with paddy to the brim and removes the grains (that rise above the brim) on to the śūrpa (which overflowing grains are returned to the śakaṭa). The mortar is then placed on the black antelope-skin and the wife with her face to the south-east beats with the pestle the paddy grains taken out in the carusthāli and removes the husks by means of the winnowing basket. Without trying to separate the husked grains from the unhusked ones the grains are washed once and cooked on the dakṣiṇa fire (in such a way that the grains of rice are not entirely soft). He should draw with the sphyra a line between the gārhapatya and dakṣiṇa fires or to the south-east of the latter with the words 'the asuras and evil-spirits that occupy the vedi are scattered away' (Vāj. S. II. 29 quoted in Sat. II. 7. p. 249 and Āp. I. 7. 13). He should then sprinkle that line (as the vedi for this rite) with water, spread round it the darbha grass (cut off with one stroke), take clarified butter in the dhruvā spoon, place it to the south of the dakṣiṇāgni, sprinkle on the mess of cooked rice clarified butter from the dhruvā. He places to the south of the dakṣiṇāgni, collyrium, unguents, a mat and a pillow. Wearing the sacred thread in the prācīnāvīta form (according to Āp. I. 8. 3 and Sat. II. 7. p. 248 the adhvaryu wears it in the upavīta form) he offers on the fire the idhma (i. e. fifteen fuel-sticks), takes a portion of the boiled rice with the mekṣaṇa, pours clarified butter over it, cuts off two portions of the rice on it, again sprinkles clarified butter over²⁴³² the portions and the rice from which they are taken, offers into the dakṣiṇa fire one āhuti (oblation) with the words 'Somāya pitṛmate svadhā namaḥ', then again sprinkles clarified butter on the portion cut off and offers it with the words 'Agnaye kavyavāhanāya svadhā namaḥ'. He²⁴³³ then throws the mekṣaṇa on to the fire. Then on the line made with the sphyra he sprinkles water thrice²⁴³⁴ with the mantras 'Śundhantām pitarāḥ, śundhantām pitāmahāḥ, śundhantām prapitāmahāḥ' (may the fathers, grand-fathers and great-grand-fathers wash themselves pure). He offers three balls of rice on that line one after another with the hand turned sideways (i. e. the piṇḍa is let off on the line from the part of the palm between the thumb and the index finger) with appropriate mantras, the first to the father with the words 'this is for you father,'²⁴³⁵ N. N. and those who come after you', to the grand-father with the words 'this is for you grand-father &c.', to the great-grandfather with similar words. The piṇḍa (ball of rice) for the great-grandfather is the biggest of the three, that for the grand-father being larger than that for the father. 'There was a difference of view among the teachers as to the procedure when any of the three ancestors was living, Gāṇagāri holding that piṇḍas were offered only to the deceased ancestors and he who was living was only honoured, while Taulvali said that piṇḍas were to be offered to three ancestors whether living or dead and Gautama stating that if any ancestor out of the first three above the sacrificer was alive, three piṇḍas were to be offered and an ancestor beyond the great-grand-father may then be included. Āśv. (II. 6. 20-23) refutes all these views by saying that no piṇḍa can be offered to any ancestor beyond the great-grand-father and none to those who are alive nor to any ancestor between whom and a preceding ancestor a living ancestor intervenes, but that the piṇḍas meant for ancestors that are alive may be thrown into fire (with svāhā at the end and not svadhā). According to Āp. I. 9. 8 and Sat. p. 252 if the householder's father be living he should not offer piṇḍas but should stop after he performs the homa. If he has²⁴³⁶ two fathers or grand-fathers or great-grand-fathers (owing to adoption or niyoga) he should take two names with reference to the piṇḍa offered to that ancestor. When the piṇḍas are placed on the line referred to above he invokes the piṇḍas with a formula 'Here you may regale yourselves, O pitṛs and may you partake according to your shares' (Vāj.S.II.31).²⁴³⁷ Then he turns round and faces the north, sits down holding his breath till he feels exhausted, then again turns round and faces the piṇḍas and utters the invocation

2432. In the case of this offering there is उपस्तरण, then हिरवदान, अभिघारण (and प्रत्यभिघारण) as in the case of oblations to gods.

2434. Āp. I. 8. 9 notes that all actions from this onwards are done by the house-holder himself who wears his sacred thread in the prācīnāvīta form.

2435. The words would be एतत्ते तत् अमुकशर्मन् ये च त्वामनु एतत्ते पितामह अमुकशर्मन् &c. Some added अमुकसगोत्र after अमुकशर्मन्, but the com. on Sat. II. 7. p. 251 says that it is wrong.

2436. यदि द्विपिता स्यादेकैकस्मिन्पिण्डे द्वौ द्वाडुपलक्षयेत् । आप. I. 9. 7 and Sat. II. 7. p. 251. Then the formula will be एतद्वा ततो (पितामहौ प्रपितामहौ वा) अमुकनामानौ ये च युवामनु.

Then he again offers water (ninayana) with the words 'Sūndhantām &c.', (vide above p. 1087) on the line made with the sphya, he puts on the three pīṇḍas one after another the unguents and collyrium respectively with the words 'asau abhyaṅkṣva' (you by name so and so father &c. apply the unguents) and 'asau aṅkṣva' (you so and so father, &c. put the collyrium in the eye). He should then place as garment on each of the pīṇḍas the hem of a garment (daśā) or woolen tuft or a hair from his own body (the part above navel) if he is beyond fifty years of age with the words 'O pitṛs, this is the garment for you, may you not come in contact with any other (garment) than this' (Āśv. II. 7. 6). Then he should wait upon the pitṛs with salutation and mutter the mantra 'salutation to you, Pitṛs, for (securing) food, salutation to you, Pitṛs, for strength' &c.²⁴³⁸ and also the three verses 'manonvāhuvāmahe' (Rg. X. 57. 3-5).²⁴³⁹ He should then make the pitṛs start forward on a stream of water (i. e. by pouring water on the pīṇḍas) with the mantra 'O well-disposed pitṛs! May you depart away by the ancient and awe-inspiring paths, after bestowing on us wealth and welfare. May you send down to us prosperity including all manly sons' (vide Tai. S. I. 8. 5. 2 for first half). He should walk a little towards the dakṣiṇāgni with the verse Rg. IV. 10. 1 and then towards the gārhapatya with the mantra 'May the gārhapatya fire deliver me from whatever sin I may have committed against Heaven and Earth, or parents and may the same fire make me sinless' (Tai. S. I. 8. 5. 3). He should take hold of the middle pīṇḍa with the words 'O pitṛs! bestow on me a valiant (son)' and should make his wife eat that ball of rice with the mantra²⁴⁴⁰

II. 7. 7; compare आप. I. 10. 2 and कार्या. IV. 1. 15 for the same rule. वाज. सं. II. 32 contains the mantra with some variations.

2439. Each of the three verses (Rg. X. 57. 3-5) and Tai. S. I. 8. 5. 2-3 contains the word 'manas' and hence they are called 'manasvati' verses. Vide Āp. I. 10. 5.

2440. पत्नीं प्राशयेदाद्यत्त पितरो गर्भे कुमारं पुष्करस्रजम् । यथायमरया असत् ॥ आश्व. II. 7. 13. The Vāj. S. II. 33 reads यथेह पुष्पो असत् (which is also read by Āp. I. 10. 11). The mantra आद्यत्त पितरो is recited by the wife, according to Nārāyaṇa on Āśv. II. 7. 13. If there are many wives they may divide the pīṇḍa (com. on Kāt. IV. 1. 22).

'O pitṛs! may you deposit an embryo that will be a young boy wearing a lotus wreath, so that he may be unhurt' (compare Vāj. S. II. 33). The other two piṇḍas may be thrown into water or fire or a person who has recently lost all appetite for food may eat the two or one who is harassed by some incurable disease (such as leprosy or tuberculosis) may eat them, the result being that he is either cured or dies. Kāt. IV. 1. 20 adds that the adhvaryu collects the piṇḍas in a pot and the house-holder bends down and takes the smell thereof.²⁴⁴¹ Then the darbha blades taken out with one stroke are thrown into the fire, the utensils are sprinkled with water and then taken up in twos and laid aside.

A householder who had not consecrated the three vedic fires also had to perform the piṇḍa-pitr-yajña on amāvāsyā, but he offered it in the gr̥hya fire. Vide Āśv. Śr. II. 7. 18, Sam. K. p. 838ff, Sam. Pr. 908ff. Gaut. V. 5 prescribes that a householder should at least daily offer water to the pitṛs and do more (i. e. offering food &c.) according to his ability and inclination. Manu II. 176 prescribes daily pitṛ-tarpana (satiating the pitṛs with water), for which see pp. 668-69.

CHAPTER XXXI

CĀTURMĀSYAS (seasonal sacrifices) ²⁴⁴²

According to Āśv. II. 14. 1 the term Iṣṭayana comprehends the Cāturmāsyas, Turāyana, Dākṣāyana and other iṣṭis. The cāturmāsyas are three (or four according to some), viz. Vaiśvadeva, Varuṇapraghāsa, Sākamedha (and Śunāsīriya). Each of these is called a parvan (part or joint) of the cāturmāsyas. They are called cāturmāsyas because each of them takes place after four months. ²⁴⁴³ They are performed respectively on the Full Moon days of Phālguna (or Caitra), of Āṣāḍha, Kārtika and on the 5th full moon from the day on which the Sākamedha is performed (i. e. on Phālguni) or two or three days before it (com. on Āśv. II. 20. 2). They indicate the advent of three seasons viz. vasanta (spring), varṣā (rains) and hemanta ²⁴⁴⁴ (autumn). If the Vaiśvadevaparva is performed on Caitra Full Moon, then the *Varuṇapraghāsa*s and *Sākamedha*s will be performed on Śrāvaṇa and Mārgaśīrṣa Full Moon days respectively. The Tai. Br. I. 6. 8 states the reward secured by the performance of the cāturmāsyas. ²⁴⁴⁵

According to Āśv. on the day previous to the Full Moon of Phālguna when beginning the cāturmāsyas he performs an iṣṭi for (Agni) Vaiśvānara and Parjanya. According to Kāt. V. 1. 2 there is an option viz. he may perform this iṣṭi or the Anvārambhanīyā iṣṭi. Then on the Full Moon day he performs the Vaiśvadeva iṣṭi in the morning and then performs the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi. According to the com. on Kāt. V.1. the Vaiśvadeva iṣṭi is performed in the morning of the first day after Full Moon and then follows the pūrṇamāsa iṣṭi of Phālguna. The sacrificer has to keep certain observances on all the parvans of the cāturmāsya viz. he has to shave²⁴⁴⁶ his head and face, to sleep on the ground (not on a cot), to avoid honey, meat, salt, sexual intercourse and decorations of the body. There is an option as to shaving the moustaches and beard viz. he should shave only on the first and last parvans or may do so on all four. There are five offerings common to all cāturmāsya, viz., a puroḍāśa (cake) on eight potsherds for Agni, boiled rice (caru) for Soma, a puroḍāśa on 12 or 8 potsherds (12 according to Tai. S. I. 8. 2) for Savitṛ (upāṁśu, inaudibly), a caru for Sarasvatī, a caru of finely ground rice for Pūṣan. The reward secured by the performance of the cāturmāsya²⁴⁴⁷ is heaven. The cāturmāsya may be performed throughout life or for one year only.

In the introductory iṣṭi to Vaiśvānara and Parjanya, there is a cake prepared on twelve potsherds for Vaiśvānara and caru for Parjanya. The anuvākya verses (according to Āśv.) for the two are 'vaiśvānaro ajījanad-agnir &c.' (Āśv. II. 15. 2 sets out the whole) and 'parjanyaḥ pragāyata' (Rg. VII. 102. 1) respectively and the yājñya verses respectively are 'prṣṭo divi' (Rg. I. 98. 2) and 'pra vātā vānti' (Rg. V. 83. 4). In the Vaiśvadeva-parvan itself there are (besides the five offerings common to all cāturmāsya) three more offerings viz. a cake (puroḍāśa) on seven potsherds for Marut Svatavaś (self-strong) or for the Maruts, a payasyā (or āmikṣā, according to Baud. V. I)²⁴⁴⁸ to the All-Gods (Viśve Devāḥ) and a cake on a single potsherd to Dyāvāpṛthivī (Heaven and Earth).

Kāt. (V. 1. 21-24) requires that this Vaiśvadeva-parvan should be performed in a spot which inclines towards the east,²⁴⁴⁹ that the sacrificer and his wife each put on two fresh and unworn garments (one lower and the other upper) which they have to wear again at the Varuṇapraghāsaparvan. Kāt. (V. 1. 25-26) following Śat. Br. (II. 5. 1) says that barhis (sacred grass to be strewn on sacrificial ground) is tied up in three bunches separately with a rope of grass and then all three bunches are tied together with a bigger rope and therein (i. e. inside this last rope) is thrust a bunch of flowering kuśa grass, which is to be used as prastara. After putting the *yajñapātras*²⁴⁵⁰ on the sacrificial ground, fire is produced by churning from the araṇis. Being directed by the adhvaryu the hotṛ priest repeats at the time of churning fire the verses Rg. I. 24. 3, I. 22. 13, VI. 16. 13-15 (except the last pāda of VI. 16. 15) and stops till he receives another direction (sampraīṣa) from the adhvaryu. If fire is not produced at once the hotṛ should go on repeating the hymn, Rg. X. 118, till fire is struck from the araṇis.²⁴⁵¹ On hearing from the adhvaryu that fire is produced and that he should repeat a formula for that event, the hotṛ repeats the last pāda of Rg. VI. 16. 15 at which he had stopped (after the syllable om added at the end of that verse of Rg. X. 118 at which he hears about the production of fire). Then he should repeat Rg. I. 74. 3 and stop after repeating half of Rg. VI. 16. 40, then recite Rg. VI. 16. 41-42, I. 12. 6, VIII. 43. 14, the verse 'tamarjayanta sukratum' and then repeat Rg. X. 90. 16 as the paridhāniyā (the finishing verse).²⁴⁵² There are nine prayājas and nine anuyājas in the Vaiśvadeva-parvan, while in the Darśapūṇamāsa there are only five prayājas and three anuyājas. The number nine of the prayājas²⁴⁵³ is made up by adding before the 5th prayāja of the Darśapūrṇamāsa four as stated in the note below. Rg. V. 82. 7 and VI. 71. 6 are the anuvākyā and yājyā for the offering to Savitr, Rg. VI. 54. 9 and VI. 58. 1 for that to Pūṣan and VII. 59. 11 and VI. 66. 9 for that to Maruts.²⁴⁵⁴ The nine anuyājas are made up by adding after the first anuyāja of the darśapūrṇamāsa six more. After the anuyājas, or after the sūktavāka or śamyuvāka, an offering of vājina is made to the deities called Vājins. The remainder of the vājina is brought in a vessel and is dealt with in the same way as iḍā (i. e. it is placed in the folded hands of the hotṛ by the adhvaryu, the hotṛ then holds it in his left hand and then on the right hand some ghee is sprinkled by the adhvaryu and then two portions of the vājina are put thereon and then again some ājya is sprinkled over it), the vessel is then raised as high as the mouth or nose, the hotṛ should request the other priests in order (as done in the note) to repeat an invocation (upahava) with a mantra and then the hotṛ, adhvaryu, brahmā and āgnīdhra partake of the vājina by merely smelling²⁴⁵⁵ it. The sacrificer partakes of the vājina actually. Kāt. (V. 2. 9 and 12) adds that the adhvaryu offers three offerings called samiṣṭa-yajus respectively to Vāta, Yajña and Yajñapati with three mantras (viz. Vāj. VIII. 21, 22 first half and 22 latter half) or only one samiṣṭa-yajus may be offered (with Vāj. S. VIII. 21) in Vaiśvadeva and Śunāsirīya parvans. According to the Śat. Br. (II. 5. 1. 21) the dakṣiṇā in this rite is the first born calf of the season. Kāt. (V. 2. 13) further says that the sacrificer may on finishing each of the three cāturmāsyaś (except Śunāsirīya) shave himself.

2451. According to Kāt. V. 2. 1-5 the adhvaryu directs the hotṛ to repeat, while the churning proceeds, the formulæ (Vāj. S. V. 2) गायत्रेण त्वा इन्द्रसा मधनामि त्रैष्टुभेन त्वा ... मधनामि जागतेन ... मधनामि and the adhvaryu churns from left to right thrice for each of the three formulæ, that when fire is produced it is put in the place of the āhavanīya with Vāj. S. V. 3.

Jai. (IV. 1. 22-24) concludes that āmikṣā is the principal purpose of mixing curds in boiled milk and not vājina and in VIII. 2. 1-9 that in offering vājina the procedure of iṣṭi is to be followed and not of Somayāga though śruti in one passage states 'somo vai vājinam'. Vide also Jai. II. 2. 23.

Varuṇapraghāsa.²⁴⁵⁶

The word Varuṇapraghāsa is masculine and is always employed in the plural. The Śat. Br. (II. 5. 2. 1) gives a fanciful etymology viz. that yavas (barley grains) belong to Varuṇa and as these are eaten (from ghas to eat) in this rite it is so called. This rite is performed in the rainy season four months after Vaiśvadeva on the Full Moon day of Āṣāḍha or of Śrāvaṇa. The sacrificer should go out of his house to a spot where plenty of shrubs grow. Two altars (vedi) have to be prepared to the east of the āhavanīya inclined towards the east, one south of the other. The northern vedi is in charge of the adhvaryu and the southern one in charge of his assistant, the pratiprasthātṛ (Āp. VIII. 5. 5.). The latter follows the adhvaryu in doing the same actions on the southern vedi that are done by the adhvaryu on the northern vedi except carrying the water forward, girding the wife, producing fires and a few others specified in Kāt. V. 4. 33; all the orders (sampraiśas, like 'agnaye samidhyamānāya anubrūhi') are to be uttered once and everything that concerns the uttering of words is to be done by the adhvaryu only (Āp. VIII. 5. 17)²⁴⁵⁷. But Jai. XII. 1. 18 says that the mantras for taking ājya, for prokṣaṇa and the like are to be recited by the two separately. The procedure is like that of Vaiśvadevaparvan except where special directions are given. The two vedis are separated from each other by a space (at the corners) two, three or four aṅgulas or a span or even wider (Āp. VIII. 5. 10). There is a single utkara. The pratiprasthātṛ moves between the two vedis. On the previous day he makes ready pots full of karambha i. e. husked grains of barley slightly fried on the dakṣiṇa fire, ground and mixed 2456. Vide Tai. S. I. 8. 3, Vāj. S. III. 44-47, Tai. Br. I. 6. 4, Śat. Br. II. 5. 2, Āśv. II. 17, Baud V. 5-9, Kāt. V. 3-5, Āp. VIII. 5-9.

2457. Jaimini XI. 2. 35-43 deals with the question that pratiprasthātṛ does on the southern vedi whatever adhvaryu does on the northern. Jai. further (XI. 2. 44-48) states that though there are two vedis and the pratiprasthātṛ follows the adhvaryu in doing all that he does, there is not a double set of priests.

with curds (Kāt. V. 3. 2). According to Āp. (VIII. 6. 3) it is the wife that makes these karambhapātras. These pātras exceed by one the number of the children (sons, unmarried daughters, grandsons and unmarried grand-daughters) of the house-holder (Kāt. V. 3. 3-5, Āp. VIII. 5. 41, who includes daughters-in-law) or they are at least three (if the house-holder is childless or has only a son or two). The figures of a ram and ewe are also made of the remaining part of the ground and fried barley used for the karambhapātras, the male being made by the adhvaryu and the female by the pratiprasthātr and each figure having the characteristic signs of sex. The figures of the ram and ewe are covered by the adhvaryu and pratiprasthātr respectively with a bunch of the wool of some animal other than the ṛḍakā (wild goat) or with the ground tips of kuśa (in the absence of wool). Besides the five offerings common to all cāturmāsyas (these being offered in the Varuṇa-praghāṣas with all attributes and subsidiaries as in Vaiśvadeva, according to Jai. VII. 1. 17-21), in this rite offerings are made to four more, viz. Indra and Agni, the Maruts, Varuṇa and Ka i. e. Prajāpati (Āśv. II. 17. 14) and the offerings are a cake on twelve potsherds (for Indrāgni), payasyā or āmikṣā (for Maruts and Varuṇa) and a cake on one potsherd for Ka silently. All offerings are made from yava or only the karambhapātras are so made and the figures of the ram and the ewe also are made from yava and the rest from rice grains (Āp. VIII. 5. 36-37). The anuvākya and yājyā verses of each of these four special offerings to Indrāgni, Maruts, Varuṇa and Ka are respectively²⁴⁵⁸ Rg. VII. 94. 18, VI. 60. 1; I. 86. 1, V. 58. 5; I. 25. 19, I. 24. 11; IV. 31. 1, X. 121. 1 (Āśv. II. 17. 15). Straight to the east of the āhavanīya about three prakramas from it the northern vedi is prepared and several rules are laid down in Kāt. (V. 3. 13 ff) and its com. about its extent. The northern vedi is six or seven aratnis in length from west to east, its western side is four aratnis and its eastern side is three aratnis or the vedi may be even much larger than this. On this vedi a fire-place is constructed with the earth dug up from the sacrificial pit called cātvāla which is measured with a yoke-pin 32 āṅgulas in length and made to the east of the utkara and after leaving a space between it and the utkara for the priests to move about. The pit is knee-deep, is outside the uttaravedi to its east and is measured from the northern corner of the uttaravedi at a distance equal to the yoke-pin and is square, the east side being 32 aṅgulas in extent or $\frac{1}{3}$ of the vedi or of the extent of a yoke or of ten steps of the yajamāna (on all sides). In the midst of the northern vedi a hole (nābhi) is made, a span in length on four sides and having four corners or it may be as large as the hoof of a bull or a horse. On the uttaravedi water is sprinkled with a mantra and gravel is also spread with 'a lioness art thou' (Vāj. S. V. 10). That night the uttaravedi is covered with darbhas. In the morning the adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ carry forward fire on to the two vedis from the gārhapatya (according to Āp. VIII. 5. 22) or from the āhavanīya (according to Kāt. V. 4. 2-3) by means of kindled fuel-sticks (idhma) held in earthen pots or by dividing the āhavanīya in two parts. Jai. (VII. 3. 23-25) declares that the carrying forward of the fire is done only in the Varuṇapraghāśas and Sākamedhas. The pratiprasthātṛ draws with the sphyā a line from the āhavanīya to the northern hind corner of the southern vedi or of the uttaravedi (according to Kāt. V. 4. 9-10) or he connects the two vedis (Āp. VIII. 5. 20) by drawing a line from the north hind corner of the southern vedi to the south front corner of the uttaravedi. He surrounds the hole (nābhi) with three sticks (paridhis), one span long, of devadāru tree on the west, south and north (with Vāj. S. V. 13) and puts down thereon guggulu (bdellium) and perfumed substances and the hair on the head or between the horns of a ram and places the fires on these materials (sambhāras). The pratiprasthātṛ places dakṣiṇa fire on a square mound of one aratni in length after drawing lines and sprinkling water. The figure of the ram is put in the payasyā meant for Maruts and that of the ewe in the payasyā meant for Varuṇa. The liquid called vājina (of both payasyās) is collected in separate pots and in the payasyā are put the fruit of karīra and leaves of śamī. All the offerings except the payasyā for Maruts and the pots of karambha are placed by the adhvaryu on the uttaravedi; while the pratiprasthātṛ places the payasyā for Maruts together with the pot for ājya and also the karambha pot (if the yava grains for them had not been taken out by the adhvaryu) on the southern vedi and the vājina is placed near the utkara by both. When the adhvaryu issues a direction to the āgnīdhra 'please sweep clean the paridhis of the two fires' (the two āhavanīyas on the two vedis) with the ropes binding the idhma, the pratiprasthātṛ goes to the sacrificer's wife sitting near the gārhapatya and asks her to declare what lover or lovers (jāra)²⁴⁵⁹ she has. She either declares the names of her lovers or lifts up (if she feels shame in the declaration) as many blades from the bunch of darbhas lying on the ground as the number of lovers she has had. If she names any, he (the pratiprasthātṛ) declares that Varuṇa will seize him or them. If she conceals the truth, the result would be that her dear relatives would suffer. If she has none she says so. In that case or when she has declared or intimated her lover or lovers, the pratiprasthātṛ makes her repeat the verse 'praghāsino havāmahe' (Vāj. III. 44). The pots are placed in a śūrpa made of iṣṭka (reed) in which a little ājya is sprinkled, then there is further sprinkling of ājya thereon twice (abhīghāraṇa), the śūrpa is placed on the head of the wife who is led by the pratiprasthātṛ between the fires and the seats of the brahmā priest and the sacrificer to the east of both āhavanīyas and then to the northern vedi; and she standing to the east of the dakṣiṇa fire with her face to the west takes down from her head the śūrpa into her right hand and offers the contents (using the śūrpa²⁴⁶⁰ as a juhū ladle) into the dakṣiṇa fire with 'mo ṣu ṇa indrātra' (Rg. I. 173. 12, Vāj. S. III. 46 or Tai. S. I. 8. 3. 1) muttered by the sacrificer and with the verse 'yad grāme' (Vāj. S. III. 45, Tai. S. I. 8. 3. 1) uttered by the wife as offering prayer (yājyā). Āp. (VIII. 6. 26) says that the adhvaryu or pratiprasthātṛ may offer the oblation of karambha pots and the sacrificer and his wife may only touch his hand from behind. When the pratiprasthātṛ leads back the wife to her seat near the gārhapatya fire (by the same way that she came) he makes her repeat the verse 'akran karma' (Vāj. S. III. 47, Tai. S. I. 8. 3. 1). Then the adhvaryu offers the five offerings common to all cāturmāsya (stated above) and the cake to Indra and Agni

2459. This is based on the Tai. Br. I. 6. 5 'यज्जारं सन्ति निर्दिशेत् निर्दिश्यैवेनं वरुणपादोन ग्राहयति'. This is quoted by Āp. VIII. 6. 22 and Āp. states (VIII. 6. 19) that she is made to repeat 'praghāsyaṇ havāmahe' Tai. S. I. 8. 3. Vide note 1342 for the first part of the quotation. The Sat. Br. II. 5. 2. 20 has also a similar passage.

2460. Āp. VIII. 6. 23 says that both husband and wife offer the contents of the śūrpa, while Kāt. V. 5. 11 gives an option. Āp. (VIII. 6. 24) says that the verse 'mo ṣu' is repeated by the yajamāna as the invitatory prayer (puroṇuvākya) and 'yad grāme' (which refers to the commission of sins and the expiation thereof) as the yājyā by both.

on twelve potsherds and then sits silent. Then the prati-prasthātṛ cuts off a portion of the āmikṣā for Maruts together with the whole of the figure of the ewe (this is the first avadāna) and offers it into fire. He mixes the second portion of the payasyā for Maruts with the leaves of śamī and fruits of karīra and offers it. Then the adhvaryu offers two portions from the āmikṣā meant for Varuṇa mixing the figure of the ram in the first or second avadāna for Varuṇa. According to Āp. (VIII. 6. 31) the adhvaryu offers the first portion of the payasyā along with the figure of the ram and the second portion of payasyā having in it the fruit of karīra and the leaves of śamī. Then the adhvaryu offers the cake to Ka silently. Then both adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ make an offering to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. The fee (dakṣiṇā) is either a cow with its calf or a horse or six or twelve bulls.²⁴⁶¹

The rite is concluded by the priests and the sacrificer and his wife going for a bath (avabhṛtha) in a river²⁴⁶² or the like taking with them the remainder of payasyā for Varuṇa and the scrapings from the paṇ that are treated like the refuse (ṛjīṣa of Soma). The remainder of payasyā serves as havis (sacrificial offering) at the avabhṛtha, a portion of which is offered to Varuṇa and the whole of what remains is offered to Agni and Varuṇa instead of to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. The sacrificer and his wife silently come to the water, throw into the water the scrapings (niṣkāśa) that are placed in a vessel (sthālī) with a mantra (Vāj. S. III. 48, according to Kāt. V. 5. 30 and 'samudre te' Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 2, according to Āp. VIII. 8. 12). They do not plunge their heads into water but only splash water over their heads and rub each other's backs with water. They then put on new clothes and make a gift of the clothes so far worn (that they had already worn at the Vaiśvadeva-parvan) to one of the (five) priests or to another (worthy) person at their pleasure. After returning to the house the sacrificer puts a fuel-stick on the āhavanīya (with Vāj. S. VIII. 27). Jai. (VII. 3. 12-15) states that this avabhṛtha has the same characteristics as the avabhṛtha in 2461. According to Āp. (VIII. 7. 5-7) a full grown bull is the fee or the sacrificer may give more at his pleasure and he says that some teachers prescribe a cow as the fee.

2462. According to Āp. VIII. 8. 15 the sacrificer invokes the water with 'devīr-āpaḥ' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 3) and repeats 'sumitriyā na āpa' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 2) when going into the water.

Somayāga and that the material offered therein is the scrapings from the paṇ and not the puroḍāśa (VII. 3. 16).

Sākamedha²⁴⁶²

This third parvan of the cāturmāsya is described at great length in Baud., Āp. and Kāt. Only a few salient features are brought out below. 'Sākamedha' is used in the plural, since there are many rites therein and many and various offerings (com. on Kāt. V. 6. 1). It literally means 'kindling along with or at the same time as' (sākam edha). The name is probably given because the first offering in it is a cake on eight potsherds offered to Agni Anikavat with the rising sun.²⁴⁶⁴ It is performed four months after the Varuṇa-praghāśas on the Full Moon day of Kārtika or Mārgaśīrṣa (according as the Vaiśvadeva-parvan was performed on the full moon of Phālguna or Caitra). The whole of this parvan requires two days. On the day previous to the full moon there are three iṣṭis offered at the three savanas (morning, midday and evening) to the three deities respectively, viz. to Agni Anikavat a cake on eight potsherds in the morning, to Sāntāpana Maruts caru (oblation of cooked rice) at midday, to Gr̥hamedhin Maruts in the evening a caru boiled in the milk of all the cows belonging to the sacrificer (Āp. VIII. 9. 8). As regards this last caru it is stated (Āp. VIII. 10. 8 and VIII. 11. 8-10, Kāt. V. 6. 29-30) that if plenty of rice is cooked the priests and the sons and grandsons of the sacrificer (who have had the upanayana performed) eat the food to satiety and go to sleep that night in the same hall without indulging in any talk about poverty or hunger. Jaimini (V. 1. 19-22) refers to the text 'agnaye anikavate prātar-aṣṭakapālāḥ &c.' and states as the conclusion that all the three rites are performed on one day and no part of the three is to be performed the next day. On that night the milch cows are let loose to mix up among their calves (which can then drink the milk of their mothers without let or hindrance). He, however, binds down that calf which is required for milking the cow that has lost its own calf (and which is to be milked the next morning for the offerings to the Manes). That night and in the next morning agnihotra is performed with rice gruel (and not with milk). On the next day (the principal day of Sākamedha) the sacrificer either before or after the daily agnihotra performs a homa with a darvi taking a portion of the boiled rice sticking to the bottom of the sthālī (pot) that had been cooked for the offering to Grhamedhin Maruts the previous evening. He fills the *darvi*²⁴⁶⁵ (ladle) with a mantra (Vāj. S. III. 49, Tai. S. I. 8. 4. 1). Then the adhvaryu directs the yajamāna to fetch a bull and make it bellow. When the bull bellows, he offers the rice in the darvi into fire with a mantra (Vāj. S. III. 50, Tai. S. I. 8. 4. 1). If the bull does not bellow, then the oblation is offered after the brahmā priest directs ' offer '. Āśv. (II. 18. 11-12) states that the homa may be offered (if the bull does not bellow) at the thunder of a cloud or some make the āgnīdhra roar calling him ' brahmaputra ' (' the son of the brahmā priest ', whose assistant he is). The bull is given as fee to the adhvaryu. Then an iṣṭi is offered to Kṛdīn Maruts with a cake cooked on seven potsherds and a caru to Aditi. This is followed by a mahāhavis (a great offering), which consists of eight offerings to eight deities. They are five offerings common to all cāturmāsya, the 6th offering is a cake on twelve potsherds to Indra and Agni, the 7th is caru to Mahendra (or according to Āśv. II. 18. 18 to Indra, or Vṛtrahan Indra or Mahendra), the 8th is a cake on one potsherd to Viśvakarman²⁴⁶⁶ (inaudibly). According to Āp. he offers the 8th offering of a cake after taking the names of the four months Sahas, Sahasya, Tapas and Tapasya (i. e. Mārgaśīrṣa to Phālguna). A bull is the fee of this Mahāhavis (or a cow according to Āp.).

After the mahāhavis comes the pitṛyajña which is called mahāpitṛyajña. To the south of the dakṣiṇa fire a new vedi having four corners in the four principal directions²⁴⁶⁷ is prepared and has the same length and breadth as the height of the sacrificer (Āp. VIII. 13. 2). He brings fire from the dakṣiṇa fire and lays it on the new vedi in the centre and all offerings that are to be offered in the āhavanīya are offered in this fire. In this mahāpitṛyajña the wife does nothing. In this yajña a cake on six kapālas is offered to Somavat Pitṛs or to Pitṛmat Soma, dhānās (fried barley) to Barhiṣad Pitṛs, *mantha*²⁴⁶⁸ to Agniṣvāta Pitṛs. Āśv. II. 19. 21 adds another deity viz. Yama and according to some (vide Āp. VIII. 13. 16) the devatās and offerings are ājya to Pitṛmat Soma, a cake on six potsherds to Barhiṣad Pitṛs, fried barley to Agniṣvāta Pitṛs and mantha to Yama or Agni Kavyavāhana or Yama Aṅgirasvat Pitṛmat. The beating of grains (with a pestle) and grinding is done by the adhvaryu or āgnīdhra to the east of the gārhapatya fire with his face to the south. The cake is cooked on burning coals taken with a shovel from the gārhapatya to its south and the dhānā is fried on the dakṣiṇāgni. There are only four prayājas (omitting barhis out of the five at the darśapūrṇamāsa) and so also anuvājas. Instead of the usual direction (called āśruta) of the adhvaryu to the āgnīdhra ' O śrāvaya ', in this rite he utters ' Om svadhā '; similarly the āgnīdhra responds (pratyāśruta) with ' astu svadhā ' instead of the usual ' astu srausat ' and instead of the syllable ' vausat ' uttered at the end the words ' svadhā namaḥ ' are employed. Instead of the concluding offering usually made to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt, in this rite it is made to Agni Kavyavāhana. In this rite two anuvākyās and one yājyā are repeated at each offering i. e. Rg. X. 15. 1, IX. 96. 11 are the two anuvākyās and Rg. X. 15. 5 the yājyā for Somavat Pitṛs, Rg. I. 91. 1 and I. 91. 20 are the anuvākyās and VIII. 48. 13 the yājyā for Pitṛmat Soma, Rg. X. 15. 4 and X. 15. 3 the anuvākyās and Rg. X. 15. 2 the yājyā for Barhiṣad Pitṛs, Rg. X. 15. 11 and 13 the anuvākyās and X. 15. 14 the yājyā for Agniṣvāta Pitṛs, Rg. X. 14. 4-5 the anuvākyās and X. 14. 1 the yājyā for Yama, Rg. X. 15. 9 and IV. 11. 3 the anuvākyās and I. 96. 1 the yājyā for Agni Kavyavāhana (vide Āśv. II. 19. 22, 24). The adhvaryu or sacrificer sprinkles water from a water vessel thrice 2468. The cow that has no calf of its own but yields milk on having the calf of another is called निवान्या. Its milk is put in a vessel in which half ground barley grains are laid and then stirred once or thrice, according to Āp. VIII. 14. 14, with a piece of sugar-cane to which is tied a string. He does not directly touch the piece of sugar-cane when stirring, but stirs it by moving the string and the stirring is done from right to left. This preparation so stirred is called mantha.

2465. According to the com. on Kāt. V. 6. 40 this darvi-homa is offered in the āhavanīya, while according to Āp. VIII. 11. 19 it is offered in Gārhapatya. The oblation is meant for Indra.

2466. According to Āśv. II. 18. 18, Rg. IV. 32. 1 and VI. 25. 8 are the anuvākya and yājya respectively for Indra or Mahendra and Rg. X. 81. 6 and X. 81. 5 respectively for Viśvakarman.

2467. According to Kāt. V. 8. 21 the four corners face the intermediate quarters and he relies on Śat. Br. II. 6. I. 10. Vide S. B. E. vol. 12 p. 422 n. 3. for this special vedi.

round the vedi from right to left. He offers water for washing the feet to the three ancestors (of the sacrificer) in the north-west, south-west and south-east corners of the vedi respectively. He mixes portions of the cake, the fried barley and the mantha and prepares three balls therefrom and offers them facing the south on the three corners referred to above for the three ancestors with the appropriate mantras (etat te tata²⁴⁶⁹ ye ca tvāmanu, etat te pitāmaha &c.). According to Āp. (VIII. 16. 7) he prepares three more pinḍas for the three ancestors beyond the paternal great-grand-father and invokes them on the pinḍas in the reverse order i. e. the sixth ancestor on the first (out of these other three pinḍas), the fifth on the 2nd pinḍa and the fourth on the 3rd. He then wipes off the remnants of the pinḍas (pinḍalepa) sticking to the hand on the north-eastern corner of the vedi with 'atra pitaro' (Vāj. S. II. 31 first half). The priests and the sacrificer with faces to the north leave that place, wear the sacred thread in the upaviṭa form and wait upon the āhavanīya with Vāj. S. III. 51-52 (= Tai. S. I. 8. 5. 1-2), and on the gārhapatya with Vāj. S. III. 53-55 (= Tai. S. I. 8. 5. 2-3). Then entering the vedi the sacrificer, wearing the sacred thread in the prācīnāviṭa form, mutters the mantra 'amimadanta' (Vāj. S. II. 31 latter half). They sprinkle the vedi from left to right and do all the rest as in pinḍapitṛyajña. The sacrificer then folds his hands with 'namo vaḥ' (Vāj. S. II. 32) or makes six namaskāras (salutations) and invokes the blessing 'give us house' (Vāj. S. II. 32). This rite ends with Śamīyu (Āśv. II. 19. 2, Kāt. V. 9, 32) i. e. 'tacchaṁyorā śam catuṣpade' (Tai. Br. III. 5. 11) and there is no patnīśamīyāja homa in dakṣiṇa fire and so on. The remaining portion of the material for offerings is thrown into the fire or into water or may be eaten by the priests.

The last rite in the Sākamedhas is the Traiyambaka homa. Vide Tai. S. I. 8. 6, Śat Br. II. 6. 2. 1-17, Āśv. II. 19. 37-40, Āp. VIII. 17-19, Baud. V. 16-17, Kāt. V. 10. This homa is offered to Rudra. Some of its peculiarities may be noted. In this the adhvaryu takes out material to prepare cakes cooked on one potsherd exceeding by one the children (the sons and grandsons together with their wives and unmarried daughters) of the sacrificer or at least four (if he is childless or has no more than a few children). Every thing is done facing the north and all places where offerings are to be made must be to the north. He cooks the cakes on the northern side of the gārhapatya and may anoint the cake with clarified butter,²⁴⁷⁰ he carries a single smoking firebrand kindled at the dakṣiṇa fire with the mantra 'eka eva rudro' (Tai. S. I. 8. 6). All (priests and relatives) go to a spot near by in the north-east and lay down one cake on earth dug out by rats from a hole with the words 'O Rudra! the rat is thy beast' (Tai. S. I. 8. 6. 1.) or if one has an enemy and one hates him one may think of him and offer that cake with the words 'that is thy beast'. He places the single firebrand in a spot where four roads meet and which has the usual five purifying rites performed on it and offers thereon with the middle leaflet of a palāśa leaf (used as the juhū ladle) portions cut off once each from all the cakes prepared for Rudra with the mantra 'O Rudra! this is your portion, may you partake of it together with Ambikā, your sister, svāhā' (Tai. S. I. 8. 6 = Vāj. S. III. 57). The remainder he places on the earth heap dug up by rats and covers it with earth. After coming back from the heap, the sacrificer and the priests mutter a mantra (Vāj. S. III. 58) or only the yajamāna mutters the same mantra (Tai. S. I. 8. 6). The yajamāna, his children and his wife and other ladies go round the fire thrice from right to left (as in pitṛyajña) with the famous mantra 'Tryambakam yajāmahe' (Tai. S. I. 8. 6 and Vāj. S. III. 60) striking their left thigh with their right hand and again thrice striking their right thigh with their right hand. The unmarried daughter of the yajamāna desirous of a husband should go round the fire from right to left and again from left to right (thrice in each mode), with the above mantra altered to suit her case (Vāj. S. III. 60).²⁴⁷¹ The portions of the cakes that remain are thrown up in the air by the yajamāna so high that a cow (or bull) with upturned mouth cannot reach them and he catches them in his hand one after another.²⁴⁷² If he cannot catch them he touches them when they fall on the ground. They are then placed in two woven baskets (half and half), which are then hung from the two ends of a bamboo pole or the beam of a scale or a pole made of a sacrificial tree and he fastens them on two sides on a tree trunk, or a tree or a bamboo or ant-hill, in such a way that a cow or bull cannot reach them, with the mantra (Vāj. S. III. 61 first part, Tai. S. I. 8. 6 'eṣa te rudra bhāgaḥ). They mutter the mantra 'avatatadhanvā &c.' (Vāj. S. III. 61 latter half and Tai. S. I. 8. 6) repeatedly without taking breath and do so thrice (according to Āp. VIII. 18. 9). They (priests and yajamāna) return to the place where the other rites were performed and touch water. According to Āp. (VIII. 19. 1-3) a white horse is the dakṣiṇā or a white bull or a bull that has a white spot of hair.

2470. This anointing with ṣṛjya is called 'prāṇadāna' (bestowal of life or soul). Kāt. V. 10. 10-13 and Āp. VIII. 17. 9-12 differ in the order of offerings to Rudra and on the rubbish dug out by rats.

2472. According to Āp. VIII. 18. 4 the portions of cakes are thrown up by the several persons and seized by them and then placed in the joined hands of the yajamāna and this is done thrice.

Śunāsīriya²⁴⁷³

Besides the five offerings common to all cāturmāsyas, the special offerings in this iṣṭi are a cake on twelve potsherds to Śunāsīrau (Vāyu and Āditya, according to com. on Kāt. V. 11. 5 and to Indra Śunāsīra, according to Āp. VIII. 20. 5 and com.), an oblation of fresh warm milk (not heated) direct from the cow to Vāyu, a cake on one potsherd to Sūrya. There is no uttaravedi in this rite, and no fire is produced by attrition. There are five prayājas, three anuyājas and one samīṣṭayajus, but according to Āp. VIII. 20. 6 there are nine prayājas and anuyājas. The dakṣiṇā for the rite is a plough with six bulls or two big bulls and for the cake to Sūrya a white horse or a white bull (Kāt. V. 11. 12-14), while according to Tai. S. I. 8. 7 it is a plough to which twelve oxen are yoked and according to Āp. (VIII. 20. 9-10) a plough with twelve or six oxen.

'Śunāsīrau' occurs in the Rgveda IV. 57. 5 and 8. In Rg. IV. 57. 4 and 8 the word 'śunam' occurs several times. The meaning is doubtful. According to Yāska's Nirukta IX. 40 Śuna and Śīra mean Vāyu and Āditya respectively; while the Śat. Br. II. 6. 3. 2 appears to hold that śuna means prosperity and śīra means 'essence or sap' (sāra) and this iṣṭi is so called because the sacrificer thereby secures both prosperity and sap.

2473. Vide Tai. S. I. 8. 7, Tai. Br. I. 7. 1, Śat. Br. II. 6. 3, Āśv. II. 20, Āp. VIII. 20, Kāt. V. 11, Baud. V. 18.

European scholars see in this name a reference to the plough and ploughshare.²⁴⁷⁴ Vide Vedic Index vol. II. p. 386.

Āgrayaṇa (offering of first fruits) ²⁴⁷⁵

This is an iṣṭi, without performing which an āhitāgni was not to make use of freshly harvested rice, barley and millet. It was either performed on a New Moon day or Full Moon day, but the procedure was the same as that of the iṣṭi on New Moon. The time of the āgrayaṇa iṣṭi with rice is śarad (autumn) when one had ample rains.²⁴⁷⁶ As barley crops became ready in vasanta (spring), the āgrayaṇa for yavas was to be performed in spring. Āśv. allowed an option that when the iṣṭi was once performed in the autumn one may not perform it in spring for the barley crop. The iṣṭi for millet crop (śyāmāka) was performed in the rainy season and therein a caru was offered to Soma. The iṣṭi was so called because therein the first fruits (agra) were first employed or eaten (ayana).²⁴⁷⁷ According to Āp. (VI. 29. 6) there are 17 kindling verses (sāmidhenī), which number is obtained by inserting two additional verses called dhāyyā after the 8th or 9th sāmidhenī of the darśa-pūrṇa-māsa iṣṭi. The deities and offerings are a cake on twelve potsherds for Indra and Agni (or according to Āp. VI. 29. 10 and Āśv. II. 9. 13, it is either Aindrāgna or Āgnendra), a caru cooked in milk or water for All Gods (Viśve Devāḥ) silently, a cake on one potsherd to Heaven and Earth and caru to Soma (if the first fruits are millets). Kāt. IV. 6. 7 allows an option that the caru for All Gods may be of old rice. For him who performs only daily agnihotra or who does not 2474. According to Āśv. II. 20. 3 the devatās of the 6th, 7th, and 8th offerings are Vāyu Niyutvat or Vāyu (simply), Śunāsīrau or Indra Śunāsīra or Indra Śuna and Sūrya. The anuvākya and Yājñya verses of these are respectively Rg. VII. 92. 1 and 3 (Vāyu Niyutvat), VIII. 26. 25 and VII. 90. 2 (for Vāyu simply), IV. 57. 5 and 8 (for Śunāsīrau), Indra vayanī Śunāsīram-asmin pakṣe havāmahe sa vājeṣu pra ṇo viśat and X. 160. 5 (for Indra Śunāsīra), III. 30. 22 and X. 160. 5 (for Indra Suna), I. 50. 4 and I. 115. 1 (for Sūrya).

perform any iṣṭi except darśapūrṇamāsa Kāt. IV. 6. 11 and Āśv. II. 9. 4 prescribe that he may make his agnihotra cow eat the first fruits, viz., rice or barley bundles or food and with the milk of that cow perform on the āgrayana day the homa. But this alternative was not open to the king who had to perform this iṣṭi (Āśv. II. 9. 6). According to Kāt. (IV. 6. 16-17) the caru of millets for Soma is performed only for the forest-dweller and a caru of bamboo seed is prescribed for Soma in summer. About the dakṣiṇā there are various opinions. According to Kāt. (IV. 6. 18) it is either a repaired waggon or silken cloth, madhuparka (i. e. honey, curds and ghee) or the cloth worn by the sacrificer in the rains. According to Āp. (VI. 30. 7) the first among the calves born before the Full Moon of Māgha is the fee, and cloth for iṣṭi with millets. Jai. has several sūtras about silk cloth and a calf being the dakṣiṇā in this rite and that rice cooked on dakṣiṇā fire is not the fee (vide X. 3. 34-38). Vide also Jai. XII. 2. 34-37 (about the characteristics of the barhis).

The āgrayana sacrifice in the gṛhya fire has been already described (pp. 827-829) and it will have been noticed that it was a replica of the śrauta sacrifice meant for those who had consecrated the three Vedic fires.

Kāmyeṣṭi

In the Śrauta sūtras there are rules for the performance of several iṣṭis on the occurrence of certain events or for the purpose of securing some desired object. Āśv. II. 10-14, Āp. XIX. 18-27 and others mention several such iṣṭis, viz., the āyuskāmeṣṭi (for one desirous of long life), the svastyayanī (for safe journey), the *putrakāmeṣṭi*²⁴⁷⁸ (for one desirous of a son or one adopting a son, Āśv. II. 10. 8-9), Lokeṣṭi, Mahāvairāji (Āśv. II. 11. 1-4) or Mitravindā (Kāt. V. 12, for one who is desirous of prosperity, territory, friends and long life, addressed to ten deities), Saṃjñānī (for the reconciliation of those who have fallen out), *Kārirīṣṭi*²⁴⁷⁹ (for one who desires rain, Āśv. II. 13. 1-13, Āp. XIX. 25. 16 ff), Turāyana (Āśv. II. 14. 4-6), 2479. In the Kārirīṣṭi the sacrificer had to wear a dark garment having dark hem. Tai. S. (II. 4. 7-10) deals with this iṣṭi.

CHAPTER XXXII

PAŚUBANDHA OR NIRŪDHAPAŚUBANDHA²⁴⁸¹

(immolation of an animal in sacrifice).

The animal sacrifice is an independent sacrifice and it is also performed in soma sacrifices as a constituent part (aṅga). The independent animal sacrifice is called nirūdhapaśubandha (offering of an eviscerated animal) and the subordinate ones are called saumika (Āśv. III. 8. 3-4). The nirūdhapaśu is really a modification of an animal sacrifice in somayāga (called agniṣomiya paśu) as Jai. VIII. 1. 13 declares, but in many sūtras the full procedure of both is set out in the nirūdhapaśu section (vide Kāt. VI. 10. 32 and com. on Kāt. VI. 1. 31). The nirūdhapaśubandha itself becomes the prakṛti (archetype or model) of all other animal sacrifices, except savaniya paśu and anūbandhyapaśu. The independent animal sacrifice is to be performed every six months or every year by the āhīṭāgni throughout his life.²⁴⁸² If done once a year it was to be performed in the rainy season (i. e. in Śrāvaṇa or Bhādrapada) on New moon or Full moon day or if done six monthly then at the beginning of the southward and northward passages of the Sun (dakṣiṇāyana and uttarāyana). Then it may have to be performed on any day and not necessarily on amāvāsyā or paurṇamāsī. According to Āśv. (III. 1. 2-6) optionally an iṣṭi before and after the independent paśubandha rite may be performed and if performed it is offered either to Agni or to Agni-Viṣṇu or to Agni and Agni-Viṣṇu. In this sacrifice there is a sixth priest called Maitrāvaruṇa (or Praśāstr) in addition to the five required in the cāturmāsya. An udumbara staff is given to the sacrificer when he is initiated for a sacrifice like Agniṣṭoma. In the paśubandha when the Maitrāvaruṇa enters the sacrificial ground after the priests are chosen the adhvaryu

2481. Vide Śat. Br. III. 6. 4 ff, XI. 7. 1 ff, Tai. S. I. 3. 5-11, VI. 3-4; Kāt. VI, Āp. VII, Āśv. III. 1-8, Baud. IV.

2482. Manu IV. 26 also recommends an animal sacrifice at the beginning of the ayanas. Āp. VII. 8. 2-3 and Baud. IV. 1 set out the yajñapātras and other materials required in paśubandha.

(or yajamāna in some śākhās)²⁴⁸³ hands over that staff (which in length would reach the mouth of the sacrificer) to the maitrāvaruṇa with a mantra and the maitrāvaruṇa accepts it with a corresponding mantra. The maitrāvaruṇa stands slightly bent to the south of the seat of the hotṛ resting his staff on the vedi and utters directions to the hotṛ to repeat yāgyās. Till he utters the first praiṣa he is not to touch himself or any one else with the staff. The maitrāvaruṇa is to utter in a standing posture while holding the staff the praiṣas and the anuvākyās wherever a praiṣa is employed and do a few other acts standing; but the rest of his duties in soma sacrifices he does sitting. Jaimini (IV. 2. 16-18) has a discussion (arising out of Tai. S. VI. 1. 4. 2 ' kṛite some maitrāvaruṇāya daṇḍam prayacchati ') on the question whether the handing over of the staff to maitrāvaruṇa is a pratipattikarma or an arthakarma (the conclusion is that it is the latter). The adhvaryu makes an offering of clarified butter in the āhavanīya, which is called yūpāhuti, with the sruva or with a sruc in which four ladlings of ājya have been poured, with the mantra ' uru viṣṇo ' (Vāj. S. V. 41, Tai. S. I. 3. 4. 1). The adhvaryu, taking the rest of the ājya and the sruva, goes to a place where trees grow, accompanied by a carpenter (takṣan) holding an axe (Āp. VII. 1. 13 and Kāt. VI. 1. 5). The sacrificial post (yūpa)²⁴⁸⁴ is to be made of the palāśa, khadira, bilva or rauhītaka tree according as one desires various rewards (Āp. VII. 1. 16), but in Soma sacrifices the yūpa must be of khadira, if possible. Jai. (VI. 3. 28-30) states that, if by accident the sacrificial post made of one kind of tree is destroyed during the continuance of the rite, another yūpa of the same tree or of a tree very similar to it is to be substituted. The tree to be cut must be full of leaves, must not have its top dried up, must be straight and growing on a level spot, and its branches must be turned upwards and it should be bent in some direction other than the south. Adhvaryu, brahmā, the sacrificer and carpenter touch the tree after selecting it with the mantra ' atyanyān ' (Vāj. S. V. 42, Tai. S. I. 3. 5). The adhvaryu touches the trunk of the tree all round (where it is to be cut) with the sruva anointed with ājya with the mantra

'May god Savitr anoint thee with madhu' (Tai. S. I. 3. 5) or with 'Viṣṇave tvā' (Vāj. S. V. 42). He keeps obliquely a darbha blade on the trunk with the words 'oṣadhe trāyasvainam' (Tai. S. I. 3. 5 or Vāj. S. V. 42) and strikes the tree with the axe with the mantra 'O axe! do not injure it' (svadhite mainam himsiḥ, Vāj. S. V. 42 and Tai. S. I. 3. 5). The first chip of the tree that is cut off, he keeps in a well-known place and the tree is cut at such a low height from the ground that the stump left in the ground would not strike against the axle of a cart going that way. The tree should be so cut that it should not fall to the south; it should fall to the east or north or north-east (Āp. VII. 2. 7); when it is falling he repeats the mantra 'do not scratch the heaven with your top &c.' (Vāj. S. V. 43 or Tai. S. I. 3. 5). He offers ājya with the juhū on the stump of the tree with the mantra 'O tree, grow again with a hundred shoots' (Vāj. S. V. 43, Tai. S. I. 3. 5) and having touched one's body with 'may we grow into a thousand branches' (ibid.) he cuts off from the bottom upwards the twigs and knots of the felled tree. There were several views about the length of the yūpa (Āp. VII. 2. 11-17, Kāt. VI. 1. 24-26). According to some the yūpa may be of any length from one aratni to 33 aratnis, but Kāt. gives the usual length at 3 or 4 aratnis and Āp. (VII. 2. 17) also quotes the Śat. Br. (XI. 7. 4. 1) that the yūpa in nirūḍha-paśubandha is three or four aratnis in length, while in Soma sacrifices the other measures may apply. Kāt. (VI. 1. 31) states that in somayāga the yūpa may be from five to fifteen aratnis in length except 7, 10 or 14 aratnis and in the Vājapeya sacrifice the yūpa is 17 aratnis in length and in the Aśvamedha it is 21 aratnis. According to Āp. it must be in length at least as much as the height of the yajamāna or as much as the yajamāna with hands upraised. The girth of the yūpa is not fixed. That part of the yūpa which is to be planted in the pit is called upara, which is not to be chiselled and which is about a 5th of the whole log but the rest of it is to be chiselled from the bottom towards the top so as to make the yūpa have eight angles and it should be somewhat tapering towards the top. One corner or angle (out of the eight) should be more prominent than the rest and should face the fire. Out of the top portion of the²⁴⁸⁵ tree that remains after making the yūpa the carpenter prepares a wooden head-piece, eight-cornered and of the length of the hand from the wrist to the tips of the fingers and contracted in the middle like a mortar. This piece is called caṣāla and is made hollow so as to fit in exactly on to the top of the yūpa like a turban and the peg-like top of the yūpa on which the caṣāla is fixed should protrude two or three aṅgulas beyond the caṣāla (Kāt. VI. 1. 30).

The nirūḍhapaśubandha occupies two days, though it may be performed in one day. On the first of the two days called *upavasatha*²⁴⁸⁶ preliminary matters such as preparing the vedi, bringing the yūpa are performed.

The vedi (a single one) in the nirūḍhapaśubandha is prepared like the one in Varuṇa-praghāsa to the east of the usual āhavanīya fire-place (and not to the west as in darśa-pūrṇamāsa). The dimensions of the vedi are variously given. According to Āp. VII. 3. 7-9 the vedi is three or four aratnis on its western side, six aratnis in length from west to east and three aratnis on the eastern side and it is less in breadth towards the east or it is as wide as the axle on the west, of the length of the shafts of a cart and to the east as wide as that portion of a yoke which is between the outer holes thereof. On this vedi an uttaravedi (a high altar) is measured with the *śamyā*²⁴⁸⁷ (yoke-pin) on the eastern one-third of the vedi. From the northern corner of the eastern side (the shoulder) of the vedi, a pit called cātvāla is measured one śamyā square about one prakrama to its north; it is dug with a spade taken with the mantra 'devasya tvā ādade' (Vāj. S. VI. 1) and it is silently dug as deep as the knee or three vitastis (36 aṅgulas). The Tai. Br. I. 5. 10 gives the latter measure. The cātvāla is in front of the utkara and a passage is left between the utkara and the cātvāla which is contiguous to the north side of the mahāvedi (vide Śat. Br. III. 5. 1. 24-30). The earth dug up is heaped on the uttaravedi thrice²⁴⁸⁸ with the mantra

2487. The yoke-pin (śamyā) is of khadira wood and 32 aṅgulas long, having at the end eight knobs each of one aṅgula. Its length is variously given. According to the com. on Āp. I. 15. 13 it is one arm in length or 32 aṅgulas, while com. on Kāt. I. 3. 36 says it is one span in length. Its thicker part is called kumba.

2488. Āp. VII. 4. 5 and VII. 5. 1-2 give the several mantras which accompany the various operations of preparing the uttaravedi and the nabhi.

'a lioness art thou' (Tai. S. I. 2. 12. 2) and a fourth time silently and then is spread over the uttaravedi with 'uru prathasva prathatām' (Tai. S. I. 2. 12. 2); he breaks up the clods with the śamyā, invokes the earth dug up, sprinkles it, spreads gravel on the earth so dug up and spread, pours down the remainder of the water contained in the prokṣaṇī vessel to the north of the uttaravedi by means of a channel made with one stroke of the sphya and cements together the borders of the uttaravedi (with water and earth). On the uttaravedi he makes a square hole (called uttaranābhi) a span in measure or measuring as much as a bull's or horse's hoof, invokes it and sprinkles it with water and the rest of the water is drained off to the south (as water was drained off to the north above). Then he covers the uttaravedi with twigs of udumbara or plakṣa tree and waits, if the paśubandha is so performed as to extend over two days. In the morning next day he pours clarified butter in a stream on the uttaravedi from the south-east corner to the north-west corner and from the south-west to the north-east carrying a golden piece in such a way that the butter will fall on the gold. Then he places three (pine) paridhis (enclosing sticks) which are of kārśmarya wood (according to Āp. VII. 7. 7) round the nābhi in the west, south and north and puts down on the uttaravedi certain materials viz. bdellium, fragrant and appetising grass, bunch of white wool from between the horns of a ram (petva). Having kindled idhma (a bunch of samidhs) at the āhavanīya fire, he carries forward the kindled sticks (in a vessel)²⁴⁸⁹ which is supported on a vessel containing gravel (to prevent the scorching of the hands) to the uttaravedi and places them down on the nābhi over the bdellium and other things. This becomes the āhavanīya for all actions in the paśubandha and the original āhavanīya becomes the gārhapatya.²⁴⁹⁰

He takes a spade with a mantra (e. g. Vāj. S. VI. 1), draws to the east of the new āhavanīya an outline of the hole to be dug for inserting the yūpa. He digs a pit so deep that when the yūpa is erected therein its upara (the lower unchiselled portion) will not be exposed to view and he throws out to the east of the pit the earth dug out. The pit is so dug that it is partly within the vedi (prepared for paśubandha) and partly outside²⁴⁹¹ (i. e. it is on the border). The yūpa is laid down in front of the pit, with its top to the east, is washed with water and sprinkled over with water in which barley grains have been mixed, a separate mantra (prthivyai tvā &c. as in Vāj. S. V. 26) being recited when sprinkling the bottom, middle and top of the yūpa. He places a handful of kuśas and the first chip (that was cut off with the axe from the tree) on the yūpa which are both subsequently thrown into the hole, the ends of the kuśas being towards the north and east ; and then places to the north of the top of the yūpa the caśāla. The rest of the water taken for sprinkling is poured into the hole for the yūpa with ' Śundhantām lokāḥ piṭṣadanāḥ ' (Vāj. S. VI. 1, Tai. S. I. 3. 1. 1) in which there is a reference to the world of the piṭṣ. He silently makes an offering of clarified butter in the hole with the sruva ladle. Then the adhvaryu or yajamaṇa sits to the south of the yūpa and anoints it with ordinary ājya (over which no saṁskāra has been performed) by means of a chip from its top to its bottom including all its angles (but excluding the upara). While the adhvaryu is doing this he issues a direction to the hotṛ priest to repeat a verse for the yūpa that is being anointed²⁴⁹² and the hotṛ repeats ' añjanti tvām ' (Rg. III. 8. 1) and stops when he has repeated half of it (Āśv. III. 1. 8). Then the caśāla is anointed both inside and outside and placed on top of the yūpa with a mantra (Vāj. S. VI. 2, Tai. S. I. 2. 2. 3). Then that angular part of the yūpa which is to face the fire together with the corresponding part of the upara is anointed in a continuous stream and the adhvaryu touches all round and holds with his hand that part of the yūpa over which a girdle would be placed later on. At the direction of the adhvaryu the hotṛ priest repeats the verses Rg. III. 8. 2-3, I. 36. 13-14 and III. 8. 5 (half), while the yūpa is being raised up. It is laid in the hole with a mantra (Vāj. S. VI. 3, Tai. S. I. 3. 6. 1 ' yā te dhāmāni) in such a way that its top will slant towards the āhavanīya and its corner (which is more prominent than

This passage is discussed by Jai. in III. 7. 13-14 and his conclusion is that it indicates only the spot where the yūpa is to be erected. The com. on Kāt. the rest) will face the āhavanīya fire. If there are eleven yūpas in an animal sacrifice, then those prominent corners of all eleven yūpas should face the āhavanīya. He fills from left to right the hole for the yūpa with earth with 'brahmavanim tvā' (Vāj. VI. 3, Tai. S. I. 3. 6. 2). The adhvaryu then strokes the earth thrice with the staff of the maitrāvaruṇa so as to make the ground round about the yūpa level with the rest of the ground with 'brahma dṛmha kṣatram dṛmha' (ibid) and sprinkles it with (ordinary) water all round. Two girdles of darbha are prepared one with two strands and two vyāmas²⁴⁹³ in length (for the victim) and the other with three strands and three vyāmas in length (for the yūpa). The yajamāna touches the yūpa and the adhvaryu makes him recite 'observe the exploits of Viṣṇu' (Rg. I. 22. 19, Vāj. S. VI. 4, Tai. S. I. 3. 6. 2) and look at the head-piece with 'that is the highest step of Viṣṇu' (Rg. I. 22. 20, Vāj. S. VI. 5). Āp. (VII. 11. 3) says that he takes in his hand the girdle for the yūpa with 'devasya tvā savituḥ' and rubs up the yūpa with the hand having the girdle therein with Rg. I. 22. 19. Then he begins to encircle the yūpa with the middle of the girdle at a spot which is of the same height as the navel of the sacrificer or in the middle of the yūpa. He calls upon the hotṛ to repeat Rg. III. 8. 4 (yuvā suvāsāḥ) when the yūpa is being encircled with the girdle. The girdle is passed round the yūpa in three coils from left to right. When he has finished doing it he repeats 'parivīr-asī' (Vāj. S. VI. 6, Tai. S. I. 3. 6. 2). The two ends of the girdle are intertwined into one another and he inserts the tip of the girdle inside the loop at the other end. Āp. (VII. 11. 6-10) says that the girdle may be pushed down or higher up from the place indicated above or the ends may be dealt with differently according as the yajamāna desires rain or not or according as female or male progeny is desired for the yajamāna. To the north of the corner of the yūpa facing the āhavanīya he inserts in the middle or last coil of the girdle or in all coils of the girdle the svaru.²⁴⁹⁴ Jai. (XI. 3. 5-7) concludes that the saṁskāras of prokṣaṇa (sprinkling), anointing (añjana), raising up (ucchrayaṇa)

2493. A vyāma or vyāyāma is equal to four aratnis.

2494. The svaru is the first piece that is severed when the yūpa was being hewn out of the tree trunk that was felled. Sabara on Jai. XI. 3. 9 remarks यद्यप्येकस्यापि यूपस्य बहवः स्वरवः संभवन्ति ... यः प्रथमः शकलः परापतेत् स्वरुः कार्य इति वचनात्. Jai. (in XI. 3. 8-12) establishes that the svaru is only one like the yūpa, even if there are many animals to be sacrificed in the same yajña.

and surrounding with a girdle (parivyāṇa or parivyayana) are performed on the yūpa only once and are not repeated at each time an animal is sacrificed. The girdle is an aṅga of the yūpa and not of the paśu, as otherwise as many girdles will be required for the yūpa as the number of victims to be sacrificed in a yāga (vide Jai. IV. 4. 22-24). The svaru is connected as an aṅga with the victim (for anointing the victim with it) and not with the yūpa (Jai. IV. 4. 25-28). Vide Jai. IV. 2. 1-6 also.

The animal to be sacrificed is bathed with scented water, is led between the cātvāla and utkara and brought in front of the yūpa to the east with the animal's face to the west. The animal is a he-goat (chāga) which must not have a broken horn and must not be devoid of an ear or eye or tooth or tail, must not be lame nor have only seven hoofs (instead of eight, as each of the feet has two hoofs). If the animal is defective in any one of these ways an expiatory offering of ājya has to be made to Viṣṇu or Agni-Viṣṇu or Sarasvatī or Bṛhaspati (Āp. VII. 12. 3). Then follows *Paśūpākaraṇa*²⁴⁹⁵ which may be done in two days. He takes a darbha blade other than from those spread on the vedi with 'upāvir-asi' (Vāj. S. VI. 7) and touches the animal (that stands facing the west) therewith with the verse 'near the gods' (upa devān, Vāj. S. VI. 7). Another way (according to Āp. VII. 12. 5-8) is: he takes two blades of kuśa reciting 'iṣe tvā' (Tai. S. I. 1. 1. 1) and takes a branch of plakṣa tree that has many leaves and twigs, that is not dry at the end and is not hollow and touches the victim with the blades and the branch and repeats the two mantras 'upo devān-daivir-viśaḥ' and 'prajāpater-jāyamānā' (Tai. S. I. 3. 7. 1 and III. 1. 1. 4) and the words 'I assign thee, who are dear to Indra and Agni.'²⁴⁹⁶ Then he produces fire by churning from the araṇis and offers homa in accordance with the procedure of the Vaiśvadeva-parva (vide above pp. 1093-94). Āp. (VII. 12. 11) says that upākaraṇa may be done after the production of fire. He makes a loop of the girdle which has two strands and which is two vyāmas in length; he twines the loop round the right fore-leg of the animal and then fastens tightly the girdle on the right horn with the mantra 'ṛtasya tvā' (Vāj. S. VI. 8, Tai. S. I. 3. 8); and ties the raśanā (girdle) round the yūpa towards its north with 'devasya tvā' (Vāj. S. VI. 9 or Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 1). He sprinkles water over it with 'adbhyas-tvaṣṣadhibhyo' (Vāj. S. VI. 9). Then he makes the victim drink water (by holding below its mouth the agnihotra-havaṇi filled with water) for the last time with 'apām perurasi' (Vāj. S. VI. 10, Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 1). Then he sprinkles water over the upper limbs and lower limbs (such as its heart and belly) and over the whole of its body. Then he performs all the procedure of the darśa-pūrṇamāsa beginning from the direction to the hotṛ to repeat a verse when the fire is being kindled up to the prayājas (i. e. the sāmīdhēnis, pravara-varaṇa by the hotṛ, devatāhvāna, āghāras and pravara-varaṇa by the adhvaryu).

2496. According to Āp. VII. 12. 9 the words 'इन्द्राग्निभ्यां त्वा जुष्टं' occur in five acts with the appropriate verb viz. उपाकरण, नियोजन (tying to the post), मोक्षण, वपोद्धरण (taking away the omentum) and हृदयाभिचारण (pouring clarified butter over the heart of the animal when about to be thrown as an offering). For example, he would say 'इन्द्राग्निभ्यां त्वा जुष्टं नियुजामि or इन्द्राग्नि...जुष्टं मोक्षामि'

The paśu is meant either for Indra-Agni or Sūrya or Prajāpati and one has to dedicate the victim throughout one's life in every paśubandha to that deity which one chooses at the first animal sacrifice (Kāt. VI. 3. 29-30). He anoints the victim with ājya from the juhū ladle on its forehead, its shoulders and its hind parts after the last āghāra is offered (as in darśa-pūrṇamāsa) and before dhruvā-samañjana (ladling ājya in the dhruvā ladle with the juhū thrice, once with a mantra and twice silently). While the animal stands²⁴⁹⁷ he offers the prayājas, that are eleven in the paśubandha (while in darśapūrṇamāsa they are only five and in cāturmāsya they are nine). The method of offering these in paśubandha is as follows: the adhvaryu directs the maitrāvaruṇa to request the hotṛ to repeat the yājya verses from the Āpri hymns of the prayāja offerings in succession. The praiṣas (directions to the hotṛ) that the maitrāvaruṇa utters are rather lengthy and hence the text of only one is given below.²⁴⁹⁸ There are ten Āpri hymns in the 2498. अहवर्ग्या समिद्धः प्रेषेति प्रेषितः सम्मैत्रावरुण आह । होता यक्षदाग्निं समिधा सुषमिधा समिद्धं नामा वृधित्याः सङ्गृहे वामस्य वर्ष्मन्दिष इलस्पदे वेत्वाज्यस्य होतर्यज । This is the praiṣa for samidhaḥ. In the other praiṣas the names of deities are also put in the objective case (e. g. होता यक्षसद्वनपातम् or नराशंसम्). Vide Vāj. S. 21. 29-40 for the praiṣas of all the prayāja deities uttered by Maitrāvaruṇa with reference to the Āpri.

R̥gveda ascribed to ten different sages. They are: I. 13 (of Medhātithi Kāṇva), I. 142 (of Dirghatamas Auchathya, an Āṅgīrasa), I. 188 (of Agastya), II. 3 (of Ḡṛtsamada, a Śāunaka), III. 4 (of Viśvāmitra), V. 4 (of Atri), VII. 2 (of Vasiṣṭha), IX. 5 (of Kāśyapa), X. 70 (of Vadhryaśva), X. 110 (of Jama-dagni). Out of these in R̥g. I. 13 and I. 142 there are verses for both Tanūnapāt (2nd prayāja deity) and Narāsaṁsa; while R̥g. I. 188, III. 4, IX. 5 and X. 110 have only Tanūnapāt (and no Narāsaṁsa) and the rest have only Narāsaṁsa (and no Tanūnapāt). According to Āśv. III. 2. 5-7, persons of Śunaka and Vasiṣṭha gotras should repeat their own Āprī hymn (viz. II. 3 and VII. 2 respectively), persons of gotras other than these two should employ the Āprī hymn beginning with 'Samiddho adya' (according to the com. R̥g. X. 110 and not I. 188) or persons of any one of the ten gotras may employ an Āprī hymn²⁴⁹⁹

2499. The word 'āprī' appears to be used in two senses. One sense is 'a deity or deities' invoked by the verses of the hymn. Yāska (in the Nirukta VIII. 4-22) holds a lengthy discussion on the Āprīs, where he appears to regard the Āprīs as deities; अथात आप्रियः। आप्रियः कस्मात्। आप्नोतेः प्रीणातेर्वा। आप्रीभिरप्रीणातीति च ब्राह्मणम्। तासामिध्मः प्रथमागामी भवति। (Nir. VIII. 4). The 2nd meaning of Āprī is 'a verse (yājyā) that gratifies a deity'. In this sense the word is used in the Ait. Br. VI. 4 'आप्रीभिरप्रीणाति। समिधो यजति। ... तन्नूनपातं यजति। नराशंसं यजति। इच्छो यजति। बर्हिर्यजति। दुरो यजति। उषासं, नंक्ता यजति। देव्या होतारा यजति। तिस्रो देवीर्यजति। त्वष्टारं यजति। वनस्पतिं यजति। स्वाहाकृतीर्यजति। ताभिर्यथक्कषि आप्रीणीयाद् यथक्कषि आप्रीणाति यजमानमेव तद्बन्धुताया नोत्सृजति।' In this passage the explanations of समिधो यजति and others have been omitted. The word Āprī is here derived from the root 'prī' to please, while Yāska also suggests an alternative derivation from 'āp' to obtain but cites no Brāhmaṇa text in support of that derivation. The Sat. Br. III. 8. 1. 2 derives 'Āprī' from 'pī' to fill. According to Yāska the first Āprī deity is 'Idhma', while according to the Ait. Br. it is 'Samidhaḥ'. It is to be noted that he explains all the verses of R̥g. X. 110, as the Āprī hymn but as that hymn does not contain a verse about Narāsaṁsa he quotes one from another Āprī hymn a verse for him viz. R̥g. VII. 2. 2 (in Nir. VIII. 7). Hence it is probable that he held the view that the Āprī verses for all persons should be taken from R̥g. X. 110, while the Ait. Br. prefers the view that one should repeat that Āprī hymn that is ascribed to the founder of one's gotra. Yāska (Nir. VIII. 22) divides the Āprī hymns into three classes, those containing verses addressed to both Tanūnapāt and Narāsaṁsa, those addressed to Narāsaṁsa only and

ascribed to the founder of his gotra if he is from among these ten sages. The words of Āśv. I. 5. 21-22 create some difficulty. Āśv. there prescribes that when uttering the yājyā at the time of offering the 2nd prayāja, the formula should contain an address to Tanūnapāt for all except for persons of Vasiṣṭha, Śunaka, Atri, Vadhryaśva and Rājanya gotras. These latter should utter a formula addressed to Narāśaṃsa. Here if 'rājanya' refers to Viśvāmitra, then the difficulty is that in the Āpri hymn (III. 4) ascribed to him, the 2nd deity is Tanūnapāt and not Narāśaṃsa; but it is possible that the word 'rājanya' stands for a kṣatriya sacrificer in general and does not refer to Viśvāmitra gotra at all. After ten prayājas are offered, the adhvaryu says to the slaughterer of the victim 'bring your two-edged knife.' The adhvaryu takes the svaru (chip of wood) and anoints the svaru and one edge of the knife with the clarified butter from the bill-like (or spout-like) part of the juhū ladle (according to Āp. VII. 14. 10 the svaru is anointed thrice) and holding the svaru below the knife touches with both the head of the victim (forehead, according to Kāt. VI. 5. 12) with a mantra (Vāj. S. VI. 11, Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 1). After placing back the svaru whence it was taken the adhvaryu gives the knife back to the slaughterer (śamitṛ) with the words 'let this edge be marked by you' (Śat. Br. III. 8. 1. 5). The animal when killed is cut up by the slaughterer with the un-anointed edge and the flesh when roasted is cut up with the edge that is anointed. The adhvaryu directs the maitrāvaruṇa to recite a mantra for indicating that fire (a fire-brand) is being carried round the victim and the maitrāvaruṇa recites 'agnirhotā no' (Rg. IV. 15. 1) or the verses Rg. IV. 15. 1-3 (according to Āśv. III. 2. 9). To the north of the cātvāla pit, he digs up a spot for establishing the those addressed to Tanūnapāt only. He mentions an 11th Āpri hymn occurring in the praiṣa (i. e. probably the praiṣādhyāya Āpri hymn). There are Āpri hymns in the other vedas also. For example, vide Vāj. S. 21. 12-22 (only Tanūnapāt), 29. 25-36 (containing addresses to both Tanūnapāt and Narāśaṃsa and being the same as Rg. X. 110 except the verse to Narāśaṃsa which is taken from Rg. VII. 3. 2), Atharvaveda V. 12 (same as Rg. X. 110), V. 27. The Tai. Br. III. 6. 3 contains all the Āpri verses of Rg. X. 110 and the verse Rg. VII. 3. 2. There is considerable literature on the Āpris, both ancient and modern. Vide Tai. S. IV. 1. 8, Tai. Br. II. 6. 12 and 18 and Ait. Br. (Haug's tr. pp. 81-82), Max Muller's H. A. S. L. pp. 463-467.

Śāmitra fire.²⁵⁰⁰ The āgnīdhra, lighting a fire-brand at the āhavanīya, carries it thrice round the victim, the yūpa, the āhavanīya fire, the place where the śāmitra fire is to be kindled, the cātvala pit and the clarified²⁵⁰¹ butter, from left to right with the mantra 'pari vājapatih kaviḥ' (Rg. IV. 15. 3, Tai. S. IV. 1. 2. 5). In modern times the priest perambulates all these together and not separately. The āgnīdhra throws the firebrand on to the āhavanīya fire and again goes round the above objects thrice from right to left. According to Āp. VII. 15. 4-6, the adhvaryu makes one, two, three or four offerings of ājya, with mantras called apāvya, when fire is carried round the victim, when it is set free from the yūpa and led on (Tai. S. III. 1. 4. 1-2). The āgnīdhra, again taking up the same fire-brand, starts to go with his face to the north and the victim is led after the āgnīdhra by the śāmitr (who takes away the cord of girdle from the victim's head and ties it round its neck). The pratiprasthātṛ (an assistant of adhvaryu) touches the animal (that is being led northward) from behind with two utensils (spits) made of kārśmarya wood (used for roasting vapā, omentum), the adhvaryu touches the pratiprasthātṛ and the sacrificer touches the adhvaryu.²⁵⁰² A pit is got dug (by a servant) for covering in it the undigested food and the fæces of the victim when killed. They (the priests and yajamāna) should not pass beyond the place for the śāmitra fire. The adhvaryu takes two kuśa blades from those with which the vedi is strewn and says to āgnīdhra 'Ośrāṣvaya'

2500. The fire on which the flesh of the victim is roasted is called Śāmitra. The burning fire-brand, after it is carried round the victim, is placed by the adhvaryu (who takes it from the āgnīdhra's hand) on a spot to the north of the cātvala and that becomes the śāmitra fire. अभिपर्यग्निकृते देश उत्सृजं निदधाति । स शान्तिः । अप. VII. 16. 2-3. According to some the śāmitra fire is specially produced by attrition (vide Kāt. VI. 5. 14).

2501. There are several views here. Some hold that the fire-brand is to be carried round the victim alone, others hold that it is to be carried round the first five objects and others add ājya; others that the fire-brand is carried round the victim, the place of śāmitra and ājya. Vide Kāt. VI. 5. 2-3, Āp. VII. 15. 2 and com. thereon. This operation of carrying fire round the victim is called paryagnikarāṇa. According to the Tai. Br. III. 8. 17 the mantras 'meṣas-tvā pacatair-avatu' are apāvya and that the Prāṇas are apāvya (the mantras are Tai. S. VII. 4. 12. 1).

and the latter replies 'astu śrauṣaṣaṭ' and then the adhvaryu issues an upapraīṣa (a supplementary direction) to the maitrāvaruṇa to prompt (the hotṛ) to recite for the offerings to Gods.²⁵⁰³ The hotṛ then recites the famous (but long) adhrigu-praīṣa,²⁵⁰⁴ which is an invocation to divine and human slaugh-

III. 3. 1, ज्ञां. औ. V. 17. This occurs in Tai. Br. III. 6. 6 and Ait. Br. VI. 6-7, where some expressions are also explained. Āśv. (III. 2. 11-30) explains how changes (ūha) are to be effected in this formula in different rites according to the limbs concerned, the deities and the number of victims. Āśv. (III. 3. 2 and 4) provides that the words शमितारः, अपाप and अस्ना रक्षः संसृजतात् are recited inaudibly and the passage 'अग्निगो अपाप' is repeated thrice. This whole formula is called adhrigu and adhrigu was also supposed to be a deity presiding over the slaughtering of a victim in sacrifice. Vide com. on Āśv. III. 2. 11. There were as remarked by Śāṅ. Sr. nine pauses to take breath at the end of each of the first nine sentences. The Nirukta (V. 11) explains 'adhrigu' as meaning a mantra and also states that the word is applied to Agni in Rg. III. 21. 4 and to Indra in Rg. I. 61. 1. The Nirukta quotes the words 'अग्निगो शमीध्वं अग्निगो.' Jaimini considers questions arising from some of the words used in this formula ; in IX. 3. 27-28 (when there are many victims in a sacrifice, the singular 'cakṣur' is still to be used), IX. 3. 29-31 (the word 'ekadhā' is explained), IX. 3. 32-40 (some śākhās read 'medhapataye' and some 'medhapatibhyām' and the word means 'devatā'), IX. 4. 1-16 (about '26 ribs' when there are two or more victims), IX. 4. 22 ('urūka' means 'vapā'), IX. 4. 23-24 ('praśasā' means 'praśastau'), IX. 4. 25-27 (the words 'śyena, śalā, kaśyapa, kavaṣa and srekaparṇa only mean that the limbs are to be taken out entire and when so taken out they resemble the hawk and other objects mentioned. Jai. (IX. 1. 45-49) says that in the Atirātra sacrifice of the ewe to Sarasvatī the adhrigupraīṣa does not occur. Different views were entertained as to who the śamitṛ was, the usual opinion being that he was a terers calling upon them to bring the animal to the holy doors of the sacrificial place, wishing that the parents, relatives and friends of the victim will consent to its death and expressing the hope that its several organs and limbs, such as the eyes and ears, will be merged in divinities like the sun and giving directions as to how its parts are to be cut and disposed of. On reciting this solemn formula the hotṛ, while still occupying his seat, turns to the right (i. e. he comes to face the west) and has the sacrificial place behind his back and the maitravaruṇa does the same. The adhvaryu throws one of the two blades taken up by him to the west of the śāmitra fire, the victim is held over that blade with its head to the west (or to the east, according to Kāt. VI. 5. 17) and feet to the north. Then its mouth is firmly held so as to stop its breathing and choke it to death or it is strangled to death without allowing it to give out a cry, by using a halter round its throat. The adhvaryu says 'kill it without²⁵⁰⁵ allowing it to utter a cry' and then he along with the pratiprasthātṛ, āgnidhra and the sacrificer come back to the āhavanīya which they face, turn from left to right and remain with their backs to the animal that is being killed (i. e. they do not see the actual slaying of the animal). According to Āp. VII. 16. 7 the sacrificer repeats at this time several verses such as Tai. S. III. 3. 1. 2, Tai. Br. III. 7. 7, the purport of which is that the victim may go to heaven, the sacrificer himself also may go to heaven after securing welfare in this world. When the śamitṛ declares that the victim is killed the adhvaryu says 'let it lie down for a moment.' If the paśu bleats while being strangled the adhvaryu then offers person other than the ṛtviks (though a few opined that one of the ṛtviks who choked or strangled the animal was called śamitṛ). Vide Kāt. VI. 7. 1-4 and the com. thereon. According to Jai. III. 7. 28-29, śamitṛ is the adhvaryu himself. Āśv. XII. 9. 12-13 shows that the śamitṛ may be a brāhmaṇa or a non-brāhmaṇa. The Ait. Br. VI. 7 and Āśv. III. 3. 4 state that the hotṛ is to utter inaudibly 'O (divine) slaughterers! whatever merit exists in this make that belong to us, whatever is sinful, make it go elsewhere'. The words इमिन्तारः, अग्निगात्रेड, अपाप are called अवसान (stops or pauses). The last is pronounced as अपापा.

2505. According to Kāt. VI. 5. 21 the adhvaryu only says 'kill it (the paśu), it has gone following (the gods)'; संज्ञपयान्वगच्छित्येव ब्रूयात्. The com. on Āp. VII. 16. 5. explains 'अक्षतस्य मारणं संज्ञपनम्' (it is killing without wounding or drawing blood). Sat. Br. III. 8. 1. 15 has the words संज्ञपया गच्छति.

ājya in fire (as an expiation). The sacrificer and adhvaryu with vapāśrapaṇis (spits) approach the dead victim with the words 'O slaughterers, may you approach' (Tai. S. III. 1. 4. 3). He then removes the cord (by which the victim was tied) with 'may Aditi remove this cord' (Tai. S. III. 1. 4. 2). He winds round the raśanā (girdle of the victim) into a loop, keeps it on the arteries of the victim leading to the ears, attaches it to a peg and throws it into the cātvalā pit (Āp. VII. 17. 4-6). According to Kāt. VI. 5. 26 he throws the tying cord into the cātvalā by means of the two vapāśrapaṇis. Then the adhvaryu directs the pratiprasthātṛ to lead forward the sacrificer's wife from her seat to the vedi. When leading her who has a jar of water in her hands for washing the feet and other limbs of the paśu, the priest²⁵⁰⁶ makes her recite a verse in honour of the sun 'namaste ātāna' (Vāj. S. VI. 12, Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 2). Āp. adds that the wife, priests and the sacrificer touch water on the cātvalā pit (VII. 18. 4) with a mantra (Tai. S. I. 3. 8. 2 'āpo devīḥ). The wife sitting down near the dead paśu washes with water the several parts of the victim's body viz. its mouth, nose, eyes, navel, penis, anus, feet (all together) with appropriate formulae in each case (viz. 'vācam te śundhāmi' &c. Vāj. S. VI. 14). With the water remaining in the jar the adhvaryu and sacrificer sprinkle the other parts, such as the head, with Vāj. VI. 15 (Tai. S. I. 3. 9. 1). The adhvaryu turns the animal on its back and places on the victim's body a blade of kuśa with its end to the east about four fingers²⁵⁰⁷ below the navel of the animal with 'ośadhe trāyasva' (Vāj. S. VI. 15), places the marked edge of the knife on that blade, makes a slit on the kuśa blade and the belly obliquely, takes in his left hand the portion of the blade cut off and anoints the ends of the other portion of the blade with blood (that spirts out from the slit) with 'thou art the portion of evil spirits' (Vāj. VI. 16), touches water and throws that blood-stained blade on the utkara.²⁵⁰⁸ The 2506. Kāt. (VI. 5. 28) says that where an animal is sacrificed in a Soma sacrifice (as the agniṣomiya paśu or savaniya paśu in Agni-ṣṭoma) it is the neṣṭṛ who leads forward the wife. If the sacrificer has several wives they all are led and all repeat the formula (Vāj. VI. 12), but only one carries the water jar.

sacrificer treads²⁵⁰⁹ upon the blood-stained blade with the left foot (and then touches water with his hand). The adhvaryu then pulls out from the belly of the victim the omentum, envelopes the two spits²⁵¹⁰ (vapāśrapaṇis) with it, pierces the thin end of the vapā with one spit, severs it from the belly on all sides and sprinkles it with water holding the spits over the cātvāla pit. Then the pratiprasthātr heats the omentum on the śāmitra fire. The adhvaryu, pratiprasthātr and āgnīdhra come from the cātvāla to the āhavanīya. The āgnīdhra throws the śāmitra fire (viz. the firebrand and not the fire produced by attrition) into the āhavanīya and the adhvaryu also throws into it the portion of the blade held in his left hand (as stated at p. 1123 above). Āp. (VII. 19. 3) adds that the śamitr holds tightly by the closed fingers of his hands the two portions of the skin of the victim's belly till the omentum is offered into fire. The pratiprasthātr, standing to the north of the āhavanīya fire, heats the omentum on that fire, then carries it by the space between the yūpa and āhavanīya, goes round to the south side, and roasts the omentum on the āhavanīya. The adhvaryu takes clarified butter in the sruva ladle and pours ājya on the omentum that is being held for roasting on the āhavanīya by the pratiprasthātr with a mantra. When drops (stokas) of fat begin to drip from the omentum, the adhvaryu directs the maitrāvaruṇa to recite for the drops. The maitrāvaruṇa recites Rg. I. 75. 1 and Rg. III. 21. 1-5.²⁵¹¹ When the omentum is well roasted, the pratiprasthātr says to the adhvaryu ' it is roasted, proceed.' The omentum is placed on the south corner of the western side (śroṇi) of the vedi on a branch of plakṣa tree stretched on the barhis (kuśa grass on the vedi). Then the hotṛ recites the mantra for sruḡādāpana (making the adhvaryu take up the juhū and upabḥṛt ladles) and the adhvaryu issues a direction²⁵¹² to the maitrāvaruṇa 2509. Āp. VIII. 18. 14 has the characteristic words which the sacrificer utters when treading अधैनत्सव्येन पदभिः तिष्ठतीदृमहं रक्षोवनाथ इदमहं रक्षोऽघ्नमहं तमो नयामीति । This formula occurs in Vāj. S. VI. 16.

2510. The vapāśrapaṇis are made of sticks of kāśmārya wood, one being straight and pointed while the other has two forks at the top.

2511. वपायां श्रुत्यमाणायां तापवशाद्द्विपाया ये विन्दुवः पतन्ति ते स्तोकाः । com. on Kāt. VI. 6. 18. In each of the five verses of Rg. III. 21 the word ' stoka ' occurs. Vide Āśv. III. 4. 1 for the verses that are to be repeated.

2512. The adhvaryu directs the maitrāvaruṇa in the words स्वाहाकु-
तिभ्यः मेभ्यः and the latter says होता यक्षदग्निं स्वाहाज्यस्य स्वाहा मेदुसः &c. (Āśv. III. 4. 3) and the hotṛ then repeats the last Āp. I verse (whatever hymn is used) as the yājyā for the 11th प्रयाज.

priest to ask the hotṛ to recite the last Āpṛi verse as the yājyā for the 11th prayāja (which had remained to be recited). Having offered ājya (the 11th prayāja) into fire and having offered the two ājyabhāgas (according to Jai. X. 8. 5 and some others the ājyabhāgas are not offered in independent animal sacrifices nor in the animal sacrifice in soma-yāga, Āp. VII. 20. 8) he puts ājya in the juhū ladle, places a piece of gold thereon, then the whole omentum on that piece (taking it from the spits), places another golden piece on the omentum, on which he pours ājya.²⁵¹³ The adhvaryu then offers into the āhavanīya the omentum so treated to Indra and Agni (or Sūrya or Prajāpati as stated above on p. 1117). The anuvākya and yājyā of the vapā are respectively Rg. I. 93. 1 and 5. According to Āśv. III. 4. 4. the pradānas (yāgas) in all paśu-bandhas are three, viz. vapā, puroḍāśa and havis. After offering vapā, the adhvaryu throws, while standing to the north, into the āhavanīya the vapāśrapaṇī spits, the one with two forks having the forks in the east and the other having its point turned to the west (according to Āp. VII. 21. 3 it is the prati-prasthātṛ who does this). The adhvaryu offers on the spits the saṁsrāva (the drippings). Āp. (VII. 21. 5) and some other sūtras prescribe that the fee of one bull and three milch cows or three other cows is given to the priests at this stage. The priests (six), the sacrificer and his wife go out to the cātvāla and there purify themselves by mārjana (purifying with drops of water) with 'idamāpaḥ pravahata,'²⁵¹⁴ Vāj. S. VI. 17 and Rg. X. 9. 8 (while Āp. VII. 21. 6 prescribes five, viz. the three 'āpo hi sthā' Rg. X. 9. 1-3, 'idamāpaḥ' Rg. I. 23. 22, 'nirmā muñcāmi' Rg. X. 97. 16 = Vāj. S. XII. 90). When doing this the maitrāvaruṇa lays down his staff (Āśv. III. 5. 1).

Now preparations are to be made for the paśu-puroḍāśa²⁵¹⁵ and the necessary utensils are placed to the east of the āhavanīya (the former āhavanīya i. e. the gārhapatya in this sacrifice) on kuśa grass by the āgnīdhra. The devatā of the puroḍāśa is the same as the devatā of the victim i. e. Indra and Agni (vide

2513. In this way the offering (omentum) becomes fivefold (पञ्चावत्त) and this is done even for those who ordinarily make an offering caturavatta. Vide Āp. VII. 20. 10-11 and Jai. X. 7. 72-73.

2514. The com. on Kāt. VI. 6. 28 expressly states that the wife also repeats the mantra (Vāj. S. VI. 17). Āśv. III. 5. 2 states that mārjana is performed with Rg. X. 9. 8 and 'sumitriyā na śpa' Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 2-3.

p. 1117 above). Jai. (XII. 1. 1-6) prescribes that the procedure (viz. prayājas) performed at the time of offering vapā is not to be repeated when the paśupurodāśa is offered. The adhvaryu separates the various organs (such as the heart, the tongue) from the corpse without cutting into parts each organ (according to the com. on Āp. VII. 22. 5 and 7 it is the śamītr who cuts up the several limbs). There is some divergence as to the limbs of the victim that are cut off and are used as avadānas and since animal sacrifices became rare or were altogether stopped in medieval times, the commentators do not explain all the words used in the ancient texts in the same way (vide Āp. VII. 22. 6, Kāt. VI. 7. 6-12 and Baud. IV. 8). According to Āp. VII. 22. 6,²⁵¹⁶ the limbs cut off are : the heart, the tongue, chest, the liver, the kidneys (vṛkyau, vṛkkau in Kāt.), left forefoot, the two flanks (pārśve), the right haunch, a third part (i. e. the middle one) of the entrails—these are meant for the devatās and are to be offered with the juhū ladle ; the right fore-foot, the left haunch, the thinnest third of the entrails—these are for sviṣṭakṛt ; the kloman (the right lung ?)²⁵¹⁷, plīhan (the spleen), puritat (pericardium ?), adhyūdhni (a tubular vessel above the udder), vaniṣṭhu (large entrails ?), medas (fat), jāghani²⁵¹⁸ (the tail). Kāt. VI.

2516. According to Kāt. VI. 7. 6 it is the foremost (or upper) joint (pūrvanaḍaka) of the left forefoot (that is taken) among the first nine. Kāt. VI. 7. 6. describes the first nine as jauhavam (to be offered with the juhū) and the next three as connected with upabṛt ladle. The three cut into upabṛt are called tryaṅga and are meant for Sviṣṭakṛt. Vide Śat. Br. III. 8. 3. 18 (S. B. E. Vol. 26 p. 205). The whole of the entrails are taken off at once and divided only at the time of cutting and putting into the juhū ladle.

2517. According to com. on Kāt. kloman is गलनादिका, while com. on Āp. says it is a fleshy gland called 'tilaka' resembling the liver. Puritat is pericardium according to com. on Kāt. and entrails (antra) according to com. on Āp. Medas according to com. on Āp. is the membrane covering the heart and the vṛkya.

2518. Vide Jaimini III. 3. 20-23 about jāghani and patnīsamīyāja and com. on Kāt. VI. 7. 10 for the various meanings attributed to jāghani. Jaimini has several sūtras on paśu. In X. 7. 1-2 he establishes that the whole animal is not one offering, but that its several limbs are separate offerings. In X. 7. 3-9 he establishes that only eleven organs (heart &c.) are fit to be offered, that the shoulders, head, anūka and sakthīn are altogether prohibited ; in X. 7. 10-11 he declares that the three aṅgas, viz. the front portion of the forefoot, the middle of the entrails, and the śronī are offered to Sviṣṭakṛt ; in X. 7. 12-17 he deals with the adhyūdhni given to hotṛ and vaniṣṭhu to ṣṇūdhra.

7. 11 adds that kloman and the next three may be cut off or not. The medas (fat on the abdomen) is, according to Kāt., thrown on the guda (entrails) if the victim be thin. The tail is to be employed as an offering in the Patnisaṁyāja, according to Kāt. and the largest part of the intestines (3rd of the whole) was to be employed as offering in upayaj homa. The undigested grass (inside the belly of the victim) is put in a pit dug up to the west of the śāmitra fire and to the north of the utkara and on it the blood of the victim is poured with the words 'thou art the portion of evil spirits' (Vāj. S. VI. 16). The victim's heart is held pierced on a pike (śūla) made of varaṇa wood one aratni long and is roasted on the śāmitra fire and all other parts of the victim except the heart are cooked in an ukhā (pot for boiling or cooking). According to com. on Āp. VII. 22. 9 this cooking is done by the śāmitṛ. Jai. XII. 1. 12 prescribes that the cooking is done on the śālāmukhiya fire and not on śāmitra fire. The adhvaryu performs the operation of sprinkling butter on the juhū and upabṛṣṭ, cuts two portions from the middle and front parts of the cooked material into the juhū, pours butter over it and offers it into fire for Indra and Agni, then cuts one portion (for Sviṣṭakṛt) into the upabṛṣṭ, makes two pourings of butter over it and makes an offering to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt.²⁵¹⁹ Jai. (XII. 1. 10-11) concludes that the offering of the paśupuroḍāśa is made with the ladles used in darśapūrṇamāśa and not with the soma vessels (viz. the cups and camasas). Then a portion is cut off out of the remainder of the material from which puroḍāśa was offered and placed in a vessel called prāśitraharaṇa (which portion of the sacrificial food is eaten by the brahmā priest) and some portion is cut off as the idā, which is invoked with mantras and eaten by all the priests. He then thrice asks the śāmitṛ whether the havis (the heart roasted on a pike) is ready cooked and the latter simply replies 'it is cooked'. Kāt. VI. 8. 1 prescribes that the śāmitṛ should in his reply utter only the word 'śṛtam' and should not add any word like 'revered sir' (bhagavaḥ) or 'hi'. The śāmitṛ then takes off the heart from the pike (śūla) on which it was roasted, and keeps it in a pot (kumbhī) and pours over it prṣadājya (clarified butter in which sour milk is mixed) with 'san te' (Vāj. S. VI. 18, Tai. S. I. 3. 10. 1) and ājya over the other portions of the paśu. The śamitṛ gives the hṛdaya-śūla (the pike on which the heart was roasted) to the adhvaryu who does not keep it on the bare ground nor throw it in water, nor does he touch with it himself or others (but holds it tied by a cord). He takes these (viz. the roasted heart and the cooked organs) between the yūpa and the āhavanīya fire and places them on the southern part of the altar (viz. its southern corner of the western side) over which kuśa grass is already spread. Then ājya is sprinkled over four utensils viz. juhū, upabhr̥t, vasā, homahavaṇī (a śruc ladle with which the offering of vasā i. e. of the gravy is to be made) and the vessel in which idā is to be cut. Then a golden piece is placed in the juhū and the upabhr̥t, which are then kept on twigs of plakṣa tree and then in the juhū and upabhr̥t are cut by the pratiprasthātṛ (with the anointed edge of the knife) portions of the heart, then of the tongue and then of the chest (this order is stated in the Tai. S. VI. 3. 10) and then of the other limbs in any order (the whole of the entrails being at this stage cut in three parts). Two portions of the size of the fore-part of the thumb are cut both in the juhū (of the daivata limbs) and upabhr̥t (of the limbs meant for Sviṣṭakṛt). While this is being done the adhvaryu directs the maitrāvaruṇa to repeat texts for the havis that is to be offered to Manotā and the maitrāvaruṇa repeats the whole hymn Rg. VI. 1 (in the first of which only the word Manotā occurs as an epithet of Agni, probably meaning 'thinker'). He takes the gravy in the *vasāhomahavaṇī*²⁵²⁰ with 'red-asi' (Vāj. S. VI. 18), pours ājya over it twice and mixes the two together with the knife. The rest of the vasā he pours in the idāpātra to which are 2520. Vide Sat. Br. III. 8. 3. 14 (S. B. E. vol. 26 p. 203 where Manotā is of the feminine gender) and Ait. Br. VI. 10; the latter refers to Rg. VI. 1. 1-13 and says Vāk, Go and Agni are the three Manotās. The hymn also is called Manotā (vide Āśv. III. 4. 6 and com.). The manotā-mantra is the same, though the animal may be offered in some sacrifices to other deities. Vide Jai. X. 4. 42.

added the chest and other boneless parts.²⁵²¹ When the yājyā for Indra-Agni is half repeated, a part of the vasā is offered by the pratiprasthātṛ sitting to the north into fire with 'ghṛtam ghṛtapāvānaḥ' (Vaj. S. VI. 19, Tai. S. I. 3. 10. 2) and with the remainder of the vasā he makes offerings in each direction with 'diśaḥ pradīśaḥ' (Vaj. S. VI. 19, Tai. S. I. 3. 10. 2). No vasā is kept for being partaken of by the priests (com. on Kāt. VI. 8. 22). Then the adhvaryu takes in the juhū a part of prṣadājya (mottled butter) from the pot of prṣadājya and offers to Vanaspati and after taking the contents of the upabhṛt into the juhū makes the offering to Sviṣṭakṛt (Āp. VII. 25. 14 and Kāt. VI. 8. 18-22 state that the order of these last offerings may be different). Then he touches the remaining organs and limbs of the paśu and keeps the juhū and upabhṛt in their places. Then the idā (to be eaten by the priests) is brought between the yūpa and the āhavanīya fire. After the idā is invoked the six priests and the sacrificer partake of it, but there are special portions assigned to each viz. the vanīṣṭhu is given to the āgnīdhra, the adhyūdhnī to the hotṛ and the chest to brahmā. Then they all purify themselves by mārjana. The adhvaryu then directs the āgnīdhra 'bring burning coals for upayaj offerings', directs the pratiprasthātṛ (called *upayaṣṭṛ*²⁵²² here) to attend to the coals; to the brahmā

2521. The whole animal is the sacrificial material (just as rice-grains are the material from which caru is prepared for offering) and havis is constituted by the heart and other organs of the animal. Vide com. on Kāt. VI. 8. 6 and Jai. X. 7. 1-2. The several organs and parts are taken out of the ukhā and spread over a large bamboo vessel (vaṁśa-pātrī), the last part being placed in the north. The adhvaryu performs on each of the eleven limbs (called jauhava) prāṇadāna (vivification) while no prāṇadāna is done for the portions to be offered to Sviṣṭakṛt. According to Āp. VII. 24. 5 only one portion is cut from the limbs meant for Sviṣṭakṛt. Several rules are laid down in Āp. VII. 24. 6-12 about the cutting of some parts. Out of the three parts of the entrails, one of medium thickness is cut in two and placed among the daivata portions, the thinnest part being for sviṣṭakṛt; the medas is cut in three parts, two being put in the two *sruc*s and the third in the idāpātra. The medas is mixed in the broth of the victim's limbs. The idā is made from the first six out of the limbs (heart &c.) and the vanīṣṭhu is the 7th. The idā is increased by the addition of the limbs that have no bones viz. kloman, spleen and purītat.

2522. According to com. on Āp. VII. 26. 8 the hotṛ is the upayaṣṭṛ. According to Jai XII. 4. 8 this offering of the entrails is a saṁskāra (pratipattikarma) and when many victims are sacrificed in one rite, the entrails of all animals are offered as *upayaj*a offerings.

priest he says 'shall I start' and also directs the āgnīdhra to place a samidh on the fire. The āgnīdhra brings red-hot coals from the śāmitra fire, and puts them down on the northern corner of the west side of the altar after removing the kuśas strewn thereon (in soma the coals may be optionally brought from the āgnīdhriya fire-place and placed on hotṛ dhiṣṇya). The third and thickest part of the entrails (that has been kept aside) is cut obliquely into eleven parts, which are offered into the red-hot coals placed as above by the pratiprasthātṛ with his right hand, each with a mantra (for eleven mantras vide Vāj. S. VI. 21, Tai. S. I. 3. 11. 1), when the cry vausaṭ is uttered for each of the eleven *anuyājas*²⁵²³ that are offered with prṣadājya here (Āp. VII. 26. 12). These eleven offerings of the entrails are called upayājas (additional offerings), vide Jai. XII. 4. 8. At the end of the 11th offering, the pratiprasthātṛ touches his mouth and the portion sticking to his hand is wiped on the barhis with the words 'adbhyastvaṣadhibhyaḥ' (Tai. S. I. 3. 11). At the end of the anuyājas, the svaru is placed in the juhū ladle and offered into fire with 'may thy smoke reach the sky, may thy flame reach heaven, fill the earth with thy ashes, svāhā!' (Vāj. S. VI. 21, Āp. VII. 27. 4). Āp. (VII. 27. 6-7) and others say the direction (praiṣa) for repeating the sūktavāka is uttered by the *maitrāvaruṇa*²⁵²⁴ (and not by the adhvaryu). The hotṛ repeats it and the maitrāvaruṇa throws his staff into the āhavanīya fire (Āśv. III. 6. 21) and Āp. (VII. 27. 8) says that the three paridhis also are thrown into fire by means of the *sruc*s except the dhruvā. The patnīsaṃyāja is performed with the tail of the animal, which is taken to the south of the sacrificial ground. There was a difference of opinion whether portions of the tail were offered to all the four deities of *patnīsaṃyāja*²⁵²⁵ or to some only (vide Kāt. VI. 9. 14-20). According to Āp. (VII. 27. 10) and Kāt. (VI. 9. 15-19) only ājya offerings are made to Soma and Tvaṣṭṛ, the inside part of the tail (on which no hair grow) is cut up for the wives of the gods and the hairy part is cut up for Agni Gr̥hapati. Whether the sacrificer is caturavattin or pañcāvattin, all four or five portions are cut off from the tail and there is no under layer (upastaraṇa) and upper layer (abhighāraṇa) of ājya in this case. According to Kāt. VI. 9. 20 portions of the tail are offered to all devatās of patnisamyāja. Vide Jai. XII. 4. 10-16 and III. 3. 20-23 on this. Idā is cut from the hairless portion of the tail for hotr and from the hairy portion for the āgnidhra and the rest of the tail is handed over to the sacrificer's wife who passes it on to the adhvaryu or some brāhmaṇa. The śamitr had so far partaken of nothing, but he is now given the shoulder of the victim, but if he be not a brāhmaṇa he gives it to a brāhmaṇa. They offer three samiṣṭayajus,²⁵²⁶ throw the barhis into fire, approach a pond (or reservoir of water) taking with them the spit (śūla) on which the heart was roasted. Āp. VII. 27. 15 says that they carry²⁵²⁷ the śūla in such a way as not to touch it. The adhvaryu enters in the midst of the water and conceals the spit into the bottom underneath with its tip downwards with the mantra 'thou art sorrow; give him sorrow who hateth us and whom we hate' (Tai. S. I. 3. 11. 1-2 and also with Vāj. S. VI. 22 according to Kāt. VI. 10. 3), at the same time thinking of his enemy (without taking his name). If he does not enter water, then he may pour some water to the east of the yūpa and should conceal the spit at the place where the dry space and wet space meet. Āśv. (III. 6. 25-26) prescribes that all the priests, the sacrificer and the wife do not touch the śūla after it is thrust into the earth, do not look at it, and return, each taking one after another three fuel-sticks with a mantra for each and put them on fire with a mantra for each stick one after another, after doing homage to the āhavanīya with Rg. I. 23. 23. Then they all perform mārjana near the concealed śūla or the cātvāla with 'sumitriyā na āpa oṣadhayaḥ' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 2) or according to Kāt. VI. 10. 5 they touch water with 'dhāmno sumitriyā na āpaḥ' (Vāj. S. VI. 22). Then they pray Varuṇa to free them from sin in the words 'dhāmno dhāmno rājan' (Tai. S. I. 3. 11. 2), and 'ud-uttamam' (Tai. S. I. 5. 11. 3). They lay samidhs on the āhavanīya as in Varuṇapraghāsa. The animal sacrifice ends with the samsthājapa as in darsapūrṇamāsa.

Kāmyāḥ Paśavaḥ:—Just as several kāmya iṣṭis were prescribed for securing various desired objects so various animal sacrifices are found in the texts prescribed for the attainment of such objects as prosperity, villages, eloquence &c. Tai. S. (II. 1. 1-10) refers to several such sacrifices. For example, Tai. S. II. 1. 1. 1 says 'one who is desirous of prosperity should offer a white paśu to Vāyu; one who is desirous of a village should sacrifice an animal to Vāyu Niyutvat; one who having command over speech or words is not able to speak eloquently should offer an ewe to Sarasvatī' (II. 1. 2. 6). The Tai. Br. (II. 8. 1-9) contains the anuvākyās and yājyās of the vapā, puroḍāśa and havis offerings of many animal sacrifices. Āp. (XIX, 16-17) deals with kāmya animal sacrifices. Āśv. III. 7 gives the anuvākyās and yājyās of a group sacrifice (Aikādaśina) of eleven animals²⁵²⁸ to Agni, Sarasvatī, Soma, Pūṣan, Bṛhaspati, Viśve Devas, Indra, Maruts, Indra-Agni, Savitr, and Varuṇa; while Āśv. III. 8. 1 sets out the anuvākyās and yājyās of eighteen animal sacrifices in addition.

²⁵²⁸. The Aikādaśina animal sacrifice is a special form of the animal sacrifice, for which Ap. XIV. 5-7 may be consulted. It follows the procedure of savaniya paśu (Jai. VIII. 1. 14). In this there may be thirteen yūpas for eleven paśus or only one yūpa for all paśus. Eleven yūpas are the ordinary ones, the 12th is called upaśaya, the whole of which is chiselled, but is not implanted in a pit like the others; it lies near the yūpa to the south; the 13th is called pātnīvata and it is not higher than the navel when imbedded in the ground. The yūpas are so arranged as to rise on the south side i. e. the southern-most is the tallest of all. The paśu tied to the pātnīvata is meant for Tvaṣṭṛ, but it is let off and śjya is offered. Jai. (II. 3. 19) concludes that when the Vedic text says 'after carrying fire round the pātnīvata victim, it is let off', only a special matter is laid down concerning the pātnīvata victim. He further says (in IX. 4. 56-60) that the śjya offered is not a substitute for the victim, but is a separate rite in which the deity is the same. Vide Kāt. VIII. 8. 27 ff. If there be more yūpas than one, then the saṁskāras from aṁjana to parivyāṇa (surrounding with a girdle) are all to be done on one, then on another and so on. Vide Jai. V. 2. 7-9.

AGNIṢṬOMA²⁵²⁹

Sacrifices are often divided for convenience into iṣṭi, paśu and soma. According to Gaut. VIII. 21 and Lāṭ. Śr. V. 4. 24 there are seven forms of soma sacrifices, viz. Agniṣṭoma, Atyagniṣṭoma, Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin, Vājapeya, Atirātra and Aptoryāma. The Agniṣṭoma is the model (prakṛti) of all soma sacrifices. The Agniṣṭoma is a one day (aikāhika or ekāha) sacrifice and it is an integral part of the Jyotiṣṭoma so much so that the two are often identified. Soma sacrifices are classified into those that are finished in one day (and so called ekāha), those that are celebrated for more than one day up to twelve (and so called ahina), those that extend over more than twelve days (and are called Sattra). The dvādaśāha is both a sattra and an ahina.²⁵³⁰ The Jyotiṣṭoma occupies generally five days and the chief rites performed on these days are : (1) choosing of priests, madhuparka, dīkṣaṇīyeṣṭi, consecration of the sacrificer (dīkṣā); (2nd day) Prāyaṇīyā iṣṭi (i. e. opening iṣṭi), purchase of soma, ātithyeṣṭi (iṣṭi offering hospitality to soma), Pravargya,²⁵³¹ Upasad (homage twice a day in the morning and evening); (3rd day) Pravargya and Upasad twice again; (4th day) Pravargya and Upasad, Agniṣṭomapraṇayana, Agniṣṭomapraṇayana, havirdhāna-praṇayana, animal sacrifice; (5th day called sutya or savaniya) pressing of soma, offering it and drinking it in the morning, mid-day and evening, the udayaṇīyā (concluding iṣṭi), avabhṛtha (final purificatory bath). In the following pages only a skeleton outline of Agniṣṭoma is presented, derived from the principal Śrauta sūtras. Jai. in VI. 2. 31 declares that the performance of Jyotiṣṭoma is obligatory on all members of the three higher varṇas, just as upanayana is, since the word brāhmaṇa in Tai. S. VI. 3. 10. 5 (a brāhmaṇa when born comes charged with three debts) is only illustrative. Agniṣṭoma is so called because in it Agni is praised or because the last chant (stotra) is addressed to Agni.²⁵³² It is to be performed in vasanta (spring) every year and on the New Moon or Full Moon day (Āp. X. 2. 2, 5 and 8, Kāt. VII. 1. 4 and Sat. VII. 1 p. 552). The general view expressed in Jai. IV. 3. 37 was that one should perform a soma sacrifice after having performed darśapūrṇamāsa, cāturmāsya and paśu sacrifice, but some held that it could be performed even before darśa-pūrṇamāsa, but after agnyādhāna (Āśv. IV. 1. 1-2 and Sat. VII. 1. p. 556). Jai. (V. 4. 5-9) also states this as the view of some. Jaimini, however, declares that all modifications of the Agniṣṭoma must be performed after one has begun to perform darśapūrṇamāsa (V. 4. 26). The intending sacrificer sends a person called somapravāka (inviter to officiate at a soma sacrifice) to invite brāhmaṇas who are thorough masters of the Veda, neither too young nor too old, with clear and loud voices and not deficient in any limb (Tāṇḍya Br. I. 1. 1, Drāhyāyaṇa Śr. I. 1. 10, Āp. X. 1. 1). He invites the principal four or all the 16 (or 17, including 'sadasya') priests (ṛvij), who make inquiries whether some other person has refused the office and whether the fee will be excellent. Those portions of the choosing mantras are uttered inaudibly wherein the priests are invoked as if they were divinities and the portion asau mānuṣaḥ or tvam mānuṣaḥ is uttered loudly.²⁵³³ When the priests come madhuparka is offered to them. The sacrificer goes to the king (of the country) to ask for a sacrificial ground (devayajana), even if he has one already, with the formula 'god Varuṇa, give me devayajana'.²⁵³⁴ This is a mere form, but even the king has to make a similar request (in his case) to the hotṛ and other priests. The requirements of a proper devayajana have already been given above (p. 988n). In the western portion of the devayajana from which all roots are uprooted, a pavilion²⁵³⁵ (vimīta, a four-cornered maṇḍapa) is erected, the central ridge and the covering bamboos of which run from west to east, which has doors (two cubits wide) in all directions and which slightly inclines towards the east, or a rectangular house (śālā) may be built, twenty aratnis long and ten aratnis wide (Kāt. VII. 1. 19-25, Āp. X. 5. 1-5, Baud. VI. 1). A shed for cooking the vṛata food is erected to the south of the pavilion and another to the west for the patnī (wife of the sacrificer). The sacrificer while in his house implants his gārhapatya and āhavanīya fires on the arāṇis with a mantra 'ayam te yoniḥ' (Vāj. S. III. 14., Tai. S. I. 5. 2), comes to the devayajana, enters (along with the priests and his wife) the maṇḍapa by the eastern door with the arāṇis in his hand, and touches the central post of the pavilion. The things that are required (sambhārāḥ)²⁵³⁶ are also brought to the pavilion. In the pavilion a vedi is prepared and fires are established after being produced by attrition. Offerings of ājya with the sambhārayajus formulas (Tai. Ā. III. 8), with the sapta-hotṛ formulas (Tai. Ā. III. 5) are made and also a yūpāhuti is offered. Outside the pavilion to its north the sacrificer gets the hair on the head, arm-pits and on the face cut by a barber in a tent covered with mats, pares the nails of his hands first (of the right hand first from the small finger) and then of the feet. Jai. (III. 8. 3-11) establishes that it is the sacrificer (and not the adhvaryu) who pares his nails, cuts his hair, brushes his teeth, subsists on milk. Sat. VII. 1. p. 587 states that the nails of the left hand are pared first and then of the right hand. He brushes his teeth with an udumbara twig, then he bathes in a reservoir of water or in a kunda after putting a golden piece in it with mantras, performs ācamana and drinks water as a consecration.

2535. The pavilion is called prāgrāṃśa or prācīnavāṃśa and according to some it is 16 prakramas long (from west to east) and 12 prakramas wide (from south to north). It may have four or five (one in the north-east) doors and apertures in the four quarters. Vide Āp. X. 5. 5.

2536. Baud. VI. 1 enumerates thirteen requisites (sambhāras) that the yajamāna brings with him and thirteen more which are placed round about the wife.

All these from paring nails (called apsu-dikṣā)²⁵³⁷ except the cutting of hair are also undergone by the wife at the instance of the pratiprasthātr priest (but without mantras). The adhvaryu hands over a fine silken fresh garment to the sacrificer which the latter wears. In the afternoon in the prāgvamśa he partakes of food (rice)²⁵³⁸ mixed with ghee and sprinkled over with curds and honey or whatever is liked by him. The wife also does the same. He takes up butter (navanita) with two bunches of darbha grass and smears himself thrice with them beginning from the face. He applies collyrium with a darbha blade twice to the right eye and once to the left or thrice to both. The adhvaryu performs the purification (pavana) of the sacrificer outside the prāgvamśa to its north by three bunches of seven darbhas each rubbed twice over his body above the navel and once below the navel with mantras and the sacrificer also mutters mantras. The wife also does all this (smearing the body with butter, applying añjana and purification) without mantras at the instance of the pratiprasthātr. The sacrificer enters the pavilion by the eastern door and the wife by the western and occupy their respective seats. Then follows *dikṣaṇīyā iṣṭi*²⁵³⁹ which is so called because it effects a samskāra in the man intending to sacrifice and because after it is performed he is entitled to be called ' dikṣita '. The conclusion in Jai. V. 3. 29-31 is that a man becomes a dikṣita at the end of the dikṣaṇīyā iṣṭi and has thenceforward to observe the rules laid down for a dikṣita and that one does not become a dikṣita by being given the staff or the girdle &c. At first six āhutis called dikṣāhutis are offered, four with ājya taken from the dhruvā into the sruva, 5th with the sruca and the sixth is called pūrnāhuti and is offered with sruca (in which twelve ladlings with sruva have been made). These six āhutis are called ' audgrahana ' (Āp. X. 8. 7 and com. on Sat. VII. 1. p. 591) or ' audgrabhāna ' (Kāt. VII. 3. 16). In the dikṣaṇīyā iṣṭi a cake

VII. 1. p. 587* makes the interesting remark that according to the sūtrakāra the adhvaryu himself pares the sacrificer's nails, but that as in his time the priests had no instruction in such matters and as people had come to look with disfavour on such a practice, the barber pares the nails.

2538. According to some the meal takes place before the cutting of hair (vide Āp. X. 6. 10).

prepared on eleven pots herds is offered to Agni-Visṇu (or boiled rice with clarified butter). Some offered another offering of boiled rice to Aditi. Several matters that occur in the model iṣṭi (such as observing a vrata, the girding up of the wife, cutting off a portion for yajamāna, phalikaraṇahoma, cooking anvāhārya rice as fee for the priests, samiṣṭayajus) are omitted in this iṣṭi (Baud. VI. 3 mentions ten matters that are omitted, Āp. X. 4. 12, Sat. VII. 1. p. 575). According to Jai. VIII. 1. 3-10 the several actions done in the model iṣṭi are not to be extended to somayāga unless the vedic texts expressly say so, and Jai. X. 1. 4 establishes that there is no ārambhanīyā iṣṭi in dikṣanīyā and other iṣṭis of somayāga. The dikṣanīyā ends with the patnīsamīyājas and the eating of the 2nd idā (Sat. VII. 1. p. 578). Certain rules are laid down about the pitch of the voice in the several rites. According to Āp. X. 4. 9 everything is said inaudibly till the agniṣoma rite. According to Kāt. (VII. 2. 31-32) the voice reaches the highest pitch in the dikṣanīyā iṣṭi, the mantras in the prāyaṇīyā and ātithīyā iṣṭis are in a lower tone than in the dikṣanīyā and the upasad mantras are repeated inaudibly. The dikṣā (consecration) of the sacrificer and his wife proceeds as follows.²⁵⁴⁰ To the south of the āhavanīyā two black antelope hides (or one if two are not available) with the neck portion to the east are spread on the altar with the hairy part outside. He (the priest) sits to the west of the antelope skin bending his right knee; the sacrificer touches the white and black spots (or the line that joins them, Kāt. VII. 3. 23), then creeps upon the hide with his right knee bent and sits down on the western side of the hide. The sacrificer ties round his waist above the garment worn by him a girdle of three strands made of hemp and muñja grass, covers his right shoulder with a fresh garment and folds round his head a piece of cloth, he is given the horn of a black antelope about a span in length with three or five folds (from left to right), which he ties to the hem of his garment (or in the corner of his upper garment). He touches his forehead above the right brow with the horn, draws a line with it from west to east outside the vedi, and if he wants at any time to scratch 2540. All these several actions in the dikṣā are done to the accompaniment of mantras as in Vāj. IV. 9 ff. and Tai. S., but they are not referred to for reasons of space. Elsewhere also mantras have been often omitted.

his body he does so with that horn. Jai. (XI. 4. 48-49) declares that the mantra is to be repeated only once even if the yajamāna feels the desire to scratch several parts of his body at the same time. The adhvaryu gives a staff of udumbara (or of some other sacrificial tree) which is as high as the sacrificer's mouth (or chin), which he raises up and keeps on his right shoulder. While the adhvaryu is doing these things for the yajamāna, the pratiprasthātṛ does the same things for the wife (without mantras) except that she has the yoktra girt round her upper garment, that her head is covered by a jāla (a net or fillet) of wool and she has a piece of some sacrificial tree one span long for scratching her body. The sacrificer and adhvaryu repeat long passages wherein the word dikṣā occurs frequently (Āp. X. 10. 6 and X. 11. 1), and the adhvaryu makes him repeat the sambhāra-yajus mantras (Tai. Ā. III. 8). The sacrificer then contracts the fingers of both hands one after another with mantras (first the small fingers of both hands, then the ring-fingers of both hands and so on) and ultimately he clinches his fists. He observes silence. Some priest (like the pratiprasthātṛ) other than the adhvaryu inaudibly declares (to the gods) thrice and loudly proclaims to the world thrice 'this brāhmaṇa has undergone the consecration, son of so and so, grandson of so and so, great-grandson of so and so, the son of such and such a woman, grandson of such and such a woman and great-grandson of such and such a woman'. Even when the sacrificer was a kṣatriya or vaiśya, the announcement was still to be 'this brāhmaṇa²⁵⁴¹ &c.', since after dikṣā a person was supposed to be reborn and to be a child of holy prayer and to have become pure enough for receiving spiritual influences. The Śat. Br. III. 3. 3. 12 states 'he who is consecrated becomes an embryo'. Dikṣā takes place in the afternoon (Āp. X. 12. 1) and the sacrificer observes silence till the appearance of stars in the evening. The adhvaryu directs the milking of two cows to supply milk for the sacrificer and his wife who are to subsist on the milk of the two cows during the period of the sacrifice. This vrata (observance) of subsisting on milk is declared by Jai. (IV. 3. 8-9) to be kratvartha (an obligatory rule) and not puruṣārtha (recommendatory). Vide also Jai. VI. 8. 28. Some allowed rice or barley to be cooked in that milk. The two cows were milked in two separate vessels, one of which (meant for the sacrificer) was heated on the gārhapatya and the other (for the wife) was heated on the dakṣiṇa fire. A kṣatriya or vaiśya sacrificer could take gruel or āmikṣā respectively or all persons could subsist on milk or on rice cooked in milk or on fruits (if enough milk was not available) or if he had a desire for curds, he could use curds or use fried barley grains or he could take ghee. He was to take his food at midday or midnight long after ordinary men have taken their meals and he took his food from a pot which was not earthenware and the wife from a copper pot. Persons who were not dīkṣitas were not to see him when taking his milk or other vrata diet. The wife was also to take her milk or other diet in her own place. Vide Āp. X. 16 and Kāt. VII. 4. 19-34 for details. The dīkṣita and his wife (to some extent) have to observe certain rules (till the final bath) and people also had to observe some rules with reference to him. He has to keep awake on the night of the dīkṣā (Jai. XII. 1. 17), on the night when soma is purchased and on the night before the pressing day. He is not²⁵⁴² to speak with women or śūdras nor should a śūdra follow him. If he is obliged to speak to a śūdra he should do so by employing a messenger belonging to the three higher varṇas. He may speak to or bless another, but he was not to bow to another, even if the latter was his ācārya or father-in-law or a king. No one was to touch him or to address the dīkṣita by his name (but use only such terms of address as 'bhoḥ', 'dīkṣita' &c.). The sacrificer was not to keep aside the antelope horn till the fees were distributed. He could laugh covering his face with his hand and should not show his teeth. He was not ordinarily to answer calls of nature by day, but if he has to do so, he must do so in a shaded spot. He has to observe complete celibacy. While he is consecrated for the sacrifice, he does not go out by the western door, nor does he perform the daily agnihotra, nor vaiśvadeva nor offering of bali nor perform the darsapūrṇamāsa iṣṭi (Jai. XII. 1. 19-23), but he may employ another to do all these. He must speak the truth and address people in a pure and conciliatory style adding the word 'canasita' when addressing a brāhmaṇa and the word 'vicakṣaṇa' when addressing a kṣatriya or vaiśya (vide Ait. Br. I. 6). He must always be in the pavilion at sunrise and sunset; he sleeps on the ground to the south of the āhavanīya with his head to the east and sleeps on his right side and does not turn his back to the fire. He always sits on antelope hide and never leaves it and his staff (except when answering calls of nature). No one is to eat the food given by a dīkṣita till the agnīṣomīya victim or its omentum is offered. It is recommended by all the sūtras that dīkṣā (consecration) should not be finished in one day, but it should extend over 12 days or a month or a year or till from being fat he becomes lean (vide Āp. X. 14. 8, X. 15. 4, Āśv. IV. 2. 13-15). Every day (while the dīkṣā lasts) the sacrificer observes silence from the afternoon till the appearance of stars and in the morning from before sunrise till the sun goes up. The dīkṣita is allowed to go himself or to send agents called (sanhāra) ²⁵⁴³ to collect money and materials necessary for the sacrifice. He has to observe many rules on his journey (vide Āp. X. 19. 6-16).

After the day (or days of dīkṣā), the next day the first rite is the prāyaṇīyā ²⁵⁴⁴ (opening) iṣṭi. In this iṣṭi caru (rice) cooked in milk is offered to Aditi (Jai. IX. 4. 32-40) and four offerings of ājya to four more deities viz. Pāthyā Svasti, Agni, Soma and Savitr in the four directions (viz. east, south, west and north) respectively. Caru is offered to Aditi in the centre. Agni Sviṣṭakṛt is the sixth deity. According to Āśv. IV. 3. 3 no ājyabhāgas are offered in this iṣṭi, but according to Kāt. VII. 5. 15 they are offered. The priests that officiate in this iṣṭi should as far as possible officiate in the Udayanīyā (concluding) iṣṭi. The rites of this iṣṭi end with the first Saṃyu, ²⁵⁴⁵ but there is no patnī-saṃyāja and no samīṣṭayajus.

The puronuvākya verses in this iṣṭi become the yājñya verses in the udayaniyā iṣṭi and vice versa (vide Āśv. IV. 3. 2 for them). He keeps aside in a well-known place in the prāgvaṁśa the cooking pot (from which the leavings of rice sticking to the bottom are not removed according to some), the mekṣaṇa and the barhis (except the prastara) for use in the udayaniyā. Jai. (XI. 2. 66-68) refers to this use of nīṣkāsa in the udayaniyā iṣṭi.

Then comes the purchase of soma (referred to in the Brāhmaṇas and Sūtras as ' rājan '). Soma is purchased from a brāhmaṇa of the Kutsa gotra or from a śūdra (Āp. X. 20. 12 allows it to be purchased from any brāhmaṇa). ²⁵⁴⁶ Jai. III. 7. 31 states that the vendor of soma is someone other than the priests. The seller of soma is asked to free it from the weeds that may be mixed up with it; the adhvaryu turns his back towards soma when this (weeding) is being done and neither the adhvaryu nor his assistants nor the sacrificer nor the latter's sons should do the weeding out nor does anyone of these see it being done (Sat. VII. 1, p. 609). The soma plant is placed on the southern part of the red hide of a bull by the pratiprasthātṛ spread on the place where uparavas (four sounding holes) will be made later on and the seller of soma sits on the northern part of the hide. A water jar is placed in front of soma. The doors of the sacrificial hall are shut, the adhvaryu pours into the juhū four times ājya from the dhruvā ladle used in the prāyaṇīyā (or five times for those who are pañcūvattins), ties a piece of gold by a blade out of the darbhas spread on the altar, puts down into the juhū the blade with the gold and makes an offering into the āhavanīya of that ājya (this offering is called hiraṇyavati āhuti); he takes out the piece of gold, casts the blade (with which it was tied) on the vedi and ties the gold piece with a thread. The doors of the hall are opened and the adhvaryu and yajamāna come out. To the south of the eastern door of the sacrificial hall stands a heifer (called somakrayanī), that is one, two or three

VII. 2, p. 623 for further details). The cow is not held by her ear or her foot is not tied by a rope (she may be held by the neck, if necessary). She is invoked by the adhvaryu (who is sitting) with a mantra 'cidasi' (Vāj.S.IV.19, Tai.S.I.2.4.1). The cow is led towards the north, the adhvaryu and yajamāna follow her. After she goes six steps, at her 7th step, the brahmā and yajamāna sit down to the cow's right, behind her sits the adhvaryu and the neṣṭṛ priest to her north. They keep the golden piece on the spot where the 7th step is put by her (which is first covered with his folded hands by the adhvaryu) and make an offering of it to Aditi (adityai idam na mama). Taking the sphya the adhvaryu draws lines round the 7th foot-print (once with a mantra, twice silently) from right to left (Āp. X. 23. 3 adds that lines are drawn also with the antelope horn of the sacrificer); the dust on the lines is gathered with the hand and put into a pot (sthālī) and handed over to the yajamāna who passes it on to his wife who invokes the cow with a mantra. He washes his hand (that has the piece of gold in it) on the 7th foot-print (of the cow), pours some water on the dust collected in a pot, divides the dust into three parts, one of which is placed on the cold ashes of the gārhapatya, the 2nd on the cold ashes of the āhavanīya and the third is given to the wife who places it in the house. The adhvaryu ties the piece of gold to his small finger (on which it must be at the time of āpyāyana and pressing of soma and at the time of taking the aṁsu and adābhya cups). The adhvaryu directs the sacrificer's servant to bring a piece of cloth for tying soma, another for covering it all round and a turban; the first is carried by the adhvaryu or yajamāna and the rest by the pratiprasthātr. They go with their faces to the east towards the soma which is in a four-wheeled cart

The idea was that the cow (the price of Soma) was to resemble the soma beverage in colour as much as possible. Vide also Jai. IV. 1. 25. The cow was called somakrayaṇī as soma was purchased with it ; सोमः क्रीयते यया गवा सा सोमक्रयणी says com. on Sat. VII. 2 p. 623.

covered all round and above with mats &c. Detailed rules follow how soma stalks (amśu) are selected and taken with the hand, tied in the cloth and covered with the turban (Āp. X. 24-7-14, Kāt. VII. 7. 12-21). The yajamāna pays homage to soma and waits upon Aditi (Āp. X. 25. 1). The adhvaryu hands over the soma (so tied and turbaned) to the vendor of soma²⁵⁴⁸ and there ensues a dialogue (which is a mock drama) between the vendor and the adhvaryu wherein they higggle for the price of the soma (five times, beginning with a kalā or 1stth or the thigh of the cow and ending with the whole cow). Gold piece is also offered to the vendor of soma, who says 'soma is sold to you but offer me some other animals' and the adhvaryu replies 'yours are the gold piece, clothes, goats, another cow, a cow and bull and three other cows.' Adhvaryu comes with the soma in his right hand and pushes aside the garment from the sacrificer's right thigh and places the soma tied in a piece of cloth on the thigh of the sacrificer, who mutters the text 'śvāna bhrājān-ghāre²⁵⁴⁹ &c.' (Vāj. VI. 27, Tai. S. I. 2. 7. 1). Ultimately the gold piece and somakrayaṇī cow are brought back, another is offered in exchange and the former is sent to the cowpen belonging to the sacrificer. Āp. (X. 27. 8) and Sat. (VII. 2. p. 644) say that according to some the vendor is always struck with sticks and clods of earth (i. e. there is a show of seizing the soma from him and driving him away with sticks, vide Kāt. VII. 8. 27 also). The sacrificer's staff is handed over to the maitravaruṇa priest (vide Jai. IV. 2. 16-18) and the sacrificer holds in both his hands the bundle of soma placed on his thigh, gets up, places his hand on his head and thereon the bundle of soma, approaches a cart (śakaṭa) kept to the south (of the place

2548. The Śat. Br. III. 3. 3 (S. B. E. vol. 26. pp. 69-70) contains the higgling at length. Vide also Āp. X. 25. 1-16, Kāt. VII. 8. 1-21. Sat. (VII. 2. pp. 636-643) sets out what things are offered in exchange of soma and the dialogue between the adhvaryu and the vendor of soma. There were several options as to the things offered in exchange for soma. They were ten viz. seven cows, a gold piece, clothes, a she-goat; some said they were 13 (ten cows plus the other three) or only four (one cow and the other three).

where soma was bought) that is washed, is covered with a mat or the like and has all its parts complete. The adhvaryu spreads on the box of the cart a black antelope-skin with the neck portion to the east and hairy side upwards, places the soma thereon, covers it with another piece of cloth, ties a skin to a staff as a flag. Two oxen are yoked to the cart, the Subrahmanya priest (an assistant to the udgātṛ) standing on the ground between the two shafts of the cart drives the oxen holding two palāśa branches in his hand (as whips). The adhvaryu touches the cart and directs the hotṛ to repeat a verse for soma that is bought (or being taken round) and directs the subrahmanya priest to pronounce the Subrahmanya invocation. The hotṛ stands three steps behind the cart between the two wheel-tracks, and while keeping his heels firm and unmoved throws up to the south with a verse (tvam vipraḥ, Āśv. IV. 4. 2) clods (or dust) thrice with the forepart of his foot, then utters standing 'him bhūrbhuvah svarom' and a verse 'bhadrād abhi śreyaḥ prehi' (Āśv. IV. 4. 2). While following the moving cart between wheel-tracks he recites Rg. I. 91. 9-11, X. 71. 10, IV. 53. 7 (half) and stops. When the cart stops the hotṛ approaches the soma from the south side of the cart, and stands facing it. He touches the soma or the cloth covering it with two verses (called paridhāniyā viz. Rg. I. 91. 19 and VIII. 42. 3). Then the sacrificer touches the soma and comes to the sacrificial hall (śālā) along with all the priests. The subrahmanya priest recites the famous subrahmanya litany²⁵⁵⁰ (which is an invitation to Indra). According to Lāṭ. I. 3. 1 this litany is recited after the performance of ātithyā iṣṭi, but according to Āp. and Kāt. it is recited before Ātithyā. At the time of each upasad the subrahmaṇyā litany is recited (Sat. VII. 4. p. 676). According to Lāṭ. the subrahmaṇya stands inside the spot where the altar would be prepared and recites the litany and the yajamāna touches him and the wife touches the yajamāna. The formula is 'O Subrahmaṇya (Indra who protects excellent prayers), come, O Indra! O Lord of hari (bay) steeds! Ram of Medhātithi! Menā (wife or daughter?) of Vṛṣaṇaśva! Attacking buffalo! Lover of Ahalyā! O Kauśika! O brāhmaṇa! Thou who callest thyself Gautama!'. Then he should state 'in so gives rules about the accents of the Subrahmaṇyā. According to Lāṭ. and Drāhyāyaṇa I. 3. 17 the subrahmaṇyā litanies after the upasads are finished are recited near the utkara outside the altar. The priest takes breath at each of the first two words (सुब्रह्मण्योऽम्), then again after मेने and after ब्रुवाण. This invocation is repeated thrice (Āp. X. 28. 6, Lāṭ. I. 3. 10). On the Agniṣomiya day (day before pressing) before the reference to sutyā, the words 'asau yajate' (this, so and so, offers sacrifice) occur and the names (nākṣatra, gotra and vyāvahārika names) of the sacrificer are mentioned with the names of his ancestors (son of so and so, grandson of so and so, great-grandson of so and so) and then the names of his living descendants according to seniority by birth, both males and females, in the words 'father of such and such a son &c.'. Manu IX. 126 refers to this last. In Rg. I. 51. 1 and I. 52. 1 Indra has the appellation 'meṣa' and there is a legend that Indra became a ram and drank the soma of Medhātithi Kāṇva. In Rg. VIII. 2. 40 it is said that Indra in the form of a ram carried off Medhyātithi Kāṇva. In Rg. I. 51. 13 Indra is spoken of as born of the Menā of Vṛṣaṇaśva (menābhavo vṛṣaṇaśvasya) and Sāyaṇa quotes the Tāṇḍya that Menā was the daughter of Vṛṣaṇaśva. Indra is addressed as Kauśika in Rg. I. 10. 11. The legend of Indra's love for Ahalyā, the wife of Gautama, is well-known. Vide Rāmāyaṇa I. 48 and Viṣṇupurāṇa I. 9. 21. Jaimini (in IX. 1. 42-44) states that when the Subrahmaṇyā litany is uttered in Agniṣṭut and other rites and when for Indra the word Agni is substituted, there is no substitution of other adjectives in place of Harivat and others. Śābara, however, notes that yājñikas do substitute other words viz. they say 'अग्न आगच्छ रोहिताश्व बृहद्भानो धूमकेतो जातवेदो विचरिष्य इति'. Kumārilaṭṭha in his Tantravārtika (p. 208 on Jai. I. 3. 7) explains, like a modern comparative mythologist, that Indra in this legend means the Sun and Ahalyā means the night एवं समस्ततेजः परमैश्वर्यनिमित्तेन्द्रशब्दवाच्यः सवितैवाहनि लीयमानतया रात्रेरहल्याशब्दवाच्यायाः क्षयात्मकजरणहेतुत्वाज्जीर्यत्पस्मादनेनैवोदितेनेत्यदित्य एवाहल्याजार उच्यते। Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. many days, to the soma feast.' Then he adds 'Ye Gods and brāhmaṇas! come hither!' While the Subrahmaṇyā is being recited the sacrificer mutters certain prayers (Āp. X. 28. 5). Near the eastern door of the prāgvaṁśa the pratiprasthātṛ stands holding by the ear a goat (as a present to king Soma) that has white and dark spots of hair or red and dark ones, that is hornless, fat and bearded. The cart is stopped to the east of the prāgvaṁśa with its shafts to the east or north, the yoke-pins are taken out, the oxen are released from the yoke (or only one ox, the northern one, is released). While this is being done preparations are made for ātithyeṣṭi to receive hospitably as a guest king Soma. The adhvaryu and three other priests make ready a stool or couch (āsandi) of udumbara wood, having feet as high as the navel, with a board one aratni square plaited with cords of muñja grass, on which a black antelope skin is spread. On this the soma is placed after being taken out of the cart. Soma thus seated on the couch is brought inside the śālā by the eastern door, is taken to the west of the āhavanīya and established to the south of the āhavanīya to the east of the seat of the brahmā priest. Then follows the work of ātithyeṣṭi. The wife quickly takes out the materials for a cake on nine pots herds for Viṣṇu (who is the principal deity in this iṣṭi). In all iṣṭis (in Agniṣṭoma) after the dīkṣaṇīyā up to udayanīyā (the concluding iṣṭi) there is no agnyanvādhāna, no taking up of vrata, no subsisting on fast food, no gifts and no choosing of brahmā. There are only five prayāja offerings and no anuyājas.²⁵⁵¹ Fire is produced by attrition, and the iṣṭi comes to an end after the first idā. For details see Āp. X. 30 and Kāt. VIII. 1. After the idā is eaten there is tānūnaptra, a solemn covenant made by the sacrificer and the priests pledging themselves in the name of Tanūnapāt (the mighty blowing wind, that is the witness of all living beings) not to injure each other. They make this²⁵⁵² covenant by touching simultaneously clarified butter taken in a vessel of kāmśya or in a camasa from the ājya in the dhruvā ladle used in the ātithyā and placed on the southern hip (south corner of west side) of the altar. That clarified butter used for this covenant is shaken by the adhvaryu and is kept by him in a vessel (which is not earthen-ware) in a well-known spot and is given mixed with the fast milk (vrata-dugdha) to the sacrificer in the afternoon (for eating). Then follows the avāntara-dikṣā (intermediate consecration) of the sacrificer, in which he offers a fuel-stick in the āhavanīya fire (with 'agne vratapās' Vāj. S. V. 6), the wife also silently offers a fuel-stick in gārhapatya; he touches water heated in a vessel called madanti, clenches his fists more closely, tightens his girdle and drinks only hot milk. All priests also touch the madanti water and together with the sacrificer strengthen²⁵⁵³ the soma stalks with their hands holding golden pieces with the mantra 'amśur-amśu' (Vāj. S. V. 7, Tai. S. I. 2. 11. 1). Then they place their right hands one after another on the prastara which is on the southern end of the vedi with the palms turned upwards and cover the palms with their left palms turned downwards (this action being called nihnava, according to Āp. XI. 1. 12 and Kāt. VIII. 2. 9). Nihnava²⁵⁵⁴ is a kind of salutation to Heaven and Earth.

2550. The formula is : 'सुब्रह्मण्योऽम् । सुब्रह्मण्योऽम् । सुब्रह्मण्योऽम् । इन्द्रागच्छ हरि व आगच्छ मेधातिथेमेप वृषणश्चस्य मेने गौरवस्कन्दिस्नहल्यायै जार कौशिक ब्राह्मण गौतम-ब्रुवाण एतावद्देहं सुत्यां यावद्देहं स्यात् । देवा ब्रह्माण आगच्छतागच्छतागच्छत ।' लाटयायन I. 3. 1 ff. and द्राह्मण्य I. 3. 3-5. Vide Śat. Br. III. 4. 17-20 for the formula and explanation, Ait. Br. 26. 3 (explains why this nigada is called subrahmanya in the feminine gender), Tai. Br. I. 12. 3-4. This litany is required on the 2nd and following days of the Agniṣṭoma and almost on all days of other Soma sacrifices. On the 2nd day, after the word गौतमब्रुवाण, the subrahmanya says 'अयहे सुत्याम्', on the 3rd day इयहे सुत्याम्, on the 4th day श्वः सुत्याम् and on the last day (soma-pressing day) अद्य सुत्याम्. Vide Jai. XI. 4. 27-29 about the indication of the day of soma in the Subrahmanya in Dvādaśāha. As to the last sentence 'devā brahmāṇa' there were divergent views. Some employed only आगच्छ मघवन्, others employed the word 'आगच्छ' before देवा ब्रह्माण. Śabara on Jaimini XI. 4. 27 shows that he accepted 'सुत्यामागच्छ मघवन्' as the text of the call. Vide Drāhyāyaṇa I. 3. 10-12 for the views. Pāṇini (I. 2. 37-38)

Then follows Pravargya and after that Upasad or the Upasad may precede Pravargya (Āp. XI. 2. 5, Sat. VII. 4. p. 662). Both are done twice, in the morning and then in the afternoon, for at least three days (2nd, 3rd and 4th) if soma is to be pressed on the 5th, but if soma is to be pressed on the 7th or any later day (from the beginning) then there will be more Pravargyas and Upasads.²⁵⁵⁵ The same barhis, prastara and paridhis employed in the ātithyā are used in the upasads and in the rite of Agniṣomiya paśu.

Pravargya is separately dealt with in most sūtras, as in Āp. XV. 5-12, Kāt. XXVI, Baud. IX. 6 ff. It was supposed to provide the sacrificer with a new celestial body²⁵⁵⁶. It was an

2553. This is called 'āpyāyana' (strengthening or increasing), which according to com. on Āp. XI. 1. 11 and Sat. VII. 3. 661 means 'touching with a mantra' or according to others 'sprinkling with water'. Vāj. S. V. 7, and Tai. S. independent rite by itself (apūrva) and was not the modification of any other rite (vide com. on Kāt. XXVI. 2. 5). It appears from Āp. XIII. 4. 3-5 that the Pravargya rite was not necessarily performed in every Agniṣṭoma. The gharma is styled Samrāt in Vāj. S. 39. 5, is identified with the sun, is said to be the head of Yajña and the hot milk was divine life and light. Vide Ait. Br. IV. 1, Śat. Br. XIV. 1-4, Tai. Ār. IV. 1-42, V. 1-12; and Haug's translation of Ait. Br. pp. 41-43 (note), S. B. E vol. 44, Intro. XLVI—L. An earthenware vessel, one span in height, is made, the middle of which is contracted (like a mortar), which has a rim or belt (mekhalā) about three fingers lower down from the top which is a large and deep bowl and has at the end a hole or spout for pouring in liquid. This is called mahāvīra and it resembles three pots placed on one another. There are two other earthenware vessels (which are called mahāvīra). There are also two milking bowls (pinvana) and two round plates called raubīna for baking two cakes. All the three are heated with the fire of horse dung kindled at the gārhapatya (or dakṣiṇa according to some) fire, baked in a square pit like ordinary pans and then taken out. The two puroḍāśas baked on the round raubīnas are offered into fire in the morning and evening to Day and Night respectively. The vessel called mahāvīra is placed on a raised clay platform and fire is kindled round it, and when it is hot ghee is poured into it. The principal mahāvīra is the first vessel and the other two are not to have the different processes performed on them (they are apracarāṇīya, Āp. XV. 6. 11). These other two are kept covered with cloth on the big āsandī to the north of the stool on which soma is placed and to the south of the āhavanīya (Kāt. XXVI. 2. 17). To the boiling ghee in the principal vessel are added the milk of a cow and of a she-goat having a male young one. The hot milk thus mixed and contained in the mahāvīra is called 'gharma', of which offerings are made to Aśvins, Vāyu, Indra (with Vasus and Rudras and Ādityas), to Savitr, Bṛhaspati, Yama. The sacrificer drinks (the priests only smell) the remainder by the upayamanī. The hotṛ repeats several mantras at various stages from the time the mahāvīra is placed on the raised platform up to the time when the hot milk is offered and the priest called prastotṛ chants sāmans. The whole of this ceremony is called Pravargya. A few interesting matters out of the numerous details of this rite are indicated here. All the doors of the sacrificial hall are screened with cloth, the wife's shed also is so screened and she is to sit in her shed (and not to see the mahāvīra,²⁵⁵⁷ but at a later stage she looks at it and repeats a mantra, Kāt. XXVI. 4. 13). Whatever wooden pātras are required in this rite they are²⁵⁵⁸ made of udumbara and the cords are made of muñja grass. The paridhis were thirteen and of vikaṅkata and the fuel-sticks for boiling the gharma were to be of the same wood or of khadira, palāśa, udumbara and a few other trees. There were three black antelope skins to be used as fans and two rukmas (plates or bars) of gold and silver, two vedas (bunches of kuśa), one of which has its ends cut off. Special rules are laid down about the clay out of which the mahāvīra vessel is to be made (vide Āp. XV. 1. 9 ff.) viz.²⁵⁵⁹ it was to be dug from a pit to the east of the āhavanīya fire; with that earth was to be mixed the dust dug by a wild boar and the clay from an ant-hill, pūṭika (a plant), the hair of a goat and of a black antelope skin; on it an ajā (she-goat) was to be milked. The clay so mixed is to be carried only by men of the higher castes and hot water is to be poured on the clay only from madantī vessels²⁵⁶⁰ in order to mix the various ingredients. No śūdra nor woman is to look at all this. Two vessels for milking the cow and the she-goat are made of this very clay. The Mahāvīra is to be lifted up only with two wooden pieces like tongs (called pariśāsa or śapha) and never otherwise. The āsandi (stool or chair) on which the mahāvīra is to be placed is bigger than the one for king Soma (thereby bringing out its super-eminence as samrāt) and it is placed north of the seat for Soma. Two kharas (mounds covered with 2559. The Śat. Br. XIV. 1. 1. 10-11 explains by a legend the names gharma, pravargya, mahāvīra and samrāt. तद् (विष्णोः शिरः) वृद्धिर्नि पपात। तत्पत्तिर्वासावदित्योऽभवद्व्येतरः प्राञ्चैव प्रावृज्यत तद्यद् वृद्धिर्त्यपतत्तस्माद्भर्मोऽथ यस्मावृज्यत तस्मात्प्रवर्ग्यः। ते देवा अजुवन्। महान्वत नो वीरोऽप्रादीति तस्मान्महावीरस्तस्य यो रसो व्यक्षरत् पाणिभिः संमृजुस्तस्मात् सम्राट्। इतपथ XIV. 1. 1. 10-11. The Śat. Br. further on (XIV. 1. 1. 18ff) says that Dadhyañ Atharvaṇa knew the doctrine of Pravargya (called Madhu) and imparted it to Aśvins and refers to Rg. I. 116. 12.

2560. In the Pravargya wherever water is to be used it is hot water and taken from the madantī vessel. According to Kāt. sand) are made to the north of the gārhapatya and of the āhavanīya and a third mound (called ucchiṣṭa khara) is made in the north-east of the prāgvaṁśa, having a channel outside (the śālā) for wiping off the leavings. A silver blade or plate of one hundred raktikās (berries for weighing) in weight is inserted in the loose sand of the western mound, sheaths of reed grass kindled at the gārhapatya are thrown on the mound and the mahāvīra vessel is placed thereon. Then pieces of vikaṅkata wood (paridhis) are laid round the Mahāvīra by the adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ, in all 13, the last being placed by the adhvaryu. Then a gold bar or plate (representing the Sun) is placed on the Mahāvīra pot. The adhvaryu fans the fire thrice by means of the three fans made of black antelope skin from right to left and then thrice from left to right. When a blaze is produced the gold plate is taken away. According to the Ait. Br. IV. 2 and Āśv. IV. 6. 3 the hotṛ recites several verses (21 in number) when the empty Mahāvīra is being heated (they constitute the pūrva paṭala) and several operations such as anointing it are being performed. The Ait. Br. IV. 5 further prescribes 21 verses for recitation by the hotṛ when the cow is being milked (they are called uttara paṭala). Vide Āśv. IV. 7. 4 also.

According to Śat. Br. XIV. 2. 2. 44-46 and Jai. III. 3. 32-33 the Pravargya was not to be performed at a sacrificer's first soma sacrifice and it was not to be performed for anyone and everyone, but only for him who was well-known or was a complete master of the veda. On the day previous to the soma pressing day, the two performances of pravargya and upasad are combined and gone through in the morning and on that day takes place the 'udvāsana' (setting out or orderly discharge) of the pravargya either by laying out the pravargya apparatus in the form of a human body or by throwing them in the midst of water or in a river island &c. They (the priests and yajamāna) set out as a general rule (Āp. XV. 16. 6) all the implements on the uttaravedi, the principal mahāvīra vessel as the head is placed close to the front side of the navel of the uttaravedi, the two other mahāvīras are placed to its east, the bunch of kuśa grass (called veda) is placed on top of the mahāvīra to represent śikhā (top-knot of hair), the two lifting sticks (śaphas) are placed on two sides as arms and so on. Vide Śat. Br. XIV. 3. 1. 16, Āp. XV. 15, Kāt. 26.7.14 ff. According to Āp. XV. 11. 10-13 the yajamāna and some of the priests viz. hotṛ, adhvaryu, brahmā, pratiprasthātṛ and āgnīdhra drink the remainder of the milk (gharma) from the upayamanī (a large wooden spoon).

When a person performs pravargya he should not for a year partake of meat, should not approach a śūdra woman for sexual intercourse, should not drink water from an earthen pot and should not allow a śūdra to eat the leavings of his food (Āp. XV. 12. 13). According to Śat. Br. XIV. 3. 1. 32 ff the gold plate goes to the brahmā, the gharma to adhvaryu, while according to Āp. XV. 13. 1 the sacrificer gives the gold and silver plates to adhvaryu, the cow to hotṛ, the she-goat to āgnidhra and a pregnant cow to brahmā.

*Upasad*²⁵⁶¹ is an iṣṭi. The several processes such as agnyan-vādhāna found in the darśa-pūrṇamāsa are not performed in this iṣṭi, but a start is made from the carrying forward of the prapitā water. Offerings of clarified butter are made in this iṣṭi to Agni and Soma with the juhū ladle and to Viṣṇu with the juhū after pouring therein the ājya taken in the upabhr̥t ladle; that is, the principal deities are Agni, Soma and Viṣṇu and that besides the āhutis of ājya to these there are the upasad āhutis with the mantra 'yā te' &c. Vide the com. on Kāt. VIII. 2. 35 for all details. All actions done after the ātithyā iṣṭi such as the strengthening of soma, the nihava, the recital of the subrahmanyā litany take place in each upasad (performed in the morning and afternoon for three or more days). There are no ājyabhāgas, no prayājas nor anuyājas and no offering to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt (Āśv. IV. 8. 8.). The three verses, Rg. VII.15.1-3, are repeated thrice each, so as to make nine kindling verses (sāmidhenis) in the morning and Rg. II. 6. 1-3 (repeated thrice) are sāmidhenis in the evening, Upasad offering is made by the sruva ladle with the mantra 'yā te agne ayahśayā tanūr'²⁵⁶² (Vāj. S. V. 8) on the first day, on the 2nd day with the same verse but reciting 'rajaḥśayā' for 'ayahśayā' and on the 3rd day with 'hariśayā' for 'ayahśayā'.

2561. According to the com. on Sat. VII. 4. p. 665 the word is derived from 'sad' (to shatter) with 'upa' and means 'that by which the allied cities became shattered'; 'उप उपगतानि संगतानि एतादृशानि पुराणि विशीर्णानि भवन्ति यया सोपसत् । उप उपगताः स्वेन सह सङ्गता अपि भ्रातृया विशीर्णा भवन्ति यजमानस्य यया सा । तेषामसुराणां तिस्रः पुर आसन्नित्यत्रोपसद् विषयिण्याख्यायिका प्रसिद्धा ।'. Vide Kauṣ. Br. VIII. 8 for the legend.

2562. या ते अग्ने अयःशया तनूर्विष्टा गह्वरेष्टा । उग्रं वचोऽपावधीत्वेषं वचोऽपावधीत्वाहा । वाज. सं. V. 8. The Tai. S. I. 2. 11. 2 reads 'या ते अग्नेऽयःशया रजाशया हराशया. Vide Jai. II. 1. 48 for the proposition that the very words तनूर्विष्टा &c. are to be connected with the words रजाशया and हराशया (and no other ordinary words are to be coined for completing the sentence). Vide Jai. V. 3. 3 for another detail.

The upasad mantras show that they have reference to the sieges of iron, silver and gold castles. How these mantras came to be inserted here it is difficult to say. Vide Śat. Br. III. 4. 4. 3-4 (for the cities and their siege). Āp. XI. 4. 8 adds that if a hostile king gives battle or attacks the capital of a kṣatriya performing a soma sacrifice, on the first upasad a piece of iron should be placed in the sruva ladle and offered along with the clarified butter, on the 2nd upasad a piece of silver and on the 3rd a piece of gold should be so placed. The yājyās of the morning upasad become the anuvākyās in the afternoon and vice versa. Jaimini (X. 7. 43-46) establishes that Upasads are special iṣṭis (apūrva) and only those parts that are expressly stated in the texts are to be performed in them and not others that occur in the model iṣṭi. The procedure of upasad is like upāmsuyāja (Śat. VII. 4. p. 666).

On the 2nd day of the upasads after the morning pravargya and upasad rites are performed the great vedi for the soma sacrifice is measured and made (Kāt. VIII. 3. 6, Sat. VII. 4. pp. 679-685 and Āp. XI. 4. 11). In front of the āhavanīya to the east a peg (śaṅku) is driven in the ground at a distance of 6 prakramas (Baud. VI. 22) or according to Kāt. VIII. 3. 7 at the distance of 3 prakramas to the east from the eastern post (i. e. the middle of the door) of the ordinary agni-śālā a peg is driven which is called antaḥpātya (intermediate) or śālāmukhiya (according to Baud.); 36 prakramas to the east from this peg another peg is driven, which is called yūpāvaṭīya (i. e. connected with the hole for yūpa). A cord is stretched between these two pegs and is called prṣṭhyā (spine). On both the south and north sides of the first peg (i. e. of antaḥpātya) pegs are driven at the distance of 15 prakramas and on the south and north sides of the 2nd peg two pegs are driven at a distance of 12 prakramas each. In this way the west side called śroni (hips) of the mahāvedi is 30 prakramas²⁵⁶³ and the east side called aṃsa (shoulders) is 24 prakramas and the length of the mahāvedi is 36 prakramas. A rope is passed all round the mahāvedi. Almost all the saṃskāras that are performed for the vedi in darśapūrnamāsa are performed for the great vedi in somayāga (Sat. VII. 4. p. 685). An uttaravedi (a quadrangular platform raised high) is measured on the mahāvedi in its eastern part. This uttaravedi is on its west side (śroni) ten padas (i. e. five on the south and five on the north of the prṣṭhyā) and on its east side (aṃsa) eight padas (some hold that the uttaravedi is 10 padas on all sides i. e. a perfect square). The cātvāla pit (i. e. its southern shoulder or the middle point of the southern side) is $1\frac{1}{2}$ padas (or one prakrama, according to Sat. p. 687) to the north from the northern shoulder of the mahāvedi towards the west, while the utkara near which the āgnīdhra sits is 12 prakramas to the west of the cātvāla ²⁵⁶⁴ (i. e. its western side or its middle) and one prakrama to the north of the line of the vedi. The utkara is about two padas in extent (com. on Sat. VII. 4. p. 687). The way to and from the vedi is between the utkara and the cātvāla pit. The vedi is prepared (i. e. its earth is loosened, clods are broken, roots taken out) with the sphya, a rib (of some holy animal) or an axe. For the nābhi vide at p. 1113 above. That day the vedi remains covered with the branches of udumbara or plakṣa tree.

On the next day both the pravargyas and upasads of the morning and afternoon are gone through in the morning. After the udvāsana of the pravargya, the bringing forward of the fire (agnipranayana) from the āhavanīya to the uttaravedi takes place. The fire placed on the nābhi becomes the āhavanīya for all actions in the soma sacrifice and the original āhavanīya becomes the gārhapatya (Āp. XI. 5. 9-10). Kuśa grass, the fuel and vedi are thrice sprinkled with water and the vedi is covered with that grass with the points of the blades to the east. Two carts, washed with water, with their yokes tightly bound but with no yoke-pins, are brought round from the agnīśālā and placed in the mahāvedi, one about one cubit (aratni) to the south of the prṣṭhyā line and the other to the north about one cubit. The cart to the south (called dakṣiṇa-havirdhāna) is larger than the one to the north and the shafts of both are towards the east. These carts are called havirdhāna because the soma plant (which is the havis in somayāga) is to be placed thereon.²⁵⁶⁵ The south and north carts are respectively in charge of the adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ. They are then covered with grass mats or thatch made of split bamboos. A maṇḍapa (called havirdhāna-maṇḍapa) is erected by having six posts in front of the two carts and six behind them and having two bamboos on the posts from south to north. He suspends from the front part of the maṇḍapa a garland-like sheaf of twisted grass (rarāṭī). Various saṃskāras are performed on the axles of the carts by the wife and pratiprasthātṛ respectively. Detailed rules about covering the carts and similar matters are passed over (Āp. XI. 7-8, Kāt. VIII. 4). The havirdhāna maṇḍapa is higher in the east than in the west and has two doors one to the east and the other to the west (Sat. VII. 4. p. 701). No one is to take his meals or even to eat idā inside the havirdhāna maṇḍapa. The adhvaryu digs four round holes (in two rows, two in each row) below the fore part of the shafts of the southern cart (but not far from the axle), each hole being about one span in diameter, being at a distance of one span from each and all being connected by cross-way subterranean passages. They are one arm deep. They are dug in such an order that the hole to the north-east is the last (i. e. first south-east one is dug, then north-west one is dug, then south-west and then north-east or first north-west one, then south-east, then south-west and lastly north-east). On these holes are spread kuśa blades over which two wooden boards (adhiṣaṇa-phalaka) are placed over which is spread the red skin of a bull (adhiṣaṇa-carma), on which soma juice is extracted by means of four stones. These holes add to the noise of the stones by the sound reverberating through them and they are therefore called uparava.²⁵⁶⁶ Jai. (XI. 4. 52-53) states that the mantra 'rakṣo-haṇo' is to be repeated at each time when a hole is dug and not only once for all holes. The adhvaryu and the sacrificer insert their right hands in the holes (the adhvaryu inserting his hand in the south-east hole and the sacrificer in the north-west and then a second time the adhvaryu inserts his hand in the south-west hole and the sacrificer in the north-east) and touch each other's hands and adhvaryu asks 'sacrificer! what is there?'; the sacrificer replies 'welfare (or happiness)' and the adhvaryu in a low voice says 'may that belong to us both.' This is done twice (Kāt. VIII. 5. 14-21). At the second time the yajamāna asks 'adhvaryu! what is there?', the adhvaryu replies 'welfare' and the yajamāna says 'let it be mine.' The uparavas are sprinkled with water beginning from the south-east one and ending with the north-east one with a mantra ('rakṣaṇaṃ &c.' Vāj. S. V. 25, Tai. S. I. 3. 2). Then the rest of the prokṣaṇī water is poured into them, kuśas are spread over their bottoms as in the hole of the yūpa (described above), a golden piece is placed thereon and offering of ājya is made. To the east of the uparavas or of the adhiṣavapa-carma or of the upastambhaṇa²⁵⁶⁷ a four-cornered mound (khara) is made for keeping the soma vessels on with the earth (dug up from the uparavas) that is sprinkled with water and mixed with sand. In front of this mound sufficient space is left to move about in the havirdhāna maṇḍapa. To the west of the utkara at a distance of six prakramas (which comes to about the middle of the north side of the great altar) is prepared the shed for āgnīdhra, which is half inside and half outside the great vedi, which has four posts and the beams of which run from west to east, which has a door to the south and is covered on all sides with mats. This shed is so made that its west side would be a continuation of the end of the western side of the havirdhāna maṇḍapa and this shed is a square having sides of five aratnis each (com. on Kāt. VIII. 6. 13). The sadas is measured at a distance of three prakramas from the western side of the great vedi to its east and has its length from south to north. The width of the sadas is nine aratnis (or half of its length) and its length (from south to north) 27 aratnis or as much as would be necessary for allowing room to all the priests, their dhiṣṇyas (seats) and the prasarpakas (assistants and spectators). In the midst of the sadas a post of udumbara is fixed which is of the height of the sacrificer above its pit and which is placed at a distance of one prakrama to the south of the pṛṣṭhyā. All saṁskāras that are made on the yūpa and its pit are made in the case of this post except those referring to śakala (vide p. 1115 above). The udumbara post has an ear-like protuberance towards the east when it is fixed in the pit. On that protuberance a gold piece is offered with the juhū and ājya is poured on in such a way that some of it will trickle to the ground. This audumbarī is thicker than any post of the sadas. The posts on the borders of the sadas are as high as the navel of the yajamāna towards its sides, but in the middle they are as high as the audumbarī post. On the posts of the sadas beams are placed running from south to north and west to east. The middle of one third of this is covered with three mats that have their ends to the north, and then to the south and north of the middle portion three mats (on each side) are placed in such a way that their ends are turned towards the audumbarī post. The sadas is covered with nine mats in all that are well sewn together. The sadas is surrounded by screens and it has two doors to the east and west (just as the havirdhāna pavilion has). Some prepare the sadas first and then the uparavas or vice versa (Āp. XI. 10. 19). The doors of the prāgvamśa, the sadas and havirdhāna are so arranged (opposite each other) that a person sitting in one of these can see into all. Then eight dhiṣṇyas (seats) are to be prepared. The first is made in the āgnidhra shed in its middle in such a manner that between it and the north side of the great vedi some space will be left for moving about. Six more dhiṣṇyas are to be made in the sadas. The earth for all these dhiṣṇyas is taken from the cātvala pit. The six seats are made in the eastern portion of the sadas leaving between them and the eastern side of the sadas sufficient space to move about. The earth is spread on the seats by the adhvaryu who faces the north when preparing all the seats (except two) and who is touched by the sacrificer with the sphya. Over the earth sand or gravel is spread on all the seats. Out of the six seats the adhvaryu facing the west makes the seat for the hotṛ to the north of the prṣṭhyā line but touching it about one prakrama from the eastern door of the sadas (or on the prṣṭhyā line itself, according to Āp. XI. 14. 4). Then four more seats are made to the north of the seat of the hotṛ in order for brāhmaṇacchamsin, potṛ, neṣṭṛ and acchāvāka respectively, each of which is at the same distance from the next and the seat of the acchāvāka is (four āṅgulas) larger than those of the rest. The seats are either square or round (according to Sat VII. 7. p. 723) and of 18 āṅgulas in diameter or on each side, and at the distance of one cubit or 18 aṅgulas from each other (com. on Kāt. VIII. 6. 22). To the south of the hotṛ's dhiṣṇya, the adhvaryu with his face to the north prepares at a distance of $4\frac{1}{2}$ aratnis from the hotṛ seat the seat for maitrāvaruṇa (or praśāstr), which seat is also to the south-east of the audumbari post. The seat of maitrāvaruṇa is prepared immediately after hotṛ's seat. These seven priests viz. āgnidhra to maitrāvaruṇa are called the 'seven hotṛs' in soma-yāga according to Tai. Br. II. 3. 6 and Sāyana thereon, but Āśv. I. 2. 26 seems to be opposed to this. Outside the sadas just opposite the āgnidhra shed to the south is prepared the mārjāliya²⁵⁶⁸ shed which is half inside the great vedi and half outside to the south and in the midst there is the mārjāliya seat made by the adhvaryu facing the south. The mārjāliya shed has a door facing the north. When all these several sheds and seats are got ready the adhvaryu and spectators have to enter and leave the great vedi by a route between the cāt-vāla pit and the utkara or between the cāt-vāla and the āgnidhra shed and according to some on the day on which soma is pressed spectators may move about anywhere (Āp. XI. 13. 10-11).

On the uparavas slender kuśas with tips to the east or north are spread and over them are kept two boards (of udumbara or palāśa or kārśmarya wood) called adhiṣavāṇa-phalaka^{2568a} between which there is a space of two aṅgulas (towards the west) which are one aratni long, are washed with water, their

The hide according to com. on Kāt. VIII. 5. 26 is of a bull and it relies on Rg. X. 94. 9 'अंशुं दुहन्तो अध्यासते गवि' for support. According to Āp. XII. 2. 14 the stones are four, according to Kāt. VIII. 5. 28 they are five. The fifth stone, according to Āp. XII. 2. 15, is called upara, it is very broad and on it soma stalks are to be crushed and round it the four stones (called grāvān) are placed, the grāvāns being one span long and big and so tapering as to allow easy beating of soma stalks.

eastern face being curved like the board of a wheel and the western face being straight. In modern practice the boards are not curved on the east, but are straight. The wood is dry and well planed. In sacrifices in which soma is pressed on more days than one the boards are grooved and made to fit in each other and pierced with a nail. The boards are made firm by driving two pegs through them in front, two behind and one each to the north and south (so that they will not recede). Vide Baud. VI. 28. The space of two fingers between the two is filled with the dust dug out from the uparavas. One board is placed on the two southern uparavas and the other on the two northern ones. On the two boards is placed a hide (called adhiṣavāṇa-carma), which is red and cut up all round to fit in with the boards, with the neck portion to the east and the hairy portion up. On the hide are placed four stones (grāvaṇ) for pressing soma juice. The adhvaryu then issues directions to spread barhis over the great vedi (except the uttaravedi, the khara, uparavas and dhiṣṇyas, Sat. VII. 7. p. 727) and for making the sacrificer take only one-fourth of the first milk on which he is to subsist (according to Kāt. VIII. 6. 30, half of the milk). Then begins the procedure of the sacrifice of an animal to Agni and Soma (jointly). This is on the same lines as the nirūḍhapasubandha which has already been described. The various actions such as paristarāṇa, placing the sacrificial pātras, prokṣaṇa are gone through. One more ladle called pracaraṇi made of vikāṇṭaka wood and resembling a juhū is used in addition (Āp. XI. 16. 6). The pratiprasthāṭṛ (or neṣṭṛ according to Sat. VII. 8. p. 736) brings the wife from her usual place (the patnīśālā). The sacrificer's near relatives who always share the same roof are called. The yajamāna touches the adhvaryu, the wife touches the sacrificer, the sons and brothers of the sacrificer touch the wife. They are all covered with a fresh piece of cloth and the adhvaryu offers with the pracaraṇi offerings of ājya called *Vaisarjina*²⁵⁶⁹ to Soma (Kāt. VIII. 7. 1, Āp. XI. 16. 15). Then comes the carrying forward (praṇayana) of Agni and Soma. Fire is kindled on the āhavanīya and is carried to the uttaravedi. Numerous utensils and vessels are taken to the great vedi beyond the sadas for use in the animal sacrifice and in the pressing of soma next day and kept in proper places.²⁵⁷⁰ Fire is established in the āgnīdhra dhiṣṇya. The soma stalks are taken to the havirdhāna maṇḍapa and placed in the southern cart (havirdhāna) on a black antelope skin. The sacrificer consigns the soma to the care of gods with a mantra 'God Savitr! here is thy soma' (Vāj. S. V. 39, Tai. S. I. 3. 4. 2). Then the yajamāna gives up the intermediate dikṣā after offering into the āhavanīya a samidh with the mantra 'Agne vratapate' (Tai. S. I. 2. 11. 1, Vāj. S. V. 40) i. e. he loosens his girdle and his fists (that so far had been clenched), gives up the vow of silence (to be observed at both sandhyās) and his fast food and he hands over his staff to maitrāvaruṇa (Āp. XI. 18. 6). He may on the next day (soma pressing day) partake of soma and the leavings of sacrificial food. Hereafter he may be addressed by name and food prepared in his house may be taken by others (Kāt. VIII. 7. 22). Then the sacrifice of the animal to Agni and Soma takes place (of the omentum, the paśupuroḍāśa and havis). Jai. after a lengthy discussion (VI. 8. 30-43) holds that this paśu must be a chāga (a goat). Jai. (VIII. 1. 12) states that the procedure of darśa-pūrṇamāsa is followed in this animal sacrifice and not of soma sacrifice. Vide also Jai. VIII. 2. 10-14. Animal sacrifice has already been described above (pp. 1109-1131); but there are a few points of difference between the nirūdhā-paśubandha and the agniṣomiya paśu offered the day previous to the soma pressing day; viz. the svaru is not offered into fire in the latter nor is the heart-spit discharged. According to Jai. III. 7. 43-45 the maitrāvaruṇa is the priest where praiṣa and anuvākyā are to be uttered (ordinarily the praiṣa is given by adhvaryu and the anuvākyā is uttered by hotṛ.). When the omentum is offered a direction is issued to the subrahmanya priest to chant the subrahmanyā²⁵⁷¹ litany for inviting Indra in which the sacrificer is described as the son, grandson and great-grandson of so and so and as the father and grandfather of so and so

The com. on Āp. says 'पितरश्च पुत्राश्च यस्यां कीर्त्यन्ते सा पितापुत्रीया.' Lāt. (vide note 2550 above). Hereafter wherever the subrahmanyā is to be recited it is in this form. The agniṣomīya rite ends with the Patniṣamyāja (Sat. VII. 8. p. 757). When the subrahmanyā call has been made, standing with his face to the west he brings in a jar the water from a flowing river that starts from a mountain,²⁵⁷² but he should not pass over a river that is near his place, even if it does not start from a mountain. He takes this water before the sun sets and from a spot in the river where the shadow of a cloud and sunshine meet or (if that is not possible) in the shadow of one's own body or of a tree or of the river bank. He should fill the jar with water against the stream with 'haviṣmatīr' (Vaj. S. VI. 23, Tai. S. I. 3. 12. 1). Śat. Br. III. 9. 2. 8-9, Kāt. VIII. 9. 8-10 and Āp. XI. 20. 10-12 suggest other alternative sources for the water. He enters with the jar of vasatīvarī water²⁵⁷³ by the path between the utkara and cātvala, takes it by the north of the āgnīdhra shed, enters the śālā by the eastern door and places the jar to the west of the śālāmukhiya²⁵⁷⁴ fire. In the second watch of the night the adhvaryu carries the jar of vasatīvarī waters on his shoulder and takes it round the altar and fires in several ways (minutely described in Āp. XI. 21. 3-5, Sat. VII. 8. p. 759 and Kāt. VIII. 9. 18-23). At that time only the sacrificer and his wife are allowed to stay inside and all others have to go out. Ultimately the vasatīvarī jar is placed in the āgnīdhra shed (Āp. XI. 21. 5, Kāt. VIII. 9. 23) and the soma plant also is placed in the same hut but on the āsandī (a large stool or couch). The sacrificer^{2574a} keeps awake or is kept awake that night in the āgnīdhra shed or in the havirdhāna shed and guards the soma stalks, while the wife keeps awake in the prāgvamśa (the usual sacrificial hall). All the priests stay that night in the āgnīdhra shed and no one is to stay in the sadas. That night the pratiprasthātṛ draws milk in the evening for the payasyā (āmikṣā) to be offered to Mitra and Varuṇa the next day and the adhvaryu issues orders to milk the cows that yielded the fast milk for the sacrificer and his wife for making respectively from their milk āśīr (i. e. soma mixed with milk) and for the graha (cup) of curds (dadhi) and to milk the cow that yielded the milk in the pravargya rite for dadhigharma²⁵⁷⁵ (a warm beverage made with inspissated milk) and for the milk that will be heated but not mixed with butter milk (to be offered) to Mitra and Varuṇa and boiled milk mixed with butter milk and brought to the state of curds for the Āditya graha (cup). The priests deck themselves with ornaments and fine clothes and stay for the night in the āgnīdhra shed.

2573. Water which was to be employed next day in extracting soma juice is called वसतीवरी. The word probably means 'desirable for abode or dwellers' (as the Sat. Br. III. 9. 2. 16 seems to suggest). Those waters are carried round for protection and for repelling evil spirits.

2574. The शालामुखीय is the ordinary आहवनीय according to Sat. VII. 8. p. 736.

The last day (generally the 5th day) is called 'sutyā' (on which soma is pressed). The priests are awakened sometime after midnight long before dawn in order to be able to finish all actions up to upāṁśu (i. e. the extracting of Soma with upāṁśu stone before sunrise, com. on Āp. XII. 1. 1). Then the adhvaryu sips water and invokes the āgnīdhra shed, the havirdhāna shed, the sadas shed, the sruc ladles and vessels called vāyavya (that are contracted in the middle like a mortar, are one span in length and have a bowl on the upper part, Āp. XII. 1. 4). The adhvaryu makes 33 offerings of ājya called yajñatanū in the āgnīdhriya fire with mantras (from Tai. S. IV. 4. 9. 1). The various²⁵⁷⁶ pātras are placed on the khara (mound), the upāṁ-

Among the several pātras the following deserve notice: द्रोणकलश (a vessel like a droṇa or trough in shape) with the दशपवित्र, kept below the southern havirdhāna cart to the west of the axle, the adhavanīya trough (for cleansing soma) of clay placed on the box of the northern havirdhāna cart, the pūtabhṛt (that has a wide mouth) trough of clay at the mouth of the yoke of the same cart, three (or more) ekadhāna jars (that hold water to be poured over soma in extracting the juice). The droṇakalāśa is square or round and the other two are earthen and like kumbhas. The daśapavitra is a strainer made of the wool of a living ram, which wool must be white. It is to be about an aratni in length (vide com. on Kāt. IX. 2. 16). Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. note on pp. 488-490 for the vessels and the method of extracting soma juice.

śupātra on the south corner of the eastern side of the great vedi and the antaryāmapātra on the north corner and between the two the grāvan (stone) called upāmsusavana (employed in extracting soma). Āp. (XII. 1. 6-XII. 2. 13), Śat. (VIII. 1, pp. 770-777), and Kāt. IX. 2 describe at great length how and where the numerous pātras required on this day are placed. According to Kāt. IX. 2. 1 the unnetṛ priest arranges the pātras. Then preparations are made for the savaniya paśu (the animal to be killed and offered on the day of the pressing of soma) on the lines of the agniṣomiya paśu offered the previous day. Then so early before dawn that birds have not begun to chirp or men to speak the adhvaryu issues directions, to the hotṛ to recite the prātaranuvāka (morning prayer) in honour of the gods that come early in the morning (viz. Agni, Uṣas and the Āśvins), to the brahmā priest to observe silence, to the pratiprasthātṛ to take out the materials (nirvāpa) for the savaniya cake and to the subrahmanya to recite the subrahmanya litany (he will use the words 'adya sutyām' in the formula) and promises the hotṛ that he (the adhvaryu) will follow the hotṛ mentally in the latter's recitation. The hotṛ sits down between the yokes of the two havirdhāna carts and recites the prātaranuvāka in three parts (called kratu), the first for Agni, the second for Uṣas, and the third for the Āśvins.²⁵⁷⁷ In each part he has to repeat at least one hymn in each of the seven metres viz. Gāyatrī, Anuṣṭubh, Triṣṭubh, Bṛhatī, Uṣṇih, Jagatī and Paṅkti. Āśv. (IV. 13. 6-IV. 15. 3) states the hymns to be recited, the minimum being at least one hundred ṛks. If all the hymns and verses specified by Āśv. are recited the total of the Āgneya section will be over 1324 (out of which verses in Gāyatrī are 320, in Triṣṭubh 591 and only one hymn, Rg. V. 6 of 10 verses, is in Paṅkti metre).

2577. In Rg. V. 77. 1 the Āśvins are called 'prātar-yāvāṇā' (early coming). Vide Ait. Br. VII. 5 'एते वाच देवाः मातर्यावाणो यदग्निरुषा अभिनौ त एते सप्तभिः सप्तभिश्चन्द्रोभिरागच्छन्ति'. Certain verses are omitted from the hymns because they are addressed to some other deity or because they are in another metre than the one required. For example, in Rg. VIII. 11 the last verse is in Triṣṭubh and so it is omitted in the Gāyatrī group; similarly in Rg. X. 8 the last three Triṣṭubh verses are omitted as they are addressed to Indra.

About 250 verses²⁵⁷⁸ are set out by Āśv. for being recited in the Uṣas kratu and about 407 in the Āśvina kratu of the prātaranuvāka (in all about 2000 verses i. e. nearly one-fifth of the whole of the R̥gveda). The prātaranuvāka is to be recited in the low or base (mandra) scale (Āśv. IV. 13. 6). Āśv. further directs that even when the minimum of 100 verses or any number short of the one prescribed by him are recited, the order of the hymns set out by him is to be followed and that the three hymns R̥g. VII. 12 (to Agni in Triṣṭubh), VII. 73 (to Āśvins in Triṣṭubh) and I. 112 (to Āśvins in Jagati) are called maṅgala (auspicious) and that if the darkness of night is still there when he is about to finish the prātaranuvāka he should go on repeating R̥g. I. 112 till sunlight appears (Āśv. IV. 15. 7 and 9).

While the Prātaranuvāka is being recited by the hotṛ, the āgnīdhra (according to Kāt. IX. 1. 15, the pratiprasthātṛ according to Āp. XII. 4. 4) priest takes out materials (nirvāpa) for five offerings which are a cake on eleven potsherds for Indra, dhānā (fried barley) for two Haris (bay horses of Indra), Karambha (barley flour with curds) for Pūṣan, curds for Sarasvatī, payasyā for Mitra and Varuṇa. There is an option that all five are meant for Indra, but the last four are in that case to Indra associated with the other deities in order as shown below.²⁵⁷⁹ The adhvaryu asks the hotṛ to think of water and issues directions to the attendant of maitrāvaruṇa holding a maitrāvaruṇa camasa (a flat wooden dish or cup with a handle) that he should come with the adhvaryu, to the neṣṭṛ to fetch the wife or wives of the sacrificer, asks the other ṛtviks to hold the ekadhana pitchers and the āgnīdhra to wait near the cātvalā pit with vasatīvarī waters. The adhvaryu goes to a pond or

He says that karambha is mantha (parched barley meal) mixed with water or ājya (com. on Āp. XII. 4. 13) and parivāpa (lūjas of rice) are offered to Sarasvatī (Āp. XII. 4. 6 and 13). Vide Sat. lake, makes offerings of ājya with the camasa of maitrāvaruṇa, fills it with water, the ekadhana pitchers also are filled and the wife fills a vessel called pannejana or pānnejana²⁵⁸⁰ (a small vessel with water for washing the feet or thighs). While the ekadhana pitchers are being filled the hotṛ recites Rg. X. 30. 1-9 and 11 which are called 'aponaptriya verses' as the deity of those verses is 'apāmnapāt' (vide Ait. Br. VIII. 2, Aśv. V. 1. 8 and S. B. E. vol. 26. p. 232 n. 2).²⁵⁸¹ Then the water in the maitrāvaruṇa camasa and the vasatīvarī waters are mixed up together. And placing the vasatīvarī water in the hotṛcamasa the adhvaryu hands the camasa to the sacrificer, which water is thence-forward called nigrābhya (Āp. XII. 9. 1). Then the adhvaryu makes an offering of curds from a cup (called dadhi-graha, Āp. XII. 7. 5-7). He also takes a few soma stalks from the heap of soma, places them on the upara (vide note 2582) and pours some vasatīvarī water over them, beats the stalks with the stone, extracts soma juice, fills a cup with it and offers it (this is called somagraha, Āp. XII. 7. 10-12). Āp. XII. 9 and Kāt. IX. 4 describe how soma is extracted to fill the Upāmsūgraha by using the Nigrābhya water, a portion of it is offered in the southern part of fire (the tyāga is 'idam sūryāya') and a portion is kept in the Āgrayanasthālī and a large coil of soma stalks is placed in the Upāmsūgraha for use in the evening pressing. Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 489 and S. B. E. vol. 26 pp. 244-245 n. 2 for the method of the pressing of soma for upāmsū-graha (they slightly differ). Then comes the mahābhiṣava (the great or principal pressing of soma). The adhvaryu goes near the ādhavanīya trough and pours into it all the water that is in the maitrāvaruṇa camasa and a third part of the vasatīvarī water also is poured in that trough and also of the ekadhanā water. The rest of both kinds of waters is kept in the place of the ekadhanā water (viz. to the west of the axle of the northern havirdhāna and below it). The adhvaryu sits to the north of the adhiṣavana-carma towards the east and behind him sits the sacrificer, to the south of the adhiṣavana-carma sits the pratiprasthātṛ, to the west neṣṭṛ and to the north the unneṣṭṛ (Āp. XII. 12. 2 and Sat. VIII. 3. p. 825). A very large portion of the soma stalks is to be taken for the morning pressing and a small one for the midday one (Āp. XII. 9. 7). The adhvaryu takes hold of the stone called upara,²⁵⁸² places it on the adhiṣavāṇa hide, brings soma stalks thereon, nigrābhya water is poured on them, the stalks are beaten by the priests with the other stones held in their right hands, which have a golden ring or the like. This is called the first turn or round (pariyāga). Then there is a second turn, when the stalks of soma scattered about in the first beating are collected and are again pounded. Then there is a third turn. The texts even prescribe how many times the stalks are to be beaten in each turn (vide Āp. XII. 10. 4-8, 9 and XII. 12. 8-9). The wet and pounded stalks are collected by the adhvaryu into a vessel called sambharanī,²⁵⁸³ are put in the ādhavaniya trough which already contains water, the ādhavaniya contents are thoroughly stirred, the stalks are washed, pressed, then taken out and placed on the adhiṣavāṇa-carma. The four stones are again placed facing the upara (the central big stone), the sediment or dregs (ṛjṣa)²⁵⁸⁴ of the soma stalks are put over the face of the stones. The droṇakalaśa (a big trough) is carried from its place and kept over all the stones by the udgātṛ priests, who spread over it a woollen strainer or sieve held on a wooden frame or stool with its hem to the north and its centre (nābhi) made of the bunch of wool that was handed over to the sacrificer when soma was purchased (Āp. X. 26. 11 and XII. 13. 1). The unnetṛ priest takes in a vessel (camasa) the soma liquid from the ādhavaniya trough, pours it into the hotṛcamasa containing nigrābhya water held by the sacrificer, who pours a continuous stream on to the woollen strainer (from the hotṛcamasa). From the stream of soma juice flowing down from the strainer all cups (that are wooden) up to the dhruva cup are filled, the first being the cup called antaryāma. The soma that falls in the droṇakalaśa is called śukra (Kāt. IX. 5. 15). The Upāṃśu cup is offered before sunrise, while the adhvaryu offers the antaryāma cup when the sun rises (Āp. XII. 13. 12). The cups filled are Aindra-vāyava, Maitrāvaruṇa, Śukra, Manthin, Āgrayana, Ukthya, Dhruva and they are placed on various spots of the mound (khara) described at p. 1155 above. As the cups are filled from the stream (dhārā) they are called dhūrāgrahas (com. on Kāt. IX. 6. 26). The cups are wiped with the hems of the strainer or another strainer is employed for the purpose (Āp. XII. 14. 10-11). In the case of the maitrāvaruṇa cup the contents are mixed with boiled but cooled milk, those of the manthin with barley flour. The three grahas viz. Āgrayana, Ukthya and Dhruva are filled to the brim. He then fills three cups called atigrāhyas for Agni, Indra and Sūrya (Āp. XII. 15. 9, only in Agniṣṭoma and not in other soma sacrifices). After the cups are filled, the droṇakalaśa trough is half filled with soma juice, then the stream of soma stops (Āp. XII. 16. 9, Kāt. IX. 6. 26), all fluid from the woollen strainer is wrung out into the droṇakalaśa and the strainer is kept aside. Then he pours from the maitrāvaruṇa camasa which is filled with ekadhanā waters into the ādhavanīya trough as much as would be necessary (for filling all soma vessels in the morning pressing); he spreads the strainer with its hem to the north on the mouth of the pūtabhṛt trough, pours thereon a portion of the soma juice that is in the ādhavanīya trough and then touches all the three troughs with distinct mantras (Āp. XII. 16. 11). Then the adhvaryu, prastotr, prātihartṛ, udgātṛ, the brahmā (being the last) come out of the havirdhāna shed touching each other with the right hand in the order stated (Tāṇḍya Br. VI. 7. 12, Āp. XII. 17. 1), adhvaryu being the first (some give a slightly different order). They perform (or according to Kāt. the adhvaryu alone performs) what are called 'viprud-dhomas'.²⁵⁸⁵ When the soma is being pressed drops of it are scattered about. In order to make these drops go to the gods and also as a sort of expiation this offering of ājya is made to Soma (in all the three savanas). Then the five priests touching each other (adhvaryu being the leader, brahmā being the last and the sacrificer touching him) creep with heads bent in a stealthy manner (like hunters pursuing a deer, according to Āp. XII. 17. 3-4) towards the north for the purpose of the Bahispavamāna chant that is to be sung.²⁵⁸⁶ The adhvaryu takes two blades from the grass strewn on the altar, throws one in the cātvāla pit and the other in front of the udgātṛ priests or gives a handful of kuśa grass to the prastotṛ with 'Vāyu makes the him sound' (Tai. S. III. 3. 2. 1). The udgātṛ priests ask the permission of the brahmā priest 'shall we chant' (and also of Maitrāvaruṇa, according to Āśv. V. 2. 11) and he replies 'yes, do chant' (after repeating in the morning pressing 'bhūr-indravantaḥ', but with 'bhuvah' and 'svah' in the other pressings). Vide Āśv. V. 2. 12-13. According to Āp. XIV. 9. 7, X. 10. 1 the brahmā repeats the text 'deva savitar &c.' and then one of the texts called stomabhāgas (in Tāṇḍya I. 9-10), the one employed here being the first viz. 'rāsmirasi' (thou art a ray, to thee for residence, give impulse to residence) and then gives permission. All pavamāna chants are introduced in this manner (i. e. by giving a handful of kuśas to the prastotṛ &c.). In the case of stotras other than pavamāna, the adhvaryu makes the chanters start after giving them two kuśa blades with 'asarji upāvartadhvam'. At the time of chanting the bahiṣpavamāna²⁵⁸⁷ stotra, the priests and sacrificer sit inside the vedi not far from the cātvāla pit in a certain order and look at the cātvāla or they sit round the northern shoulder of the vedi. The udgātṛ sits facing the north, the prastotṛ sits facing the west and the pratiharṛ faces the south-east; in front of them with faces to the west sit adhvaryu and the pratiprasthātṛ and the sacrificer sits to the south of these.^{2587a} They sit placing their right foot on the left thigh, look at the horizon and hold their mouths straight (neither hanging down nor up-lifted). This is the position of the chanters in all stotras (Lāt. I. 11. 18-23). Then the prastotṛ, udgātṛ and pratiharṛ chant the bahiṣpavamāna chant. The place where this chant takes place is called 'āstāva' (com. on Āśv. V. 3. 16).

2586. The purpose of this creeping is that the sacrifice is like a deer 'मृग इव हि यज्ञः' Āp. XII. 17. 4. Vide Sat. Br. I. 1. 4. 2 referred to in note 2308 above for the story of yajña having assumed the form of a black antelope.

2587a. Vide Baud. VII. 7, com. on Sat. VIII. 4 p. 848, in each of which the order is different. Āśv. V. 2. 4 says that while creeping out for a pavamāna, the maitrāvaruṇa and brahmā are always behind the sūman priests.

The Bahiṣpavamāna of sacrifices lasting for more than one day is chanted in the sadas except on the first day (vide Drāhyāyaṇa Śr. IV. 1. 13). The sacrificer and at least four of the other priests (but not adhvaryu) act as choristers (upagātr, Āp. XII. 17. 11-12). According to Lāt. I. 11. 26 and Drāhyāyaṇa III. 4. 6 the priests sing the chorus 'ho' and the sacrificer says 'om' continuously in the mandra (low) tone in the intervals between the prastāva and the other elements of the chant and also during the chanting of these elements except the nidhana, according to com. on Drāhyāyaṇa III. 4. 6 and stop from doing so at the finale (nidhana) which is to be sung by the three sāma priests together. Jai. (III. 7. 30) states that the choristers are some of the priests (ṛtviks) themselves (except adhvaryu) and not others. At the time of the first prastāva of the bahiṣpavamāna chant, the ²⁵⁸⁸ sacrificer mutters the famous prayer (set out on p. 5 above) 'asato mā sad gamaya māmṛtam gamaya' (Br. Up. I. 3. 28 and com. on Kāt. IX. 7. 4), while according to Āp. XII. 17. 14 the sacrificer mutters the daśahotṛ texts (vide p. 993 above for them). The first stotra at each pressing is called Pavamāna (Āp. XII. 17. 8-9), that at the morning savana being called Bahiṣpavamāna, those at the 2nd and 3rd pressings being respectively called Mādhyandina pavamāna and Ārbhava or Tṛtiya Pavamāna. The other stotras are called Dhurya (com. on Kāt. IX. 14. 5).

According to Lāt. I. 12. 1 and Drāhyāyaṇa Śr. III. 4. 16-17 the prastotṛ takes the prastāra bunch from the adhvaryu, asks the permission of the brahmā and the prasāstr and then hands over the prastāra to the udgātr who touches his thigh with it, and keeps it down with a yajus mantra.

2588. अथातः पवमानानामेवाग्यारोहः स वै खलु प्रस्तोता साम प्रस्तौति स यत्र प्रस्तुयान्तेदतानि ज्येदसतो मा सद्रमय तमसो मा ज्योतिर्गमय सृत्योर्मासृतं गमयेति । Br. Up. I. 3. 28. These three Yajus sentences are called abhyāroha and are to be recited only once with the accent that they have in the Śat. Br. According to Āp. XII. 17. 15-16 the sacrificer mutters at the beginning of the Bahiṣpavamāna stotra also 'ēyenosi' and at the beginning of the first pavamāna of the other two pressings the following two mantras respectively. The Tai. S. III. 2. 1. 1 has the mantras 'यो वै पवमानानामन्वारोहन्विद्वान् यजतेऽनु पवमानानारोहति न पवमानेभ्योऽवच्छिद्यते इयेनोसि गायत्र-च्छन्दा अनु त्वारमे स्वास्ति मा सं पारय, सुपर्णोति त्रिदुप्छन्दा पारय, सचासि जगती-च्छन्दा पारय'. Vide Tāpdyā Br. I. 3. 8 and Drāhyāyaṇa III. 4. 27 for these mantras.

The three sāman priests then commence the chanting of the Bahispavamāna stotra, while looking at the cātvala (Tāṇḍya VI. 7. 24). The verses in this stotra are nine, viz. Rg. IX. 11. 1-3, IX. 64. 28-30 and Rg. IX. 66. 10-12; they correspond to Sāmaveda II. 1. 1. 1-3 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. pp. 4-5, 7-8, 10-11. According to the com. on Lāt. VI. 10. 1 each sāman in a stotra has five parts called prastāva (preceded by 'hum' uttered by the sāman priests together), udgītha, pratihāra, upadrava and nidhana (finale), which are respectively chanted by the prastotr, udgātr, pratihartr, udgātr, all the three together.²⁵⁸⁹ According to Lāt. I. 12. 7 the Bahispavamāna is begun to be chanted after once uttering the syllable 'hum', while the udgītha in all cases begins with 'om' (Lāt. VI. 10. 13)²⁵⁹⁰. In other stotras the himkāra is made more than once (vide com. on Drāhyāyana Śr. III. 4. 22). The Lāt. Śr. itself illustrates (in VII. 10. 18-21) how the first verse is chanted. The nidhanas for the nine verses are (Lāt. VII. 13. 7) sāt, sām, suvaḥ, idā, vāk, ā (for the last four verses). The note below will, it is hoped, convey some idea (however vague) of the manner in which the sāmān verses are manipulated for the purpose of chanting. It is very difficult (nay, almost impossible) to convey in print how the sāmān are sung. The difficulty is aggravated by the fact that the notations adopted in the mss. and the editions are different and hardly any two MSS. agree in all respects. Besides the present writer does not profess to have studied the intricacies of ancient Indian or modern European music and is not in a position to write a dissertation on this topic. He has, however, given below and elsewhere such general and useful hints as could be gathered from Sanskrit works. Those who are desirous of making a

In the Devatā-dhyāya Brāhmaṇa of the Sāmaveda (ed. by Burnell) it is stated that the devatās of the sāmān are determined by the nidhana. In all sāmān having a nidhana the deity is Indra except where special rules indicate other deities. XXXVIII (1879); 'the Vedic chant studied in its textual and melodic form' by J. M. Van der Hoogt (Wageningen, Holland, 1929) which presents a special study of stobhas; translation (with notes and Introduction) of the Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa by Dr. Caland (in the B. I. series, 1931); the Introduction to the recent edition of the Sāmaveda brought out by Pandit Sātavalekar at Aundh (1939); 'the Music of Hindostan' by A. H. Fox Strangways (Oxford, 1914), particularly pp. 249-279; a booklet 'the Ancient Mode of singing sāmagāna' by Mr. Lakṣmaṇa Śaṅkarabhaṭṭa Drāviḍa of Poona. It may, however, be stated here that even on reading these books no thorough knowledge of sāmagānas can be acquired. Thorough investigation and research have yet to be made in these gānas and the first endeavour must be to collect gramophone records of the methods of chanting adopted throughout India and then compare them. A generation or two hence, it is feared, hardly any learned sāma singers will be left.

Most of the sāman chants are taken from the Rgveda. In reciting a verse from the Rgveda attention has to be paid to the accents called udātta, anudātta and svarita. When the same verse is chanted as a sāman, one has to attend besides to the notes of the melody to which the verse is being sung. The way of marking the accents of the Rgveda verse is not followed when it is taken in the Sāmaveda. The svarita of the Rgveda is represented in the Sāmaveda MSS. in several ways, but generally by the figure 2 written above the letter and anudātta preceding an udātta is represented in the Sāmaveda saṁhitā by the figure 3 and udātta following an anudātta has the figure one placed on the letter. There are further detailed rules about these accents and also other marks which are not set out here. Only one further remark is made. The letter 'ra' preceded by 2 is placed over a svarita coming after the udātta which follows another udātta. Modern sāma singers have generally no knowledge of these ancient rules and signs but only chant as they learned from their teachers, nor do their chants always agree with the notations in the several MSS. Further there is a certain monotony and sameness in their melodies. If one hears a modern singer sing songs in several rāgas like the Jogī or Jhinjotī or Khamāch a person totally ignorant of the rāgas can feel, however vaguely, the difference between the two. But this is not so when a Rathantara melody or a Brhat melody is sung. According to the Sāmavidhāna-brāhmaṇa (I. 1. 8 and 14) these notes (also called svaras) are seven, viz. kruṣṭa, prathama (1st), dvitīya (2nd), ṭṭīya, caturtha, pañcama (or mandra) and antya (last) or atisvārya.²⁵⁹¹ Sāyana explains that the seven svaras named above are arranged in a descending scale, though from the words first, second and so on one is apt to suppose that they are in an ascending scale. Sāyana further states that these seven svaras are also called yamas.²⁵⁹² In the Nāradya-śikṣā (Benares Sanskrit series) the seven svaras are stated to be prathama, dvitīya, ṭṭīya, caturtha, mandra, kruṣṭa and atisvāra (I. 12). The kruṣṭa is the highest note and comes before prathama in many texts. The same work (III. 5) mentions the seven classical notes, ṣaḍja, ṛṣabha, gāndhāra, madhyama, pañcama, dhaivata and niṣāda (which are indicated in modern India as sa ri or re ga ma pa dha ni). The Nāradya-śikṣā then (V. 1-2) tries to establish a correspondence between the seven ancient names of the notes of sāma chanters and the seven notes of classical times by stating that the seven sāman notes mentioned (from prathama onwards) are respectively the same as the notes produced on the Indian vīṇā (lute) called madhyama, gāndhāra, ṛṣabha, ṣaḍja, dhaivata, niṣāda and pañcama. Pandit Sātavalekar (Introduction to the edition of the Sāmaveda p. 2) holds that the printed Nāradya-śikṣā has wrongly transposed the places of niṣāda and dhaivata.²⁵⁹³ The notations employed in the North Indian and South Indian MSS. of the Sāmaveda vary considerably and the confusion is made worse by the fact that the several sākhās (such as the Kauthumas, the Rānāyanīyas and Jaiminīyas) have various readings and varying notations of their own. The Nāradya-śikṣā further points out (VI. 2-6) that the sāmans can be sung to the notes of the ordinary vinā and also to the accompaniment of the movements of the thumb and fingers of the hand (and so it calls the latter gātravinā, 'body-lute'). The reciter sitting cross-legged is to place his hands on the two knees, to touch by the tip of the thumb the middle parva (joint) of the fingers for indicating the several notes of the song (and not the root of the fingers) and to hold the hand in front of his nose like a cow's ear. The seven svaras are indicated as follows:²⁵⁹⁴ the krusta is on the head (top) of the thumb, the prathama (i. e. madhyama of classical notes) is on the central part of the thumb; gāndhāra, ṛṣabha, ṣaḍja and dhaivata (i. e. 2nd, 3rd, 4th and mandra) are respectively indicated by (touching with the tip of the thumb the central joints of) the fore-finger, the middle finger, the ring finger and the small finger; and niṣāda is indicated at that part of the palm below the small finger which resembles a channel when the fingers are closed in a fist.

While the Bahiṣpavamāna is being chanted the unnetṛ priest pours the soma juice contained in the ādhavanīya vessel on to the pūtabhṛt trough over which the woollen strainer is stretched with its hem to the north. When the chant is finished the adhvaryu issues directions (praiśa) to the āgnīdhra priest to kindle fires (on the dhiṣṇyas), to strew kuśa grass (on the vedi) and to deck the puroḍāśas and to the pratiprasthātr to come with the savanīya (to be sacrificed on the pressing day) paśu (animal). The āgnīdhra brings burning coals from the āgnīdhriya fire and kindles fires on the dust (or sand) of the several dhiṣṇyas beginning with that of the hotṛ (in the order in which the seats were arranged and with the same mantras). āgnidhra spreads kuśas beginning from the gārhapatya up to the āhavanīya, along the prṣṭhyā line and decks the puroḍāśas. He offers soma into the āhavanīya, āgnidhriya and mārjāliya fires and ājya in others. The adhvaryu, whom the sacrificer touches, fills the Āśvina cup (graha) from the dropakalaśa with the pariṣlavā (a small spoon resembling a sruc without its rod, Āp. XII. 2. 7) and the other cups that are not dhārāgrahas are also filled in the same way.

Then begin the rites for the offering of the savanīya paśu, commencing from the tying of a triple girdle round the post (yūpa). According to Kāt. IX. 8. 1 the girdle (raśanā) that was used the previous day at the time of sacrificing the Agniṣomiya animal is again used for the savanīya paśu, while according to Āp. XII. 18. 12 a new girdle is used. In the Agniṣṭoma the animal sacrificed on soma-pressing day is a goat for Agni. In the Ukthya sacrifice another goat (in addition) is sacrificed for Indra and Agni, in the Śoḍaśin sacrifice a third paśu (a ram according to Kāt. IX. 8. 4, a goat according to Āp. XII. 18. 13) is offered in addition and in the Atirātra a fourth one (a goat) to Sarasvatī in addition. Kāt. (IX. 8. 5-6) allows optionally a ewe. These four animals that are offered are called stomāyana (Kāt. IX. 8. 7) and kratupaśus (Āśv. V. 3. 4). Then the procedure of Nirūḍhapaśubandha described above is followed up to the offering of the vapā (omentum) and subsequent mārjana (purification with water). Then all the priests and the sacrificer enter the sadās and occupy places to the east of the audumbarī post and to the west of their several seats (dhiṣṇyās)²⁵⁹⁵ and other places after looking (with mantras for each) at the several cups, the three troughs (ādhavanīya, pūtabhṛt and dropa-kalaśa), the clarified butter and vessels and the sacrificer pays homage to all these (with mantras set out in Āp. XII. 19. 5 ff).

At this stage the pratiprasthāṭṛ brings the five savanīya offerings (vide p. 1163 above). The adhvaryu places them on the vedi, cuts off portions of the offerings, arranges them in one large vessel (or the juhū) in such a way that the cake for Indra is placed in the middle, the dhānā is to the east of it, karambha to the south, parivāpa to the west and āmikṣā to the north. The portions meant for sviṣṭakṛt are placed in the Upabḥṛt. The adhvaryu issues his direction to the maitrāvaruṇa to recite the anuvākyā for the puroḍāśa and other offerings to Indra in the morning pressing and to ask the hotṛ to repeat the yājyā for the same. The anuvākyās for the puroḍāśa and other offerings in the three savanas are respectively Rg. III. 52. 1, 5 and 6 and the anuvākyās in the three savanas for the sviṣṭakṛt offering are Rg. III. 28. 1. 4 and 5 respectively. The maitrāvaruṇa's praiṣa to the hotṛ and the latter's formula before the offering is made are given in the note below.²⁵⁹⁶ The adhvaryu makes the principal offering into fire and then the sviṣṭakṛt. Portions of the remainder are cut off for the Brahmā priest, iḍā is cut off and placed on the seat of the hotṛ and the rest is kept securely for the sacrificer.

Then offerings of soma from the cups are made to the joint deities (dvidevatya grahas) viz. for Indra and Vāyu, Mitra and Varuṇa, and the two Āśvins. After this comes camasonnayana. The unnetṛ fills to the west of the uttaravedi nine camasas for the priests called camasādhvaryus, by first pouring in each some soma from the dropakalaśa (this is upastaraṇa), then soma from the pūtabḥṛt trough and then again from the dropakalaśa (this is abhighāraṇa). The order in which the nine are filled is: first that of hotṛ, then for brahmā, udgātṛ, sacrificer, maitrāvaruṇa, brāhmaṇacchamsin, poṭṛ, neṣṭṛ, āgnīdhra (there is none for unnetṛ and acchāvāka here). The maitrāvaruṇa repeats Rg. I. 16, VII. 21 and IV. 35 in the three savanas respectively when the camasas are being filled (Āśv. V. 5. 14). Then follows śukrāmanthi-pracāra. The adhvaryu takes the soma cup called Śukra, the pratiprasthātṛ the Manthin cup and the camasādhvaryus the camasas that are placed on the uttaravedi. The camasādhvaryus are not ṛtviks chosen by the yajamāna but they are assistants chosen by the priests (the ṛtviks themselves). Vide Jai. III. 7. 27. Jai. (III. 7. 26-27) further says that they are generally ten. They (adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ) cover the cups with two pieces of wood (chiselled off when the yūpa was made) that are sprinkled with holy water, wipe the cups from their mouths downwards with two pieces (of the yūpa, but not sprinkled) saying 'wiped off is Śaṇḍa' (adhvaryu says) and 'wiped off is Marka' (says pratiprasthātṛ). They place the cups on the south and north corners of the western side of the uttaravedi, go to the south and north of the yūpa, throw away the unsprinkled chips (referring to the repulse of Śaṇḍa and Marka)²⁵⁹⁷ outside the vedi and the sprinkled ones are placed into the āhavanīya and standing on both sides of the yūpa they two offer the cups with their faces to the west and the camasādhvaryus (who are nine here and ten in other cases, vide com. on Kāt. IX. 11. 2) do the same with faces to the east and silently. All these offerings are made to Indra (com. on Kāt. IX. 11. 2). The pratiprasthātṛ pours what remains in the manthin cup into the śukra cup and the adhvaryu pours the mixture of the soma juice remnants of the two cups into the hotṛ-camasa. The adhvaryu directs attendants to refill the cups of the maitrāvaruṇa, brāhmaṇāc-chāmsin, potṛ, neṣṭṛ and āgnīdhra with soma from the dropakalāśa and the contents are offered into fire respectively for Mitra and Varuṇa, Indra, Maruts, Tvaṣṭṛ, Agni. Then the hotṛ, adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ partake of the remnants of the contents of the cups offered to the double deities (Indra and Vāyu, Mitra and Varuṇa, the two Aśvins). Vide Āp. XII. 25. 13. A keen controversy is carried on in the sūtras whether the adhvaryu or hotṛ drinks first. Vide Āp. XII. 24. 6, Kāt. IX. 11. 12-17. The contents of the cup for Indra-vāyu are drunk twice and of the rest once. The mantra in all cases of the drinking of soma by the priests is 'vāgdevī juṣāṇā somasya tṛpyatu saha prāṇena svāhā' (Vāj. S. VIII. 37, Āp. XII. 24. 11. 12, Kāt. IX. 11. 19, Āśv. V. 6. 22). The remnants in the cups are poured into hotṛ-camasa. Then a very small part of the puroḍāśa is thrown into the aindra-vāyava cup by the adhvaryu, a portion of the payasyā in the maitrāvaruṇa cup and the dhānā in the āśvina cup. Vide Jai. III. 8. 33 (where it is said that this effects a saṁskāra of the puroḍāśa &c). The pratiprasthātṛ then keeps these cups on the northern wheel-track of the southern havirdhāna cart. The adhvaryu and other priests make an offering of Vājina (Kāt. IX. 12. 1). The several priests drink soma from their camasas (in a rather complicated manner, for which vide com. on Kāt. IX. 12. 3 and Āp. XII. 25. 16-23). The hotṛ drinks once from all camasas and twice from his own camasa, the maitrāvaruṇa and other priests drink from their own camasas twice (Āp. XII. 25. 19-21).²⁵⁹⁸ On drinking soma the priests touch their mouth and heart with Rg. VIII. 48. 3-4 'we drank soma and have become immortal &c.' Vide Āśv. V. 8. 26. All the camasas are then strengthened or replenished (āpyāyana) by the priests by repeating two mantras 'āpyāyasva' &c. (Rg. I. 91. 16 and 18 = Vāj. S. XII. 112-113, Tai. S. III. 2. 5. 3) and by filling them with soma from the pūtabhṛt trough and then they are placed under the southern havirdhāna cart to the west of the axle and are thence-forward called Nārāsaṁsa till the taking up of the Vaiśvadeva cup (Āp. XII. 25. 24-27, Kāt. IX. 15. 5-8). The adhvaryu takes a small portion of the puroḍāśa and while giving it to the acchāvāka priest who sits outside the sadas in front of the seat (dhiṣṇya) prepared for him says 'O acchāvāka, say whatever you have to say.' The acchāvāka holding the portion on a level with his mouth recites the three verses, Rg. V. 25. 1-3 (acchā vo agnimavase &c.). He combines the 'om' uttered at the end of the third verse with a long prose formula²⁵⁹⁹ (nigada) which ends with 'O brāhmaṇa! call us who are brāhmaṇas'. The adhvaryu on hearing this requests the hotṛ to summon the acchāvāka (to the soma drink). When the hotṛ calls him, the acchāvāka recites Rg. VI. 42 and a camasa is filled for him first with soma from the dropakalaśa, then from the pūtabhṛt trough and again from the dropakalaśa. After the acchāvāka recites Rg. VIII. 38.7 (as the yājyā) the adhvaryu makes an offering of soma from his camasa in the āhavanīya, the acchāvāka lays down the piece of puroḍāśa and sitting on his own seat drinks the remainder of soma himself from his camasa and also eats the portion of puroḍāśa given to him (Āśv. V. 7. 7 and 9). His camasa is then placed among the other camasas.

2598. The com. on Kāt. IX. 11. 23 states that the contents of the द्विदेवत्यग्रहः are not actually drunk, but only smelt or only brought in contact with the lips. When vessels are filled with the sacred soma no question arises as to ucchiṣṭa 'न सोमेनोच्छिष्टा भवन्तीति स्मरणात्तेनैव चमसेन सर्वं च भक्षयन्ति' com. on Kāt. IX. 12. 3. Vide आश्व. V. 6. 3 न सोमेनोच्छिष्टा भवन्तीत्युदाहरन्ति.

After the acchāvāka sits down, the brahmā, hotṛ, adhvaryu, maitrāvaruṇa and āgnīdhra partake of the idā of the savaniya cake and the other four offerings in the āgnīdhra shed (Āp. XII. 25. 8-15, Āśv. V. 7. 10, Kāt. IX. 11. 29 and IX. 12. 16). The sacrificer also partakes of it and the wife partakes of light food (rice &c.) in her shed (Kāt. IX. 12. 16-17, com. on Āp. XII. 25. 12). Āp. (XII. 25. 13) states that at this time take place several of the acts that are done in the darśapūrṇamāsa such as throwing the śākhā on fire, the offering of vājina, the two homas of piṣṭalepa and phalīkaraṇa &c.

Then comes the offering of ṛtugrahas. These cups are filled from the dropakalaśa and are offered by the adhvaryu and the pratiprasthātṛ to the twelve months (Madhu, Mādhava, and so on, from Tai. S. I. 4. 14 or Vāj. S. VII. 30) or 13 months (when there is an intercalary month called Saṁsarpa in Tai. S. I. 4. 14. 1 and Amhasaspati in Vāj. S. VII. 30) or 14 (vide Āp. XII. 27. 1). There are 6 pairs of months, for the first of which the offering is made by the adhvaryu and for the 2nd by the pratiprasthātṛ with the mantra (Vāj. S. VII. 30) 'upayāmagṛhitosi madhave tvā' (and so on). Baud. VII. 16 gives at length all the mantras for the twelve months. The praiśas are uttered by the maitrāvaruṇa and when the adhvaryu enters the havir-dhāna pavilion to make the offering the pratiprasthātṛ leaves it and vice versa. The vaśatkāra for the first six is uttered respectively by hotṛ, potṛ, neṣṭṛ, āgnīdhra, brāhmaṇaccharṁsin and maitrāvaruṇa and the adhvaryu or pratiprasthātṛ (as the case may be) eats of the remains in the cup with that priest who utters the vaśatkāra. In the next four the vaśatkāra is uttered by hotṛ, potṛ, neṣṭṛ and acchāvāka and for the last two by hotṛ. After this a cup is filled from the dropakalaśa or pūtabhṛt for Indra and Agni (Āp. XII. 27. 8, Kāt. IX. 13. 20). All the soma pātras from which soma was drunk by the priests are washed on the mārjālīya place (Āp. VII. 27. 10).

It would not be out of place to remark here that according to the Ait. Br. 35. 2-4 (referred to on p. 140 above) a kṣatriya sacrificer was not to drink soma, but if he desired he might drink the liquid obtained by pounding the young sprouts of the banyan tree and the fruits of that tree and of the udumbara and of other holy trees mixing them with curds.²⁶⁰⁰ It is however to be noted that in classical Sanskrit literature sometimes kings are described as 'somapāh'. The sūtras (e. g. Sat. VIII. 7. p. 882, Āp. XII. 24. 5) say the same. Jai. (III. 5. 47-51) refers to this practice and says that the liquid so prepared and poured into a cup is called phala-camasa and is really an offering made on a coal taken from the āhavanīya to its north, and not a mere substitute for some eatable. Vide also Jai. III. 6. 36.

The adhvaryu with the ṛtu cup in his hand sits down near the door of the sadas in front of the hotṛ with his face to the east, mutters the words 'Idā, the summoner of gods' (Tai. S. III. 3. 2. 1). Then the hotṛ performs japa of a long passage²⁶⁰¹ (found in Āśv. V. 9. 1), he issues without uttering himkāra a call (āhāva) to the adhvaryu loudly viz. 'Śom3sāvo3m' (let us both praise)²⁶⁰² and recites inaudibly the prayer called

2601. सुमत्यद्वन्द्वे पिता मातरिश्वाच्छिद्रा पदा धादच्छिद्रोक्था कवयः शंसन् ।
क इदं शंसिष्यति स इदं शंसिष्यति । Āśv. V. 9. 1. This is the japa. The Ait.
Br. X. 6 has the whole of it except the first five mystic letters, but it appears to explain those five and also the rest of the passage. Vide Haug's note on p. 151 of tr. of Ait. Br. for the whole formula.

2602. This summons is called 'āhāva' (from the root 'hve' to call) and this is the āhāva in all śāstras in the morning pressing (Āśv.
V. 9. 2). The most common pratigara uttered by the adhvaryu is ओधामो देव (pronounced as देवा) while at the first āhāva it is the one given above in the text. Vide Āśv. V. 9. 4-10, Āp. XII. 27. 11-17, Sat.
VIII. 8. pp. 896-898 for various modes of the pratigara. The Tai. S.
III. 2. 9. 5 puts the pratigara as 'śomsāmo daiveti pratyāhvayate'.
प्रतिगर is explained as प्रतिगीर्यते प्रत्युच्चार्यते इति (com. on Āśv. V. 9. 4 and Sat. VIII. 8. p. 897). In the mid-day pressing the āhāva is अहवयो शो3-सांवा3म् (Āśv. V. 14. 3) at the beginning of all śāstras and in the evening pressing it is अहवयो शोशो3सांवा3म् (Āśv.

'tūṣṇīmśamsa.' The adhvaryu stands up or bends his body with his face to the west at the door of the sadas and makes the response (pratigara) with 'śomsāmo daiva' (Āśv. V. 9. 5). There are several āhāvas and several pratigaras in the course of reciting all the texts connected with a śāstra. The tūṣṇīmśamsa is of three clauses or six clauses (vide below).²⁶⁰³ Then he loudly repeats twelve clauses called nivid, pausing at the end of each clause 'fire kindled by the gods, kindled by Manu..... the hotṛ chosen by the gods.....May the god bring the gods hither, may the god worship the gods, may he, Jātavedas, perform the rites' (Ait. Br. X. 2, Āśv. V. 9. 12).²⁶⁰⁴ The Ait. Br. explains these clauses, says that they are to be loudly recited and calls them a puroruc for Jātavedas (Ait. Br. X. 7). This nivid is not to be combined with the Tūṣṇīmśamsa, but the last word of the former is to be combined with the first verse of the ājya śāstra, which is the name of the hymn Rg. III. 13 (verses 1-7). The first verse of this hymn is recited

V. 18. 4). The āhāva is required at the beginning of all śāstras whether recited by the hotṛ, the maitravarṇya, brāhmaṇaccha-msin or acchāvāka. Vide Āśv. V. 10. 10-12; about the śāstras these priests recite and how each of the śāstras they recite in the morning and evening pressings contains four āhāvas and how the śāstras in the mid-day pressing have five āhāvas. Āśv. (V. 10. 13-17) specifies the places where āhāva is to be uttered. Various explanations are given of the pratigara e.g. Sāyaṇa on Ait. Br. XII. 1 explains 'शंसामो देवो' as हे होतस्त्वं शंस तव आमोदेव हर्ष एवस्माकमतोऽनुज्ञा दत्ता ।'. It appears that the āhāva and pratigara came to have a mystic significance and so several permutations and combinations of them arose. Vide Āp. XIII. 13. 8-10, Sat. IX. 3. p. 925 where three different forms of pratigara in the Vaiśvadeva śāstra of the evening pressing are given. Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. pp. 141-142 n. on आहवा and प्रतिगर.

Āśv. V. 9. 11. When six clauses are required the three clauses are each divided into two parts, the first ending with the first word 'jyotir' in each clause. The Ait. Br. IX. 7 says that the first clause in the above is the tūṣṇīmśamsa in Ājyaśāstra and Praugaśāstra of the prātahsavana, the 2nd of the Niṣkevalya and Marutvatīya śāstras of the mid-day pressing and the third of the Vaiśvadeva and Āgnimāruta śāstras of the

thrice, each half of that verse being kept separate from the next half (Āśv. V. 9. 15, 20-21) and 'om' being added to the end of the verse. At the end of the sixth verse the hotṛ repeats the āhāva (śo3m̐sāvo3m) and the adhvaryu responds with the pratigara 'śo3m̐sāmo daiva.' And then the hotṛ recites the 7th verse of Rg. III. 13 (which being the last verse of the śāstra is called paridhāniyā, Āśv. V. 9. 23). At the end of the śāstra, the adhvaryu responds with the word 'om' (Āśv. V. 9. 10). After the recitation of the śāstra the hotṛ mutters ' the recitation is concerned in speech; to thee for glory ' (Tai. S. III. 2. 9. 1). The adhvaryu then takes the Aindrāgna cup of Soma and the camasādhvaryus take the camasas and after āśravaṇa and pratyāśruta the adhvaryu issues a direction to hotṛ ' O reciter of an uktha (i. e. śāstra), repeat a yājyā verse for Soma.' Then the hotṛ recites Rg. III. 25. 4 as the yājyā (Āśv. V. 9. 26) and when he utters 'vau3ṣaṭ' the adhvaryu offers the soma from his cup into the āhavanīya fire and after a second vouṣaṭ is uttered (with the words 'somasyāgne vihi3 vau3ṣaṭ') the camasādhvaryus only shake the Nārāsaṃsa cups. The adhvaryu first partakes of the remnant from the soma cup and then the other priests who have camasas eat the contents of the camasas (Āp. XII. 28. 1-3).

It will have been noticed from the preceding description that there are six or seven elements connected with the recitation of the śāstras: (1) the inaudible japa, (2) āhāva and pratigara, (3) tūṣṇīṃsaṃsa, (4) the nivid or puroruk, (5) sūkta, (6) japa of words 'uktham vāci' (Āśv. V. 10. 22-24) with certain words added that differ at different times (this is called ukthavīrya), to which the adhvaryu responds with 'ukthasāḥ' &c., (7) the yājyā (Āśv. V. 10. 21).²⁶⁰⁵ Only the Tūṣṇīṃsaṃsa does not occur in the other śāstras.

In the Agniṣṭoma there are twelve stotras and twelve śāstras. The words śāstra and stotra in their etymological sense mean 'praise or laud,' but a stotra is a laud that is sung to a melody and a śāstra is a laud that is only recited (vide Śabara on Jai. VII. 2. 17). A śāstra always belongs to and follows a stotra. In the prātaḥsavana the hotṛ begins his āhāva after the 2605. Vide Haug's note 3 on pp. 177-178 to his tr. of Ait. Br. about the several ways in which the words 'uktham vāci' occur in the several śāstras. The Ait. Br. speaks of these elements and in X. 1 expressly says 'अथ वा आहावः क्षत्रं निविद् विद् सूक्तम्'.

udgātṛ makes hīmkāra in the stotra he chants and in the other two savanas the hotṛ does so after the pratihāra element of the stotra (Āśv. V. 10. 1-3) when the prastotṛ draws his attention by uttering the word 'eṣā' (this) at the time of the prastāva of the last verse in the stotra.²⁶⁰⁶ The ājyaśāstra is the first śāstra in the Agniṣṭoma and the āgnimāruta is the last. Jai. (II. 1. 13-29) establishes that when the vedic text says 'he recites the prauga śāstra' or 'he chants the ājya stotra,' what is meant is not that these stotras and śāstras are merely some subordinate matters in connection with the devatā of the rite, but they are really principal matters. In X. 4. 49 Jai states that in the Agniṣṭut sacrifices there is no ūha of the stotras and śāstras of the Agniṣṭoma, but they are sung and recited as in Agniṣṭoma. In the morning savana (pressing of soma), five stotras are chanted viz. Bahiṣpavamāna and four Ājyastotras; in the mid-day pressing five more viz. the mādhyandina pavamāna and four Prṣṭhastotras (vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 193 n. 29) and in the evening pressing two stotras viz. the Ārbhava pavamāna and the Agniṣṭoma-sāman (viz. yajñā-yajñā vo &c.). The corresponding twelve śāstras are: in the morning the Ājyaśāstra (by hotṛ), Praugaśāstra (by hotṛ) and three ājyaśāstras (by maitrāvaruṇa, brāhmaṇācchaṁsin and acchāvāka, these three priests being called hotṛakas); in the mid-day pressing the marutvatīya śāstra (by hotṛ), niṣkevalya śāstra (by hotṛ) and three more by the three assistants of the hotṛ; in the evening pressing the two śāstras are vaiśvadevaśāstra and āgnimārutaśāstra (both by the hotṛ). The Bahiṣpavamāna is chanted in the Trivṛtstoma, the four ājyastotras and the mādhyandinapavamāna in the Pañcadaśastoma, the four Prṣṭha-stotras and the Ārbhavadapavamāna in the Saptadaśastoma and the yajñāyajñīya in the Ekaviṁśastoma (vide Tāṇḍya Br. XX. 1. 1). Stoma means a group of verses and pañcadaśastoma and similar words mean that the verses (usually three) are increased to 15, 17, 21 &c. by repetition in various patterns (which are called viṣṭuti). There are three viṣṭutis of the pañcadaśastoma. These patterns differ in the order and number of repetitions. The prastotṛ marks the several turns, the number of verses and the order by means of small sticks a span long (called kuśas) cut from the udumbara tree and placed on a piece of cloth spread in the midst of the singers. Vide Lāt. II. 6. 1-4. For example, the first ājyastotra (Rg. VI. 16. 10-12 = S. V. II. 1. 1. 4, ed. by Benfey) is raised to fifteen verses in three paryāyas (turns) of five verses each. If the three verses are denoted by a, b, c then the 15 verses will be a a a b c (first paryāya), a b b b c (2nd paryāya) and a b c c c (third paryāya). Vide Tāṇḍya Br. II. 4. The 2nd viṣṭuti of the pāñcadaśastoma is represented by a a a b c, a b c, a b b b c c c and the third viṣṭuti by a b c, a b b b c and a a a b c c c (vide Tāṇḍya Br. II. 5-6). The word stoma is to be distinguished from stotra. The latter is a chant of a certain number of verses set to a certain melody out of those mentioned in the gānas of the Sāmaveda. Stobhas are musical interjections and flourishes introduced in the sāman chants such as 'hāu', 'hāi', 'ī', 'ū', 'hum' (vide Chān. Up. I. 13). Hāu and hāi are stobhas employed in the Rathantara and Vāmadevya sāmans respectively. Jai. IX. 2. 39 defines stobha as that which is in addition to the letters of the ṛk (that is being chanted) and has other varṇas than those of the ṛk (adhikam ca vivarṇam ca Jaiminiḥ stobha-śabdatvāt). The word sāman means, no doubt, a chant (gīti), but since stobhas are necessary to bring out the melody and help in musical appreciation they are included in the connotation of the word *sāman*²⁶⁰⁷ (Jai. II. 1. 36, IX. 2. 34-38). Śābara states that there are a thousand (numberless) means of adding to the charm of the melody (gīti), which only conveys certain notes produced by internal effort and which is denoted by the word sāman. The chant has a fixed extent and is sung on a ṛk verse. In order to effectuate that chant resort is made to change of letter (as in 'ognūyi' for 'agna' in 'agna āyāhi vitaye), to stobha and the other devices stated below²⁶⁰⁸. Since the ṛk verses are sung to a certain melody the ṛks are the skeleton, the notes of the melody are the flesh that clothes the bare bones, they are super-imposed over the ṛk, and the stobhas are embellishments or flourishes like the hair on one's body. This very apt and happy figure is employed by the Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaṇa to illustrate the relationship of the ṛks, the notes and the stobhas.²⁶⁰⁹ Each sāmān chant is primarily connected with certain verses, e. g. when we speak of Rathantara without more the verses meant are Rg. VII. 32. 22-23 abhi tvā sūra &c. = S. V. II. 1. 1. 11 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. pp. 83-84 (B. I. series); and when one refers to the Vāmadevya sāmān without further qualification the verses intended are Rg. IV. 31. 1-3 (kayā naścitra ābhuvat) = S. V. II. 1. 1. 12 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. pp. 87-89 (B. I.). These are called the own (svakīya) verses of the respective sāmāns (vide com. on Drāhyāyaṇa II. 1. 1) and that one verse occurring in the pūr-vārcika part of the Sāmaveda, which is the first in the sāmān as set out in the Uttarārcika portion, is called the yoni of the sāmān (Jai. VII. 2. 17 and Śabara thereon). But the verses that are the own verses of a sāmān can be sung to another melody. Tāṇḍya XV. 10. 1 says 'the kavati verses' are the verses 'kayā naścitra &c.' which are the svakīya verses of the Vāmadevya. When some texts say 'he chants the Rathantara on the Kavati verses' what is meant is that, not minding the Vāmadevya melody to which the verses 'kayā naścitra &c.' primarily attach themselves, they are to be sung to the Rathantara melody in that particular rite. So the word sāmān as applied to Rathantara, Brhat, Raivata and others means simply a melody and not one or more ṛk verses that are sung²⁶¹⁰ (vide Jai. IX. 2. 1-2).

Jaimini deals in about 60 adhikaraṇas with matters arising out of the relation of the Sāmaveda to sacrifices in V. 3, IX. 1, IX. 2, X. 5-6 and elsewhere. Some of the conclusions are very interesting and may be briefly indicated; viz. the ūha-grantha is of human authorship (IX. 2. 1-2), the ṛk is principal and the melody is an attribute of it (IX. 2. 3-13), the whole melody is to be sung on each ṛk of the sāman (IX. 2. 14-20), the verses of a sāman should as far as possible be in the same metre (IX. 2. 21-22), the ṛk verses set out in the Uttarārcika are to be taken for singing the melody on (IX. 2. 23-24), that two verses have to be arranged as three by repetition of the 4th or last pāda in certain melodies (IX. 2. 25-27), that in the Yajñāyajñīya sāman for the words ' girā girā ' in the original ' irā irā ' has to be substituted in the melody (IX. 1. 50-51).

After the recitation of the śastra and the partaking of remnants of soma the adhvaryu takes the Vaiśvadeva cup, fills it from the dropakalaśa, touches it with two kuśa blades, hands over the blades to the prastotṛ priest and urges the sāman priests to chant a stotra. This is the mode in all cases of dhurya stotras. Stotras other than the Babiṣpavamāna are chanted near the Audumbarī post in the sadas; the prastotṛ sits facing the west behind the adhvaryu, the udgātṛ sits to his west facing the north, and the pratiharṛ sits facing udgātṛ, but looking towards the south-east (Tāṇḍya VI. 4. 14, Drāhyāyaṇa III. 3. 28). The stotra chanted after the Vaiśvadeva cup is taken and the three following ones are called ājyastotras²⁶¹¹ (com. on Āp. XII. 28. 6). The 2nd śastra is called prauḡa (Āśv. V. 10. 6) which is recited after the taking up of the Vaiśvadeva cup and is supposed according to the Ait. Br. XI. 2 to confer food. This śastra is made up of Rg. I. 2 and 3 (in all 21 verses), which are divided into seven triplets addressed to seven deities in order viz. Vāyu, Indra-vāyu, Mitra and Varuṇa, Āśvins, Indra, Viśve Devas, Sarasvatī. Each of the seven triplets is preceded by a verse called puroruk. The first puroruk is preceded by ' him ' and ' bhūr-bhuvah svaro 3m. ' ²⁶¹² The 2nd verse of Rg. I. 2 is repeated thrice (and not the first as is usual, com. on Āśv. V. 10. 6). At the end of the recitation the priest mutters

2611. The first ājyastotra is Rg. VI. 16. 10-12, S. V. II. 1. 1. 4 (Benfey), S. V. vol. III. pp. 14-15; the 2nd is Rg. III. 62. 16-18, S. V. II. 1. 1. 5 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. pp. 16-17 (B. I. series), the third is Rg. VIII. 17. 1-3, S. V. II. 1. 1. 6 (Benfey), S. V. vol. III. pp. 18-19 (B. I. series), and the 4th is Rg. III. 12. 1-3, S. V. II. 1. 1. 7 (Benfey), S. V. vol. III. pp. 19-21 (B. I. series).

'uktham vāci ślokāya tvā' (instead of 'ghoṣāya tvā'), and Rg. I. 14. 10 is the yāgyā of the Prauga-śāstra. This cup is offered and the remnants of it and of the camasas are drunk by the priests. Then from the Ukthyasthālī containing soma a third is taken for filling three cups to Mitra and Varuna, Indra, and Indra-Agni. Stotras and śāstras follow at each of these three cups, the śāstras being repeated respectively by the maitrāvaruṇa, brāhmaṇacchamsin and acchāvāka. For want of space all these three śāstras cannot be set out at length here. Āśv. V. 10. 26 very succinctly indicates them. Each of these śāstras has four parts, (1) a triplet called stotriya (because those very verses have been chanted in the corresponding stotra); (2) then another triplet called anurūpa which should agree in metre, deity and even the sage (according to some) with the stotriya triplet (Āśv. V. 10. 26-27); (3) the core or principal part of the śāstra, hence called uktha-mukha (vide Sān. VII. 11. 3); (4) a yāgyā verse. For example, in the maitrāvaruṇa śāstra, Rg. III. 62. 16-18 constitute the stotriya triplet (those three verses are chanted as the 2nd ājyastotra), Rg. V. 71. 1-3 form the anurūpa triplet, Rg. V. 68. 1-5 and Rg. VII. 66. 1-9 are the uktha-mukha and Rg. VII. 66. 19 is the yāgyā of the śāstra. This brings the prātahsavana to an end, and the adhvaryu makes an offering at the end with the words 'May Agni protect us in the morning savana'. At the bidding of the adhvaryu the maitrāvaruṇa asks all the priests to come out of the sadas and they come out by the way they went in.

Then before the mādhyandina savana begins the priests again enter the sadas, and the yajamāna enters by the eastern door. The procedure of the mid-day pressing is in main outlines the same as that of the morning one (Āp. XIII. 1. 2). There is no hurry in the first two pressings, but the third pressing is got through with speed (Āp. XII. 29. 12). There are a few points of difference. In the mid-day pressing there are no cups for the joint deities (dvidevatya grahas), no cups for the seasons (Āp. XIII. 1. 4). The great pressing is done as in the morning pressing, but in a loud voice (Āp. XIII. 1. 8). In this pressing the vasatīvari waters are taken in the hotcamasa, are handed over to the yajamāna and become the nigrābhyā for pressing soma. The cloth in which soma stalks are tied is loosened and given for wearing as a turban to the priest called grāvastut and it is taken back from him after he recites the praise of the crushing stone (Āp. XIII. 1. 5 and com.). The cups taken are five, viz. śukra and manthin, āgrayana, two marutvatīya and ukthya

(also taken either before both marutvatīya cups or between the two). The grāvastut (praiser of the stones used in crushing soma stalks) enters the havirdhāna pavilion by the eastern door, throws away a blade of kuśa on a spot which is to the north-east of the northern point of the axle of the southern havirdhāna cart and stands opposite the soma stalks with face to the south-east. He takes the cloth in his joined hands, folds it round his head and face from left to right thrice (so as to make it look like a turban). When the stalks of soma are placed for being crushed he should recite certain verses by the middle tone (Āśv. V. 12. 7-8), which is the tone for all vedic texts in the mid-day pressing. The texts repeated by the grāvastut are (Āśv. V. 12. 9-11): Rg. I. 24. 3, V. 81. 1, VIII. 81. 1, VIII. 1. 1, X. 94 (this hymn is called Arbuda), Rg. X. 76 and 175. Before the last verse of Rg. X. 94, the two hymns Rg. X. 76 and X. 175 are recited. Either between the latter two hymns or after them or before them he recites as many pavamāna verses as are required up till the taking up of the cups, finishes the last verse of Rg. X. 94 and hands back the turban to the sacrificer. Āśv. further directs that from the hymn Rg. X. 94 which has 14 verses the 4th is taken out and the last is the paridhāniya (the finishing verse) and the rest (12 verses) are divided into four triplets and each of the triplets is either preceded or followed by a triplet out of the following viz. Rg. I. 91, 16-18, IX. 8. 4, IX. 15. 8, IX. 107. 21, VIII. 72. 8, VIII. 72. 16, IX. 17. 4, IX. 67. 14-15 (which together come to twelve verses). The four triplets are respectively recited by the grāvastut at the time of sprinkling water on the soma stalks, pounding with the hands, extracting juice, and collecting the soma juice in the ādhavaniya trough (Āśv. V. 12. 15-19). In the mid-day pressing the place of the Bahiṣpavamāna is taken by the Mādhyandina-pavamāna stotra (Āp. XIII. 3. 7). This stotra consists of Rg. IX. 61. 10-12, X. 107. 4-5, X. 87. 1-3, that is Sāmaveda II. 1. 1. 8-10 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. pp. 22-23, 41-42, 78-80. The yajamāna mutters several texts before the mādhyandina pavamāna is chanted and during its chanting (Āp. XIII. 3. 1).

After the chanting of the Mādhyandina-pavamāna comes the rite called Dadhigharma, if the sacrificer has performed the Pravargya rite (Āśv. V. 13. 1). The pratiprasthātṛ brings curds in the ladle (sruc) made of udumbara; the curds are heated on the agnidhriya fire. The hotṛ when asked 'is the

havis heated' repeats Rg. X. 179. 2 as the anuvākya and X. 179. 3 is the yājya and after he says 'vauṣṣaṭ' the curds are offered in the āhavanīya, and when he repeats 'agne vīhi' and also a second vauṣaṭ another offering of the heated curds is made and the remnants of curds are eaten by those who partake of the remnants in the Pravargya rite. Then the paśupuroḍāśa (of the animal killed in the morning) and the other offerings (such as puroḍāśa on eleven potsherds) are made and the remnants eaten. Then ten camasas are filled (including that of acchāvāka). Then offerings of soma from the śukra and manthin cups are made respectively by the adhvaryu and pratiprasthātṛ and the camasādhvaryus offer the soma taken in their camasas and the remnants are partaken by the priests. After this come the offerings of ājya called dakṣiṇāhuti or dakṣiṇa homa (Kāt. X. 1. 4., Śat. IX. 2. p. 910). The procedure here resembles the Vaisarjina homa described above (p. 1158). Gold is tied by the hem of the garment that covers the yajamāna and his family, it is placed in the ājya contained in the juhū, and two āhutis are offered with 'udu tyam' (Rg. I. 50. 1) and 'citram' (Rg. I. 115. 1) in the gārhapatya fire, the piece of gold is taken out and the yajamāna holding that gold piece and ājya in his hand approaches the dakṣiṇās (the various articles that constitute the fee) placed to the south of the mahāvedi. Vide Śat. Br. IV. 3. 4 about dakṣiṇā (derived from 'dakṣay' to invigorate) where it is stated that no priest should officiate at a soma sacrifice for a fee less than one hundred cows. Āp. (XIII. 5. 1—XIII. 7. 15) gives numerous rules about the dakṣiṇā to be distributed among the sixteen priests. The dakṣiṇā may consist of 7, 21, 60, 100, 112, or 1000 cattle or an unlimited number or a man may give all his wealth except the share of the eldest son²⁶¹³ and when he gives a thousand cattle or all his wealth he has to give one mule in addition (Āp. XIII. 5. 1-3). He may also give goats, sheep, horses, slaves, an elephant, clothes, chariots, corn of various kinds, asses. A man may give his own daughter in marriage (in the daiva form) as fee (Āśv. V. 13. 7). With regard to the cows meant as fee Āp. states that the yajamāna drives them with the black antelope skin so as to form them into four groups. One group (i. e. $\frac{1}{4}$ of the whole number) is given to the adhvaryu and his assistants in such a way that the pratiprasthātṛ, neṣṭṛ and unneṣṭṛ receive respectively half, one-third and one-fourth of what the adhvaryu gets; that is, as stated by Kāt. X. 2. 25 and the com. on Āp. XIII. 2. 12, twelve cows are given to each of the four principal priests, 6, 4 and 3 respectively to each of their assistants in the order stated above in note 2228 (supposing one hundred cows are to be distributed). Jai. (as indicated below) and Manu VIII. 210 refer to this rule of distribution. The āgniḍhra is the first recipient of gifts, receiving a piece of gold, pūrṇapātra and a pillow woven with threads of all colours. The pratiharṭṛ is the last recipient (Āp. XIII. 6. 2, Kāt. X. 2. 39). Gifts are made to the priests while they sit inside the sadas and to the adhvaryu and his assistants in the havirdhāna pavilion. To a brāhmaṇa of the Atri gotra (who is not a ṛtvik) a gold piece is given before everybody else or after the āgniḍhra (Āp. XIII. 6. 12, Kāt. X. 2. 21). After the āgniḍhra come brahmā, udgātṛ and hotṛ (Kāt. X. 2. 26). Apart from the gifts meant for the ṛtviks something is given according to ability and inclination to the camasādhvaryus, the sadasya and to sight-seers in the sadas (they are called prasarpakas), except to those who belong to the Kaṇva or Kaśyapa gotra or those who ask for a gift (Āp. XIII. 7. 1-5, Kāt. X. 2. 35). Āp. (XIII. 7. 6-7) says that generally no gift is to be given to one who is not a brāhmaṇa, but a gift may be given to a non-brāhmaṇa who knows the Vedic lore, while no gift is to be made to a brāhmaṇa who is not learned. Kāt. X. 2. 38 states that the wife also joins in making gifts. After the anuvākya is repeated by the maitrāvaruṇa for the marutvatīya cup to be described below no gifts are made (Āp. XIII. 7. 14, Kāt. X. 3. 2). On making the gifts the sacrificer does obeisance (namaskāra) to the priests and utters an invocation as to animals donated in the words 'who gave to whom?'²⁶¹⁴ Drāhyāyana (V. 3. 14-19) states that before accepting a gift every priest murmurs the famous mantra 'I take thee at the impulse of god Savitr.... &c' (Tāndya I. 8. 1) and after receiving the gift each donee murmurs 'who gave to whom' (Tāndya I. 8. 17). The gifts are taken away by the path between the āgniḍhriya shed and the sadas and then by the tirtha (Drāhyāyana V. 3. 13). Jai. (X. 2. 22-28) declares that the making of gifts to the priests is not merely a formal act as part of the sacrificial rites, but is intended to induce the priests to give their services in return for the gifts. In Jai. X. 3. 39-49 it is concluded that in the words 'the dakṣiṇā is 112' the vedic text refers only to cows and not to the various kinds of corns, in X. 3. 50-52 that the division of the gifts is to be made by the sacrificer and not left to be done by the priests and that all the priests do not share equally, but according to the Vedic texts some get half (they are ardhinaḥ), others one-third (they are called tṛtīyinaḥ) and still others one-fourth (X. 3. 53-55). Jai. XII. 1. 32 states that as valuable gifts are given in Somayāga, there is no rice cooked (called anvāhārya) for the priests in the iṣṭis of Somayāga as there is in darśapūrṇamāsa (note 2390).

2613. Prof. Keith in 'Religion and Philosophy of the Veda' part 2 p. 330 says 'after which the fees should be given consisting of 7, 21... cattle or all the sacrificer's goods save his eldest son'. He obviously means 'save his eldest son's share'.

When the gifts are taken away by the priests the sacrificer casts away the antelope horn in the cātvāla pit with two mantras (Āp. XIII. 7. 16). Jai. (IV. 2. 16-19) says that this casting away is the final disposal of the horn (it is a pratipattikarma) and (in XI. 3. 13-14) that this casting takes place on the last day in sacrifices like the Dvādaśāha. The adhvaryu offers five offerings of ājya called Vaiśvakarmaṇa (i. e. for Viśvakarman) in the āgnīdhra fire with five mantras from Tai. S. III. 2. 8. 1-3 (Āp. XIII. 7. 17 and Sat. IX. 2. p. 911). The adhvaryu and the pratiprasthātṛ take two cups for (Indra) Marutvat and offer them. The remnants of the cup in pratiprasthātṛ's hand are poured in the adhvaryu's cup; from this mixture a portion is poured in the cup of the pratiprasthātṛ. The priests partake of the remnants. Then a third Marutvatiya cup is taken to the accompaniment of the śāstra called marutvatiya²⁶¹⁵

2615. The parts of the मरुत्वतीयशस्त्र may be briefly indicated here from Āśv. V. 14. 3ff. हि ध्रुवः स्वरोऽम् । अध्वर्यो णोऽसामोऽम् (आहावः) । णोऽसामो देवोऽम् (प्रतिगरः) according to Ait. Br. or णोऽसामो देव according to Tai. S. (vide note 2602 above). Then Rg. VIII. 68. 1-3 (triplet called pratipad), Rg. VIII. 2. 1-3 (a triplet called anueara), Rg. VIII. 53. 5-6 (called Indranibnava pragātha); Rg. I. 40. 5-6 (called Brāhmaṇaspatya pragātha); Rg. III. 20. 4, I. 91. 2, I. 64. 6 (three verses called Dhārya); VIII. 89. 3-4 (Marutvatiya pragātha), Rg. X. 73. 1-6; a nivid 'Indro Marutvān' (Āśv. V. 14. 20, Śān. VIII. 16. 1 gives the whole in 20 short clauses); Rg. X. 73. 7-11; japa in the words 'ukthaṁ vacīndrāya śṛṇvate tvā' (Āśv. V. 14. 26); and lastly Rg. III. 47. 4 as the yājya. This śāstra follows after and is connected with the Mādhyandina pavamāna stotra (com. on Kāt. X. 3. 7). According to Kāt. X. 3. 8 the pratigara of adhvaryu here is 'modāmo daiva.' According to Āśv. V. 14. 7-8 pratipad and anueara consist of three verses and pragāthas consist of two rk verses. A pragātha is called Bārhaṭa when the two verses are in Uṇhātī and Satobṛhaṭī metres and it is called Kākubha when there is a combination of verses in the Kākubh and Satobṛhaṭī metres.

recited by the hotṛ (Āp. XIII. 8. 2) and at the end of the recitation of that śastra it is offered. Then a cup for Mahendra is taken. The stotra for Mahendra is called Prṣṭha,²⁶¹⁶ and is chanted at this time, being sung in Ratha ntara melody (Lāṭ. II. 9. 7, Āśv. V. 15. 2-3). Then follows the Nisṛkevalya śastra by the hotṛ. After the Māhendra cup is offered, the pratiprasthātr, neṣṭṛ and unnetṛ take up three grahas (cups) called Atigrāhya respectively for Agni, Indra and Sūrya (Āp. XIII. 8. 7-9). Then three Ukthya cups are offered as in the morning pressing. Then three Prṣṭhastotras²⁶¹⁷ are chanted, 2616. The Rg. verses of the Rathantara sāman are (VII. 32.22-23);

अभि त्वां शूर नोनुमोऽदुग्धा इव धेनवः । ईशानमस्य जगतः स्वर्दृशमीशानमिन्द्र तस्युषः ॥

metres and together constitute a Bārbata Pragātha. Vide Jai. IX. 2.
25-28 and Śabara thereon. In chanting these to the Rathantara melody they are to be made into three, by repeating the 4th pāda of the first with the first half of the 2nd verse and the last of this with the latter half of Rg. VII. 32. 23. The Wai Ms. writes it as follows:
ईशाम् । ओ ईशानमा २ ३ इन्द्रा ३ । सूस्यू २ ३ ४ पा ओवा ६ हाउवा ॥ अस् ॥

दिवियाः, मघवन्नि certain stobas in which the letter भ occurs several times e.g.
ओ वाग्भाभु भौभि भभे भ भ भौ भौ भ भ भ भ भ भः । (after जगतः). This is probably in accordance with लाट्यायनश्रौत VII. 11. 6-8. ताण्ड्य VII. 6. 11 says that अस् is the निधन of रथन्तर; vide ताण्ड्य VII. 7. 1 and 3 for प्रस्ताव and प्रति- हार of रथन्तर. The Ms. in the Bombay Asiatic Society's Library places the letter 'ra' wherever in the other two there is a vertical stroke and it has no figure over 'him' and 'om.' There are a few other differences also (not noted here). In the B. I. edition (vol. III. p. 85) the scheme is a good deal different as the following (only the first verse is taken) will show: अभित्वा शूर नोनुमाः । अदुग्धा आयि । वा ३ धार्यिनो ३ वाः ईशान-

each followed respectively by the śāstras recited by the maitrā-varuṇa, brāhmaṇācchamsin and acchāvāka. This closes the mid-day pressing of soma.

The evening pressing commences with the taking of the Āditya cup (a cup the deity of which is Aditi). In the third pressing the Vedic texts are to be uttered in the highest tone (Āśv. V. 17. 1). The procedure in this pressing resembles that of the mid-day pressing (Sat. V. 3. p. 915). The adhvaryu, the sacrificer, the pratiprastbātr, āgnīdhra and unnetṛ enter the havirdhāna shed by the eastern door and the wife enters by the western door (Kāt. X. 3. 2-3). The doors of the havirdhāna shed are shut when there are many persons sitting inside the vedi (Āp. XIII. 9. 2, Sat. IX. 3. p. 915). The adhvaryu takes into the Āditya cup a part of the remnants of the soma from the cups for the joint deities. In the middle or western part of the āditya cup he adds curds and then again takes the whole of the remnants of the soma from the cups for the joint deities (that has been poured in the ādityasthālī). He stirs the contents of the cup with the upāṁśusavana stone used in crushing the soma stalks and mixes them well together. He then takes out the stone and places it among the stones used for crushing soma stalks. The āditya cup is not placed down, but is covered with darbhas or with the right hand of the adhvaryu, who comes out after the doors of the havirdhāna are opened, takes it to the uttaravedi, stirs the contents with darbhas in such a way that a few drops fall down out of the cup. After the usual praiśa and the other procedure the adhvaryu throws the darbhas on the āhavanīya and offers the contents of the āditya cup into fire. At the time of offering the contents and also immediately after doing so he does not look at the offering but looks elsewhere (Āśv. V. 17. 3). He does not partake of the remnants of soma in the āditya cup but keeps it with the remnants of soma therein among the several vessels. He puts on the ṛjīṣa (the dregs of soma stalks) that is left after the two pressings the stalks (amśu) that are in the adābhya vessel and the upāṁśupātra and silently extracts soma juice therefrom. In the āgnīdhra shed the sacrificer's wife prepares by churning 'āśir' (milk mixed with soma) and enters the havirdhāna shed by the western door. The yajamāna enters by the eastern door, spreads on the mouth of the pūtabhṛt trough the strainer and pours thereon along with his wife the āśir with four mantras (Tai. S. III. 2. 8. 4-5). He fills the āgrayaṇa cup from four streams (the fourth being from the remnants of soma in the ādityapātra), while in the mid-day pressing there are only three streams (Sat. IX. 3. p. 918, Āp. XIII. 10. 11). In this pressing no turban is given to the grāvastut priest. Then the Vipruḍ-dhoma is performed. The Ārbhava²⁶¹⁸ pavamāna is then chanted on the lines of the Mādhyandina pavamāna.

The havis prepared from the various limbs of the (savanīya) paśu sacrificed in the morning is then offered (Āp. XIII. 11. 3, Āśv. V. 17. 4). After the idā is partaken of by the hotṛ, the puroḍāśa (cake baked on 12 potsherds, Sat. IX. 3. p. 920) is offered to Indra and the rest of the procedure up to the laying down of the Nārāsaṃsa cups is followed. Then soma of the third pressing is offered by the adhvaryu from the hotṛcamasa and by the camasādhvaryus from their camasas and as elsewhere the priests and camasādhvaryus partake of the remnants. After the Nārāsaṃsa cups are laid down each of the priests who drink soma from camasas takes from the softest part of the puroḍāśa three small balls (or pills), places them on the ground to the south of his own camasa and they then offer them to their own father, grand-father and great-grand-father with the appropriate mantras²⁶¹⁹ (Āp. XIII. 12. 9, Āśv. V. 17. 5). They mutter the namaskāra mantras (vide note 2438 above) and the sacrificer utters the Ṣaḍ-dhotṛ mantras (Āp. XIII. 12.

चतो बृहस्पतिवतो विश्वदेव्यावतस्तीर्वा आशीर्वत इन्द्राय सोमान्प्रस्थितान्प्रेष्य (Sat. IX. 3. p. 921, Āp. XIII. 12. 2). The Ṛbhus are three viz. Ṛbhu, Vibhva and Vāja (Rg. I. 161. 6 and IV. 33. 3, IV. 34. 1) and their exploits are narrated in Rg. I. 20, I. 110 and 111, I. 161, Rg. IV. 33-37 &c. The Ait. Br. (28. 4) narrates the myth that the Ṛbhus were mortals but were made immortal by Prajāpati and were given a share in the third pressing. It is therefore that the first stotra in the third pressing is called Ārbhava-pavamāna. This स्तोत्र is constituted by Rg. IX. 1. 1-3, IX. 108. 1-2, IX. 106. 1-3, IX. 101. 1-3, IX. 75. 1-3 = Śāmaveda II. I. 1. 15-19 (Benfey) or S. V. vol. III pp. 105-107, 115-116, 121-123, 131-133, 165-169.

2619. Vide note 2435 for the mantras. Āśv. and Lāt. II. 10. 4 say the mantra is 'अत्र पितरो माद्वयश्च यथाभागमावृषायश्चमिति.' Kāt. X. 5. 11 notes that the procedure of Piṇḍapitryajña from piṇḍadāna to smelling the piṇḍas is observed but without water and (in X. 5. 12) gives it as his opinion that it is really the yajamāna's ancestors that are offered pieces of the puroḍāśa and not those of the camasādhvaryus.

10-11) which are in Tai. Ār. III. 4. Then the Sāvitra cup is offered (Āp. XIII. 13. 1, Āśv. V. 18. 1). The Vaiśvadeva cup is thereafter filled from the Pūtabhrt trough, but there is no stotra chanted for this cup; the vaiśvadeva śāstra however is recited by the hotr (Āśv. V. 18. 5-13). Then rice (caru) is boiled for being offered to god Soma. The adhvaryu wears the sacred tbread in the prācīnāvita form, cuts off to the south of the āhavanīya one oblation from the boiled rice with his right hand and another with the mekṣaṇa, crosses to the north of the āhavanīya, and with his face to the south offers in the southern part of the āhavanīya fire the oblations of rice, the yājyā being 'tvaṁ soma pitṛbhiḥ samvidānaḥ' (Rg. VIII. 48. 13). Ājya is poured on the remnants of the caru in the pot, the adhvaryu sees his face in the clarified butter (Āśv. V. 19. 4), anoints his eyes with the ājya by means of his thumb and ring-finger and then bands over the pot of rice (with ājya therein) to the three udgātṛ priests, who see their reflections in the ājya and if they cannot see their reflection (which is an evil omen) then more ājya is poured and two mantras are repeated (Āśv. V. 19. 5, one being 'bhadram karṇebhiḥ' Rg. I. 89. 8) and then again they look for their reflection in the ājya. The āgnīdhra carries lighted roots of darbhas to the several dhisṇyas and establishes them thereon as fires and the adhvaryu pours ājya taken afresh in a pot over them while the darbhas are glowing (Āp. XIII. 14. 5-6, Sat. IX. 4 p. 929). He keeps some ājya in the pot, takes the cup called Patnīvata,²⁶²⁰ fills it from the soma in the Āgrayanasthāli, mixes in it the ājya that remains after pouring over on the dhisṇya fire-brands and offers it into the northern part of the fire. Jai. (in III. 2. 33-37) lays down several propositions about this cup viz. that it is offered only to Agni Patnīvat and not also to Indra-Vāyu and other joint deities (though the soma in the āgrayanasthāli had in it the remnants of the contents of the grahas for joint deities), that, though the mantra in offering it contains the word Tvaṣṭṛ ('O! Agni Patnīvat! drink soma joined with god Tvaṣṭṛ') that cup of soma is offered only to Agni Patnīvat and not to Tvaṣṭṛ also and 2620. The Patnīvata cup is offered to Agni Patnīvat. The yājyā verse repeated in a low voice by the āgnīdhra (according to Āśv. V. 19. 7) for it is Rg. III. 6. 9 ऐभिरग्रे सरथं याह्यर्वाङ् नानारथं वां विभवो ह्यश्वः । पत्नीवतस्त्रिंशतं त्रींश्च देवानलुपवधमा वह मादयस्व ॥). According to Āp. XIII. 14. 8, Sat. IX. 4. p. 930, the text uttered with svāhā is ; अग्राङ् पत्नीवन्सज्जुर्वेन त्वद्वा सोमं पिब स्वाहा । (वाज. सं. VIII. 10, तै. सं. I. 4. 27. 1).

that, though Rg. III. 6. 9 (the yājyā verse) contains a prayer about the thirty-three gods, the Pātnīvata is not to be supposed to be offered to them also. The adhvaryu then issues various directions to the several priests (Āp. XIII. 14. 11, Sat. IX. 4. p. 930). The āgnīdhra sits on the lap²⁶²¹ of the neṣṭr and partakes of the remnants of the Pātnīvata cup (Āśv. V. 19. 8, Kāt. X. 6. 24), while so sitting. He washes that cup on the mārjāliya and keeps it on the khara. The camasas of the hotṛ and others are filled by the unneṣṭr in such a way that no soma is left, the two jars of soma are wiped with the daśās and they are all kept with mouths turned downwards. The adhvaryu starts the udgātr priests on their chant of Yajñāyajñīya stotra (Āp. XIII. 15. 3), which is the principal stotra of the Agniṣṭoma (Sat. IX. 4. p. 931 calls it 'Agniṣṭoma Sāman'). All those priests who are to chant the stotra and the choristers cover their heads together with the ears.²⁶²² Those who come as sight-seers into the sadas should join in the chant as choristers (Āp. XIII. 15. 6). When the udgātr makes the hīnkāra of the yajñāyajñīya stotra he looks at the sacrificer's wife who is brought by the neṣṭr near the udgātr. When the nidhana (finale) of the first verse is being sung the wife removes the garment from her right thigh and with her face to the north pours the pānnejanī water on her thigh up till the prastāva of the third stotriya of the first paryāya²⁶²³ (so as to leave no water in the jar). The wife retires to her shed when the udgātr asks her to go or when he has looked at her thrice and she has poured water thrice (Kāt. X. 7. 5-6). While the chant proceeds the sacrificer repeats the saptahotṛ mantras (note 2393 above). The Yajñāyajñīya sāman is Rg. VI. 48. 1-2 = Sāmaveda 2621. Āp. XIII. 15. 1 and Sat. IX. 4. p. 931 do not apparently like this sitting on the lap of the neṣṭr and so give an option 'नोपस्थ आसीत् यद्युपस्थ आसीत् क्लीबः स्यात् ।' सत्याषाढ.

2622. According to Āp. XIII. 15. 5 it is optional to cover the ears. According to Sat. IX. 4. p. 931, all persons whether priests or sightseers that are in the sadas cover their heads and ears and the yajamāna may do so or not.

III. 7. 8-14 for this.

II. 1. 1. 20 (Benfey) and S. V. vol. III. p. 175-177.²⁶²⁴ After this comes the recitation of the Āgnimāruta śāstra (Āśv. V. 20. 6) which is to be done in the druta (quick) mode of recitation.²⁶²⁵ While the hotṛ recites Rg. X. 9. 1-3 (the hymn beginning with ' āpo hi ṣṭhā '), which is part of this śāstra he touches water separately at each verse, the other priests touch him, they all remove the covering from their heads,²⁶²⁶ the hotṛ utters the āhāva, the adhvaryu utters the pratigara after splashing water. There are āhāvas when the four verses of Rg. VI. 47. 1-4 are being recited in the Āgnimāruta śāstra. According to Sat. IX. 4. p. 932 the āhāva at the beginning of the first 2624. The verses of the Yajñāyājñīya sāmān are: यज्ञायज्ञा वो अग्नये गिरागिरा च दक्षसे । प्रथं वयममृतं जातवेदसं प्रियं मित्रं न शंसिमम् ॥ ऊजो नपातं स हिनायमस्मयुर्दोशेम हव्यदातये । भुवद्वाजेध्वविता भुवद्दृथ उत त्राता तनूनाम् ॥ (ऋ. VI. 48. 1-2). The first is in the Bṛhatī metre and the 2nd in Satobṛhatī. These two verses are to be turned into three. The sāmān is as follows (from Wai Ms). हुम् । यज्ञो ५ यज्ञो ३ वो ३ प्रायौइ । ओं माइरा इरा चो ३ दौक्षो ३ सोइ । पृथी २ वयममृतं जाता २ ३ वोहुम्माइ । दो ३ सोम् । प्रायमित्रा ५ सुशो २ सिषाउ । वो ३ ३ ५ ॥ प्रायाम् । ओं माइरा ५ सु ३ शो ३ सो ३ धोमूर्जो नपा २ त ५ सहिनाया २ ३ मोहुम्माइ । सो ३ यूः । दोशेम हव्यदा २ तैयोउ । वो ३ ३ ५ ॥ दोशे । ओं माहाव्या ३ दाता ३ योइ । भुवद्वाजे २ ध्वविता भू २ ३ वोदधुम्मायि । वो ३ धोउ उत त्राता तनू २ नौउ । वो ३ ३ ५ ॥ The Poona Ms everywhere has वा २ ३ ३ ५ and reads ग्रायायि in the first line, दौक्षो ३ सोइ, मायित्रा, वोदधुम्माइ, तनू २ नौउ. The Bombay A. Society's Ms. reads यि almost in every place where इ occurs in the other Mss. For the change of गिरागिरा च into इरा इरा च vide ताण्ड्यब्राह्मण VIII. 6. 10. In the B. I. edition the first verse is set down (vol. III. p. 177) as follows: यज्ञोऽग्नय । यज्ञो ३ वो ३ प्रायौइ । ओं माइरा इरा चो ३ दौक्षो ३ सोइ । पृथी २ वयममृतम् । जाता २ ३ वो । हुम्माइ । दो ३ सोम् । प्रायमित्रा ५ सुशो २ ५ सिषाउ ॥ Rg. VI. 48. 1-2 are a बर्हित प्रगाथ.

2625. The mode of recitation is of three sorts, viz. विलम्बित, मध्यम and द्रुत (com. on Āśv. V. 20. 2). These are mentioned in ऋक्संहितासूक्त XIII. 18 also.

2626. तद्यदाहुशंसन्होतापोहिष्ठिया ब्रूयात्तदैवमन्त्रालभेरक्षपावृण्वानाः । लाट्यायन II. 10. 20; the com. says that the head was covered for fear of being scorched by fire when the yajñāyājñīya addressed to Agni was being chanted. It is appropriate that when the hymn to waters is reached the covering of the head is removed. Vide Ap. XIII. 15. 13.

When the last verse (paridhāniyā) of the Āgnimāruta śāstra is being recited (or at one of several other stages, according to Āp. XIII. 16. 2-5 and Sat. IX. 4. p. 933) the pratiprasthātṛ brings into the hotṛ-camasa the soma contained in the dhruva graha and the adhvaryu offers the soma contained in that camasa and the camasādhvaryus offer the soma in their cups and the priests partake of the remnants. When the upayāja homa with reference to the animal killed in the morning is performed and the paridhis are cast into the fire, he takes the Hāriyojana cup.²⁶²⁸ The unnetṛ brings into it all the soma contained in the āgrayana-sthāli and mixes therein plenty of fried barley grains, places the cup on his head, comes out of the havirdhāna shed, steps backwards and forwards several times. Then the contents are offered to Indra (the tyāga by the yajamāna is 'idam Indrāya harivate') and the remnants are brought to the sadas for being partaken by the priests and the sacrificer. They distribute the remnants into other vessels, drink the fluid only smacking their lips, press the fried grains between their teeth so as to extract and take in all juice out of them and spit out of the vedi the masticated fried grains and sip water. According to some (Kāt. X. 8. 5) the priests only smell the fried grains. They throw chips of the tree from which the yūpa was made into the āhavanīya each with 'thou art the expiation (means of removal) of the evil caused by gods, men pitṛs &c.' (Vāj. S. VIII. 13., Tai. S. III. 2. 5. 7 quoted in Āp. XIII. 17. 9). They partake of the thick cheese-like layer on curds with 'dadhikrāvno' (Rg. IV. 39. 6) in the āgnidhra shed (Sat. IX. 4. p. 935, Āp. XIII. 18. 1). They cast into the jars containing remnants of Ekadhanā waters green dūrvā

2627. Āśv. V. 20. 6 has स्वादुष्किलायमिति चतस्रो मध्ये चाह्वानं मदामो दैव मोदामो दैवोमित्यासां प्रतिगुरौ; आप. XIII. 15. 14 says 'स्वादुष्किलायं मधुमौ उतायमित्यभिज्ञायोभयतोमोदं प्रतिगृणाति मदामोद इव मोदामोद इवेत्या व्याहारात्'. This last appears to be corrupt. The footnotes in Band. VIII. 15 show how uncertain the mss. readings are. Sat. IX. 4. p. 932 explains व्याहाव as स्वादुष्किलायान्तिमाहावो व्याहावः

2628. This cup is called Hāriyojana because it suggests the yoking of the horses of Indra for his return after being present at the soma offerings throughout the day. 'हरिरस्मिन्पुज्यते स्वस्थानं प्रति गमनायेन्द्रस्येति हरियोजन इन्द्रस्तत्संबन्धिग्रहो हारियोजनः' com. on सत्या. IX. 4. p. 934; 'हरिरस्मिन् पुज्यते प्रतिगमनायेन्द्रस्येति हारियोजनो ग्रहः।' com on आप. grass, squeeze that grass well, impart to the water a sharp flavour (by the juice of the dūrvā), pour the water into ten camasas. Each priest smells his camasa (and those who have none smell the one nearest to them) to the west of the cātvāla or in the place (called āstāva) where the Bahispavamāna was chanted (Āp. XIII. 17. 9, Kāt. X. 8. 7, Sat. IX. 4. p. 935) and pour the water down into the cātvāla pit (Sat. IX. 4 p. 935, or inside the vedi according to Āp. XIII. 18. 1). All priests wait upon the āhavanīya with the mindā mantra 'yanma ātmano mindābhūt' (whatever fault has been mine, Agni has mended it' &c. Tai. S. III. 2. 5. 4). The priests then discharge themselves from the vow made at the Tānūnaptra ceremony. Then the Patnīsamnyājas are performed as in the animal sacrifice (Āp. XIII. 18. 3). The adhvaryu offers with the juhū nine samiṣṭayajus offerings in a continuous stream, standing inside the vedi. Then he performs the prāyaścittas for actions like spilling soma drops about and offers a savanāhuti (i. e. an ājya offering indicating the completion of the Agniṣṭoma). The adhvaryu issues a direction to the maitrāvaruṇa to urge the priests to come out of the sacrificial shed and the latter do so.

Then follows the Avabhr̥tha (the final purificatory bath). The procedure of this is an iṣṭi. Jaimini, however, in X. 7. 47-50 lays down that the avabhr̥tha is a special rite and therefore all that takes place in the darsapūrṇamāsa iṣṭi does not follow as a matter of course. A fuel-stick is laid on fire, a veda bunch is made, kuśa is strewn round the fires (that is paristarāṇa), the necessary yajñapātras are placed with mouths downwards. No idhma is brought and some do not even prepare the vedi. Only four ladlings of ājya are taken in all the ladles (sruc). The nirvāpa is only for a cake to Varuṇa on one potsherd (Āp. XIII. 19. 3). There are no pranītā waters (Sat. IX. 5. p. 938), and no girding up of the wife (vide above p. 1040 for it). The ājya in the ladles and the grains taken out for puroḍāśa are placed on the shoulder (north corner on eastern side) of the uttaravedi. The sacrificer takes out from its pit the post of udumbara (audumbarī in the sadas), places it on the hide and board used in extracting soma juice and all other utensils except the four sthālīs viz. the āgrayāṇa, ukthya, āditya-sthālī and dhruvāsthālī (vide Tai. Br. I. 4. 1 for these four sthālīs of clay) that are smeared with soma in the space between the cātvāla pit and the utkara or on the northern shoulder of the vedi on the large stool (āsandī) used for soma.

The yajamāna casts away the antelope skin in the cātvalā pit (other ways of disposal are also mentioned in Āp. XIII. 19. 8-9). When starting for avabhṛtha he offers clarified butter with 'O! Fire, that givest life &c.' (Tai. S. I. 3. 14. 4), a second oblation with the mantra 'avabhṛtha, nicumpuṇa &c.' (Vāj. S. VIII. 27).²⁶²⁹

A third oblation of ājya is made to Rudra (Āp. XIII. 20. 1) with 'namo Rudrāya' (Tai. Br. III. 7. 9). When starting from the vedī or from near the cātvalā with faces to the north they recite Ṛg. I. 24. 8 (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 1). The adhvaryu issues a direction to the prastotṛ to chant a sāman. The sāman chanted is called 'avabhṛthasāman' (Lāt. II. 12. 1). It is 'agniṣṭapati' (vide Śat. Br. IV. 4. 5. 8 and Drāhyāyaṇa śr. VI. 4. 1). When the nidhana of the sāman is being sung, all the priests, the yajamāna and his wife thrice repeat that finale. They do so a second time when they have traversed half of the distance to the reservoir of water and a third time when they reach the water (Āp. XIII. 20. 4 and Sat. IX. 5. p. 941). The same procedure is followed for the Varuṇa puroḍāśa as in Varuṇapraghāśas for niṣkāśa. The dregs of soma are thrown into water with the branch of the udumbara tree and curds are poured over it. All utensils smeared with soma are thrown into water (Āp. XIII. 21. 12, Kāt. X. 8. 24). Jai. (IV. 2. 19-22) says that this casting into water is merely the final disposal (pratipatti) of these utensils and the śruti passage 'they approach the water for the final bath with whatever is smeared with soma' does not lay down any subordinate matter about avabhṛtha. The girdle of the yajamāna and the yoktra, the jāla (net on the head of the wife) and the antelope skin of the wife are dipped in water. The yajamāna invokes the water with 'devīrāpaḥ' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 3) and enters. The deep silent waters of flowing rivers are to be preferred, but in the absence of such waters any water reservoir will do (Kāt. X. 8. 19). The yajamāna and the wife enter water, splash water on their heads (but do not dip them into water), rub each other's back. A handful of kuśa is thrown into the water and this handful in the water serves as the āhavanīya for all āhutis in avabhṛtha.

2629. The mantra in Vāj. S. is अवभृथ निचुम्पुण निचैरुसि निचुम्पुणः । अव देवैर्देवकृतमेतोऽयासिषमव मर्त्यैर्मर्त्यकृतं पुराणो देव रिपस्याहि । Āp. XIII. 19. 16 following Tai. Br. II. 6. 6 reads निचङ्गुण for निचुम्पुण. Vide Lāt. II. 12. 9, where this mantra is used at the time of sprinkling oneself with water after the bath.

The prayājas and anuyājas are offered as in darśapūrṇamāsa (except to God Barhis). Jai. (XI. 2. 30-34) lays down that not only is the principal offering of puroḍāśa offered into water but also all subordinate ones like āghāras. A portion of the puroḍāśa for Varuṇa is offered therein. The rest of the puroḍāśa is offered to Agni and Varuṇa, which becomes the Sviṣṭakṛt offering in this case (Kāt. X. 8. 27, Sat. IX. 5 p. 944). The unnetṛ at the direction of the adhvaryu leads all out of the water (the yajamāna or hotṛ being the first). The yajamāna and his wife put on fresh garments and come out. The cloth with which soma was enveloped is worn as a turban by the yajamāna and that in which soma stalks were tied is worn by the wife and both the pieces of cloth are donated later on in the Udayasāntiṃyā iṣṭi to the adhvaryu (Āp. XIII. 22. 3-4). The priests, the yajamāna and the wife hold each a fuel-stick of udumbara, mutter the Maḥiyā ṛk (viz. apāma somam-amṛtā abhūma, Rg. VIII. 48. 3), proceed following the unnetṛ towards the sacrificial ground without looking back at the water, perform mārjana in front of the cow-stable (of the sacrificer) and place the fuel-stick (carried by each) on the āhavanīya with 'edhosi &c.' (Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 3) and wait upon that fire with 'apo anvacāriṣam' (Āp. XIII. 22. 6 quoting Tai. S. I. 4. 45. 3). Then follows the Udayanīyā (the concluding iṣṭi). It is performed in the prāgvamśa (and not on the specially prepared uttaravedī). The procedure is like that for the prāyanīyā iṣṭi (already described on p. 1140). In the same sthālī (pot) in which the prāyanīyā offering was cooked and to the bottom of which some remnants stick he takes the offering for this iṣṭi. The wife again ties round her waist the yoktra. Prayājas are optional and if not offered no ājya is taken in the juhū. The yājyās and anuvākyās of the prāyanīyā become respectively the anuvākyās and yājyās of the Udayanīyā. The order of deities is different, viz. Agni is the first, Pathyā Svasti the last for ājya offerings (Āp. XIII. 23. 4, Sat. IX. 6. p. 950, Aśv. VI. 14. 3). When the Udayanīyā is finished the anubandhyā rite follows²⁶³⁰ (Āp. XIII. 23. 6, Sat. IX. 6. p. 951). A barren cow is to be offered to Mitra and Varuṇa. The procedure is the same as that of Nirūḍha-paśu-bandha. Some sacrificed three anubandhyā cows viz. to Mitra and Varuṇa, to the Viśve Devas and to Brhaspati, but Āp. (XIII. 23. 6. 10 and 14) restricts them to Vājapeya, Rājasūya and sattras. Kāt. (X. 9. 14-15) says that instead of the cow, a bull may be offered or only payasyū may be offered to Mitra and Varuṇa.²⁶³¹ Āp. XIII. 24. 10 states that in place of the anubandhyā cow the followers of Ṛgveda offered āmiksā to Mitra-Varuṇa and the offering was made by the hotṛ in front of the havirdhāna shed and all the ceremonies in the archetype iṣṭi up to Idā were performed in that rite. After the anubandhyā (or āmiksā) was offered came the five offerings called Devikā viz. a cake on twelve potsherds to Dhātṛ and four oblations of rice cooked in milk in the four sthālis mentioned above (in which soma had been placed) to Anumati, Rākā, Sinivālī and Kuhū (Āśv. VI. 14. 15, Āp. XIII. 24. 1-3). The yajamāna shaves his hair and moustache near the southern side of the vedī (Āp. XIII. 23. 16). The āhavanīya fire is taken to the north outside the mahāvedi in an earthen-ware vessel and the kuśas strewn on the vedī are burnt thereon and the smoke issuing therefrom is invoked with a mantra (Sat. IX. 6. p. 954), the adhvaryu offers on the fire (of the kuśas) ground barley from his joined hands (Āp. XIII. 24. 16-17). The fires are then deposited in the arāṇis by repeating 'ayam te yoniḥ' (Rg. III. 29. 10, Tai. S. I. 5. 2, Vāj. S. III. 14) as stated in Āśv. III. 10. 5. Having given up the sacrificial ground he again produces fire by attrition to the north of the sacrificial ground and the udavasānīyā iṣṭi is performed.²⁶³² In this iṣṭi a cake baked on eight or five potsherds is offered to Agni (Āp. XIII. 25. 5, Sat. IX. 6. p. 956). In this iṣṭi (Āśv. VI. 14. 24) everything is done as in the punarādheya, but the mantras are muttered inaudibly in all cases except the last anuyāja. A bull is the fee or as much gold as will purchase a bull. Instead of this iṣṭi an offering of ājya was made by some (Āp. XIII. 25. 7-8) from the juhū in which twelve ladlings were made with sruva with 'idam viṣṇur' (Rg. I. 22. 17).

2631. In modern times no cow is sacrificed, but only āmiksā is offered instead. Among the actions forbidden in the Kali age is the slaughter of anubandhyā. 'यथा नियोगधर्मो नो नातुवन्ध्यावधोऽपि वा । तथोद्धारविभागोपि नैव संप्रति वर्तते ॥' quoted by the Mit. on Yāj. II. 117.

2632. 'उद्वसायेज्यते इत्युद्वसानीया' com. on Āp. XIII. 25. 3; 'उद्वसानार्था इति उद्वसानीया' com. on Sat. IX. 6. p. 956. उद्वसान is the counter-part of अध्यवसान. When at the beginning the sacrificer enters upon the holy ground sought from the king it is अध्यवसान. Vide 'एदम-गन्म देवयजनं पृथिव्या इति देवयजनमध्यवस्यति' आप. X. 3. 3 (com. अध्यवस्यति सहाग्निभिर्वासार्थमनुपयायावस्येदित्यर्थः).

Ingenious theories have been advanced by European scholars about the origin of the soma sacrifices. Considerations of space forbid the discussion of this topic here. Those who are interested in these speculations may consult Prof. Eggeling's Introduction to S. B. E. vol. 26 pp. XI-XXIII (where several European works are cited and questions about soma are discussed), L' Agniṣṭoma (pp. 481-490), Prof. Keith's 'Religion and philosophy of the Veda &c.' pp. 331-332 and the works cited there. With the greatest respect for all these learned and industrious European savants it must be said that none of the theories has any great plausibility or carries conviction. The cult of the soma is at least Indo-Iranian and no sure traces are left in the ancient Indian religious books of the origin of that cult. We have simply the institution of the sacrifice before us and all else is imagination and speculation. One important question is the relation of the plant soma to the moon (also called soma as in Rg. X. 85. 1 and 2). The moon is generally called 'mās' or 'candramas' in the Rg. (Rg. V. 51. 15, X. 85. 19, VIII. 94. 2, X. 12. 7, X. 68. 10). In Rg. VIII. 82. 8 occurs the very striking simile²⁶³³ 'Soma that is seen among the (soma) vessels as the moon in waters' and the Atharvaveda (XI. 6. 7) states that the god whom people call Candramas is soma. In several places soma is addressed as indu (which certainly means the moon in later literature). Vide Rg. IX. 86. 24, 26, 37, VIII. 48. 2, 4, 5, 12, 13. It is said that soma grew on Mūjavat (Rg. X. 34. 1) and in the Ārjikiya country (Rg. VIII. 64. 11) on the river Suṣomā. Even in the Rgveda soma appears to have become mythical. In Rg. IX. 86.24 soma is said to have been brought from heaven by Suparna (eagle or bird?) and in I. 93. 6 by a Śyena (hawk). Another matter to be noted is that the soma plant had certainly become rare,²⁶³⁴ if not unobtainable, in the times of the Brāhmanas. The Śat. Br. IV. 5. 10 mentions several substitutes for soma, among which are Phālguna plants having brown flowers,

2634. Vide S.B.E. vol. 26 p. XXIV ff for the identification of Soma with certain plants. Vide S.B.E. vol. 26 pp. 421-422 for the several substitutes for Soma mentioned in Sat. Br. Prof. Keith (Intro. to Tai. S. p. CXIX) holds that the question of the identification of the soma plant cannot really be finally determined.

Dūb plant and greenish kuśas. The Tāṇḍya Br. says 'If one does not secure soma, one may extract juice from pūtikas'.²⁶³⁵ Jai. (III. 6. 40 and VI. 3. 13-17) states that this passage restricts a sacrificer when no soma is available to pūtikas and prevents the employment of other substances similar to soma and in VI. 3. 31 he declares that pūtikas are the proper pratinidhi (substitute) for soma and not any other substance even if it may be more similar to soma than pūtikas, but that if both pūtika and soma are unavailable then another substance similar to soma may be employed. Āśv. (VI. 8. 5-6) states that if soma stalks be not available then pūtika stalks and Phālguna plant should be used or other plants mixed with pūtikas may be employed (and the com. adds that those others are dūrvā, kuśa and the like). In the Deccan the plant that is taken to represent soma when soma sacrifices are rarely performed is called 'rāṇśera' (in Marathi) which grows in the hills of the Deccan.

CHAPTER XXXIV

OTHER SOMA SACRIFICES

The sūtras speak of seven forms (samsthās) of soma sacrifices. These seven forms are Agniṣṭoma, Atyagniṣṭoma, Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin, Vājapeya, Atirātra and Aptoryāma (according to Kat. X. 9. 27, Āśv. VI. 11. 1, Lāṭ. V. 4. 24). The first of these has been described in some detail above. Owing to restrictions of space only a few words can be said about the other soma sacrifices. All sūtras do not state the same number of soma sacrifices. Āp. XIV. 1.1 and Sat. IX. 7. p. 958 expressly say that Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin, Atirātra and Aptoryāma are the modifications of Agniṣṭoma and the commentaries of both point out that there were several views on the number of the modifications of the Agniṣṭoma. In the Brāhmaṇas the Agniṣṭoma, Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin and Atirātra are generally mentioned as forms of Jyotiṣṭoma (vide Śat. Br. IV. 6. 3. 3, Tai. Br. I. 3. 2 and 4, which last mentions Vājapeya also).

Ukthya or Uktha. In this there are three more stotras (called uktha stotras) and śastras (called uktha śastras) to be chanted and recited in the evening pressing, thus bringing the total of stotras and śastras to fifteen (Ait. Br. 14. 3, Āśv. VI. 1. 1-3). Āp. XIV. 1. 2 says that the Ukthya, Ṣoḍaśin, Atirātra and Aptoryāma are respectively performed by him who desires cattle, vigour, progeny and cattle, all objects. In the Ukthya an additional victim, a goat (over and above those offered in Agniṣṭoma) is sacrificed for Indra and Agni on the pressing day. Vide Ait. Br. XIV. 3, Āśv. VI. 1. 1-3, Āp. XIV. 1, Sat. IX. 7. pp. 958-959, Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 251 n, S. B. E. vol. 41, pp. XIV-XVI.

Ṣoḍaśin. In this sacrifice in addition to the fifteen stotras and fifteen śastras of the Ukthya there is an additional stotra and a corresponding śastra called Ṣoḍaśin in the trītiya savana (both the śastra and the sacrifice have the same name, as the com. on Āśv. VI. 2. 1 says). There is an additional cup in the morning or at all pressings according to some (Āp. XIV. 2. 4-5). It is made of khadira wood and is quadrangular in shape (Sat. IX. 7. p. 960). The stotra for the ṣoḍaśin cup is begun to be chanted about sunset after the adhvaryu hands over a piece of gold to the sâma singer (instead of kuśa grass, Āp. XIV. 3. 1). Soma is purchased for a cow that is of very small stature and has red-coloured ears. In this rite an additional victim viz. a ram is sacrificed for Indra. The fee is a reddish brown horse or a female mule. Vide Ait. Br. 16. 1-4, Āśv. VI. 2-3, Āp. XIV. 2. 3 ff, Sat. IX. 7. pp. 959-962, Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 255-256n, S.B.E. vol. 41 pp. XVI-XVII for further details.

Atyagnīṣṭoma. This form is obtained by adding the ṣoḍaśistotra, the ṣoḍaśin cup and an additional victim for Indra to what prevails in the Agnīṣṭoma; vide S.B.E. vol. 41, p. XVII.

Atirātra. This soma sacrifice is referred to even in the R̥gveda (VII. 103. 7). As this sacrifice is not finished in one day but only after the day and night pass away it is called Atirātra. Āp. X. 2. 4 notes that according to some the Atirātra is performed even before Agnīṣṭoma. The Atirātra has 29 stotras and 29 śāstras. In this the additional stotras and śāstras are repeated at night in four rounds (called paryāyas) of three stotras and śāstras. Āśv. VI. 4. 10 points out these 12 śāstras. In this sacrifice the śāstra called Āśvina is recited, but before it six āhutis are offered at night. The Āśvina-śāstra closely follows the procedure of prātaranuvāka, must comprise at least a thousand verses and was to be recited till sunrise (vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. pp. 268-269n for description of this śāstra). At twilight is chanted a stotra appropriately called Sandhistotra (Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. pp. 266-267n). It is in the Rathantara melody. If the sun did not rise by that time the hotṛ was to continue reciting R̥g. I. 112 and when the sun rose he was to recite saurya hymns (viz. R̥g. X. 158, I. 50. 1-9, I. 115, X. 37). A fourth animal viz. an ewe (or ram according to some) is offered to Sarasvatī on the pressing day (Sat. IX. 7. p. 963). The principal camasas in the night are offered to Indra Apīśarvara (Sat. IX. 7. p. 963). A puroḍāśa on two potsherds is offered by the pratiprasthātṛ to Āśvins (Āśv. VI. 5. 23 and Sat. IX. 7 p. 965) and a soma cup is offered to the Āśvins. Jai. X. 8. 6 notes that as a vedic passage says ' there is no ṣoḍaśin cup in Atirātra ' and another says there is, the first is a prohibition and there is an option. For details vide Ait. Br. 14. 3 and 16. 5-7, Āśv. VI. 4-5, Sat. IX. 7 pp. 662-665, Āp. XIV. 3. 8-XIV. 4. 11, S.B.E. vol. 41 pp. XVII-XX.

Aptoryāma—This sacrifice is similar to Atirātra of which it appears to be an amplification. Only there are four additional stotras (i. e. 33 in all) and four additional śāstras recited by the hotṛ and his assistants, and there are four camasas in relation to these last respectively for Agni, Indra, Viśve Devas and Viṣṇu (Āp. XIV. 4. 12-16, Sat. IX. 7 pp. 966-967, Śāh. XV. 5. 14-18 and Sat. X. 8. p. 1111). According to Āśv. (IX. 11. 1) he whose cattle do not live or who desires to secure cattle of good breed should perform the Aptoryāma. Āśv. (IX. 9. 22-23) says that in this the fee is more than a thousand (cows) up to an unlimited number and the hotṛ gets a special gift of a white chariot (plated with silver) to which female mules are yoked. This sacrifice is generally joined with others. The Tāṇḍya Br. (XX. 3. 4-5) states that the rite is so called because by its performance one secures whatever object one desires (from 'āp' to obtain).

Vājapeya—(lit. food and drink, or drink of strength or of food or of a race).²⁶³⁶ Though this rite is said to be a form of Jyotiṣṭoma and though it follows the procedure of Ṣoḍaśin (Āp. XVIII. 1. 4) it has so many special features of its own that it may be said to be an independent sacrifice. One characteristic feature is that the number 17 is predominant in this sacrifice (Āp. XVIII. 1. 5, Tāṇḍya XVIII. 7. 5), viz. there are 17 stotras and 17 śāstras, the 17th being the Vājapeya stotra and śāstra, 17 animals sacrificed for Prajāpati, 17 objects distributed as fee, the yūpa (of bilva or khadira wood) was 17 aratnis in length, at the time of enveloping the yūpa with a girdle in this rite 17 pieces of cloth were employed for the purpose (Āp. XVIII. 1. 12), it lasted for 17 days (for 13 days dikṣā, 3 upasad days and one pressing day) or there were 17 dikṣās (and then the rite lasted for 21 days). Vide Āśv. IX. 9. 2-3 and Āp. XVIII. 1. 6-7. Another feature was that there were seventeen cups of surā (wine) for Prajāpati as well as 17 cups of soma. Another peculiarity was that there were seventeen chariots to which horses were yoked and a race was run, when seventeen drums that were arranged on the northern śroni of the vedi were simultaneously beaten (Āp. XVIII. 4. 4 and 7, Kāt. XIV. 3. 14) to the west of the agnidhra shed.

2636. Various meanings are assigned to 'Vājapeya'. The Tai. Br. I. 342 says 'वाजाप्यो वा एषः । वाजं ह्येतेन देवा ऐप्सन् । सोमो वै वाजपेयः । ... अन्नं वै वाजपेयः । शालयायनश्रौत (XV. 1. 4-6) states 'पानं वै पेयाः । अन्नं वाजः । पानं वै पूर्वमथाक्षम् । तयोरुभयोरप्ययै'.

This complicated rite was undertaken by one who desired overlordship (ādhipatyā, as Āśv. IX. 9. 1 says) or prosperity (Āp. XVIII. 1. 1) or svārājya (the position of Indra or uncontrolled dominion). It was performed in the autumn.²⁶³⁷ Only a brāhmaṇa or a kṣatriya could perform it, but not a *vaiśya*²⁶³⁸ (Kāt. XIV. 1. 1 and Āp. XVIII. 1. 1). In the case of a brāhmaṇa the reward aimed at must have been the attainment of the position of a super-eminent learned or prosperous man. All the priests, the sacrificer and his wife wear chains of gold, and Āśv. IX. 9. 5 adds that the chain worn by the hotṛ has a hundred lotus-like pendants studded with precious stones. The golden chain worn by each priest becomes part of his fee. Besides the three viz. for Agni, Indra and Agni and for Indra (a ram), a barren cow for Maruts and ewe for Sarasvatī and 17 hornless, young and virile goats of one colour (or all of dark colour) for Prajāpati are offered in this rite (Āp. XVIII. 2. 12-13, Kāt. XIV. 2. 11-13). For the 17 cups of wine (called parisrut, prepared from several herbs) the pratiprasthātṛ prepares a separate mound (khara) to the west of the axle of the southern havirdhāna cart on which the wine cups made of clay are to be kept. The soma cups are to the east of the axle of the cart and wine cups to the west and they are to be kept separate. According to Kāt. (XIV. 1. 17 and 26) it is the neṣṭṛ priest that gets ready the mound and the wine cups. In the midst of the wine cups a golden cup of honey is placed (Tai. Br. I. 3. 3, Kāt. XIV. 2. 9). The wine is purchased ready-made in exchange for lead from a long-haired man at the time when soma stalks are purchased, or the material for making wine is bought, and is entered into the sacrificial enclosure by the southern door and is boiled on the dakṣiṇa fire (Kāt. XIV. 1. 14-17). The yūpa has four angles (and not eight as elsewhere) and has no top protruding beyond the caṣāla, but its top is even and is slightly depressed in the middle. The caṣāla of the yūpa (which is 17 aratnis high) is made of wheat flour (Tai. Br. I. 3. 7, Āp. XVIII. 1. 8, Kāt. XIV. 1. 22). A race is run in connection with the mid-day pressing in the following way (Āp. XVIII. 3. 3 and 12-13). The Tai. Br. I. 3. 2 refers to the race won by Brhaspati and connects the Vājapeya with that race. Seventeen chariots are got ready to the east of the āhavanīya with their yokes to the north or east. One of them is the sacrificer's chariot to which three horses are yoked with mantras and a fourth runs along the third but is not yoked. These horses are made to smell the caru of wild rice (nīvāra) which is meant for Brhaspati. To the sixteen other chariots four horses each are yoked outside the vedi but without mantras (com. on Kāt. XIV. 3. 11). A kṣatriya (rājaputra according to Āp.) shoots an arrow from the space between the cātvāla and utkara and notes the spot where it falls, from which he shoots an arrow a second time. This is done seventeen times. On the spot where the arrow falls at the 17th shooting, he plants a post of udumbara wood as the goal for the chariot race (Āp. XVIII. 3. 12 and Kāt. XIV. 3. 1-11 and 16-17). When the race starts, the brahmā priest fixes an udumbara chariot-wheel (having seventeen spokes according to Kāt. V. 12. 11) on an axle (or udumbara post navel-high) implanted on a spot between the cātvāla and the utkara (or near the utkara) and ascends on that wheel with 'at the impulse of God Savitr may I win vāja (vigour, food or race) with the help of Brhaspati, the winner of vāja' (Āp. XVIII. 4. 8, Kāt. XIV. 3. 12 which mentions Vāj. S. IX. 10). When the wheel is revolved from left to right (it is revolved thrice) the brahmā chants the Vāji-sāman²⁶³⁹ (Āp. XVIII. 4. 11, Āśv. IX. 9. 8. Lāt. V. 12. 14). According to Lāt. (V. 12. 13) the brahmā only rests his arms on the wheel. The yajamāna occupies the chariot on which mantras were recited and the adhvaryu (or his pupil) also gets into it to instruct the yajamāna to repeat the Vedic formulae he has to utter. Other persons (called vājasṛt) join in the race and sit in the other sixteen chariots and a kṣatriya or vaiśya sits in one of them and the race starts with speed. All the seventeen drums are beaten on the northern śroni of the vedi to urge on the horses. All the horses are made to smell the caru of wild rice (nīvāra) cooked in 17 pots for Brhaspati. The chariot of the sacrificer is in front and the others follow his, but do not overtake it. The adhvaryu makes the yajamāna 2639. The verse to be chanted by brahmā is आविर्मर्या आ वाजं वाजिनो अगन्धेवस्य सवितुः सवे । स्वर्गां अर्धन्तो जयत ॥ This is one of the few verses of the Sāmaveda that are not found in the R̥gveda. If the brahmā cannot chant it, he is to mutter it thrice (Āśv. IX. 9. 3).

recite the formulae of victory such as 'agnirekāksareṇa' (Vāj. S. VIII. 31-34, Tai. S. I. 1. 11). When the chariot reaches the goal, the chariot is taken to its north and then turned round to the south. All the chariots return to the sacrificial ground and the horses are again made to smell the caru of nīvāras and a homa is offered for discharging the drums (duṇḍubhi-vimocaniya-homa). A berry (kṛṣṇala, gold of that weight) is given to each of those that rode the chariots, but that gold is taken back from them and is donated to the brahmā who also receives the golden jar of honey (Kāt. XIV. 4. 17, Āp. XVIII. 5. 5) after it is presented to and taken back from the kṣatriya or vaiśya. The cups of soma are taken up by the priests (the adhvaryu taking the hotṛ-camasa), and the camasādhvaryus take up their cups; while the pratiprasthātṛ takes up the principal wine cup and the other sixteen are taken up by those who joined in the race. The adhvaryu starts towards the east with the soma cups with 'sam pṛcaḥ' (Tai. Br. I. 3. 3), the pratiprasthātṛ to the west with the wine cups and stands near the mārjālīya shed. After the adhvaryu offers the soma cups, the wine cups are shaken and given to the sixteen persons who took part in the race and they quaff them on the southern śropi of the vedi. According to Kāt. (XIV. 3. 20 and XIV. 4. 16) the kṣatriya or vaiśya who sat in one of the chariots receives all the wine cups. When preparations are made to chant the Mahendra stotra, the neṣṭṛ requests the wife to put on a short undergarment of darbha and the yajamāna wears a silken garment (tāṛpyam)²⁶⁴⁰ inside the garment which he wears as a dīkṣita. A ladder is raised against the yūpa to its north or south (Kāt. XIV. 5. 5) and when the sacrificer climbs to the top of the yūpa a dialogue ensues between the sacrificer and his wife (Kāt. XIV. 5. 6-11, Āp. XVIII. 5. 9-11). The sacrificer addresses 'wife, come, let us ascend to heaven'. The wife responds 'let us ascend'. They engage in this dialogue thrice. According to Kāt. XIV. 5. 8 both husband and wife climb to the top of the yūpa, while according to Āp. (XVIII. 4. 12) only the husband does so who finally says 'out of us both I shall ascend to heaven'. On reaching the top he touches the caśāla of wheat flour and mutters 'we reached the heaven, the gods' (Tai. S. I. 7. 9. 2, Vāj. S. IX. 21). Thence he looks at his house with 'May I live long with my children'

2640. Vide S. B. E. vol. 41 p. 85 n for various explanations of 'tāṛpya'.

(Tai. S. I. 7. 9. 2) or in the several directions with Vāj. S. IX. 22 (Kāt. XIV. 5. 11). Vaiśyas (explained as his children by the com. on Kāt. XIV. 5. 12) throw up to him 17 bags of salt or saltish earth enveloped in leaves of aśvattha or (according to Āp. XVIII. 5. 16-18) the adhvaryu, brahmā, hotṛ and udgātṛ raise up the bags to his face on long poles respectively from the east, south, west and north with mantras (referring to food, vāja and winning of vāja) He receives them and descends. He plants his right foot on a piece of gold placed over a goat-skin spread in front of the yūpa on the ground with its neck to the east and hairy side outside and his left foot on the skin itself and from thence he sits down on a couch placed on the west side of the uttaravedi. The offerings of the omentum and other limbs of the animal for Sarasvatī and of other animals are made, the wild rice caru for Brhaspati is offered and the priests partake of the remnants as usual. The animals for Prajāpati are offered at the time of the mid-day pressing. Before the offering to Sviṣṭakṛt of the wild rice caru is made water and milk are poured in a vessel of udumbara and food of seventeen kinds of grains or of as many as the sacrificer remembers except one is also put therein and seven offerings are made of all this with the sruva and the yajamāna is sprinkled with the rest (Kāt. XIV. 5. 20-24). He does not eat throughout his life-time the food of the one kind of grain that was omitted. The adhvaryu declares thrice after taking the name of the sacrificer 'he, so and so, is saṁrāt' (overlord). Āp. XVIII. 7. 18 says that on performing vājapeya a man is entitled to use the white parasol. After the performance of Vājapeya the sacrificer had to observe certain rules of conduct (vide Lāt. VIII. 12. 1-4, Āp. XVIII. 7. 16-17). He should act like a ksatriya (i. e. he may study and make gifts, but should not teach or accept gifts), he should not rise to receive or do abhivādana or carry ²⁶⁴¹ errands for or sit on the same couch with a person who had not performed that sacrifice. The adhvaryu receives the horses and the chariot in which the sacrificer sat (Āp. XVIII. 3. 10) and receives also all the 17 clothes with which the yūpa was enveloped. As to other fees there is some divergence among Āp. XVIII. 3. 4-5, Āśv. IX. 9, 14-17, Kāt. XIV. 2. 29-33 and Lāt. VIII. 11. 16-22. Āśv. says that 1700 cows, 17 chariots to which horses are yoked, seventeen horses, seventeen animals which men ride, seventeen draught oxen, seventeen carts, 17 slave-girls decked with golden niṣkas round their necks, 17 elephants with golden girths—these constitute the fee in Vājapeya and Āśv. suggests other alternatives. Āp. XVIII. 3. 4 is almost the same but adds seventeen goats and ewes. Lāṭ (VIII. 11. 16–18) is also practically the same as Āśv. but adds several alternatives about cows. In the Kuruvājapeya (variously explained in the com.) cows donated are only 17, in other Vājapeyas 1700 or 17000 cows may be given. Lāṭ. further says that the gifts may be equally divided among all the priests, that the chariot occupied by the sacrificer over which yajus mantras were recited and the couch with its coverlet are given to the udgātr, the goat-skin with the golden piece is taken by the hotr.

It will have been noticed that this sacrifice has several picturesque elements in it. In the race and the drinking bout of seventeen cups there is a popular element. In the climbing to the top of the yūpa by the sacrificer and in the boiled wild rice for Bṛhaspati there is a symbolism of holiness and eminence.

Āśv. IX. 9. 19 says that after performing Vājapeya a king should perform Rājasūya and a brāhmaṇa should perform Bṛhaspatisava,²³⁴² while Āp. XVIII. 7. 15 recommends the Sautrāmaṇi after it. Kāt. (XIV. 1. 2–8) states various views.

Jaimini in several adhikaraṇas deals with the śruti texts about Vājapeya. They may be briefly indicated here. In I. 4. 6–8 he shows that in the sentence ‘one desiring to secure overlordship should sacrifice with Vājapeya’ the word Vājapeya is the name of a rite (karmanāmadheya) and that that sentence does not lay down some subordinate matter (such as what material is to be used) in the model sacrifice and that the word vājapeya does not mean gruel or similar substance. In Jai. III. 1. 18 it is said that the text ‘of the Vājapeya the yūpa is 17 aratnis’

²³⁴² According to Jai. IV. 3. 29–31 the Bṛhaspatisava is an aṅga of Vājapeya and the sentence वाजपेयेनेष्टु बृहस्पतिसवेन यजेत does not lay down a time for the performance of that rite. Vide Tai. Br. II. 7. 1 and Āp. XXII. 7. 5 ff, Āśv. IX. 5. 3 ff for बृहस्पतिसव which is a kind of Ekāha soma sacrifice and which is to be performed by one who desires overlordship (ādhipatyā) or spiritual eminence (brahmavarcaśa) according to Āśv. IX. 5. 3 or by one who desires to be the purohita of a king (Tai. Br. II. 7. 1).

means that the yūpa required for the sacrifice of animals in the Vājapeya is to be 17 aratnis high and not that any other thing like the Śoḍaśipātra was to be 17 aratnis. When the Tai. Br. (I. 3. 4) says that seventeen animals are to be killed for Prajāpati, they are 17 separate yāgas and not one rite (karma). When it is said that caru is prepared in milk in seventeen śarāvas (pots), the method of taking out handfuls of grains (as in darśapūrṇamāsa) is not applicable. Jai. says (in XI. 4. 30) that the vessel (kumbhī), the śūla and the spit for roasting the omentum are the same for all the victims, that the omentum of the victim for Prajāpati is not sprinkled with the ājya remaining after the prayāja offerings are made (IV. 1. 33-39) and that the chariot which was occupied by the sacrificer is to be specially given to adhvaryu and not any one of the seventeen chariots i. e. there is a restrictive rule about the share in chariots for the adhvaryu, while there is none as to the other priests (X. 3. 74-75). ²⁶⁴³

The Agniṣṭoma and the other forms of soma sacrifices so far described are ekāha (one day) soma sacrifices i. e. in them soma is offered in cups on one day thrice (in the morning, mid-day and evening). The sūtras (e. g. Āśv. IX. 5-11, Baud. XVIII. 1-10, Kāt. XXII), however, mention and describe several other one day soma sacrifices, such as Bṛhaspatisava, Gosava, Śyena, Udbhid, Viśvajit, Vratyastoma (already described above on pp. 345-347) which are left out for want of space. ²⁶⁴⁴

2644. The Viśvajit from among the ekāhas is a very striking sacrifice. In this the sacrificer either gives a thousand cows or all wealth after separating the share of the eldest son (and excepting land and dūdras who serve him as a duty). Jai. sets out several propositions about this sacrifice in IV. 3. 10-16, VI. 7. 1-20, VII. 3. 6-11, X. 6. 13. After this rite, the sacrificer stays three days at the root of an undunbana tree subsisting on fruits and roots, for three days in a settlement of niṣādas (where he may subsist on nīvāras i. e. on rice, śyāmāka and the flesh of deer), for three days among vaiśyas (jana, also explained as 'persons of another gotra') and three days with kṣatṛiyas. (amānājana,

The ahīna sacrifices²⁶⁴⁵ are those the duration of which is two to twelve days of soma pressing, which always end with an atirātra and which together with the dīksā and upasad days should not extend beyond a month. They should be begun on a Full Moon day. Among them there are groups of sacrifices that last for two days, three days (e. g. Gargatirātra), four days, five days (called pañcarātras of which Pañcaśāradīya is one), ṣaḍahas and so on. Among the numerous rites called ahīnas, the Āśvamedha and Dvādaśāha deserve notice. The Āśvamedha will be described later on. The Dvādaśāha is both an ahīna and a sattra (Āśv. X. 5. 2). There are several varieties of Dvādaśāha, one being called Bharata-dvādaśāha (Āśv. X. 5. 8., Ap. XXI. 14. 5). The twelve days of the Dvādaśāha as a sattra are constituted by the Prāyaṇīya (the commencing rite, an Atirātra), Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha²⁶⁴⁶ (6 days), Chandomas which are Ukthyas (3 days) and a tenth day which is also expalined as sagotras). For a year he should not refuse what is offered but should not beg. Vide Kāt. XXII. 1. 9-33, Lāt. VIII. 2. 1-13. The Gosava is a very strange rite. The Tai. Br. II. 7. 6 briefly describes it. One who desires svārājya may perform it and Āp. (XXII. 12. 12-20 and XXII. 13. 1-3) states that for a year thereafter he should be paśuvrata (act like cattle) i. e. should drink water like them and eat grass (with his teeth) and approach his mother &c. (probably only as a make-believe). तनेष्टु संवत्सरं पशुव्रतो भवति । उपावहायोदकं पिवेत्तृणानि चाच्छि- न्यात् । उप मातरमियादुप स्वसारमुप संगीत्राम् । आप. XXII. 13. 1-3. Another very striking ekāha sacrifice is the सर्वस्वार. This is performed by one who desires to die on performing it and to obtain heaven. When the Ārbhava pavamāna stotra is begun to be chanted in the third pressing, the sacrificer directs the priests to finish the sacrifice and enters fire. This sacrifice is called शुनःकर्णोन्मिष्टोमः. Vide ताण्ड्यब्राह्मण XVII. 12. 5, Jaimini X. 2. 57-61 where Sabara appears to quote some vedie texts very similar to Āp. XXII. 7. 21-25 'मरणकामो यजेत यः कामयेतानामयता स्वर्गं लोकमियामिति । ... आर्भवे स्तुयमाने औदुम्बरीं पत्तोदशेनाहतेन वाससा दक्षिणाशिराः प्रावृतः संविशन्नाह ब्राह्मणः समापयत मे यज्ञमिति । तदैव संतिष्ठते ।'

2645. Vide Sat. Br. IV. 5. 4, Āśv. X. 1. 11—X. 5. 13, Āp. XXII. 14ff, Kāt. XXIII, Śāh. XVI. 19-30, Lāt. IX. 5-12.

2646. According to Kāt. XII. 3. 1 a prṣṭhya ṣaḍaha is so constituted that the first day is an Agniṣṭoma, the fourth is a Ṣoḍaśin and the rest are Ukthyas, while an Abhiplava ṣaḍaha is so constituted that the first and last are Agniṣṭomas and the rest are Ukthyas. There is also a difference between the two as regards the stomas. Vide S.B.E. vol. 26 pp. 402-403 n. 4 For the Chandomas, vide Haug's tr. of. Ait. Br. p. 347 n.

an Atyagnistoma (called Avivākya, on which no speaking or dispute about errors is allowed) and the Udayaniya (concluding rite, which again is an Atirātra). The principal differences between the Dvādaśāha as an ahina and a sattra are: (1) a sattra can be performed only by brāhmaṇas, while a dvādaśāha may be performed by any one of the first three varṇas; (2) the sattra may extend over even long periods (such as a year or more), while a dvādaśāha cannot so extend; (3) in the sattra the distinction of yajamāna and priests does not exist but all are yajamānas and all work as priests, while in dvādaśāha that distinction exists; (4) (as a consequence of the above) in a sattra there are no dakṣiṇās. Kāt. XII. 1. 4 states that wherever in the vedic texts the words 'upayanti' and 'āsate' occur it is a sign of a 'sattra' (and so in that case the rules about sattras will apply) but where the word 'yajate' or 'yājayet' is used it is a sign of an ahina. In an ahina only the last day is an Atirātra, but in a sattra both the first and last days are Atirātras (Kāt. XII. 1. 6).

It is now necessary to say something about a few other striking sacrifices.

Rājasūya.—This is strictly not a purely soma sacrifice, but it is a most complex ceremony extending over a very long period (more than two years) and comprising a number of separate iṣṭis (like the one to Anumati), Soma sacrifices (like Pavitra) and animal sacrifices (Kāt. XV. 1. 3). Even the briefest statement of the several rites will occupy many pages. An attempt will be made to indicate only a few salient features.

This ceremony could be performed only ²⁶⁴⁷ by a kṣatriya. There was a difference of view, some holding that it could be performed only by him who had not celebrated the Vājapeya (Kāt. XV. 1. 2), while others held that it should be celebrated after Vājapeya (Āśv. IX. 9. 19). In the Śat. Br. IX. 3. 4.8 it is said 'by performing the Rājasūya one becomes a king (rājan)

2647. राजा राजसूयेन यजेत । लाट्यायनश्रौत IX. 1. 1, सत्याषाढ (XIII. 3) adds स्वर्गकामो before यजेत. Vide Āp. XVIII. 8. 1, Kāt. XV. 1. 1; राजसूयेन स्वाराज्यकामो यजेत quoted by Sabara on Jai. XI. 2. 12; Śaṅ. XV. 13. 1 after narrating that Vaiṇa secured super-eminence, complete dominion and overlordship by performing it states तथो एवेतद्यजमानो यद्वाजसूयेन यजेत सर्वेषां राज्यानां श्रेष्ठ्यं स्वाराज्यमाधिपत्यं पर्यप्ति । The word राजसूय is derived by Sabara as 'राजा तत्र सूयते तस्माद्वाजसूयः । राज्ञो वा यज्ञो राजसूयः' (on Jai. IV. 4.1). Soma is called rājan.

and by the Vājapeya an emperor (samrāt) and the position of the king is (obtained) first and thereafter of emperor.' On the first day of the bright half of Phālguna the sacrificer undergoes dikṣā for a soma sacrifice called Pavitra, which follows the procedure of Agniṣṭoma (Lāṭ. IX. 1. 2, Aśv. IX. 3. 2, Kāt. XV. 1. 6). There was difference of opinion as to the number of dikṣā days (Lāṭ. IX. 1. 8, Kāt. XV. 1. 4). The Abhiṣecanīya ceremony which is the principal among the rites of Rājasūya took place exactly a year after the Pavitra sacrifice was commenced (Lāṭ. IX. 1. 4). At the end of the Abhiṣecanīya the sacrificer did not actually enter into water for the final bath (avabhṛtha), but wearing shoes made of boar-skin he repaired from the sacrificial ground (devayajana) to the water, put into the water black antelope horn or the foot portion of a black antelope skin and returned wearing shoes of black antelope skin (Lāṭ. IX. 1. 23-24).

There are five offerings commencing the next day after the Pavitra sacrifice, one each on one day. Then on the Full Moon of Phālguna there is an iṣṭi to Anumati (a puroḍāśa being offered). Vide Kāt. XV. 1. 9 and Āp. XVIII. 8. 10. There is an offering to Nirṛti prepared from the particles of grains that fall to the west of the śamyā from the mill-stone when the grains for the puroḍāśa to Anumati are being ground. The particles are taken in the sruva and a firebrand being lighted from the dakṣiṇa fire, the offering is made to the south of the vihāra on that fire-brand or on some saltish land. On the full moon day of Phālguna are begun the *cāturmāsya*s (i. e. first the Vaiśvadeva, then after four months Varuṇapraghāsa and so on). This goes on for one year. Between the parvans of the *cāturmāsya*s, the monthly full moon and new moon sacrifices are performed. The *cāturmāsya*s come to an end with the Sunāsiriya parva on the first of the bright half of Phālguna. After that several rites follow such as the Pañcavātīya in five fires in the four directions and in the middle (Āp. XVIII. 9. 10-11, Kāt. XV. 1. 20-21), the Apāmārga-homa (Āp. XVIII. 9. 15-20, Kāt. XV. 2. 1 ff.). Then there are twelve offerings called '*ratninām*²⁶⁴⁸ havīṃsi' performed on twelve days one 2648. The 'ratnins' are enumerated somewhat differently in different texts, though some are common to all. Vide Tai. S. I. 8. 9. 1-2, Tai. Br. I. 7. 3, Sat. Br. V. 3. 1. 'रत्निनामेतानि हवींषि भवन्ति । एते वै राष्ट्रस्य प्रदातारः ।' तै. ब्रा. I. 7. 3.

after another in the houses of the 'ratnas' (jewels) viz. of the sacrificer himself, his queens and state functionaries (Kāt. XV. 3 and Āp. XVIII. 10). The deity to whom an offering is made is appropriate to the person in whose house the offering is made and the offerings and fees also differ. The twelve persons (according to Kāt.) are the sacrificer, the commander of the army, the purohita, the crowned queen, the sūta (minstrel?), grāmaṇī (village headman), the kṣattrī (chamberlain), saṁgrahitṛ (treasurer or charioteer?), akṣāvāpa (superintendent of gambling), govikarta (hunter?), dūta or pālāgala (courier), parivrkti (the discarded queen) and the deities respectively are Indra, Agni Anikavat, Brhaspati, Aditi, Varuṇa, Maruts, Savitr, Aśvins, Rudra (for both akṣāvāpa and govikarta), Agni, Nirṛti (the offering in this case is a caru of black rice husked with the nails). The dakṣiṇās also vary (vide Āp. XVIII. 10. 15-30, Kāt. XV. 3. 16-34). Then follow several offerings. Then comes the Abhiṣecanīya rite which is the central ceremony in Rājasūya and which lasts for five days (one day dīkṣā, three days upasads and one sutyā day of soma pressings). The dīkṣā of Abhiṣecanīya (anointing rite) is performed on the first of Caitra. It is performed on the southern part of the sacrificial ground while the Daśapeya is performed on the northern portion. In the Abhiṣecanīya and Daśapeya the hotṛ must be of the Bhṛgugotra (Tāṇḍya Br. XVIII. 9. 2, Kāt. XV. 4. 1, Śaṅ. XV. 13. 2). The Abhiṣecanīya follows the procedure of the Ukthya. Soma is bought for both Abhiṣecanīya and Daśapeya at the same time, but half of it (for Daśapeya) is deposited, after being carried in a cart, in the house of the brahmā priest. Then there are eight offerings of caru called Devasū-haviṁsi viz. to Savitr, Agni Gr̥hapati, Soma Vanaspati, Brhaspati, Indra, Rudra, Mitra, Varuṇa. According to Āp. XVIII. 12. 7-8 after these eight offerings the brahmā priest announces to the 'ratnins' that the sacrificer is their king and refers to the tribes or people occupying the country.²⁶⁴⁹ Vide Kāt. XV. 4. 15-17 also. At the end of idū in the case of these caru offerings the priest brings waters of seventeen kinds in seventeen vessels of udumbara wood, viz. of the Sarasvatī river, flowing water of a river, water from ripples produced by the entrance of a man or animal, water from a river drawn against the current, water of the sea, of ocean waves, of whirl-pools, of deep steady reservoirs always exposed to the sun, rain water in sunshine before it falls on the ground, of a lake, of a well, of frost &c. (Kāt. XV. 4. 21-42, Āp. XVIII 13. 1-18). All the waters are poured into a vat of udumbara which is placed near the seat of Maitravaruṇa. After the Marutvatīya cup is offered in the Ukthya rite, he spreads to the east of the vessel of water a tiger skin on the western end of which lead is placed. Six homas called Pārtha²⁶⁵⁰ are offered (Āp. XVIII. 15. 8, Kāt. XV. 5. 34) and then with a gold piece tied in two kuśa blades the water in the big vessel is cleansed (that is utpavana is performed) and is distributed in four vessels made of palāśa, udumbara, nyagrodha and āśvattha. The sacrificer wears a silken garment (tārpya, explained by Kāt. XV. 5. 7-11), a white turban (one end of which hangs from the shoulder) and a mantle. The sacrificer recites the Āvid formulae²⁶⁵¹ (Āp. XVIII. 14. 10, Kāt. XV. 5. 21, which refers to Vāj. S. X. 9). The adhvaryu gives a strung bow and three arrows to the sacrificer, who puts a copper piece in the mouth of a long haired man (eunuch) for averting evil (from spirits and snakes?); vide Vāj. S. X. 10. The sacrificer treads upon the piece of lead and brushes it away with his foot and stands on the tiger-skin with a gold piece under his foot and has a fillet of gold on his head. The sacrificer holds up his arms. He strides in the quarters. The sacrificer stands facing the east and the adhvaryu, standing in front of him, first sprinkles him with the holy water contained in the vessel of palāśa, the other priests follow viz. the brahmā sprinkles him from the right with water in udumbara vessel and so on. Besides, the king's brother (Kāt. XV. 5. 30) or another ksatriya (Āp. XVIII. 16. 3) sprinkles him with water from the udumbara vessel, a friendly ksatriya from the third vessel and a vaiśya from the fourth (Āp. XVIII. 16. 3-5 says a ksatriya sprinkles water from udumbara vessel, a vaiśya sprinkles from behind the king with water from āśvattha vessel and a friend from the common people sprinkles from the north side with water in the nyagrodha vessel). These actions are probably symbolic of the consent of all people to the anointing. The sacrificer rubs with the antelope horn over the whole of his body the holy water sprinkled over him (Kāt. XV. 6. 8). According to Kāt. XV. 6. 1-2 at this stage or after the dice play (to be described later) the hotṛ priest sitting on a cushion inlaid with gold recites the story of Sunahśepa²⁶⁵² for the sacrificer's benefit. Āp. XVIII. 19. 10 places this recital after the dice-play. Āśv. IX. 3. 9 says that the story of Sunahśepa is recited to the anointed king after the marutvatīya śāstra in the Abhiṣecanīya rite (and before the Niṣkevalya śāstra), the king being seated on a golden cushion and surrounded by his son and ministers. The adhvaryu also sits on a cushion inlaid with gold and utters the responses (pratigara) uttering 'om' (as the pratigara) at the end of each ṛk and 'tathā' at the end of each gāthā.²⁶⁵³ At the end of the recitation the sacrificer donates a hundred or a thousand cows to the hotṛ and to the adhvaryu and donates also their respective cushions. The king takes three strides called Viṣṇukrama on the tiger-hide. All the remnants of the anointing waters are poured in the palāśa vessel and are handed over by the anointed king to his son with the words ' May my son continue this my work and this my prowess. ' Then two homas are offered (called nāmavyatiṣaṇīya) in which at first the son is declared to be the father of his father and then secondly the relationship is rightly put.²⁶⁵⁴ Vide Āp. XVIII. 16. 14-15, Kāt. XV. 6. 11. Then there is a symbolic march for the plunder of cows. As in Vājapeya a chariot is made ready, four horses are yoked to it, the sacrificer ascends it, takes the chariot in the midst of a group of hundred or more cows belonging to his kinsmen collected to the north of the āhavanīya, 2652. Vide Ait. Br. 33 for the story. Sāh. (XV. 17. 27) contains (with a very few additions and slight variations) the whole of the Ait. Br. passage on the story of Sunahśepa.

2650. The Śat. Br. V. 3. 5. 4. connects these offerings with Pṛthu Vainya (the first consecrated king of men). The mantras are in Vāj. S. X. 5.

2651. In the Tai. S. 1. 8. 12. 2 the āvid formulae are interesting and they are: आविष्मोऽग्निर्गृहपतिरविष्म इन्द्रो... आविष्मे यावापृथिवी धृतवते आविष्मा देव्यदिति विश्वरूप्याविष्मोयमसावासुष्यायणेऽस्यां विश्वस्मिन्राष्ट्रे महते क्षत्राय महत आधिपत्याय महते जानराज्यायैष वो भरता राजा सोमोऽस्माकं ब्राह्मणानां राजा।

2653. ओमिच्छुचः प्रतिगर एवं तथेति गाथायाः। Āśv. IX. 3. 11, Kāt. XV. 6. 3, Āp. XVIII. 19. 13. For example, he responds with 'tathā' at the end of each of the ten gāthās from यं न्विमं in the Ait. Br. But some of the verses like कस्य नूनं (Rg. I. 24. 1 quoted in Ait. Br. 33. 4) are ṛks. There is no pratigara except at the end of ṛk verses and gāthās, when the Sunahśepa story is narrated.

2654. As an example may be given this. अयमभिमन्युरर्जुनस्य पितेत्येवं पितृशब्दो पुत्रे कृतो भवति यथायथं पश्चादिति अर्जुनोऽभिमन्योः पितेत्येवम् । com. on Kāt. Vāj. S. X. 20 refers to this प्रजापते न त्वदेतान्यन्यो तन्नोस्त्वयममुष्य पितासावस्य पिता वयं स्याम पतयो रयीणां स्वाहा ।

touches one of them with the string of his bow and says 'I seize these.' Then he restores to the owner as many cows as are collected or more and returns to the sacrificial ground and makes four offerings called Rathavimocanīya. Vide Kāt. XV. 6. 13-23. Lāṭ. (IX. 1. 14-23) gives a more graphic account that at the time of giving gifts, the king's kinsmen are collected with their wealth, arrows are discharged at them by the sacrificer, they themselves bring back the arrows and declare 'O king, may you be victorious.' One-third of their wealth is distributed among the priests, one-third is given at the time of the Daśapeya to the worthy brāhmaṇas brought in that rite, one-third is returned to the kinsmen, villages are bestowed on them and they become rājanyas (king's nobles) but not worthy of coronation. Before getting down from the chariot he puts on boar-skin shoes, bows to the earth with 'O mother earth! do not injure me nor may I injure thee' (Vāj. S. X. 23, Tai. S. I. 8. 15. 1). The king then sits on a chair or throne made of khadira that is placed in front of the āgnīdhriya shed (Āp. XVIII. 18. 5-8, Kāt. XV. 7. 1-4). The priests and the 'ratnins' take seats round him; the brahmā priest (the purohita or adhvaryu according to Kāt. XV. 7. 11) hands over the sphya to the king, from whom it passes on to several persons viz. the king's brother, sūta, sthapati, village headman, kinsman (Āp. XVIII. 18. 14-16). According to Kāt. (XV. 7. 13) the kinsmen and the pratiprasthātṛ mark out a place for dice play with the sphya (according to Āp. XVIII. 18. 16 the superintendent of gambling does so). On the ground so marked a quadrangular hut or shed is erected. Five dice are handed over to the king who is lightly struck by the priests with sticks of sacrificial trees. The king calls as umpires (upa-draṣṭṛ) the saṁgrahitṛ, the bhāgadugha (collector of taxes) and the kṣatṛ (Āp. XVIII. 19. 6-8). The play is so arranged that the best throw (of the dice) comes to the king and the worst to his kinsman.²⁶⁵⁵ It appears that the dice play required golden pieces also beyond a hundred or a thousand in number (Āp. XVIII. 19. 1). According to Kāt. (XV. 7. 25-26) the king actually undergoes the avabhṛtha bath, while Lāṭyāyana as stated above differs. After the offering of anubandhyā cow and the performance of the udavasānīyā istī, a cake prepared from a mixture of rice and barley and baked on twelve potsherds is offered to Indra and Viṣṇu. For ten days after the Abhiṣecanīya he offers successively on each day offerings called 'samsr̥pām havīm̐śi' respectively to Savitr, Sarasvatī, Tvaṣṭr, Pūṣan, Indra, Brhaspati, Varuṇa, Agni, Soma, Viṣṇu (Kāt. XV. 8. 1-4, Āp. XVIII. 20. 7 which says they are ten or seven and they begin with Agni; Āśv. IX. 4. 6 speaks of only seven). Each of these is offered in fire set up in a devayajana to the east of the preceding one and the last of the ten is offered in the shed prepared for the Daśapeya rite (Āp. XVIII. 20. 8-10, Kāt. XV. 8. 2-3). On each of the ten (or seven) iṣṭis (of samsr̥pām havīm̐śi) he offers to the priests ordinary or golden lotus flowers and on the tenth day he wears a garland made of those flowers. That becomes his consecration (dikṣā) for the next rite, viz. Daśapeya. Jaimini declares (in XI. 2. 57-62) that though soma is purchased for both Abhiṣecanīya and Daśapeya at the same time (vide p. 1216 above), yet in the two ekāhas the whole procedure of soma sacrifices is repeated. A different proposition is stated in Kāt. XV. 8. 10-13 (except as to dikṣā and avabhṛtha which are repeated in both rites). On the tenth day after the Abhiṣecanīya is finished the Daśapeya is performed (Lāṭ. IX. 2. 1, Kāt. XV. 8. 14 says on the 7th day i. e. on 7th of the bright half of Caitra). This rite is so called because in it each of the ten camasas (cups) of soma are partaken of by ten brāhmaṇas (Āśv. IX. 3. 18, Āp. XVIII. 21. 3). The brāhmaṇas are the ten ṛtviks who ordinarily partake of the soma in camasas plus 90 more (called anuprasarpakas) who possess special qualifications, viz. whose ten ancestors on the father's and mother's sides were masters of Vedic lore, had rigorously performed their duties and were engaged in holy actions and who had no sexual or marital alliances with non-brāhmaṇas²⁶⁵⁶ (vide Āśv. IX. 3. 19-21, Śān.

2656. Vide note 574 for the passage of Āśv. According to Āp. XVIII. 21. 3-4 and Kāt. XV. 8. 16 the ten ancestors on the father's side only should have been drinkers of Soma. Vide Lāṭ. IX. 2. 5-7. The बाराहश्रौत III 3. 4. 18 says येषां दशसु न मीमांसेरन्त ऋत्विजो यसर्पिणश्च (यसर्पिणश्च?) पिवा (पि ?) किं ब्राह्मणस्येत्युक्त्वा प्रसर्पति (प्रसर्पन्ति?). The editor, Dr. Raghu Vira, was puzzled by this sūtra. It means (when corrected as shown) that the priests and others who came to drink soma and could not trace ten generations of soma-drinkers entered after reciting a verse out of the verses that begin with the words 'pibā somam' (like Rg. VI. 17. 1 or VII. 22. 1) and the verse 'why do you ask the brāhmaṇa about his father or mother' (Kāṭhaka Sam. 30. 1 or Maitrāyaṇī S. IV. 8. 1). The verse is: किं ब्राह्मणस्य पितरं किमु पृच्छसि मातरम् । श्रुतं चेदस्मिन्वेष्टं स पिता स पितामहः ॥

XV. 14. 8-11). Kāt. XV. 8. 17 gives an option that one need not investigate whether the ten ancestors of each were soma-drinkers, but the one hundred brāhmaṇas should enter the sadas after reciting Vāj. S. X. 30.

Fees are prescribed at many of the constituent rites in Rājasūya, but special fees are mentioned in connection with the Abhiṣecanīya and Daśapeya (Āśv. IX. 4. 2 ff). At the Abhiṣecanīya Āśv. recommends 32000 cows to each of the four principal priests, 16000 to each of the first assistants of the four, 8000 to each of the next four, 4000 to each of the last group of four (Āśv. IX. 4. 3-5). These come to the huge figure of 240000 cows. Vide Śān. XV. 16. 16-19 also for such large figures. At the Daśapeya 1000 cows are the fee and then there are special rewards for the 16 priests (Āśv. IX. 4. 7-20, Āp. XVIII. 21. 6-7, Kāt. XV. 8. 23-27, Lāt. IX. 2. 9-15) viz. a golden chain, a horse, a milch cow (with calf), a goat, two golden ear-rings, two silver ear-rings, twelve five year old pregnant cows, a barren cow, a round golden ornament (rukma), a bull, cotton cloth, a thick hempen piece of cloth, a cart full of barley drawn by an ox, an ox, a heifer, a young three year old bull respectively to udgātr, his three assistants, adhvaryu, pratiprasthātr, brahmā, maitrāvaruṇa, hotṛ, brāhmaṇacchamsin, potṛ, neṣṭṛ, acchāvāka, āgnīdhra, unnetṛ and grāvastut.

For one year after the avabhṛtha bath in Daśapeya, the king has to keep certain observances (called devavratas in Lāt. IX. 2. 17 ff) viz. he should not plunge in water for daily bath but should only rub his body with water, should always brush his teeth, pare his nails, should not cut his hair (but may shave the mustache or beard), should sleep in the sacrificial fire-shed on a tiger-skin with its hair upwards, should daily offer fuel-sticks ; his subjects (except brāhmaṇas) should not cut their hair for a year, nor should horses' hair be cut for a year. For a year he should never walk on the ground unless he wears shoes (Kāt. XV. 8. 29).

There are several minor offerings, such as those called pañcabila in four quarters and in the midst (Kāt. XV. 9. 1-3), twelve prayuj offerings at the interval of a month or on two days (Kāt. XV. 9. 11-14, Āp. XVIII. 22. 5-7).

Atirātra sacrifice (Āśv. IX. 3. 24) and in which hair grown for a year were cut off. About the exact time of the rite there were different views. The com. on Āśv. says it was performed on some day in the bright half of Vaiśākha, while the com. on Kāt. XV. 9. 20 says that the pressing day of Keśavapanīya fell on the Full moon day of Jyestha. Vide also Lāt. IX. 3. 1-3. Then follow two rites called Vyūṣṭi-dvirātra (dvirātra for prosperity), which were respectively (first) an Agniṣṭoma and (the 2nd) an Atirātra performed at the interval of one month (Kāt. XV. 9. 21-23, Āśv. IX. 3. 25-26). There were several views about the time of their performance (Lāt. IX. 3. 5-9, Āp. XVIII. 22. 14-16). Then one month after the 2nd Vyūṣṭidvirātra (i. e. on Śrāvaṇa Full Moon day) was performed the rite called Kṣatrādhṛti (lit. stability of martial power) which followed the procedure of Agniṣṭoma (Āśv. IX. 3. 27, Lāt. IX. 3. 13). Śān. (XV. 16. 10-11) refers to the legend that Kurus lost in each battle because they did not offer the Kṣatra-dhṛti rite.²⁶⁵⁸ According to Śat. Br. V. 5. 5. 6-9 in place of the Udavasāniyā there was the Traidhatavi iṣṭi in which a cake prepared of barley and rice mixed together was offered. This finished the Rājasūya, but one month after it in the bright half the Sautrāmaṇi iṣṭi was performed. This last is dealt with separately below.

It will have been seen that this complex rite is full of symbolic elements and also popular elements like dice-play.

In the sabhāparva of the Mahābhārata (chap. 33-35) there is a description of the Rājasūya performed by Yudhiṣṭhira, but it is of the vaguest sort and does not go into any details. Vide Jai. IV. 4. 1-4 (the dice-play has no independent fruit and that it, though held for the cow referred to in Āp. XVIII. 19. 2, is not an aṅga of the abhiṣecanīya only, but really of the whole Rājasūya), V. 2. 13-15 (in the offerings called Devasūhaviṁsi, which are prepared from several kinds of corn, the mortar is one for pounding all the corns one after another), XI. 4. 1-3, XI. 4. 4-7 (the priests chosen at the beginning should continue to work till the end), XI. 4. 8-10 (about the offerings in the houses of the 'ratnins'), XI. 4. 43 (the mantra

SAUTRĀMAṆĪ²⁶⁶⁰ AND OTHER SACRIFICES

This rite is included among the seven forms of havir-yajñas (Gaut. VIII. 20, Lāt. V. 4. 23). It is not a soma sacrifice but is a combination of an iṣṭi with animal sacrifice (Śat. Br. XII. 7. 2. 10). The chief characteristic of it is the offering of surā (wine) in it. In modern times milk is offered in place of surā in the Sautrāmaṇī. According to Lāt. V. 4. 20 and Āp. XIX. 5. 1 there are two kinds of this rite, viz. Kaukilī and Caraka-sautrāmaṇī (or the ordinary one). Kaukilī is an independent rite, while the ordinary Sautrāmaṇī is performed at the end of the Rājasūya (one month after it) and also at the end of the piling of the fire-altar (agnicayana). Lāt. V. 4. 21 states that there is chanting of sāmans only in the Kaukilī and not in the other variety and according to Kāt. XIX. 5. 1 (com.) it is the brahmā that chants the Sāman to Indra in the Brhatī tune (viz. Vāj. S. XX. 30) Āp. XIX. 1. 2. states that in the ordinary sautrāmaṇī the procedure is that of the nirūḍha-pāsubandha and that (XIX. 5. 2) in Kaukilī also the same procedure applies. There are two fires as in Varunapraghāsa, but the southern one is not established on a vedi (Kāt. XIX. 2. 1 and V. 4. 12). Some held (as is done by Śat. Br. XII. 7. 3. 7) there were two vedis behind which two mounds were raised, one for cups of milk and the other for cups of surā. The rite takes four days, during the first three out of which wine is prepared from various ingredients, while on the last day three cups of milk and three of surā are offered to Aśvins, Sarasvatī and Indra and animals are slaughtered for the same three.

In this rite the victims are a reddish-white goat for the Aśvins, an ewe for Sarasvatī, and a bull for Indra Sutrāman (Śān. XV. 15. 1-4, Aśv. III. 9. 2). A brief description of the method in which wine was prepared in the Sautrāmaṇī is given below from the Śat. Br. V. 5. 4, XII. 7. 2, Kāt. XV. 9. 28-30, 2660. The word Sautrāmaṇī is derived from sutrāman (a good protector), an epithet of Indra (vide Rg. X. 131. 6-7). Sat. Br. V. 5. 4. 12 derives it as 'one who was well saved (by the Aśvins)'.

XIX. 1-2 (and com. thereon). Rice-grains²⁶⁶¹ (or malted rice grains and malted barley or śyāmāka) germinated and ungerminated covered in linen cloth are purchased from an eunuch in exchange for lead, wool and fried grain for thread. This purchase takes place on the southern one of the vedis specially prepared for this rite near the peg called antahpātya on a hide. The rice grains are cooked in plenty of water and the malted barley grains are powdered and boiled. The water and scum are strained through woollen cloth. The hair of the lion, the wolf and the tiger are thrown into the mixture (this is symbolic of the characteristics of prowess, impetuosity and fury found in those wild beasts). Certain vegetable substances such as myrobalans, ginger, nutmeg (which serve as yeast and are mentioned in the note below), are powdered and boiled in plenty of water. The hot watery scum from the two pots of boiled rice and powdered barley is taken into two vessels and the extract of vegetables is poured in both of them, the mixture being called māsara. The boiled rice and barley are also mixed with the extract of powdered vegetables, put in a kumbhī (a big jar) along with contents of the māsara vessels and the jar is placed in a pit dug to the south-west of the sacrificial hall and kept there for three nights. On the first day the milk of one cow meant for Āsvins is poured into the kumbhī placed in the pit and powder of śaṣpa is added. The next day the milk of two cows meant for Sarasvatī is poured into the kumbhī and powder of tokma is added. On the third milk of three cows meant for Indra is added and also the powder of fried rice grains (lāja). To the west of the mound prepared on the southern vedī a pit is dug (outside the vedī according to com. on Kāt. XIX. 2. 7.) on which is spread bull's hide over which a sieve of bamboo is held and the liquid from the large jar is poured over the sieve (called kārotara).²⁶⁶² The wine thus purified is collected in a 2661. Kāt. (XIX. 1. 18 ff) uses the words शष्य (malted rice or grass), तोकम (malted barley), नमहु (vegetable substances). The com. on Kāt. XIX. 1. 20 quotes verses specifying these latter : सर्जत्वक् त्रिफला चैव शुण्ठी चैव पुनर्नमः । चतुर्गन्तकसंयुक्ता पिप्पला गजपिप्पली । वंशोऽयका बृहच्छत्रा चित्रकं चेन्द्र-वारुणी । अश्वगन्धां समुत्पाद्य मूलान्येतानि निर्दिशेत् ॥ घान्यकं च यवानीं च जीरकं कुण्ठजीरकम् । द्वे हरिद्रे वचा चैव विरूढा ब्रीहयो यवाः । Āp. XIX. 5. 4 defines नमहु differently.

2662. Āp. XIX.5-6 and Baud. XVII.31-32 state methods of preparing surā which differ in several details, though the principle is the same. It is prepared by fermentation from rice, barley and other corn. So this surā would be ' paiṣṭī ' out of the three varieties mentioned in Manu XI. 94.

sata (a vessel of palāśa wood) and it is further purified by means of the hair of the tail of a cow and a horse. Of this purified wine the pratiprasthātṛ fills the cups for being offered to the three deities, viz. the Āśvins, Sarasvatī and Indra. Either one or three cups are filled for each of the three deities (Kāt. XV. 10. 13). This is done after the offering of the omentum and after mārjana. According to Āp. XIX. 2. 9-11 and Kāt. XV. 10. 12 powders of kuvala, karkandhū and badara fruits are added to the wine in the cups and they are offered in the dakṣiṇa fire (Kāt. XV. 10. 17). There was only one puronuvākya, one praiṣa and one yājyā for all cups.²⁶⁶³ On the dakṣiṇa fire a vessel having a hundred holes covered with a hair strainer and gold and containing the remnants of the wine cups was hung by means of a śikya and the trickling drops of wine were offered to pitṛs called Somavat, Barhiṣad and Agniṣvātta with Vāj. S. XIX. 52-60. It is to be noted that the remnants of the wine were not drunk by the priests, but were either drunk by a brāhmaṇa hired for the purpose (Āp. XIX. 3. 3) or they were poured over an ant-hill. Āśv. (III. 9. 5-6) says that the priests muttered a verse (which is Vāj. S. XIX. 35) and only smelt the remnants of the wine offered (this is called prāṇabhakṣa). Śāṇ. notes that some teachers recited the puronuvākya, yājyā and praiṣa in an entirely changed form (probably as directly mentioning only surā and not in the phraseology of soma) but it should not be so done, since that is a method fit only for asuras. From this one may plausibly argue that the Sautrāmaṇi was practised among Asuras (non-Aryan people or schismatics) and was adopted by the Vedic Aryans, with appropriate changes. But it is clear that the drinking of surā by priests was condemned even then.²⁶⁶⁴ Eggel-

2663. Vide Āśv. III. 9. 3. The puronuvākya is Rg. X. 131. 4, the yājyā is Rg. X. 131. 5 and the praiṣa to the hotṛ to repeat the yājyā is : ' होता यक्षदश्विना सरस्वतीमिन्द्रं सुत्रामाणं सोमानां सुराणां जुषन्तां ध्वन्तु पिबन्तु मदन्तु सोमान् सुराणो होतॄयज । ' (Āśv. III. 9. 3.). It will be noticed that surā is referred to in terms of soma. Śāṇ. says ' सर्वानेके विकृतानामनन्ति । तद्गु तथा न कुर्यादासुरं तत् '. According to Śāṇ. the adhvaryu recited Vāj. S. XIX. 34 (= Tai. Br. II. 6. 3) and the pratiprasthātṛ and udgātṛ recite Vāj. S. XIX. 35 as the mantra for smelling surā. Vide Lāt. V. 4.15 also for भक्षमन्त्र.

2664. ब्राह्मणं परिक्रीणीयादुच्छेपणस्य पातारम् । आप. XIX. 3. 3. This is quoted by Sabara on Jai. III 5. 15. सत्या. (XIII. 8. 28-31;) has ' ब्राह्मणं परिक्रीणीते अदोच्छेपणस्य पातारम् । ... वल्मीकवपायामवतयेत् । स्वयं वा पिबेत् । सर्वहुतां वा जुहुयात् । '. Vide note 1892 for a quotation from Tai. Br. to the same effect.

ing (in S. B. E. vol. 44 p. 246 n) does not appear to be right so far at least as the sūtra literature goes when he says that the priests drank the remnants of the wine cups (though the Śat. Br. uses the somewhat doubtful word 'bhakṣayanti' which in the sūtras also means 'smelling').

All three animals in the sautrāmaṇi may be goats. A fourth animal was offered to Bṛhaspati under certain circumstances (Āp. XIX. 2. 1-2). Though the omentum of the victims was offered to Aśvins, Sarasvatī and Indra, the paśupuroḍāśas were offered to Indra, Savitr and Varuṇa (Āśv. III. 9. 2). This rite was performed at the end of Rājasūya or for one who performs cayana or for one who suffers from purging due to excessive drinking of soma beverage or who vomits soma or from the openings of whose body (except the mouth) soma flows out. The independent (kaukill) sautrāmaṇi was performed for a brāhmaṇa who desired prosperity, or for a king who was driven from his kingdom or for one who had no cattle (Kāt. XIX. 1. 2-4). In the beginning and at the end there was a caru to Vditi.

The northern vedi is in extent only one-third of the vedi for a soma sacrifice. When the uttaravedi is being prepared the pratiprasthātr takes earth from the cātvāla pit, makes a mound to the south of the uttaravedi, a second mound for keeping wine cups in front of the dakṣiṇa fire, brings fire from the dakṣiṇa fire and establishes it on the mound which is to the south of the uttaravedi. According to Kāt. XIX. 2. 11 (which is part of the description of the independent sautrāmaṇi) the adhvaryu purifies on the northern vedi milk contained in a vessel made of reeds (vetasa) and fills cups of milk, the one for Aśvins being made of aśvattha wood, and those for Sarasvatī and Indra being made of udumbara and nyagrodha. The three cups of milk are offered together by the adhvaryu. After the offering to Vanaspati in the animal sacrifice a couch of muñja cords is placed between the two vedis and the sacrificer sits on the couch which is covered with a black antelope skin with a silver piece under his left foot and a golden one under his right foot. The adhvaryu offers thirty-two cups of vasā (fat) from vessels made of the hoofs of bulls with Vāj. S. XIX. 80-95. The remnants of fat are contained in a sata (vessel) of reeds. The adhvaryu sprinkles over the yajamāna whose body has been rendered fragrant with unguents the liquid from that vessel till it trickles down up to his mouth. The adhvaryu touches the sacrificer who summons his men and servants calling them by auspicious names (such as suśloka). The men lift him gradually first up to the knee, then up to the navel &c. The sacrificer alights on a black antelope skin when a 33rd cup of fat is taken, a sāman in the Brhat tune for Indra (Vāj S. XX. 30) is chanted by the brahmā priest and the nidhana (finale) of it differs according to the varṇa of the sacrificer^{2664a} and is sung in chorus by all and then the 33rd cup is offered. There is the final purificatory bath as in Somayāga. Finally, after the caru to Aditi āmiksā is offered to Mitra and Varuṇa and then an animal to Indra Vayodhas. Jaimini lays down certain propositions about the Sautrāmaṇi. In III. 5. 14-15 he states that all the contents of the grahas of milk are offered in the fire on the northern vedi and of the wine cups into the southern fire and nothing is left out of them for being offered as Sviṣṭakṛt offering or for the purpose of idā. In IV. 3. 29-31 it is established that when the Vedic text says 'after piling the fire altar one should perform Sautrāmaṇi' there is no injunction about the time of performing Sautrāmaṇi but what is declared is that the Sautrāmaṇi is an aṅga (a subordinate constituent) of the principal rite viz. agnicayana and in IX. 3. 40-41 it is stated with reference to the same text that the sautrāmaṇi is not necessarily performed immediately after agnicayana but on the Full Moon day or New Moon day thereafter. In VIII. 2. 1-9 Jaimini declares that though the surā offered in Sautrāmaṇi is spoken of as soma and though several actions such as purchase of surā, tying in cloth are common to surā and soma, the general procedure to be followed in Sautrāmaṇi is that of darśapūrṇamāsa and not of soma sacrifice and that surā is spoken of as soma by way of lauding the offering of wine cups.²⁶⁶⁵

Aśvamedha (Horse-sacrifice).

This is one of the most ancient sacrifices. Rg. I. 162 and 163 show that the horse-sacrifice was in vogue long before the composition of those two hymns. It was believed, as said above 2664 a संश्रवसे विश्रवसे सत्यश्रवसे श्रवस इति सर्वे निधनमुपयन्ति । संजित्यै विजित्यै सत्यजित्यै जित्या इति सत्रियस्य । संपुष्ट्यै विपुष्ट्यै सत्यपुष्ट्यै पुष्ट्या इति वैश्यस्य । कात्यायन XIX. 5. 3-5; vide Lāt. V. 4. 19 for a similar rule.

(on p. 982), by the composer of those hymns that the horse when sacrificed went to heaven. A goat was led in front of the horse (Rg. I. 162. 2-3 and I. 163. 12). The horse was decked with ornaments, it was anointed with the svaru (I. 162. 9) and it perambulated fire thrice or fire was carried round it thrice (I. 162. 4); cloth and a piece of gold are provided for the dead body of the horse to lie down upon (I. 162. 16). Horse's flesh was cooked in a pot called ukhā (I. 162. 13) and offered in fire (I. 162. 19); 34 ribs are mentioned in Rg. I. 162. 18, while 26 ribs are mentioned in other texts with reference to the goat. It appears that āgūḥ, yājyā and vaṣaṭkāra were uttered in making offerings of the horse's flesh (Rg. I. 162. 15). The horse is identified with Āditya, Trita and Yama (Rg. I. 163. 3).

This rite is described in the Śat. Br. XIII. 1-5, Tai. Br. III. 8-9, in which several ancient monarchs are enumerated who performed the Aśvamedha. The Tai. Br. III. 8. 9 identifies the Aśvamedha with the kingdom²⁶⁶⁶ and states 'he, who being weak, offers an Aśvamedha, is indeed thrown away (lit. spilt away). If the enemies (of the king) were to secure the horse, the sacrifice would be destroyed'. The sūtras closely follow the Brāhmaṇas. The Aśvamedha is deemed in the sūtras to be an ahina of three pressing days (Āśv. X. 8. 1, com. on Kāt. XX. 1. 1., Śān. XVI. 1. 2). A paramount sovereign (sārvabhauma) or a crowned king who is not a sārvabhauma may perform this sacrifice (Āp. XX. 1. 1, Lāt. IX. 10. 17). Āśv. X. 6. 1 states (probably following the Ait. Br. about the Mahābhiṣeka in Rājasūya) that one who desires to secure all objects, to win all victories (including one over his own senses) and to attain all prosperity may perform Aśvamedha.²⁶⁶⁷ A beginning is made on the 8th or 9th of the bright half of Phālguna or on the same days of Jyestha or

The words from साम्राज्यं to एकराजिति are quite familiar to all brāhmaṇas even in modern times.

Asādhā according to some (Kāt. XX. 1. 2-3, Lāt. IX. 9. 6-7). Āp. holds that it should be begun on the Full Moon of Caitra (XX. 1. 4). Rice from four vessels, four añjalis and four handfuls is cooked (it is called brahmaudana); it is smeared with ghee and given to the four principal priests who are also given one thousand cows each and gold weighing one hundred berries (Kāt. XX. 1. 4-6, Lāt. IX. 9. 8). Two iṣṭis are performed, the first for Agni Mūrdhanvan and the 2nd for Pūṣan (Āśv. X. 6. 2-5, Kāt. XX. 1. 25). The yajamāna cuts off his hair, pares his nails, brushes the teeth, bathes, puts on new garments, wears a golden ornament (niṣka), observes silence. Vide Tai. Br. III. 8. 1 and Āp. XX. 4. 9-14 for these. His four queens well-decked and wearing niṣkas come near the king, the crowned queen accompanied by princesses, the 2nd queen (vāvāta, the favourite one) accompanied by daughters of kṣatriyas, the third (parivṛkti, the discarded one) accompanied by daughters of sūtas and village headmen and the fourth (pālā-gall, of low origin) accompanied by daughters of kṣattris (chamberlains) and saṁgrahitṛs.²⁶⁶⁸ The yajamāna enters the fire-hall and sits to the west of the gārhapatya facing the north.

Various rules are stated about the horse's colour and other qualities (Śat. Br. XIII. 4. 2. 4, Kāt. XX. 1. 29-35, Lāt. IX. 9. 4). The horse must be all white with dark circular spots and of great speed, or the front part of its body may be dark and the rest of the body white, or it may have a tuft of dark blue hair. The horse is sprinkled with holy water by the four principal priests standing in the four directions (from the east), each surrounded respectively by a hundred princes, a hundred ugras who are not kings, by sūtas and village headmen, and by chamberlains and saṁgrahitṛs (Āp. XX. 4, Sat. XIV. 1. 31). A dog with four eyes (i.e. having two natural eyes and two depressions in the skin above the eyes) is killed by a man of the āyogava caste or by a voluptuary with the pestle of sidhraka wood. The horse is made to enter water and the corpse of the dog is with a loop of reeds made to float under the horse (Āp. XX. 3. 6-13, Kāt. XX. 1. 38 ff., Sat. XIV. 1. 30-34). The horse is brought near the fire and offerings are made in the fire till the water ceases to drip down from the horse's body (Kāt. XX. 2. 3-5). A girdle made of muñja grass or of darbhas 12 or 13 aratnis long and smeared with the ājya that remains after being poured over the brahmaudana is invoked with the mantra 'imām—agr̥bh̥ṇan raśanām ṛtasya' (Tai. S. IV. I. 2. 1, Vāj. S. 22. 2) and the horse is bound with it after taking the permission of the brahmā priest. The horse, having water sprinkled over it with mantras and after the sacrificer repeats into its right ear the several appellations for a horse (Āp. XX. 5. 1-9), is let off to roam over the country accompanied by four hundred guards with the mantra 'O gods, the guardians of quarters, protect this horse &c.' (Vāj. S. XXII. 19, Tai. S. VII. 1. 12. 1). The guards include one hundred princes deserving to be seated on couches in the presence of the king, wearing armour and the other guards are armed with swords, arrows and thick clubs according to their rank (Tai. Br. III. 8. 9, Āp. XX. 5. 10-14, Kāt. XX. 2. 11). The horse is allowed to roam for a year where it likes and is not made to turn back, but it is prevented from associating with mares or plunging into water for a bath (Kāt. XX. 2. 12-13). While doing their duty of guarding the horse, the guards are to subsist by demanding food from brāhmaṇas who do not know the procedure of Aśvamedha (or depriving them of it) or on cooked food taken from all brāhmaṇas; they may stay in the houses of chariot-makers (Āp. XX. 5. 15-18, Kāt. XX. 2. 15-16). Every day during the year that the horse is absent, three iṣṭis are offered to Savitṛ in the morning, mid-day and evening, when Savitṛ is respectively addressed as Satyaprasava, Prasavitṛ and Āsavitṛ (Āśv. X. 6. 8, Lāt. IX. 9. 10, Kāt. XX. 2. 6). When the prayāja offerings are made a brāhmaṇa (other than the priests) with a vīṇā chants three laudatory gāthās in honour of the king composed by himself stating 'you donated this, you performed such and such a sacrifice, you cooked food for distribution' (Āp. XX. 6. 5, Kāt. XX. 2. 7). This singing took place thrice a day after the iṣṭi to Savitṛ (Śat. Br. XIII. 4. 2. 8-14, Tai. Br. III. 9. 14). A kṣatriya lute player also sang three laudatory songs (Śat. Br. XIII. 1. 5. 6, Āp. XX. 6. 14) referring to the battles fought and victories won by the sacrificer. Every day for a year after the iṣṭi to Savitṛ is finished the hotṛ sitting on a golden cushion to the south of the āhavanīya fire recites to the crowned king surrounded by his sons and ministers the narratives called 'Pāriplava' (revolving or recurring legends). When about to commence the Pāriplava the hotṛ makes the summons 'adhvaryo3' and the adhvaryu seated on a golden seat (with four legs) responds with 'ho hotar' (Āśv. X. 6. 10-13).²⁶⁶⁹ The other priests also sit down on cushions or boards and bands of singers holding lutes sit down to the south and sing of the good deeds of the king along with those of his ancestors (Āp. XX. 6. 13). As the king is thus engaged in sacrifices and in listening to the Pāriplava²⁶⁷⁰ and to the songs, Āp. (XX. 3. 1-2) notes that, till the Aśvamedha is performed, the adhvaryu becomes the king, as the sacrificer (the crowned king) declares 'O brāhmanas and nobles ! this adhvaryu is your king. Whatever honour you (usually pay to me) should be paid to him. May whatever he does be regarded as done by you.' Āśv. (X. 7. 1-10) sets out what the Pāriplava is. Śat. Br. XIII. 4. 3 and Śān. XVI. 2 also deal at length with the Pāriplava and they agree with Āśv. in most places. For ten days one after another different texts are recited and this goes on for a year in narrative cycles of ten days. On the first day the hotṛ says 'Manu was the son of Vivasvat, men are his subjects' and points at the house-holders sitting down in the sacrificial hall with 'they (men as subjects of Manu) are here sitting down' and then recites some one hymn of the Rgveda saying 'to-day the Veda is that of ṛks.' On the second day he says 'Yama is the son of Vivasvat, the pitṛs are his subjects' and points to the old men assembled and recites one anuvāka from the Yajurveda. On the 3rd day Varuṇa and the gandharvas (as his subjects identified with fine looking young men) are mentioned and some hymn from the Atharva-veda dealing with diseases and their cure was narrated. On the 4th day the narration relates to Soma, son of Viṣṇu and Apsarases (identified with beautiful young women), and some

XX. 6. 11-12; 'हवै होतरिति प्रतिगृणाति।' कात्या. XX. 3. 2; होयि होतरिति सर्वत्र प्रतिगृणाति। शाङ्ख्यायन 16. 1. 27. Āp. (XX.6.7) says that Pāriplava and Bhauvanyava are recited every day for a year.

IV. 1. 1 and of Yājñavalkya and his wives in Br. Up. IV 5. 1) in the Upaniṣads are not meant to be recited in the Pāriplava, since only certain legends alone are specified in the texts for that purpose.

hymn containing magic spells from the Āṅgīrasa Veda ; on the 5th the narration relates to Arbuda Kādraveya and serpents (identified with visitors who know serpent lore and poison lore); on the 6th day to Kubera Vaiśravaṇa, his subjects the Rakṣases (identified with evil doing selagas and the lore of Piśāca Veda (?). On the 7th the narration relates to Asita Dhānvanā, his subjects the Asuras and usurers and some illusion (a trick) from Asura lore, on the 8th day to Matsya Sāmada, his subjects aquatic animals, Puñjiṣṭhas (fishermen) from Matsya country and some Purāṇa passage from the Purāṇa-veda, on the 9th to Tārksya, son of Vipāścīt, his subjects the birds and brahma-cārins and some narrative (itihāsa) from the itihāśaveda ; on the 10th day Dharma Indra, his subjects the gods and the young śrotrīyas who accept no gifts, and some sāmān from the Sāmaveda. Every day for a year in the evening four oblations called Dhṛti were made in the āhavanīya (Kāt. XX. 3. 4). On the first day 49 homas called Prakramas were made in the dakṣiṇa fire with Vāj. S. XXII. 7-8 (beginning with 'himkārya svāhā'). Vide Śat. Br. XIII. 1. 3. 5, Tai. S. VII. 1. 19. In this way the Sāvitrī iṣṭis, singing, listening to Pāriplava and Dhṛti offerings went on for a year. For a year the sacrificer kept observances as in the Rājasūya (Lāt. IX. 9. 14). Large fees were given to the hotṛ and adhvaryu (Lāt. IX. 9. 12-13 and 16) and to the singers (Kāt. XX. 3. 7).

Several expiatory ceremonies are prescribed (Āp. XXII. 7. 9-20, Kāt. XX. 3. 13-21) if the horse died or suffered from disease. If the horse was carried away by an enemy the sacrifice was destroyed. At the end of the year the horse was brought to a stable and the sacrificer underwent dikṣā (initiation). There were 12 dikṣās, 12 upasads and three sutyā days (days on which soma was pressed). Vide Śat. Br. XIII. 4. 4. 1, Āśv. X. 8. 1, Lāt. IX. 9. 17. After the dikṣā the sacrificer is sung as on a par with the gods and on the pressing days, at the time of avabhṛtha, the udayanīyā iṣṭi, the anubandhyā and the udava-sānīyā he is spoken of as on a par with Prajāpati.²⁶⁷¹ There are 21 yūpas (stakes) all being 21 aratnis high. The central one is of Rājjudāla (śleṣmātaka) tree. On its two sides are two pine yūpas and on both sides thereafter there are three yūpas each of bilva, khadira and palāśa (Tai. Br. III. 8. 9, Śat. Br. XIII. 4. 4. 5, Āp. XX. 9. 6-8, Kāt. XX. 4. 16-20). Large numbers of animals are tied at all these stakes and slaughtered. Even wild animals like boars and birds are bound and held between the intervals of the yūpas (Āp. XX. 14. 2 ff.). Vide Vāj. S. XXIV for a list of hundreds of animals out of which those from Kapiñjala onwards (Vāj. S. XXIV. 20 ff.) are let off after fire is carried round them (Kāt. XX. 6. 9, Āp. XX. 17. 5). The 2nd among the three pressing days is the most important and is full of several very striking matters (such as the ribald dialogue, the brahmodya &c.). The horse to be sacrificed is yoked to a chariot along with three horses, the adhvaryu and sacrificer occupy the chariot and take it to a lake or reservoir of water, make the horses enter it (Kāt. XX. 5. 11-14). On the horse's return to the sacrificial ground it is anointed with clarified butter by the crowned queen, the favourite queen and the discarded queen in the front, the middle and hind parts of its body respectively. They also respectively tie 101 golden beads on the head, mane and tail of the horse with bhūḥ, bhuvah and svaḥ. They give the remnants of the previous night's offering to the horse with Vāj. S. XXIII. 8. If it does not eat it the remnants are cast into water. Near the yūpa a dialogue takes place between the hotṛ who asks 'who wanders alone' (Vāj. S. XXIII. 9) and 'who was the first to be thought of' (Vāj. S. XXIII. 11) and the brahmā replies with Vāj. S. XXIII. 10 and 12 respectively. The horse is praised by repeating Rg. I. 163 (Āśv. X. 8. 5). A piece of cloth is spread over grass, thereon a mantle is spread and a gold piece is placed thereon and the horse is killed thereon. Before the words 'adhrigo śamīdhvam' in the adhrigu praiṣa Rg. I. 162 and Rg. I. 163. 12-13 are to be recited. When the horse is killed, the wives of the king go round it thrice from left to right with 'gaṇānām tvā', thrice from right to left with 'priyānām tvā' and again thrice from left with 'nidhīnām tvā' (all in Vāj. S. XXIII. 19). They fan the dead horse with their garments while braiding their hair on the right side upwards loosening the hair on the left side and strike their left thighs with their right hands (Āp. XXII. 17. 13, Āśv. X. 8. 8). The crowned queen lies down by the side of the dead horse and both are covered by the adhvaryu with the mantle on which the horse lies and she unites with it (Āp. XXII. 18. 3-4, Kāt. XX. 6. 15-16). Then according to Āśv. X. 8. 10-13 outside the vedi the hotṛ abuses the crowned queen in obscene language and she returns the abuse along with her one hundred attendant princesses and the brahmā priest and the favourite wife enter into a similar obscene abuse. According to Kāt. XX. 6. 18 the four principal priests and the chamberlain enter into an obscene abusive dialogue (given in Vāj. S. XXIII. 22-31) with the queens along with their young female attendants. Vide Śat. Br. XIII. 2. 9 and Lāt. IX. 10. 3-6. The attendant princesses raise the crowned queen from near the horse with 'dadhikrāvno' (Rg. IV. 39. 6 = Vāj. S. XXIII. 32). The horse is cut up with golden, silver and iron (lauhi may mean copper) needles by the crowned queen, the favourite queen and the discarded one with Vāj. S. XXIII. 33-38. They take out the fat of the dead horse in place of the omentum taken from the goat in other sacrifices (Āp. XXII. 18. 10-11, Kāt. XX. 7. 7). The blood of the horse is cooked and offered at the end of the other offerings to sviṣṭakṛt (Āp. XXII. 19. 10 and Kāt. XX. 8. 8). Before the omentum of the animals meant for Prajāpati is offered there is brahmodya (a theological dialogue, where questions and riddles are propounded and answers given) between the priests in the sadas. According to Āśv. X. 9. 2-3 at first the hotṛ asks the adhvaryu 'who roams alone &c.' (Vāj. S. 23. 45) and the adhvaryu replies 'the sun roams alone &c.' (Vāj. S. 23. 46). Then the hotṛ again asks 'what light is like the sun's &c.' (Vāj. S. 23. 47) and the adhvaryu replies 'truth is light equal to the sun &c.' (Vāj. S. 23. 48, which however reads 'brahma sūryasamam'). Then the brahmā priest asks udgātṛ and he replies (Vāj. S. 23. 49-50), then the udgātṛ asks a question and the brahmā replies (Vāj. S. 23. 51-52). Then the four priests come out and each asks the sacrificer who sits facing the east the question 'I ask you the furthest limit of the earth &c.' (Rg. I. 164. 34) and the sacrificer replies 'this vedi is the furthest limit' (Rg. I. 164. 35). Vide Lāt. IX. 10. 9-14 for almost the same questions and answers.²⁶⁷² Kāt. (XX. 7. 10-15) mentions Vāj. S. XXIII. 49-62 as the dialogue that takes place at this stage in the Aśvamedha and states that Rg. I. 164. 34 (= Vāj. S. XXIII. 61) is the question propounded by the sacrificer (and not by the priests as Āśv. says). Two grahas called Mahiman are offered, one before the omentum is 2672. In several sacrifices such riddles were mooted; vide Āśv. VIII. 13. 14 for one in Daśarātra which is taken from Ait. Br. 24. 6, and Śat. Br. IV. 6. 9. 20; vide Tai. S. VII. 4. 18, Tai. Br. III. 9. 5 for brahmodya and Rg. X. 88. 18 and VIII. 58. 1-2 for questions and answers.

offered and the other after it (Śat. Br. XIII. 5. 2. 23 referring to Vāj. S. XXIII. 2, Āśv. X. 9. 4, Kāt. XX. 7. 16-17 and 27). Offerings of the vapā of all animals are made to the several deities of whom Prajāpati is the last. Then the king sits on a lion's or tiger's skin, a piece of gold is placed on his head with Rg. I. 90. 1, a bull-hide is held over his head, he is sprinkled with the remnants (saṁsrāva) of the offerings called mahiman and offerings are made to the twelve months, Madhu, Mādhava &c. and seasons Vasanta &c. After the several offerings, on the third pressing day, the sacrificer performs the final purificatory bath. At the end of the avabhṛtha iṣṭi, on the head of a bald man, ²⁶⁷³ whose eye-balls are yellowish-brown, who has prominent teeth, who is suffering from white leprosy and who dips into water, an offering is made (three according to Āp. XX. 22. 6) with the words 'to Jumbaka, svāhā' (Vāj. S. XXV. 9). Vide Kāt. XX. 8. 16, Śān. XVI. 18. 18 and Sat. XIV. 5. 4. The latter add two important details, viz. that the man should be of the Atri gotra and that he should enter such deep water that it should flood his mouth. The Tai. Br. III. 9. 15 says that the āhuti 'to Jumbaka, svāhā' is the last in Āśvamedha and that Jumbaka means Varuṇa. A hundred cows and a cart to which bulls are yoked are given to him. When the sacrificer comes out of the water after avabhṛtha persons guilty of such grave sins as brāhmaṇa murder plunge into that water and become purified without having performed the penances prescribed for such sins (Kāt. XX. 8. 17-18).²⁶⁷⁴

Apart from the gifts provided for many of the subordinate rites performed in the Āśvamedha, Lāt. (IX. 10. 15—IX. 11. 4) prescribes that on the first and last of the three soma pressing days he should donate a thousand cows and on the second day he should donate all the wealth that belongs to the non-brāhmaṇa residents in one district (janapada) out of his realm,

2674. Vide note 333 above where Tai. S. (V. 3. 12. 1-2) is cited viz. तरति ब्रह्महत्यां योश्चमेधेन यजते; Śat. Br. XIII. 3. 1. 1 has the same words. According to Gaut. 22.9, Āp. Dh. S. I. 9. 24. 22 and Manu IX. 82-83 if the murderer of a brāhmaṇa, after declaring his crime, bathed in water in which the king took his final avabhṛtha bath, he would be free from that sin. Prof. Eggeling (S.B.E. vol. 44 p. XL. note 1) does not advert to the fact that expiation for brāhmaṇa murder was thus prescribed by the dharmaśāstras.

or he should donate to the hotṛ the wealth in the eastern part of the country conquered by him and the wealth in the southern, western and northern parts respectively to the brahmā, adhvaryu and udgātṛ and their assistants or he should at least donate 48,000 cows to each of the four principal priests, 24000, 12000, 6000 to each of the four groups of three assistants of the principal priests in order. Āśv. X. 10. 10 also says that he should donate the wealth of non-brāhmaṇas in the four conquered quarters except land and human beings. Kāt. (XX. 4. 27-28) contains similar rules.

Even in ancient times this sacrifice must have been rare. The Tai. S. V. 4. 12. 3 and Śat. Br. XIII. 3. 3. 6 both state that the Aśvamedha was a sacrifice which was utsanna (gone out of vogue). The Atharvaveda (XI. 7. 7-8) also appears to regard the Rājasūya, Vājapeya, Aśvamedha, the sattras and several other sacrifices as utsanna. The origin of the rite is obscure. In it several popular, religious and symbolical elements are inextricably blended and some rites like the queen lying down near the dead horse must be regarded as unaccountable survivals from the hoary past. Various theories have been advanced to account for the origin, but there is, as is to be expected, no agreement among scholars. Vide S. B. E. vol. 44. pp. XVIII-XXXIII, Prof. Keith's Introduction to Tai. S. pp. CXXXII ff. and 'Religion and Philosophy of the Veda' part 2 pp. 345-347 for the several theories of European scholars.

In the Āśvamedhika parva of the Mahābhārata Aśvamedha is described at some length. It is probable that in the epic only the popular elements and a few of the religious rites were emphasized. In chap. 71. 16 Vyāsa tells Yudhiṣṭhira that the Aśvamedha purifies a person of all sins.²⁶⁷⁵ The dīkṣā took place on the full moon of Caitra (72. 4). The sphyā, kūrcas and utensils were made of or inlaid with gold (72. 9-10). The greatest warrior of the day, Arjuna, was appointed to guard the horse during its rambles for a year, and he was asked to avoid battle and carnage as far as possible (72. 23-24). The horse was kṛspasāra (marked with dark spots, 73. 8). Arjuna was accompanied by a pupil of Yājñavalkya and many learned brāhmaṇas (73. 18) for the performance of propitiatory rites (śānti). No indication is given as to the number of soldiers that accompanied Arjuna. The horse is said to have wandered over the whole of India from east to south, then west to north. After many fights with opponents Arjuna meets death at the hands of his son Babhruvāhana, king of Manipura, whom he upbraided for meek submission, but is brought back to life by his wife Ulūpi, the Nāga princess (chap. 80). Arjuna spares the lives of the opponents whom he vanquishes and invites them to the sacrifice. The description of the sacrifice follows the general outline given above. But there is hardly any detailed or graphic description of the special features of Aśvamedha and one rather carries the impression that the author does not depict what he has seen but only what he has heard or read. The pravargya (88. 21) and the pressing of soma are mentioned (88. 22). There were six yūpas of bilva, 6 of khadira, two of devadāru and one of śleṣmātaka (88. 27-28). Bull's heads and aquatic animals were built into the fire altar (88. 34). Draupadi was made to lie by the dead horse (89. 2-3). There are several points of difference. The altar is shaped like a Garuḍa (88. 32), the bricks were of gold, and 300 animals were sacrificed. It is said that the vapā of the horse was offered (89. 3), while Āp. (XX. 18. 11) emphatically states that there is no vapā in the case of the horse. Great emphasis is laid on the huge masses of food distributed to all, on the drinking bouts and singing parties and the feeding of the poor and helpless (88. 23, 89. 39-43). Crores of niṣkas were donated to brāhmaṇas and the whole earth to Vyāsa (89. 8-10) who returned it to Yudhiṣṭhira for gold to be given to him and to brāhmaṇas. The Bālakāṇḍa of Rāmāyaṇa (chap. 13-14) contains a more graphic description of the Aśvamedha performed by Daśaratha for securing sons. It expressly refers to the Kalpasūtra (tryahośśvamedhaḥ saṁkhyātāḥ kalpasūtreṇa brāhmaṇaiḥ).

In I. A. vol. VIII. p. 273 (at p. 278) we find that a general, called Udayacandra, of Nandivarma Pallavamalla (about the 9th century A. D.) defeated Pṛthivīvyāghra, king of Nisadha, who had accompanied the horse in his horse sacrifice. In E. C. vol. X. Kolar No. 63 it is stated in an inscription of 757 A. D. that the Cālukya emperor Pulakeśi was purified by his bath at an Aśvamedha. In the very ancient Nanaghat Inscription (A. S. W. I. vol. V. pp. 60-61) an Andhra king²⁶⁷⁶ is described as 2676. In the Bhāgavata-purāṇa XII. 1. 20 the founder of the Andhras is said to have been a viṣala and the Matsya (141. 43) says that śūdra kings will perform Aśvamedha in the Kali age.

having performed the Rājasūya, two Āśvamedhas, Gargatirātra, Gavāmayana and Āngirasām-ayana.²⁶⁷⁷ In the first half of the 18th century Savaī Jayasing, king of Amber, performed an Āśvamedha (vide Īśvaravilāsakāvya of Kṛṣṇa-kavi, D. C. Ms No. 273 of 1884-86 and 'Poona Orientalist,' vol. II. pp. 166-180).

Sattra

It was shown above (pp. 1213-1214) that the Dvādaśāha sacrifice partook of the characteristics of both ahina and a sattra and a few points of difference between the two were also set out there. Sattras are sacrificial sessions, the duration of which varies from 12 days to a year or more. Their archetype (prakṛti) is the Dvādaśāha (Āśv. XI. 1. 7). Sattras again may for convenience be divided into those called Rātrisattras and those called Sāmvatsarika (carried on for a year or more). Āśv. (XI. 1. 8-XI. 6. 16) and Kāt. (XXIV. 1-3) speak of numerous Rātrisattras called Trayodaśarātra and so on up to Śatarātra, state the principles on which these sattras are evolved from the Dvādaśāha, the model, and set out the schemes of all of them. If only one day has to be added then it is the Mahāvratā that is added before the last day called Udayaniya. If two or more days are required to be added then they are added before the Daśarātra (that forms the central part of the Dvādaśāha and comes after the Prāyaṇiya day). In the case of Rātrisattras of many days' duration ṣaḍahas are added (Kāt. XXIV. 1. 5-7, Āśv. XI. 1. 8-14); the Daśarātra is never repeated but is only one in the same sattra (Kāt. XXIV. 3. 34). For want of space all the Rātrisattras will be passed over. The Gavām-ayana²⁶⁷⁸ (lit. the course or way of the cows i. e. the sun's rays or days) is the model of all Sāmvatsarika sattras (Āśv. XI. 7. 1 and com., Jai. VIII. 1. 8, Kāt. XXIV. 4. 2). Several sattras of the duration of one year or more are mentioned in the sūtra texts such as Ādityānām-ayana (Āśv. XII. 1. 1), Āngirasām-ayana

Kuṇḍapāyinām-ayana (Āśv. XII. 4. 1), Sarpānām-ayana, Traivāṛṣika (one for three years), Dvādaśavāṛṣika, Ṣaṭ-trimśadvāṛṣika, Śatasāmivatsara for sādhyas (Āśv. XII. 5. 18) and Sahasrasāmivatsara, Sārasvata (performed on the holy Sarasvatī river). A few words will be said only about the Gavām-ayana.

Gavām-ayana which is a Sāmivatsarika sattra (extending over 12 months of 30 days each) consists of the following parts (Tāṇḍya XXIV. 20. 1, Āśv. XI. 1. 2-6 and 7. 2-12, Sat. XVI. 5. 18-40, Āp. XXI. 15 ff.):

A. Prāyaṇīya Atirātra (opening day)

Caturviṃśa day, an Ukthya

Five months, each consisting of four Abhiplava ṣaḍahas and one Prṣṭhya ṣaḍaha (i.e. each month of 30 days).

Three Abhiplavas and one Prṣṭhya	} 28 days.
Abhijit day (Agniṣṭoma)
Three Svarasāman days.

All these together come to six months of 30 days each.

B. The Viṣuvat²⁶⁷⁹ or central day (which is Ekaviṃśastoma) on which an Atigrāhya Soma cup is offered to the sun and also a victim.

C. Three Svarasāman days (on which sāmans called Svara are chanted, Tāṇḍya IV. 5)	} 28 days.
Viśvajit day (Agniṣṭoma)
One Prṣṭhya and three Abhiplava ṣaḍahas

Four months, each consisting of one Prṣṭhya in the beginning and four Abhiplava ṣaḍahas

Three Abhiplava ṣaḍahas	} 30 days.
One Goṣṭoma (Agniṣṭoma)
One Āyuṣṭoma (Ukthya)
One Daśarātra (ten days)
Mahāvratā day (Agniṣṭoma)
Udayanīya (Atirātra).

All these in C come to six months.

2679. The Viṣuvat day is like the central ridge of a shed from which on two sides two thatches spread slantingly downwards. In order to imitate the Sun's passage to the north and south, the arrangement shown in A is reversed in C. अथ विषुवानेकविंशः । न पूर्वस्य पक्षसो नोत्तरस्य । आश्व. XI. 7. 7-8. For a description of Chandomas vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 347 n.

The Gavām-ayana was performed for various rewards viz. progeny, prosperity, plenty (or greatness), high position, heaven (Āp. XXI. 15. 1, Sat. XVI. 5. 14). About the day on which dīkṣā (initiation) for it took place there were several views. The Ait. Br. (19. 4) prescribes that it should be done either in Māgha or Phālguna. Some (Sat. XVI. 5. 16-17, Āp. XXI. 15. 5-6) said that dīkṣā took place four days before the Full Moon of Māgha or Caitra. Vide Lāṭ. X. 5. 18-19, Kāt. XIII. 1. 2-10 for the several days. Jai. VI. 5. 30-37 and Kāt. XIII. 1. 8 favour the view that the dīkṣā should be undertaken four days before the Full Moon day of Māgha (i. e. on ekādaśī day) since the Vedic texts prescribe the Ekāṣṭakā day of Māgha (i. e. 8th of dark half) for the purpose of soma (after 12 days of dīkṣā). In the Gavām-ayana the procedure of the Dvādasāha as a sattra is to be followed (Āp. XXI. 15. 2-3, Jai. VIII. 1. 17), but some held that in Gavām-ayana there were to be 17 dīkṣās (instead of 12). There are certain general rules about sattras which may be stated here. They are to be performed by many as sacrificers and only brāhmaṇas can perform them (Jai. VI. 6. 16-23, Kāt. I. 6. 14). There are no separate priests (ṛtvij), but the yajamānas themselves are the priests (Jai. X. 6. 45-50 and 51-59, Sat. XVI. 1. 21). A text quoted by Śabara on Jai. VI. 2. 1 says that the persons who engage together in a sattra must be at least 17 and not more than 24 and each of the performers secures the same unseen (or spiritual) reward for which the sattra is performed (Jai. VI. 2. 1-2). There is therefore no varāṇa (choosing) of priests and there is no question of remunerating them for their services by several gifts as in Jyotiṣṭoma (Jai. X. 2. 34-38). At the time when gifts are made in other rites, in sattras the sacrificers perform the Dākṣiṇa homas and waving their dark antelope skins they go out with their faces turned northwards by the path by which dakṣiṇas are taken away in other rites (Sat. XVI. 2. 19, Kāt. XII. 2. 18). As no dakṣiṇas are to be donated in sattras agents (called sanhāras) are not to be sent for collecting subscriptions (Sat. XVI. 1. 40). The sacrificial utensils (yajñapātras like juhū) to be used in the sattra are specially got prepared for the common use of all, while each keeps his own utensils separate with which he is cremated if he dies in the midst of the performance (Jai. VI. 6. 33-35). Though the general rule is that there is no pratinidhi (substitute) for the performer of rites like agnihotra, the sattra is an exception, since if any one of the many performers dies in the midst of a sattra another person may be substituted by the others in his place (Jai. VI. 3. 22), but he is only an agent secured by payment and the spiritual unseen reward of the sacrifice goes to the performer that is dead (Jai. VI. 3. 23-25). The Tāṇḍya Br. IX. 8. 1 states that if one of the performers of a sattra dies after dikṣā, he should be cremated, his bones should be tied in his antelope-skin and placed beyond the mārjāliya shed and his son or other very near relative should be given dikṣā and be associated in the sattra. Only those who have consecrated the three Vedic fires can engage in sattras except in the Sārasvata sattra (Jai. VI. 6. 27-32). According to Jai. (VI. 6. 1-11) only those who follow the same procedure can join in the sattra, otherwise difficulty is caused in the case of the Prayājas and the Āpri verses. The second prayāja deity in the case of Vasiṣṭhas and Śunakas is Narāsaṁsa, while Tanūnapāt is the second prayāja deity in the case of other gotras. After stating the view of Gāṇagāri that only those who have the same gotra can join in a sattra, Āśv. (XII. 10. 2-3) states the view of Śaunaka (and it is his view also) that even persons of different gotras may join in a sattra, that where in a particular matter there is a difference of procedure in accordance with the difference of gotra, the procedure should be regulated by the gotra of one (called gr̥hapati) of those who join in the sattra. Jai. (VI. 6. 24-26) states the somewhat striking rule that even among brāhmaṇas those who belong to the Bṛghu, Vasiṣṭha and Śunaka gotras cannot join in a sattra but only those who belong to the Viśvāmitra gotra or who have a similar procedure (about prayājas &c.), since śruti requires that the function of hotṛ in a sattra must be performed by one belonging to Viśvāmitra gotra. If after making a resolve to join in a sattra or if after just beginning a sattra a man gives up the idea, he had to perform by way of penance the Viśvajit rite (Jai. VI. 4. 32 and VI. 5. 25-27).

Though in a sattra all are yajamānas yet one of them becomes the gr̥hapati; those actions which only one can perform and which are done in other sacrifices by the yajamāna (except what are saṁskāras like vapana) are here done by the gr̥hapati alone and others only touch him (e. g. in tying the veda or placing a fuel-stick on fire, Kāt. XII. 1. 9-15). In performing dikṣā a peculiar procedure is followed (Kāt. XII. 2. 15, Sat. XVI. 1. 36, Āp. XXI. 2. 16-XXI. 3. 1). The adhvaryu first gives dikṣā to the gr̥hapati and to brahmā, hotṛ and udgātṛ; the pratiprasthātṛ gives dikṣā to adhvaryu, then to maitrāvaruṇa, brāhmaṇācchaṁsin and prastotr; the neṣṭr gives dikṣā to the pratiprasthātṛ and the acchāvāka, āgnīdhra and pratiharṭṛ; the unnetṛ gives dikṣā to neṣṭr, the grāvastut, and subrahmanya and lastly the pratiprasthātṛ or another brāhmaṇa (who is himself a dikṣita) or a Veda student or snātaka gives dikṣā to unnetṛ. Each of the wives of all these is given dikṣā along with her husband (Kāt. XII. 2. 16). Every day one of those who join in a sattra guards soma silently and others are allowed to study their Veda and to fetch fuel-sticks (Śat. Br. IV. 6. 9. 7, Kāt. XII. 4. 1 and 3). On the tenth day there is brahmodya²⁶⁸⁰ as in Āśvamedha or they engage in the abuse of Prajāpati for having created such pests as bees and wasps and thieves (Āp. XXI. 12. 1-3, Śat. XVI. 4. 33-35, Kāt. XII. 4. 21-23).

While engaged in the sattra the performers have to observe certain rules (Āśv. XII. 8, Drāhyāyana Śr. VII. 3-9 ff). From the day the dikṣaṇiṃyā istī is performed in the sattra, the usual duties to pitṛs (such as pīṇḍapitṛ-yajña), to gods (such as Agnihotra) are stopped till the end of the sattra. They have to give up sexual intercourse and must not run, they should laugh covering their teeth (so as not to show them), should not jest with women, should not speak to those who are not āryas, should not plunge in deep water, should give up falsehood and anger, should not climb up trees or enter a boat or chariot. Rules are laid down as to whom to bow to. A sattrin should eschew singing, dancing and instrumental music. While dikṣās are going on he should subsist on milk. On pressing days he should partake of the remnants of havis only or of fruits and roots and other food fit for vrata.

One of the most interesting day is the Mahāvratā, which is the last day but one in a sattra. Several strange and bizarre rites are performed on this day. This day is so called because it is specially meant for Prajāpati who is 'mahān' and mahāvratā means 'anna' (Tāṇḍya IV. 10. 2, Śat. Br. IV. 6. 4. 2). In this a mahāvratīya cup of soma is offered in addition to the usual ones and a victim is slaughtered for Prajāpati. In connection with this cup a mahāvratā sāman is chanted followed by the recitation of the Mahad-uktha (great laudation) of the hotṛ. Vide Haug's tr. of Ait. Br. p. 283 n, S. B. E. vol. 43 pp. 282-283 note 5. The chanting of the Prṣṭhastotras is started by a brāhmaṇa who plays on a harp (vāṇa) with a hundred strings of muñja grass (Sat. XVI. 7. 7-9, Tāṇḍya V. 6. 12-13). During the chanting the udgātr priest sits on a chair of udumbara, the hotṛ on a swing, the adhvaryu on a board and the other priests on seats of grass (Tāṇḍya V. 5. 1-12). A brāhmaṇa in the front part of the sadas and a śūdra at the back alternately belaud and abuse those engaged in the sattra, the former saying they have done well and the latter saying they have not done well (Tāṇḍya V. 5. 13). An ārya and a śūdra engage to the west of the āgnīdhra shed in a contest for a white circular skin that symbolizes the sun (for whom the Gods and Asuras fought laying claim to the Sun as their own), the fight being so arranged that it culminates in favour of the ārya (Tāṇḍya V. 5. 14-17, Sat. XVI. 7. 28-32). A harlot and a brahmachārin abuse each other on the northern hip of the altar.

2680. The Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa (IV. 9. 12 and 14) speaks of both brahmodya and the parivādāna of Prajāpati 'ब्रह्मोयं वदन्ति ब्रह्मवर्चस एव प्रतिष्ठन्ति । प्रजापतिं परिवदन्त्याप्स्वैवेनं तद् व्याचक्षते तावदापामैनमिति ।'. The com. gives several explanations of both. द्वाह्यायणश्रौत (IX. 4. 16-18) says 'प्रजापतिं परिवदन्ति । पापैः कर्मभिरित्येके । अपि बाधवर्षवद्बृचानां किञ्चित् स्यात् ।'.

Sexual intercourse between a man and a woman (that are strangers to the sacrifice) takes place in a screened shed to the south of the mārjālīya shed (according to Kāt. XIII. 3. 9). This probably is a symbol for indicating creation of the world by Prajāpati to whom the mahāvratā specially appertains. A chariot is made ready to the east of the southern corner of the vedi. A noble or a ksatriya in full armour occupies it, armed with a bow and three arrows. He goes round the vedi thrice and discharges three arrows at a hide but not so as to pierce it through and through (Śān. XVII. 15).

They beat drums placed on all corners of the vedi and strike a bull-hide spread over a hole dug to the west of the āgnīdhriya shed, half inside the vedi and half outside (this is called 'bhūmi-dundubhi'). When the priests chant, the wives of the performers act as choristers²⁶⁸¹ to the singing priests (Jai. X. 4. 8, Sat. XVI. 6. 21, Āp. XXI. 17. 15-16) and play on several instruments. Eight servants and maids or slaves and slave girls, placing water jars on their heads dance thrice round the mārjālīya seat, striking the ground with their right feet and singing popular songs (gāthās) in which cows are lauded as mothers of ghee and which contain words like 'this is sweet' (Sat. XVI. 6. 39-41, Āp. XXI. 19. 17-20 and XXI. 20). These features of the mahāvratā show that it was some folk festival in the hoary past and was welded on to the solemn vedic sacrifices as a relaxation after the weary days and months of sacrifices. The Ait. Ār. (I and V) gives an esoteric turn to the mahāvratā. In one place it summarizes all the popular features of the Mahāvratā.²⁶³²

On the Udayaniya day three anubandhyā cows are offered to Mitrāvaruṇa, the Viśve Devas and Bṛhaspati (Kāt. XIII. 4. 4).

In the Indian Antiquary, vol. 41, Dr. Sham Sastry contributed a series of articles on the Vedic calendar in which he adduced weighty arguments for holding that the Gavāmayana was a symbolic representation of the efforts made to square up the Vedic lunar year with the solar year by adding intercalary days. It is somewhat remarkable and also indicative of the bias of most western scholars that while Prof. Keith in his work on the 'Religion and philosophy of the Veda' refers ad nauseam to all sorts of lucubrations by European scholars on the origins of the Vedic sacrifices, about rain spells and fertility rites and similar lore he does not condescend to notice the views of Dr. Sham Sastry or Mr. Tilak, which have far more probability than many of the learned hypotheses advanced by European scholars who appear to be obsessed by the notion that Vedic usages must be similar to practices found in the 19th century among the backward races of Africa, America and Oceania.

Though the sūtras speak of sattras for a hundred or a thousand years, there were writers even in ancient India who thought that such sattras did not exist in fact, at least in historical times. Patañjali states in his Mahābhāṣya that the sattras of a hundred or a thousand years were never attempted in times near to his day and that Yājñikas prescribe rules for them following the tradition of sages.²⁶⁸³ Jaimini also boldly asserts that when the texts²⁶⁸⁴ speak of Viśvasrjām-ayana for a thousand saṁvatsaras the word saṁvatsara means only a day (Jai. VI. 7. 31-40).

Among the other sattras the Sārasvata sattras are most instructive, since in them many places on the most sacred Sarasvatī and other rivers were approached by the sacrificers during the course of the sacrifice.²⁶⁸⁵ Vide Āśv. XII. 6., Lāt. X. 15 ff, Kāt. XXIV. 6. 14 ff.

Agnicayana (piling of the fire-altar)

The construction of the fire-altar is a special rite and is the most complicated and most recondite of all Śrauta sacrifices. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa devotes five out of its fourteen sections (about one-third of the whole work) to cayana and is the leading work on that subject. Prof. Eggeling in his very learned Introduction (pp. XIV ff) to vol. 43 of the S. B. E. deals with the fundamental conceptions underlying this śrauta ritual. According to him cayana was originally an independent rite and was later on incorporated in the system of Soma sacrifices. At the bottom of this rite are certain cosmogonic theories. Even in the Rgveda we meet with the conceptions that Hiranyagarbha or Prajāpati (Rg. X. 121) is the creator of the universe, that creation, destruction and re-construction of the universe are eternal, ever-recurring processes going on from all time and will go on for all time (Rg. X. 190. 3, 'dhātā yathāpūrvam-akalpayat'), that Puruṣa himself became the sacrificial material (havis) and the year and seasons aided in the process of the reconstruction of the sacrificed and dismembered Puruṣa. Man himself who is a child of this process must also do his part in the reconstruction of the world. This he can do best by identifying Fire with Prajāpati (as in Śat. Br. X. 4. 1. 12) and regarding Fire as the Highest Divinity and the source of all life and activity and the periodic performance of sacrifice in fire as his contribution, however small it may be, to the process of re-creation and re-construction. The re-construction of the world by Prajāpati a man can imitate by himself constructing an elaborate structure with bricks. The Śat. Br. in several places brings out these ideas, though in a somewhat esoteric way²⁶⁸⁶ (e. g. VI. 2. 2. 21). The tenth kāṇḍa (section) of the Śat. Br. is the rahasya (the esoteric doctrine) of cayana. Most of the acts done in the piling up of the altar are a symbolic representation of the process of re-creation and re-construction as will be seen later on. In the Śat. Br. the principal authority on this doctrine of cayana is not Yājñavalkya (who is the dominating figure in the first five sections of that Brāhmaṇa) but Śāṇḍilya who traces that doctrine through a succession of teachers to Tura Kāvaṣeya who received it from Prajāpati himself (Śat. Br. IX. 5. 2. 15-16, X. 4. 1. 11, X. 6. 5. 9 &c.).

A very brief description of the cayana based principally on Kāt., Śat., and Āp. is given below.

The construction of the fire-altar in five layers is an anga of Somayāga. But cayana is not obligatory in every soma sacrifice. It must however be performed in the Somayāga called Mahāvṛata (which as stated above is the last but one day in Gavām-ayana). When a man desires to pile the fire altar, he first offers after the Full Moon iṣṭi of Phālguna (i. e. on the first of the dark half) or on Māgha new moon five animals (viz. a man, a horse, a bull, a ram and a he-goat were offered, the man in a screened place).²⁶⁸⁷ The heads of the beasts were built up into the altar and their trunks were thrown in water, which was then used for making bricks from clay. Kāt. (XVI. 1. 32) allows an option that instead of killing animals golden or clay heads of these may be used. In modern times when rarely cayana is performed only golden images of the above five are taken. Then on the 8th of the dark half of Phālguna a horse, an ass and a he-goat are taken in procession 2687. It appears that the man was not actually killed, but was let off. He was to be a vaiśya or kṣatriya (Kāt. XVI. 1. 17). According to Band. X. 9 the heads of a vaiśya and of a horse killed in battle are taken 'संश्रमे हतयोरश्वस्य च वैश्यस्य च शिरसी । दीव्यन्त कषभं पचन्ते । वृष्णि च वस्ते चाहरन्ति । एतत्सर्पशिरः ।'. Vide Kāt. XVI. 1. 32 also.

to the south of the āhavanīya fire (the horse leading) with their mouths to the east and the place from where clay is to be taken is reached by the horse. To the east of the āhavanīya a square pit is dug and a ball of clay is put therein which brings the pit on a level with the surrounding ground. At the middle of the distance between the clay lump and the āhavanīya clay taken from an ant-hill is heaped. A spade one cubit long made of some sacrificial tree is kept to the north of the āhavanīya. The ant-hill clay is placed on the lump of earth in the pit with that spade. The horse is made to plant its foot on the clay in the pit. He (the priest) draws three lines with the spade on that lump of clay, spreads black antelope skin to the north of the lump and thereon keeps a lotus leaf on which the lump of clay from the pit is placed and the corners of the skin are tied with a girdle of muñja. He takes up the hide with the clay therein, raises his arms towards the east, holds the bundle over the animals that come back in the reverse order (the goat leading). According to Āp. XVI. 3. 10 the bundle is placed on the back of the ass and brought near a tent. The lump is placed to the north of the āhavanīya in a tent screened on all sides; then he takes the hair of the he-goat and mixes the hair in that lump of clay with water in which palāśa bark is boiled and mixes therewith gravel, iron rust and small stones. From the clay thus mixed the wife of the sacrificer (or the first wife if there are several) prepares the first brick called Aṣāḍhā, which is in measure as much as the foot of the sacrificer, is rectangular and has three lines scratched on it. The sacrificer prepares an ukhā (fire-pan) from the mixture of clay, which is one span in diameter. According to some three pans are made. He also makes three bricks called Viśvajyotis, each having three lines and so marked as to show which is first, second and third. The remaining clay is called upaśaya and is kept aside (as it will be required later). The ukhā is fumigated with the smoke from seven horse-dung cakes kindled on the duksīṇa fire. A square hole is dug with the spade referred to above, therein fuel is put and the bricks and the ukhā (with the mouth downwards) are put for being baked and more fuel is added. He removes the coals and ashes and takes out during the day the bricks (four) and the ukhā, on which the milk of a she-goat is sprinkled. Thereafter other bricks are made which have three lines on each, which are generally as long as the sacrificer's foot and are baked till they are red.

The dikṣā (initiation) for the rite takes place on the amāvāsyā of Phālguna. The dikṣaṇīyā iṣṭi and other usual rites are performed. Either the yajamāna or the adhvaryu places the ukhā on the āhavanīya and puts thereon 13 samidhs one span in length. The sacrificer wears a golden ornament with 21 pendants reaching up to his navel. The ukhā is taken from the āhavanīya to the east of the āhavanīya and is placed in a śikya and fire is put into it. He carries for a year or a shorter period (12, 6 or 3 days according to Āp. XVI. 9. 1) this fire placed in the ukhā. On alternate days in the year he adores the fire with the Vātsapra mantras (Vāj. S. XII. 18-28 = Rg. X. 45. 1-11), takes the Viṣṇu strides (Viṣṇukramas); he also removes the ashes, puts fuel-sticks on the fire in the ukhā.

Then follows the building of the altar. The altar has five layers, the first, third and fifth being arranged in the same pattern and the 2nd and 4th being of a different pattern from the 1st, 3rd and 5th. The altar may have several forms such as that of a droṇa (trough), a chariot-wheel, a śyena (hawk), kaṅka (heron), suparṇa (eagle)²⁶⁸⁸ &c. Vide Tai. S. V. 4. 11, Kāt. XVI. 5. 9. The altar requires bricks of several shapes; some are triangular, some are oblong, some are perfectly square, some are oblong plus a triangle (in one). They are not to be placed one over the other as one chooses but are arranged in peculiar ways, some in front, some on the sides and so on. A sound knowledge of geometry and mason craft is required in constructing the altar. Every brick is to be placed after repeating a mantra. The bricks have various names to distinguish them. For example, the bricks called Yajusmatī are to be used in building the body (of the birdlike pattern, which is the most usual one), but not in building the sides or tail of the layer. The usual mantras in laying down and invoking a brick are two viz., 'tayā devatayā... śida (Vāj. S. XII. 53, Tai. S. IV. 2. 4. 4) and 'tā asya sūda-dohasaḥ' (Vāj. S. XII. 55, Tai. S. IV. 2. 4. 4). Sat. XI. 8. 18 says that 'tayā devatayā... dhruvā śida' is repeated after each brick is deposited. But special mantras are prescribed in several cases e. g. as to the ten lokampṛṇā bricks the mantra is 'lokaṃ pṛṇa' (Vāj. XII. 54, Tai. S. IV. 2. 4. 4). Some kinds of bricks bear the names of sages (e. g. Vāḷakhilya bricks). Probably they were first used by those sages. There are three bricks which are called svayam-ātrṇāḥ (i. e. they are long and thin stones and have natural holes) and which are placed in the centre of the 1st, 3rd and 5th layers and are deemed to represent earth, air and heaven.²⁶⁸⁹ Jai. (V. 3. 17-20) deals with the respective positions of certain bricks called citrīṇi and lokamprṇā.

On the day of the last dīkṣā the measuring of the plot to be used as vedi takes place. Measurements are made with a rope which is in length twice the height of the sacrificer. A fifth part of the sacrificer's height is called aratni, tenth part is called pada, each pada is divided into twelve aṅgulas and three padas make a prakrama (Kāt. XVI. 8. 21). The ground for the uttaravedi on which the altar is to be constructed is ploughed with an udumbara plough and the ropes are made of muñja. Six, twelve or twenty-four oxen are yoked to the plough. He sows on the furrows made by the plough various kinds²⁶⁹⁰ of corns (Āp. XVI. 19. 11-13 says fourteen kinds, seven being grāmya and seven wild). He omits one kind of corn which he has to abstain from partaking throughout life thereafter (Kāt. XVII. 3. 6-7). If so many kinds of corn cannot be had then in those furrows barley corn mixed with honey is sown. Then clods of earth are put thereon and the ground is made level. Several things are got ready and placed one after another on this ground (Āp. XVI. 13. 10 where they are said to be bricks but not of clay). Vide Sat. XI. 5. 21 also. The placing of bricks is begun after the first upasad (Sat. XI. 7. 2). A lotus leaf is first laid down on the spot where the horse planted its hoof (Āp. XVI. 22. 3) and on that leaf the golden ornament worn by the yajamāna at the time of the Viṣṇu strides is placed with the mantra 'brahma jajñānam' (Vāj. S. XIII. 3, Tai. S. IV. 2. 8. 2). To the south of that ornament is laid down the golden image of a man with head to the east and face turned to the sky in such a way that the image does not cover the hole pierced in the golden ornament (disc) by passing a string with which it was tied round the neck (the mantra repeated being very significant 'in the beginning Hiranyagarbha arose' Rg. X. 121. 1 = Vāj. S. XIII. 4). The sacrificer performs the adoration (upasthāna) to the golden man with the three verses 'bow to the serpents' (Vāj. S. XIII. 6-8, Tai. S. IV. 2. 8. 3). One should thereafter never go to the north of the image from the south by passing in front of it (i. e. to the east of it). By the side of the two arms of the golden man he places two srucs (one of kārśmarya wood filled with ghee near the right hand and the other of udumbara filled with curds near the left) with their tops to the east. A brick called svayamātrṇṇā on which ājya is offered and over which the yajamāna breaths is handed over to a brāhmaṇa who places it in the centre with the help of the adhvaryu, the brāhmaṇa being looked upon as fire (Tai. S. V. 2. 8. 2). On that brick a dūrvā creeper is placed in such a way that its roots are on the brick and its tops hang on to the ground towards the east. Then the brick called dviyajus is laid to the east of the dūrvā, two retahsic bricks to the east of the preceding, then two rtavya bricks and then the Aṣādhā brick is placed to the east of the preceding. On all rtavya bricks avakūs (mosslike plants) are deposited. About one aratni to the south of the Aṣādhā brick and to the east of the Svayamātrṇṇā brick he places a living tortoise with its face to the east on the avakā plants (Āp. XVI. 25. 1, Kāt. XVII. 4. 27-28). The tortoise is anointed with a mixture of ghee, honey and curds, is enveloped in moss covered with a net and made motionless by means²⁶⁹¹ of pegs (Āp. XVII. 25. 2, Sat. XI. 7. 42). When depositing the tortoise it is invoked with three verses (Vāj. S. XIII. 30-32) which express the wish that the tortoise may go to the deep waters, that the sun and fire may not torment it by heat, that it may reach heavenly worlds and that divine rain may follow. Even in modern times a tortoise is so built up into the altar. A mortar²⁶⁹² and pestle of udumbara wood, each one span in length (the mortar being contracted in the middle and the pestle being rounded) are placed about one aratni to the north of the svayamātrṇṇā brick. A śūrpa also is placed near the above two (Āp. XVI. 26. 5). The ukhā filled with sand, ghee and honey is placed on the mortar and offerings of ājya are made on it with the sruva ladle. The fire in the ukhā is transferred to a hearth with eight bricks in the centre of the fifth layer, on which a second layer of eight bricks (called punāściti) is laid. This fire becomes the gārhapatya for the Fire-altar (Śat. Br. VIII. 6. 3. 7-11, Kāt. XVII. 12. 18-21). Seven pieces of gold are placed on the golden image, the first on the mouth, then two each on the two nostrils, the two eyes and two ears. In the forepart of the ukhā, the heads of the five animals (on which curds and honey are poured and on which 7 gold pieces are thrust) are placed in a certain order. The human head is in the middle, to the north the heads of the horse and ram and to the south the heads of the bull and goat (Kāt. XVII. 5. 13-18, Āp. XVI. 27. 5-19). According to Āp. and Sat. the head of a serpent also may be placed (Āp. XVI. 27. 22, Sat. XI. 7. 63) or only the mantras 'namo astu sarpebhyah' (Vāj. S. XIII. 6-8, Tai. S. IV. 2. 8. 3) may be recited. The various kinds of bricks are heaped in various directions on thick mud spread on the above stated things so as to form the first layer. According to Sat. (XI. 5. 22) each layer consists of only 200 bricks (1000 for all five), when the sacrificer performs the cayana for the first time; he employs 2000 for all layers when he performs it a second time and this number goes on increasing each time he repeats agnicayana.²⁶⁹³ According to the Śat. Br. (S.B.E. vol. 43 p. 22 n. 1), Kāt. XVII. 7. 21-23 the bricks required for all the five layers are 10800. The time required for piling also varies. Some held that the piling took one year (8 months for the first four layers and 4 months for the last) or all the layers may be laid in a few days. Sat. (XII. 1. 1 ff) and Āp. (XVII. 1. 1-11, XVII. 2. 8, XVII. 3. 1) state that the five layers are laid on five successive days. On each layer thick mud (purīṣa) prepared from the earth (mixed with water) dug out of the cātvāla pit after touching a dark or bay horse that stands to the north is spread with 'prṣṭo divi' (Vāj. S. XVIII. 73, Tai. S. I. 5. 11. 1 quoted by Āp. XVI. 34. 6-7, Sat. XI. 5.). Each layer and the spreading of mud are carried out each day between the two upasads (morn- ing one and afternoon one). When all the layers are completed the āhavanīya fire is established on the altar so built. Eight dhiṣṇyas, square or round, have to be constructed with bricks, viz. the āgnīdhriya and 7 others as in somayāga (but the number of bricks for each differs). A small round and variegated stone (aśman) is placed to the south of the āgnīdhra's place on the northern part of the fire-altar. A fuel-stick is kindled on the new gārhapatya hearth, taken over the svayamātrṇṇā brick of the 5th layer and an offering of the milk of a dark cow whose calf is white is made on that fire. Śatarudriya homa is offered to Rudra. On the western corner of the northern side of the Fire-altar which is enclosed by a line of stones on all sides there are three stones, as high as the knee, naval and mouth on which (serving as āhavanīya) 425 oblations are offered to Rudra and his fearful aspects by means of the leaf of the Arka plant (serving as juhū) of wild sesame mixed with gavedhukā. A twig of arka plant is used to clear the leaf of the offerings. The priest faces the north and makes the oblations standing, the mantras being taken from the Śatarudriya section (beginning with 'namaste rudra manyave,' Vāj. S. XVI. 1-66, Tai. S. IV. 5. 1-10). The arka leaf and twig are thrown into fire. The altar is cooled by the āgnīdhra with the water from a jar which is held over the stone referred to above. The stone is thrown to the south of the altar with 'May sorrow go to him whom we hate' (Vāj. S. XVII. 1) and if it is not broken the adhvaryu breaks it into pieces. On a long bamboo, a frog, avakā plants and reed (vetasa) twigs are tied and drawn over the altar from the south hip to the south shoulder²⁶⁹⁴ and then they are thrown on the utkara. The Gāyatra, Rathantara and other sāmans are sung (Śat. Br. IX. 1. 2. 35 ff, Kāt. XVIII. 3. 1 ff). Then follow numerous offerings, viz. one puroḍāsa to Vaiśvānara and 7 puroḍāsas to the Maruts,²⁶⁹⁵ Vasordhārā²⁶⁹⁶ (stream of wealth) offerings of ājya from an udumbara sruc, which is finally thrown into the fire, 6 Pārtha oblations as in Rājasūya followed later by six more after the abhiṣeka of the sacrificer, the Vājaprasaviya²⁶⁹⁷ offerings of the mixture of milk and water with the gruel of 14 grāmya and wild corns with an udumbara sruva that is four-cornered like a camasa (the sruva being thrown into the fire at the end). With the remnants of Vājaprasaviya offerings collected in a pot he sprinkles the sacrificer who sits on a dark antelope skin spread on an udumbara couch to the north of the tail of the fire altar. A royal sacrificer sits on a tiger skin and a vaiśya on a goat-skin. After this six Pārtha offerings are made followed by twelve Rāṣṭrabhrt (supporting the kingdom) homas of ājya with mantras, that contain the words 'vāt' and 'svāha' (Vāj. S. XVIII. 38-43, Tai. S. III. 4. 7).²⁶⁹⁸ Then three Vāta (wind) homas are offered catching with his joined hands wind outside the vedi to the east and the three winds thus caught are represented as yoked to the chariot like horses; the mantra being Vāj. S. XVIII. 45, Tai. S. IV. 7. 12. 3 (Kāt. XVIII. 6. 1-3, Āp. XVII. 20. 11).

2696. Vasordhārā is the name of the whole rite in which several hundred offerings are made to Agni with mantras (Vāj. S. XVIII. 1-29, Tai. S. IV. 7. 1-11, Kāt. XVIII. 5. 1, Āp. XVII. 17. 8) to secure all powers of the Firegod to the sacrificer.

Then the procedure of Somayāga is followed. One or two special characteristics may be noted. Before the Prātaranuvāka the Fire is represented as yoked after touching the paridhis and repeating three mantras 'I yoke the fire &c.' (Vāj. S. XVIII. 51-53, Tai. S. IV. 7. 13. 1) and then Agni is released from the yoke before the Āgnimāruta stotra (i. e. Yajñāyajñīya) in the evening with a mantra (Vāj. S. XVIII. 54, Tai. S. IV. 3. 4. 2). After the anubandhyā paśu-puroḍāśa, messes of boiled rice are offered to Anumati, Rākā, Sinivālī and Kuhū and a cake on twelve potsherds to Dhātṛ. At the end of the Udavasaniyā payasyā is offered to Mitra and Varuṇa or he may perform sautrāmanī (Āp. XVII. 24. 1, Sat. XII. 7. 14).

2697. The वाजपसवीय is one rite in which there are two groups of seven offerings, the first seven with the mantras beginning 'vājasye-mam prasavaḥ' (Vāj. S. IX. 23-29, Tai. S. I. 7. 10) and seven others with the mantras 'vājasya nu prasave' (Vāj. S. XVIII. 30-36 and Tai. S. I. 7. 7). Vide Śat. Br. IX. 3. 4, Sat. XII. 6. 5, Kāt. XVIII. 5. 4-5, Āp. XVII. 19. 1-3. The mantra means 'for the promotion of vigour' (or food) &c.

2698. The first mantra is ऋताषाडृतधामाग्निर्धन्वस्तस्वौषधयोऽप्सरसो मुदो नाम । स न इदं ब्रह्म क्षत्रं पातु तस्मै स्वाहा वाइ ताम्यः स्वाहा. The latter half is repeated in all six verses. One āhuti is made after वाइ and another after स्वाहा. Vide Kāt. XVIII. 5. 16, Sat. XII. 6. 15 ff. The first is made to a male deity, and the 2nd to Apsarases variously named.

One who has performed the piling of the fire-altar has to observe certain vratas for a year viz. he should not bow to any one, he should not run in the rains, he should not partake of the flesh of any bird, he should not approach a śūdra woman. After he performs agnicayana a second time, he should approach no woman except his own wife of the same caste, when he has performed cayana thrice he should not approach²⁶⁹⁹ even his own wife (vide Āp. XVII. 24. 1-5, Kāt. XVIII. 6. 25-31, Sat. XII. 7. 15-17). Jai. (II. 3. 21-23) declares that the piling of the fire-altar is a saṃskāra of fire and not an independent yāga by itself.

If a man does not prosper in the year after he performs agnicayana he may perform punaściti (just as punarādheya is performed). According to Āp. XVII. 24. 11 a punaściti can be performed for three objects, viz. for prosperity, for Vedic lore or for progeny.²⁷⁰⁰

In performing the innumerable and wearisome details of sacrifices many mistakes must have been committed and therefore the Brāhmaṇas and Sūtras prescribe numberless expiations, some simple and others complicated. But this subject will be dealt with in the next volume under prāyaścittas.

In the next volume a few remarks will be offered on the philosophical side of sacrifices and on the causes whereby they gradually faded into the background and gave place to other religious observances.

2699. The idea appears to have been that the sacrificer was not to disperse the spiritual power acquired by fire-worship, but to conserve it in himself.
